289. The earliest recollections of my infancy are of inquiries after my own origin. In the tearful days of childhood have I sat on the floor, hours, with my face in my hands, continually asking, "whence came I?" Thus would I sit and think, think, VAINLY, as the question rolled back on myself. Then have I turned to my mother for an answer but in vain. And the question returned to me with chilling force, "how did I begin to be?" Feeling myself transitory, knowing that others were more powerful, and believing they were before me, the years of pain and sorrow, falsely called the happy days of childhood, rolled by in one ceaseless strife of mind with the unanswered question of my own origin.

290. And as the infant mind was exhausted with the unanswered question of its own being, and chasing back from generation to generation its predecessive parentage, till it felt that it had grasped only as infinitesimal, the darkness has gathered thick around me; my head seemed to spin round like a vast wheel, sensation was nerved for torture as my fevered brain imagined flames around and felt its own burning; and—the world called me idiot.

291. But again and again would the question return, and in growing years it was presented to preachers and teachers and men of science, and by each returned unanswered. How often have I been told that I ought not pry into such deep things, because those I addressed could not. How did my heart leap when it was given me to know the power of the Eternal.

292. Here the mind can rest. We feel the force of an eternal truth as such, in a positive and radical sense, without the intervention of any power to make it true. When we look at a triangle, we cannot but think (if we think at all) that it was made. And, if interested in it, we ask, who made it? But when we consider the truth, that every triangle is also trilateral, we never ask who made that truth. We cannot ask why, or by what means it is true. It is impossible to inquire for the origin of such a truth, unless indeed we have some vested interests or deep rooted prejudices to blind us to the most obvious axioms.

293. We perceive in a moment that two and two are four. We preceive that this truth is infinite, almighty and eternal. Every philosopher is compelled to say God could not have made the truth. HE CANNOT UNMAKE IT. We ask no origin, no cause; for every sense testifies that it is from everlasting to everlasting. It never began to be, and never can cease.

294. It is in the creeds of all christendom, except true christianity, (called Mormonism,) that God created the earth from nothing. Whose mind ever rested on it? None. Christian philosophers all speculate on the state of matter previous to the Adamic creation with as much interest as the skeptic. They all feel that matter cannot be produced from nonentity. "Naught comes from naught, and can to naught return." Forms and combinations can be made and can be destroyed. They are phenomenal. But original elements are uncreated, and indestructible.

295. Neither abstract truths or inert matter are cabable of causation. But intelligence is. It is the ultimate and final cause of every act or motion that can by possibility be traced to its source. It is the only thing the mind has become acquainted with which is capable of causation. We can neither conceive of anything before it, or of a time when it was not. Seriously, as men looking for truth, we never ask the cause of intelligence, because we feel that it is infinite, eternal, unproduced. Truly and sincerely, of the true difficulty. The reason why we set about accounting for the present order and harmony of Nature is, because we see with our own eyes its finite evolutions passing immediately before us.—We see many millions of them begin; we watch their progress, as some gorgeous panorama; and we behold them terminate.

JAMES J. STRANG.

281. The flower puts forth in spring and perishes with the advance of autumn. The towering oak at my window was once a little acorn, and shall again be nothing as an organized form. The child is born to-day; last year it was not, and next summer it may die. We are made acquainted with indubitable tokens of a commencement in the whole material universe. We see these ineffable signs on the first leaf of the history of creation, scorched, as it were, among the primitive rocks, by the mighty fire-pen of world-volcanoes.—The star that dies out of the heaven's blue vault, with its last twinkle proclaims, "Look, mad atheist! Lo! I had a beginning once, and now I have an end!"

282. For this reason we seek to account for these passing, present events—these mathematical motions, which it were worse than lunacy to deny. We are irresistably forced to the prediction of a cause by a fixed necessity of our rational nature. Failing to do so, would be, not to over soar the condition of living men, but to sink below the intellect of a brute.

283. But the idea of a God presents no such problem. There this necessity of the intellect does not hold. There is not a token, in all time or throughout all space, of his commencement. He is not revealed to us by eternal reason in the character of an effect at all. In the mere conception of his whole being and attributes there is nothing whatsoever phenomenal.

284. Therefore, to assert for the divinity a producing cause, were as foolish as to affirm a like predicate of the infinite space, his everlasting and unchangeable habitation. I say, then, show me only the slightest proof that God ever began to be, and then, but not till then, can you demand of me to account for his being. Present me, then, some evidence that the Deity is a phenomenon, and I will hear you with patience, when you inquire for a pre-existent producing power.

285. Nothing but phenomena imply causation. No one thinks of proposing such a question in relation to any ETERNAL TRUTH. Who is so silly as to ask why the three angles of a triangle are always equal to two right angles? We have dunces enough in this world of ours, beyond all doubt, but the darkest of them all never conceived such a problem as that.

286. Give us the actual evolution of an undeniable effect, and its origin must be explained; some casual force is necessarily assigned. But to assert such an evolution, and then seek for the evolving power, is an act, not of philosophy, but madness. It is one of the thousand evidences that infidelity is more credulous than christianity; that atheism will believe greater improbabilities without evidence, than men of faith and philosophy do upon any evidence.

287. In the works of material nature the transient manifestations pass immediately before our eyes, and therefore we must, in spite of ourselves, attempt to account for them. No one but a fool will ever ask, "What was before the Eternal? What is greater than infinite?" But any one endowed with one pale ray of human reason cannot help asking, "What caused the transient? What is above the finite?"

288. I cannot answer for the experience of others. I believe, however, that most men are more consistent in their own investigations than in their disputations. Greatly do men in their ignorance mistake what is phenomenal, and what eternal; but no man (except for disputation) ever asked, "what caused the eternal?" "Who made the infinite?" None ever failed to ask, "what caused the transitory?" "Who made the finite?" None ever asked, "what sustains the infinite?" Not one but has asked, "what upholds the finite?" It is only in a disputation that we assume an origin for the eternal, or self-existence to the transitory. In disputation only do we require a foundation, for the infinite, or claim self-sufficiency for the finite.

289. The earliest recollections of my infancy are of inquiries after my own origin. In the tearful days of childhood have I sat on the floor, hours, with my face in my hands, continually asking, "whence came I?" Thus would I sit and think, think, THINK, and the question rolled back on myself. Then have I turned to my mother for an answer but in vain. And the question returned to me with chilling force, "how did I begin to be?" Feeling myself transitory, knowing that others were more powerful, and believing they were before me, the years of pain and sorrow, falsely called the happy days of childhood, rolled by in one ceaseless strife of mind with the unanswered question of my own origin.

290. And as the infant mind was exhausted with the unanswered question of its own being, and chasing back from generation to generation its predecessive parentage, till it felt that it had grasped only as infinitesimal, the darkness has gathered thick around me; my head seemed to spin round like a vast wheel, sensation was nerved for torture as my fevered brain imagined flames around and felt its own burning; and—the world called me idiot.

291. But again and again would the question return, and in growing years it was presented to preachers and teachers and men of science; and by each returned unanswered. How often have I been told that I ought not pry into such deep things, because those I addressed could not. How did my heart leap when it was given me to know the power of the Eternal.

292. Here the mind can rest. We feel the force of an eternal truth as such, in a positive and radical sense, without the intervention of any power to make it true. When we look at a triangle, we cannot but think (if we think at all) that it was made. And, if interested in it, we ask, who made it? But when we consider this truth, that every triangle is also trilateral, we never ask who made that truth. We cannot ask why, or by what means it is true. It is impossible to inquire for the origin of such a truth, unless indeed we have some vested interests or deep rooted prejudices to blind us to the most obvious axioms.

293. We perceive in a moment that two and two are four. We preceive that this truth is infinite, almighty and eternal. Every philosopher is compelled to say God could not have made the truth. HE CANNOT UNMAKE IT. We ask no origin, no cause; for every sense testifies that it is from everlasting to everlasting. It never began to be, and never can cease.

294. It is in the creeds of all christendom, except true christianity, (called Mormonism,) that God created the earth from nothing. Whose mind ever rested on it? None. Christian philosophers all speculate on the state of matter previous to the Adamic creation with as much interest as the skeptic. They all feel that matter cannot be produced from nonentity. "Naught comes from naught, and can to naught return." Forms and combinations can be made and can be destroyed. They are phenomenal. But original elements are uncreated, and indestructible.

295. Neither abstract truths or inert matter are cabable of causation. But intelligence is. It is the ultimate and final cause of every act or motion that can by possibility be traced to its source. It is the only thing the mind has become acquainted with which is capable of causation. We can neither conceive of anything before it, or of a time when it was not. Seriously, as men looking for truth, we never ask the cause of intelligence, because we feel that it is infinite, eternal, unproduced. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES J. STRANG.

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

MR. RAFFERTY TO MR. STRANG.—No. 3.

Wellsville, Ohio, Feb. 24th. 1849.

Mr. Strang,—Sir:—In looking over your letter No. 7, you say, that the body of my letter was made up of affirmations well arranged and skillfully stated, concerning the Roman Catholic church, all designed to show that it is the true church of Christ. All this you deny. Now to the proof, to see whether your testimony or that of the Holy Fathers is best to rely upon. You acknowledge that Peter received the keys from our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and deny that the Popes or Bishops of Rome were his successors. Before Peter's martyrdom, with Paul, his colleague, on the 29th of June, Anno 67, by an edict of the tyrant Nero in the city of Rome, where he resided 25 years as Tertulean, relates it, (see his works, Anno. 162, Lib.,) St. Peter appointed Clement to be his successor, of whom Paul says, Phil. iv. 3, [his name is written in the Book of Life.] Clement ruled the church from 67 to 69, when Lineus from 69 to 80, Cletus to 93, Clement to 105, Anacletus to 112, Evaristus to 121, Alex. to 132, Sixtus 1st to 142, Telesphorus to 154, Higinius to 165, Anicitus to 175, Soter to 169, Eleutherius to 194, under whom the Welch or ancient Britons were converted to christianity, St. Victor from 194 to 204, St. Zepherinust to 221, St. Calixtus to 227, Urbana 1st to 228, Pontianus to 238, St. Antherius to 239, St. Fabianus to 254, St. Cornelius to 255, St. Lucius to 257, St. Stephanus to 259, St. Sixtus 2d to 261, St. Dyonisius 1st to 273, St. Felix 1st to 275, St. Eutychianus to 284, St. Caius to 296, St. Marcellinus to 304. So there has been 29 Popes in the three first centuries, all of which were martyrs on account of their strict adherence to the Roman Catholic principles. And which, as you say, is a sure sign of sincerity, if not of truth.

St. Paul, sir, is tolerable good testimony of the sanctity of the Catholic religion, when he suffered martyrdom with St. Peter at Rome, Ano. 67. Lineus was a disciple of St. John the Evangelist, and bore a crown of martyrdom for the faith. St. Clement was a disciple of St. Peter's, and was also put to death for the faith, by an edict of the Emperor Domitian. St. John the Evangelist, writing to the seven churches in Asia, I will give to eat of the Tree of Life, which is in the paradise of my God. And to the angel of the church of Smyrna write these things, saith the first and the last, who was dead and liveth, I know thy tribulation and thy poverty, but thou art rich; and thou art blasphemed by those who say they are Jews and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan, &c. Rev. ii. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. St. John the Evangelist, writing to his beloved Polycarp, then in confinement for exercising the office of Bishop of the Roman Catholic church at Smyrna, and suffered martyrdom about this time, Ano. 97. For the authority of the Catholics in the third century, see Eusebius on Ecclesiastical Jurisprudence. In the fourth century St. Opetatus, speaking of the See of Rome says, that in this one chair sat Peter first to him, succeeded Linus to him Cletus and Clement, and the rest down to Siricius the present Pontiff, with whom we and all the world hold communion.

Now you, who call your church the true church of Jesus Christ, give an account of your Sees. If the saint could say all this when he could number only 39 Popes, with how much more reason can we Catholics now a days, when we can count 255. The Roman Catholic church has received her doctrine from the apostles, as the Protestant church of England is oblidged to confess, for during the first 500 years the church was pure and inviolably taught the faith delivered by the apostles. Sta. Eliz. In the sixth century St. Augustine, who was nine years a Manichean Heretic, assures us that he could not believe the holy scriptures but for the authority of the Catholic church. He also says, that heretics are very useful, not by teaching the truth, which they do not know, but by exciting the timid Catholic to the study of the truth, and the spiritual men of them to the exposition of it. St. Augustine.

This, sir, is the St. Augustine that converted England from Paganism to Catholicity, in the sixth century. See England's Conversion and Reformation compared. Is this, sir, a nation of half civilization and non-progression? Wales was converted to christianity before England, France and Spain, previous to either India by Francis Xavier, and several other places that I could refer you to. The six propositions in my last, five of which you flatly turned back without proof or argument, and the sixth you say you know not what creed I mean. Sir, I meant the apostles' creed, which I thought every christian ought to know.

Sir, do you think your readers will take your mere assertion for argument? If they do, I assure you that I will not without some substantial proof than your simple no. And, now, sir, I think I have fairly shown you in the beginning of this letter that the Popes were the lawful successors of the apostles, as far as I have gone, to the beginning of the fourth century, and I have proven it by the testimony of the Holy Fathers, who were not likely to lie to please you or me. I will also show you the regular succession down to Pius the Ninth, our present Pope, if you require it. You say, that my long silence after my first, that the clergy shut my mouth, or silenced me, which is not so, as I have the approbation of the highest dignitary of the church. I mean Pius the Ninth. See his pastoral address, Catholic Telegraph, June, 1847. You also state that the Catholic church has none of the principles of reform. Thank God, she has not, for I never knew any person or persons trying to reform the church but deformed it. For you are built, says St. Paul, upon the foundation of the apostles, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; Eph. ii. 22; and no one can lay any other foundation but that which is laid. 1 Cor. iii. 2. You say, you are no upstart, but have stood upon the rock which ages cannot remove.—You boasted one year ago of what conversions you had made in 17 years, the whole length of your rock of ages. Almost Millerism. You say you build not on the errors, faults or failings of others. Let us see.

So far as purgatory, or the prison house, as you term it, is concerned, and the traditions of the apostles, you chime with the Catholics. As far as baptism by emersion is concerned, you agree with the Ana-Baptist Baptists and Campbellites. So far as a married priesthood goes, you agree with the whole sectarian world. So far as the torments of hell is concerned, you agree with the Universalian. If I am not misinformed likewise upon the right of private interpretation of the holy scriptures, and of every person judging for themselves, you agree with every sectarian in the world. You agree with the infidel, the socialist and fourarites in some things, and every other ism with which I am acquainted, down to materialism.—That certain question which I sought information upon, that the apostolic church was extinct, which was the question at issue between you and myself, I thought to keep to ourselves. Never dreaming you would construe it to an admission on my part that you knew it. I never thought that you or any other man knew any such thing. See Matt. xxviii. 18, 19, 20. John xx. 21, 22, 23. John xii. 29. xii. 49. Matt. xxix. 19. Acts xiii. 3. Rom. x. 15.

Now, sir, if I have given you any information, I have gained my point. In your first letter you say, that you showed that the priesthood, in virtue of which Peter was head of the church, did not exist in the Roman church, and that the Popes were not his successors. You say you have showed, but showing is not proving. But, sir, I have shown and proven that the Popes were his successors, shown it by the Holy Fathers, and proven it by the holy scriptures; also that they were acknowledged by Jews, Pagans, Mohammedans and christians, down to the time of Protestant queen Elizabeth. In publishing my last letter you perverted it. The word Donatist you write Donalist, from some motive I know not. Milner's end of controversy, you say, the Catholic clergy will trust any where, but mine with the Mormon prophet, as you style yourself. But whether a true or a false prophet I will not say, but let public opinion decide. So you are welcome to every inch and foot of ground you have gained from me. Your quotation of the 5th chapter of Heb. you say I did not understand. I do very well, as your whole purpose is to show that the priesthood comes by revelation. But the whole essence of the priesthood consists in offering up gifts and sacrifices for sin; Heb. v. 1; neither of which you aspire to. Now, sir, in conclusion, St. Paul, from being a persecuter of the church, became its greatest advocate. Constantine the great, also a professed enemy of the Catholic church, became its professed friend, on seeing a cross in the firmament with these words under it: By this shalt thou conquer. See Signori Pastorini. I remain yours respectfully,

CHARLES RAFFERTY.

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

MR. RAFFERTY TO MR. STRANG.—No. 3.

Wellsville, Ohio, Feb. 24th. 1849.

Mr. Strang,—Sir:—In looking over your letter No. 7, you say, that the body of my letter was made up of affirmations well arranged and skillfully stated, concerning the Roman Catholic church, all designed to show that it is the true church of Christ. All this you deny. Now to the proof, to see whether your testimony or that of the Holy Fathers is best to rely upon. You acknowledge that Peter received the keys from our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and deny that the Popes or Bishops of Rome were his successors. Before Peter's martyrdom, with Paul, his colleague, on the 29th of June, Anno 67, by an edict of the tyrant Nero in the city of Rome, where he resided 25 years as Tertulean, relates it, (see his works, Anno. 162, Lib.,) St. Peter appointed Clement to be his successor, of whom Paul says, Phil. iv. 3, [his name is written in the Book of Life.] Clement ruled the church from 67 to 69, when Linous from 69 to 80, Cletus to 93, Clement to 105, Anacletus to 112, Evaristus to 121, Alex. to 132, Sixtus 1st to 142, Telesphorus to 154, Higinius to 165, Anicitus to 175, Soter to 169, Eleutherius to 194, under whom the Welch or ancient Britons were converted to christianity, St. Victor from 194 to 204, St. Zepherinust to 231, St. Calixtus to 237, Urbana 1st to 238, Pontianus to 238, St. Antherius to 239, St. Fabianus to 254, St. Cornelius to 255, St. Lucius to 257, St. Stephanus to 259, St. Sixtus 2d to 261, St. Dyonisius 1st to 273, St. Felix 1st to 275, St. Eutychianus to 284, St. Caius to 296, St. Marcellinus to 304. So there has been 29 Popes in the three first centuries, all of which were martyrs on account of their strict adherence to the Roman Catholic principles. And which, as you say, is a sure sign of sincerity, if not of truth.

St. Paul, sir, is tolerable good testimony of the sanctity of the Catholic religion, when he suffered martyrdom with St. Peter at Rome, Ano. 67. Linous was a disciple of St. John the Evangelist, and bore a crown of martyrdom for the faith. St. Clement was a disciple of St. Peter's, and was also put to death for the faith, by an edict of the Emperor Domitian. St. John the Evangelist, writing to the seven churches in Asia, I will give to eat of the Tree of Life, which is in the paradise of my God. And to the angel of the church of Smyrna write these things, saith the first and the last, who was dead and liveth, I know thy tribulation and thy poverty, but thou art rich; and thou art blasphemed by those who say they are Jews and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan, &c. Rev. ii. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. St. John the Evangelist, writing to his beloved Polycarp, then in confinement for exercising the office of Bishop of the Roman Catholic church at Smyrna, and suffered martyrdom about this time, Ano. 97. For the authority of the Catholics in the third century, see Eusebius on Ecclesiastical Jurisprudence. In the fourth century St. Opetatus, speaking of the See of Rome says, that in this one chair sat Peter first to him, succeeded Linus to him Cletus and Clement, and the rest down to Siricius the present Pontiff, with whom we and all the world hold communion.

Now you, who call your church the true church of Jesus Christ, give an account of your Sees. If the saint could say all this when he could number only 39 Popes, with how much more reason can we Catholics now a days, when we can count 255. The Roman Catholic church has received her doctrine from the apostles, as the Protestant church of England is obliged to confess, for during the first 500 years the church was pure and inviolably taught the faith delivered by the apostles. Sta. Elia. In the sixth century St. Augustine, who was nine years a Manichean Heretic, assures us that he could not believe the holy scriptures but for the authority of the Catholic church. He also says, that heretics are very useful, not by teaching the truth, which they do not know, but by exciting the timid Catholic to the study of the truth, and the spiritual men of them to the exposition of it. St. Augustine.

This, sir, is the St. Augustine that converted England from Paganism to Catholicity, in the sixth century. See England's Conversion and Reformation compared. Is this, sir, a nation of half civilization and non-progression? Wales was converted to christianity before England, France and Spain, previous to either India by Francis Xavier, and several other places that I could refer you to. The six propositions in my last, five of which you flatly turned back without proof or argument, and the sixth you say you know not what creed I mean. Sir, I meant the apostles' creed, which I thought every christian ought to know.

Sir, do you think your readers will take your mere assertion for argument? If they do, I assure you that I will not without some substantial proof than your simple no. And, now, sir, I think I have fairly shown you in the beginning of this letter that the Popes were the lawful successors of the apostles, as far as I have gone, to the beginning of the fourth century, and I have proven it by the testimony of the Holy Fathers, who were not likely to lie to please you or me. I will also show you the regular succession down to Pius the Ninth, our present Pope, if you require it. You say, that my long silence after my first, that the clergy shut my mouth, or silenced me, which is not so, as I have the approbation of the highest dignitary of the church. I mean Pius the Ninth. See his pastoral address, Catholic Telegraph, June, 1847. You also state that the Catholic church has none of the principles of reform. Thank God, she has not, for I never knew any person or persons trying to reform the church but deformed it. For you are built, says St. Paul, upon the foundation of the apostles, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; Eph. ii. 22; and no one can lay any other foundation but that which is laid. 1 Cor. iii. 2. You say, you are no upstart, but have stood upon the rock which ages cannot remove.—You boasted one year ago of what conversions you had made in 17 years, the whole length of your rock of ages. Almost Millerism. You say you build not on the errors, faults or failings of others. Let us see.

So far as purgatory, or the prison house, as you term it, is concerned, and the traditions of the apostles, you chime with the Catholics. As far as baptism by emersion is concerned, you agree with the Ana-Baptist Baptists and Campbellites. So far as a married priesthood goes, you agree with the whole sectarian world. So far as the torments of hell is concerned, you agree with the Universalian. If I am not misinformed likewise upon the right of private interpretation of the holy scriptures, and of every person judging for themselves, you agree with every sectarian in the world. You agree with the infidel, the socialist and fourarites in some things, and every other ism with which I am acquainted, down to materialism.—That certain question which I sought information upon, that the apostolic church was extinct, which was the question at issue between you and myself, I thought to keep to ourselves. Never dreaming you would construe it to an admission on my part that you knew it. I never thought that you or any other man knew any such thing. See Matt. xxviii. 18, 19, 20. John xx. 21, 22, 23. John xii. 29. xii. 49. Matt. xxix. 19. Acts xiii. 3. Rom. x. 15.

Now, sir, if I have given you any information, I have gained my point. In your first letter you say, that you showed that the priesthood, in virtue of which Peter was head of the church, did not exist in the Roman church, and that the Popes were not his successors. You say you have showed, but showing is not proving. But, sir, I have shown and proven that the Popes were his successors, shown it by the Holy Fathers, and proven it by the holy scriptures; also that they were acknowledged by Jews, Pagans, Mohammedans and christians, down to the time of Protestant queen Elizabeth. In publishing my last letter you perverted it. The word Donatist you write Donalist, from some motive I know not. Milner's end of controversy, you say, the Catholic clergy will trust any where, but mine with the Mormon prophet, as you style yourself. But whether a true or a false prophet I will not say, but let public opinion decide. So you are welcome to every inch and foot of ground you have gained from me. Your quotation of the 5th chapter of Heb. you say I did not understand. I do very well, as your whole purpose is to show that the priesthood comes by revelation. But the whole essence of the priesthood consists in offering up gifts and sacrifices for sin; Heb. v. 1; neither of which you aspire to. Now, sir, in conclusion, St. Paul, from being a persecuter of the church, became its greatest advocate. Constantine the great, also a professed enemy of the Catholic church, became its professed friend, on seeing a cross in the firmament with these words under it: By this shalt thou conquer. See Signori Pastorini. I remain yours respectfully,

CHARLES RAFFERTY.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 4.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. APRIL 12, 1849. [WHOLE No. 120.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. STRANG TO MR. BURGESS.—No. 12.

Voree, April 3d, 1849.

DEAR SIR:—We will take our next comparisons from chemistry, that youngest daughter among the sciences, the beautiful child of the Galvanic Battery, brought forth in splendor, and cradled on rollers of fire. Go, analyze me a cup of water; you find it composed of two parts of hydrogen to one of oxygen, by volume; and eight parts of oxygen to one of hydrogen by weight.

297. And these numerical ratios never vary. Freeze it into ice, hard as the granite of the eternal hills; dissipate it into vapor of such exquisite tenuity, that it would take a million acres of floating mist to form a single dew drop; bring it from the salt solitude of the ocean, or from the central curve of a rainbow, and submit it to the test of analysis; and still the pale chemist, as he watches the progress of his labratory, calls out—"Two to one and one to eight now and forever."

298. And will any one be mad enough to assert that the mighty cause, who rolled out yon blue expanse of ocean, and bade the liquid crystal bubble in multitudinous springs, from the fissures of cleft limestone, and sing in innumerable flowing rills, was and is himself unconscious of the mystic numbers, by which the separate elements that compose its dual essence, are married to eternity? I would be loth to judge any man's HEART; but it does seem to me, that the HEAD which can credit a hypothesis so monstrously absurd, must have exchanged brains with a baboon.

299. But to proceed with the argument. Go, again, and analyze me a gallon of atmospheric air. You find it composed of twenty parts of oxygen to eighty of nitrogen, in every one hundred, by volume, nearly. And these propositions never vary. Bring it from the high billows of distant seas, or from the depths of Lybian deserts, or bottled up twenty-two thousand feet above the earth's surface; and still the mystic numbers keep their exact count.

300. And was the cause of this universal harmony—the author who rolled this ocean of the breath of life, fifty miles deep, around the globe, destitute of the reason to perceive the ratio of its union? Can that cause count, yea or nay, which ever works in magnificent numbers?

301. But still again go analyze me a bit of limestone. You discover that its elements bear a quadruple ratio. There are twenty-two parts, by weight of carbonic acid, and twenty-eight of lime. Lime is composed of twenty-eight parts of oxygen gas. Carbonic acid is composed of sixteen parts of oxygen, and six of carbon.

302. And these propositions, too, are of unchanging uniformity. They are the same in the stalactite, icicle-shaped, and crystal-grained, torn from the coral caves, and in the rifled slab, hurled up, from the heart of the earth, by the volcanoes hand mailed with thunders and in the glittering pebble that a child picks out of the brook, in which it plays with naked feet. What a field is here for the calculation of chances! What a theme for devout and transcendent wonder! What a Bible is this among the old rocks! What magic hieroglyphics on the mountains!

303. But not only are numerical characters here: angles are traced in splendor also mathematical. All the hundred forms of carbonate of lime, are composed of six-sided figures, called rhombohedrons, whose alternate angles measure 104 deg. 55 min., and 75 deg. 05 min. Let the mathematician come with his plate trigonometry, fresh from the schools, and study a higher lesson.—Let him try if he can delineate as perfect a set of forms.

304. I have broken off the stalactite in the gorgeous caverns of Virginia. I have riven it from the frost bound crags of New England. In my native home in western New York, I have examined it in the occasional boulders, which some wreck of earth or crash of worlds has sent from the distant mountains of Canada, as I can hear each day of my life in the pebbles beneath my feet, which in the hoary ages, long gone by, were the bed of some vast Lake. I have trodden upon it on the surf bound shores of the Beaver Islands, & gazed at it in the deep clear waters of Lake Huron. I have wandered over it on the wide prairies beyond the Mississipi, glided through the waters in the midst of it among the thousand Islands of the St. Lawrence, and clambered upon it in the native turrets and arches of Mackinac, and never have I seen one departure from the same unvarying form.

305. The same six sided figure is found wherever the light of sun or torch shines upon the carbonated limestone. And the same alternation of angles is found in every figure which the eye of man has seen. Surely it were worse than madness to say that this is mere chance; that it was worked out by mere blind matter. The best mathematical mechanic on earth cannot equal it. Can senseless matter without tools do better work than the best workmen, with them? How much more credulous is the skeptic without proof than the saint with it?

306. When a little child I stood and gazed at the falling snow drops, and as some fell broken on my garments, observed that each drop was a STAR, SIX pointed. Each point was the lumination, of a line radiating from its centre. This line was winged on both sides, and the wings supported by branches or ribs from the principal line, and making on the whole a flower star, that is, a star shaped much like a beautiful flower. No one has taken up the idea and furnished me with mathematical language to work the description perfect; but the forms were all mathematical, and were absolutely perfect.—There was no defect whatever in them.

307. And every flake or star was capable of division into twelve parts, each one of which was precisely like either other. This formation was unvarying. Not one exception could be found. Are storms guided by blind chance? Is there no intelligent power at work in them? And does mere blindness, mere chance, without thought, produce millions of millions of snow drops, all precisely alike, every one perfect in its form, and superior to the best work of the best artist? So long as Mr. Burgess, with all his skill, cannot

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 4.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. APRIL 12, 1849. [WHOLE No. 120.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. STRANG TO MR. BURGESS.—No. 12.

Voree, April 3d, 1849.

DEAR SIR:—We will take our next comparisons from chemistry, that youngest daughter among the sciences, the beautiful child of the Galvanic Battery, brought forth in splendor, and cradled on rollers of fire. Go, analyze me a cup of water; you find it composed of two parts of hydrogen to one of oxygen, by volume; and eight parts of oxygen to one of hydrogen by weight.

297. And these numerical ratios never vary. Freeze it into ice, hard as the granite of the eternal hills; dissipate it into vapor of such exquisite tenuity, that it would take a million acres of floating mist to form a single dew drop; bring it from the salt solitude of the ocean, or from the central curve of a rainbow, and submit it to the test of analysis; and still the pale chemist, as he watches the progress of his labratory, calls out—"Two to one and one to eight now and forever."

298. And will any one be mad enough to assert that the mighty cause, who rolled out yon blue expanse of ocean, and bade the liquid crystal bubble in multitudinous springs, from the fissures of cleft limestone, and sing in innumerable flowing rills, was and is himself unconscious of the mystic numbers, by which the separate elements that compose its dual essence, are married to eternity? I would be loth to judge any man's HEART; but it does seem to me, that the HEAD which can credit a hypothesis so monstrously absurd, must have exchanged brains with a baboon.

299. But to proceed with the argument. Go, again, and analyze me a gallon of atmospheric air. You find it composed of twenty parts of oxygen to eighty of nitrogen, in every one hundred, by volume, nearly. And these propositions never vary. Bring it from the high billows of distant seas, or from the depths of Lybian deserts, or bottled up twenty-two thousand feet above the earth's surface; and still the mystic numbers keep their exact count.

300. And was the cause of this universal harmony—the author who rolled this ocean of the breath of life, fifty miles deep, around the globe, destitute of the reason to perceive the ratio of its union? Can that cause count, yea or nay, which ever works in magnificent numbers?

301. But still again go analyze me a bit of limestone. You discover that its elements bear a quadruple ratio. There are twenty-two parts, by weight of carbonic acid, and twenty-eight of lime. Lime is composed of twenty-eight parts of oxygen gas. Carbonic acid is composed of sixteen parts of oxygen, and six of carbon.

302. And these propositions, too, are of unchanging uniformity. They are the same in the stalactite, icicle-shaped, and crystal-grained, torn from the coral caves, and in the rifled slab, hurled up, from the heart of the earth, by the volcanoes hand mailed with thunder, and in the glittering pebble that a child picks out of the brook, in which it plays with naked feet. What a field is here for the calculation of chances! What a theme for devout and transcendent wonder! What a Bible is this among the old rocks! What magic hieroglyphics on the mountains!

303. But not only are numerical characters here: angles are traced in splendor also mathematical. All the hundred forms of carbonate of lime, are composed of six-sided figures, called rhombohedrons, whose alternate angles measure 104 deg. 55 min., and 75 deg. 05 min. Let the mathematician come with his plate trigonometry, fresh from the schools, and study a higher lesson.—Let him try if he can delineate as perfect a set of forms.

304. I have broken off the stalactite in the gorgeous caverns of Virginia. I have riven it from the frost bound crags of New England. In my native home in western New York, I have examined it in the occasional boulders, which some wreck of earth or crash of worlds has sent from the distant mountains of Canada, as I can hear each day of my life in the pebbles beneath my feet, which in the hoary ages, long gone by, were the bed of some vast Lake. I have trodden upon it on the surf bound shores of the Beaver Islands, & gazed at it in the deep clear waters of Lake Huron. I have wandered over it on the wide prairies beyond the Mississipi, glided through the waters in the midst of it among the thousand Islands of the St. Lawrence, and clambered upon it in the native turrets and arches of Mackinac, and never have I seen one departure from the same unvarying form.

305. The same six sided figure is found wherever the light of sun or torch shines upon the carbonated limestone. And the same alternation of angles is found in every figure which the eye of man has seen. Surely it were worse than madness to say that this is mere chance; that it was worked out by mere blind matter. The best mathematical mechanic on earth cannot equal it. Can senseless matter without tools do better work than the best workmen, with them? How much more credulous is the skeptic without proof than the saint with it?

306. When a little child I stood and gazed at the falling snow drops, and as some fell broken on my garments, observed that each drop was a STAR, SIX pointed. Each point was the lumination, of a line radiating from its centre. This line was winged on both sides, and the wings supported by branches or ribs from the principal line, and making on the whole a flower star, that is, a star shaped much like a beautiful flower. No one has taken up the idea and furnished me with mathematical language to work the description perfect; but the forms were all mathematical, and were absolutely perfect.—There was no defect whatever in them.

307. And every flake or star was capable of division into twelve parts, each one of which was precisely like either other. This formation was unvarying. Not one exception could be found. Are storms guided by blind chance? Is there no intelligent power at work in them? And does mere blindness, mere chance, without thought, produce millions of millions of snow drops, all precisely alike, every one perfect in its form, and superior to the best work of the best artist? So long as Mr. Burgess, with all his skill, cannot imitate one of these, will he pretend that non-intelligent nature, blind matter, less than the worms of the dust, can pour out myriads of them in a moment? Shame on the skeptics credulity.

308. In botany the first ten classes of Linnæus are arranged simply according to the number of stamens in each flower. Let us analyze a flower of the tobacco plant. It is of the fifth class, and of course has five stamens. Its corol has five parts, and its calyx five points. It is so with every tobacco flower on the earth. It ever was and ever will remain so.

309. Now let us suppose that every flower is produced by some cause that cannot count; what are the mathematical chances against this combination of fives, three times in a single flower? The answer is obviously—"One hundred and twenty-four," while the chances against a like combination in two flowers amount to the great sum of fifteen thousand six hundred and twenty-four.

310. Let the atheist answer me, what must be the chances in one large field—in all the fields throughout the world during one solar summer, and extending the view still wider, so as to embrace all the summers ever shed by yon bright sun? He who can shut his eyes to the overwhelming force of this demonstration deserves never more a glimpse of the green fields, with their coronals of golden boquets floating in their own perfume.

311. Look at the lilly in her snowy robes. All over the world, and throughout all time, it numbers but six stamens, and its delicate corol is six parted. Some of those beautiful flowers are vegetable clocks and watches, and keep time with the revolutions of the world, and sublimer roll of the twinkling orbs in their eternal movements. Some open to the morning sun; some beneath the blaze of noon; others, at purple twilight, when the soft dews begin to fall; and one in the wild west, the magnificent flower discovered by Captain Bonneville, near the base of the Rocky Mountains, lifts its gorgeous eye alone to gaze on the midnight stars.

312. Do these blooms of nature's garden know the divisions of day and darkness, or the seconds and minutes of recorded time, and thus equal our best pocket chronometers in taking note of the fast flowing hours? can the cause of all this order be unintelligent? He who can believe so, may safely be set down in the category of those who are beyond the reach of all argument. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES J. STRANG.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. BURGESS TO MR. STRANG.—No. 6.

Racine, March 20th, 1849.

Mr. James J. Strang:—I have received three communications from you numbered 6, 7 and 8. I shall now reply to No. 6. I think your quotation of your rules quite superfluous, as they are not necessary to the proof of the question at issue, which is the present existence of a supernatural governor of nature. If you want to prove the fact, I think you should do it with the same kind of evidence that you would prove that there is a certain person living in Racine. As you say God is material, visible, and holds converse with men, I do not doubt your ability to quote testimony, which frequently proves persons to be in different places at the same time, if such can be called proof. Testimony also proves the Shaster, the Koran, the Talmud, the Book of Mormon, A. J. Davis' Revelations, and I know not how many other contradictory testimonies to be of supernatural origin, while the counter testimony of the several parties condemn the whole as spurious. Testimony proves too much to be admitted as sufficient evidence of a doubtful but demonstrable and visible reality. If you desire us to have the strongest assurance of the fact, your evidence will correspond.

146. You say, par. 167, "it is singular that I have said so little to the point in question." I think this a necessary result of my following you. How the statement "that a circle is not a square," and "that black is not white," will prove the existence of God I cannot see. And I wish to do something more useful than following you in imagination wherever your fancy leads, for the purpose of proving negatives continually.

147. There is so much senseless slang used by theologians in place of argument, such as "no sane man," "no honest man," "no candid man," "no moral man," "no man of common sense in his senses," can say, or think differently from ourselves, that when I found you using the same, I thought it right to object to it.

148. When you spoke of God as such an indefinite being, I thought it right to refer to the most respectful opinions of believers concerning the wisdom of revelation. But as you prefer proving the existence of God without wisdom, I shall not object, though it appears to me like proving a superior, inferior or good Devil.

149. In reply to the language argument, par. 149, you endeavored to show that man, individually, could not originate language, which I answered by refering to the fact that language is now made, extended and improved; not made worse, according to your degenerative theory. And you infered from your assumed negative that man could not collectively form a language, and, therefore, God did. Though if man collectively could not originate a language, it does not follow that God did originate language, any more than the Devil. Thus you assume the existence of God to prove the origin of language, and the origin of language to prove the existence of God. So much for theological logic, which defies common sense, and Deifies nonsense, in presence of the fact that ideas and words to represent them increase continually.

150. You ask, par. 170, how is the authorship of Genesis and Exodus involved in this controversy? First, in par. 18, you refer to the Mosaic account. 2d, in par. 21, you refer to "yourself" and "Abraham." 3d, in par. 97, where you advance the appearance of God to Moses to send him into Egypt. Let these suffice for the present. You continue, our faith in those books rests on other facts than the persons of their authors. What facts do sustain your faith? I shall be glad to learn, if in place.

151. I think still that when so much wrong has been done, and is still done by those in authority, it is good proof that they are no standard of truth, as they scarcely agree better than ourselves.

152. In reply to par. 172, when I asked who has seen the Lord of the universe in the exercise of his power, I desired proof. So there was nothing called out that. I did not ask, as I said, (par. 103,) now I wish to examine your testimony, when and where you saw God, what he was like, what you call governing the universe, how he did it, and all the evidence necessary to insure a perception and conviction of the truth. These, and other important questions, you have omitted to answer, for reasons best known to yourself.

153. By refering to par. 73 of yours, you will see that what you are pleased to call my "very grave conclusion" is really your own, which I quoted to expose its fallacy, and asked you in reference to the same, par. 59, how you can make scientific deductions from mens' testimony of supernatural beings, which you have not answered in your three letters.

154. In reply to par. 174, I would ask, what has proved the existence of God? You answer, HE HAS BEEN SEEN OF MEN. Par. 16. Is not the same evidence necessary to prove his present existence as it was to prove his existence before? Or is it only necessary for some one to say that some one else said they saw him, to prove his existence now? Do not like effects need like causes to produce them? You continue, are not the existence of tides ascertained simply by seeing, and proved by human testimony? Here proof and testimony are synonymous. When two persons testify differently concerning an arithmetical problem, do they consider the tesimitate one of these, will he pretend that non-intelligent nature, blind matter, less than the worms of the dust, can pour out myriads of them in a moment? Shame on the skeptics credulity.

308. In botany the first ten classes of Linnæus are arranged simply according to the number of stamens in each flower. Let us analyze a flower of the tobacco plant. It is of the fifth class, and of course has five stamens. Its corol has five parts, and its calyx five points. It is so with every tobacco flower on the earth. It ever was and ever will remain so.

309. Now let us suppose that every flower is produced by some cause that cannot count; what are the mathematical chances against this combination of fives, three times in a single flower? The answer is obviously—"One hundred and twenty-four," while the chances against a like combination in two flowers amount to the great sum of fifteen thousand six hundred and twenty-four.

310. Let the atheist answer me, what must be the chances in one large field—in all the fields throughout the world during one solar summer, and extending the view still wider, so as to embrace all the summers ever shed by yon bright sun? He who can shut his eyes to the overwhelming force of this demonstration deserves never more a glimpse of the green fields, with their coronals of golden boquets floating in their own perfume.

311. Look at the lilly in her snowy robes. All over the world, and throughout all time, it numbers but six stamens, and its delicate corol is six parted. Some of those beautiful flowers are vegetable clocks and watches, and keep time with the revolutions of the world, and sublimer roll of the twinkling orbs in their eternal movements. Some open to the morning sun; some beneath the blaze of noon; others, at purple twilight, when the soft dews begin to fall; and one in the wild west, the magnificent flower discovered by Captain Bonneville, near the base of the Rocky Mountains, lifts its gorgeous eye alone to gaze on the midnight stars.

312. Do these blooms of nature's garden know the divisions of day and darkness, or the seconds and minutes of recorded time, and thus equal our best pocket chronometers in taking note of the fast flowing hours? can the cause of all this order be unintelligent? He who can believe so, may safely be set down in the category of those who are beyond the reach of all argument. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES J. STRANG.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. BURGESS TO MR. STRANG.—No. 6.

Racine, March 20th, 1849.

Mr. James J. Strang:—I have received three communications from you numbered 6, 7 and 8. I shall now reply to No. 6. I think your quotation of your rules quite superfluous, as they are not necessary to the proof of the question at issue, which is the present existence of a supernatural governor of nature. If you want to prove the fact, I think you should do it with the same kind of evidence that you would prove that there is a certain person living in Racine. As you say God is material, visible, and holds converse with men, I do not doubt your ability to quote testimony, which frequently proves persons to be in different places at the same time, if such can be called proof. Testimony also proves the Shaster, the Koran, the Talmud, the Book of Mormon, A. J. Davis' Revelations, and I know not how many other contradictory testimonies to be of supernatural origin, while the counter testimony of the several parties condemn the whole as spurious. Testimony proves too much to be admitted as sufficient evidence of a doubtful but demonstrable and visible reality. If you desire us to have the strongest assurance of the fact, your evidence will correspond.

146. You say, par. 167, "it is singular that I have said so little to the point in question." I think this a necessary result of my following you. How the statement "that a circle is not a square," and "that black is not white," will prove the existence of God I cannot see. And I wish to do something more useful than following you in imagination wherever your fancy leads, for the purpose of proving negatives continually.

147. There is so much senseless slang used by theologians in place of argument, such as "no sane man," "no honest man," "no candid man," "no moral man," "no man of common sense in his senses," can say, or think differently from ourselves, that when I found you using the same, I thought it right to object to it.

148. When you spoke of God as such an indefinite being, I thought it right to refer to the most respectful opinions of believers concerning the wisdom of revelation. But as you prefer proving the existence of God without wisdom, I shall not object, though it appears to me like proving a superior, inferior or good Devil.

149. In reply to the language argument, par. 149, you endeavored to show that man, individually, could not originate language, which I answered by refering to the fact that language is now made, extended and improved; not made worse, according to your degenerative theory. And you infered from your assumed negative that man could not collectively form a language, and, therefore, God did. Though if man collectively could not originate a language, it does not follow that God did originate language, any more than the Devil. Thus you assume the existence of God to prove the origin of language, and the origin of language to prove the existence of God. So much for theological logic, which defies common sense, and Deifies nonsense, in presence of the fact that ideas and words to represent them increase continually.

150. You ask, par. 170, how is the authorship of Genesis and Exodus involved in this controversy? First, in par. 18, you refer to the Mosaic account. 2d, in par. 21, you refer to "yourself" and "Abraham." 3d, in par. 97, where you advance the appearance of God to Moses to send him into Egypt. Let these suffice for the present. You continue, our faith in those books rests on other facts than the persons of their authors. What facts do sustain your faith? I shall be glad to learn, if in place.

151. I think still that when so much wrong has been done, and is still done by those in authority, it is good proof that they are no standard of truth, as they scarcely agree better than ourselves.

152. In reply to par. 172, when I asked who has seen the Lord of the universe in the exercise of his power, I desired proof. So there was nothing called out that. I did not ask, as I said, (par. 103,) now I wish to examine your testimony, when and where you saw God, what he was like, what you call governing the universe, how he did it, and all the evidence necessary to insure a perception and conviction of the truth. These, and other important questions, you have omitted to answer, for reasons best known to yourself.

153. By refering to par. 73 of yours, you will see that what you are pleased to call my "very grave conclusion" is really your own, which I quoted to expose its fallacy, and asked you in reference to the same, par. 59, how you can make scientific deductions from mens' testimony of supernatural beings, which you have not answered in your three letters.

154. In reply to par. 174, I would ask, what has proved the existence of God? You answer, HE HAS BEEN SEEN OF MEN. Par. 16. Is not the same evidence necessary to prove his present existence as it was to prove his existence before? Or is it only necessary for some one to say that some one else said they saw him, to prove his existence now? Do not like effects need like causes to produce them? You continue, are not the existence of tides ascertained simply by seeing, and proved by human testimony? Here proof and testimony are synonymous. When two persons testify differently concerning an arithmetical problem, do they consider the testimony or the seeing the result, the proof?

155. I do not think you have mended the matter in testimony, making knowledge or probabilities becoming certainties, as in your Gulf Stream illustration. Par. 175. The testimony of a world of witnesses could not make me know it. I think certainty and knowledge express things evident to our senses. Faith and belief only express probabilities; things more or less affirmed by witnesses, supposed to be consistent and honest. Should I say I know God is, the question would be, how? Prophet Strang and others say they have seen him. But how do I know they were mistaken as in ghost stories and mental derangement? The fact is clearly, not certain, or known to me. I heard an anecdote the other day of a man who saw God in a well, as he was falling down into it. So he testified on being taken out. There he is again, said he, looking again on his own shadow in the water. Mark testifies to Joseph of having seen the angel of the Lord in a dream. You do not say whether you saw God in a dream, or awake, by dark, or daylight.

156. I am surprised, in par. 176, to find an exploded fallacy restated. You talk of me being beside myself. You must be relating your own condition. I object to testimony as proof sufficient of a supernatural being, when contrary to reason and experience. You take issue, and tell me that water freezing was contrary to the experience of the king of Siam. I trust you will not imitate him in omitting to reason, as you have omitted the word reason in the statement. There are so many solids in all climates that become fluid by heating, that the Dutch embassador, unless as ignorant as the king of Siam, might certainly have found a few examples, such as glass, India rubber, or "gum," if we have not been "gumed" enough already.

157. I certainly say it is wrong to drive people away and treat them as liars, because their experience differs from ours, as it is promotive of misery, as an end or ultimate of action.

158. In speaking of "duty," I thought admitting for the sake of argument the essence of a supernatural governor of nature. He must be known by the condition of nature. If nature is happy, the cause is good; if miserable, the cause is bad. I believe it is right to infer the character of the cause from the effects or results. And as it is our duty to do all in our power to make all happy, I thought the same rule applied to the Deity, which would prove a limit to his power or will. If we affirm nature is, what God made it? But if you think it out of place, I do not care to extend it.

159. You complain that I raised the objection to the immortality of a material God, because all organizations contain evidence of their beginning to be. Consequently they cannot be eternal in relation to the past, which would be necessary to show the probability of their eternity in future. As in the process of nature all organizations which begin to be cease to be, those which are born die, those which are made perish.

160. In par. 20 you said, if I make good the existence of a world of spirits, I think you will have no difficulty in acknowledging one superior, a Lord of the universe. By the word universe, did you mean a part or whole? If the whole, how can you accuse me of raising a false issue by the importance which I attach to the word whole, in par. 181? Your conclusions, founded on misrepresentation, do not merit a reply.

161. The merits of monarchical and republican governments are out of place here. Should you desire an inquiry into their relative merits, when this discussion is concluded I trust I shall be happy to accommodate you, if none more able offer. Your idea of man's true right to be well governed appears rather ludicrous to me, as though man had no right to govern, but to be governed. His right is to be, and not to do. My political notions are rather unorthodox, as well as my theological. I think we have a right to choose our own officers, and to be chosen as officers by others; that elective government is better than hierarchical or monarchical appointments for the promotion of man's happiness. I think the best security for our being well governed is in our choosing our own governors.

162. You say, par. 179, "if there is a God, he equally exists, whether he does the duties I prescribe for him or not." Putting my notions of duties out of the question, would God be a God without doing good? You might as well talk of a thief being a thief without thieving.

163. You complain that I do not argue the question as you think I ought. I look on the assumption of the existence of God as the foundation of priestcraft, which has cursed mankind for thousands of years, by diverting their attention from the necessary consequences of their conduct here, to seek results of action in another state of existence, through the agency of priests. I wish to see my fellow men labor in mind and body to promote each others happiness here, being well satisfied that if any being can merit or be prepared for happiness hereafter it is by doing good here. This needs neither testimony, authority or revelation to maintain it, being proved by the experience of all who diligently seek the truth.

164. Believing, then, that priestcraft is promotive of misery, and that the supposition of the supernatural is the foundation of it, I labor against both. In our discussion you endeavor to cramp me continually, by charging me with raising false issues. When I omit counter evidence, you say I do not speak to the question. When I question your testimony, you take refuge behind authority. When I assail your authority, you go back to testimony. Verily, friend Strang, thou art difficult to please. Yours for the truth,

EDWIN BURGESS.

MINUTES OF THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD IN VOREE ON THE SIXTH, SEVENTH AND EIGHTH OF APRIL, 1849.

April 6th. Forenoon Session.—Conference was opened by the reading of the lxxix. lxxx. & lxxxi. Ps. by Pres. Strang. Singing. Consecration of the Conference by Pres. Strang. Singing. Bro. Samuel Graham, one of the Twelve, read the xv. Ps. and preached therefrom. Singing. Adjourned till 2 o'clock, P. M. Benediction by L. D. Hickey, of the Seventies.

Afternoon Session.—Opened by singing. Prayer by Ira J. Patten, one of the Twelve. Singing. Preaching by John E. Page, President of the quorum of the Twelve. He prefaced his discourse by making some remarks on the diversity of talent among the preachers of the gospel, and its beneficial results. He then read the 3d, 4th and 5th verses of the v. chap. of Matt., and preached therefrom. Singing. Adjourned till evening. Benediction by Pres. Strang.

Evening Session.—Opened by singing. Pres. Strang read the i. and ii. chapters of Paul's first epistle to the Corinthians. Prayer by James Blakeslee, President pro tem of the High Priests quorum. Singing. Preaching by Pres. Strang from the following words of scripture: "The church is the pillar and ground of the truth."—Singing. Adjourned till 10 o'clock to-morrow.

April 7th. Forenoon Session.—Singing. Pres. Strang read the xciv. Ps. Prayer by H. P. Brown, of the Seventies. Singing. Preaching by L. D. Hickey. Singing. Adjourned two hours. Benediction by Pres. Strang.

Afternoon Session.—Opened by singing. Prayer by J. M. Wait, one of the Presidents of the Seventies. Singing.

On motion, resolved, unanimously, That we acknowledge Bro. James J. Strang President of this Conference, by virtue of his office as President of the church.

On motion, resolved, unaminously, That Bro. Gilbert Watson, the timony or the seeing the result, the proof?

155. I do not think you have mended the matter in testimony, making knowledge or probabilities becoming certainties, as in your Gulf Stream illustration. Par. 175. The testimony of a world of witnesses could not make me know it. I think certainty and knowledge express things evident to our senses. Faith and belief only express probabilities; things more or less affirmed by witnesses, supposed to be consistent and honest. Should I say I know God is, the question would be, how? Prophet Strang and others say they have seen him. But how do I know they were mistaken as in ghost stories and mental derangement? The fact is clearly, not certain, or known to me. I heard an anecdote the other day of a man who saw God in a well, as he was falling down into it. So he testified on being taken out. There he is again, said he, looking again on his own shadow in the water. Mark testifies to Joseph of having seen the angel of the Lord in a dream. You do not say whether you saw God in a dream, or awake, by dark, or daylight.

156. I am surprised, in par. 176, to find an exploded fallacy restated. You talk of me being beside myself. You must be relating your own condition. I object to testimony as proof sufficient of a supernatural being, when contrary to reason and experience. You take issue, and tell me that water freezing was contrary to the experience of the king of Siam. I trust you will not imitate him in omitting to reason, as you have omitted the word reason in the statement. There are so many solids in all climates that become fluid by heating, that the Dutch embassador, unless as ignorant as the king of Siam, might certainly have found a few examples, such as glass, India rubber, or "gum," if we have not been "gumed" enough already.

157. I certainly say it is wrong to drive people away and treat them as liars, because their experience differs from ours, as it is promotive of misery, as an end or ultimate of action.

158. In speaking of "duty," I thought admitting for the sake of argument the essence of a supernatural governor of nature. He must be known by the condition of nature. If nature is happy, the cause is good; if miserable, the cause is bad. I believe it is right to infer the character of the cause from the effects or results. And as it is our duty to do all in our power to make all happy, I thought the same rule applied to the Deity, which would prove a limit to his power or will. If we affirm nature is, what God made it? But if you think it out of place, I do not care to extend it.

159. You complain that I raised the objection to the immortality of a material God, because all organizations contain evidence of their beginning to be. Consequently they cannot be eternal in relation to the past, which would be necessary to show the probability of their eternity in future. As in the process of nature all organizations which begin to be cease to be, those which are born die, those which are made perish.

160. In par. 20 you said, if I make good the existence of a world of spirits, I think you will have no difficulty in acknowledging one superior, a Lord of the universe. By the word universe, did you mean a part or whole? If the whole, how can you accuse me of raising a false issue by the importance which I attach to the word whole, in par. 181? Your conclusions, founded on misrepresentation, do not merit a reply.

161. The merits of monarchical and republican governments are out of place here. Should you desire an inquiry into their relative merits, when this discussion is concluded I trust I shall be happy to accommodate you, if none more able offer. Your idea of man's true right to be well governed appears rather ludicrous to me, as though man had no right to govern, but to be governed. His right is to be, and not to do. My political notions are rather unorthodox, as well as my theological. I think we have a right to choose our own officers, and to be chosen as officers by others; that elective government is better than hierarchical or monarchical appointments for the promotion of man's happiness. I think the best security for our being well governed is in our choosing our own governors.

162. You say, par. 179, "if there is a God, he equally exists, whether he does the duties I prescribe for him or not." Putting my notions of duties out of the question, would God be a God without doing good? You might as well talk of a thief being a thief without thieving.

163. You complain that I do not argue the question as you think I ought. I look on the assumption of the existence of God as the foundation of priestcraft, which has cursed mankind for thousands of years, by diverting their attention from the necessary consequences of their conduct here, to seek results of action in another state of existence, through the agency of priests. I wish to see my fellow men labor in mind and body to promote each others happiness here, being well satisfied that if any being can merit or be prepared for happiness hereafter it is by doing good here. This needs neither testimony, authority or revelation to maintain it, being proved by the experience of all who diligently seek the truth.

164. Believing, then, that priestcraft is promotive of misery, and that the supposition of the supernatural is the foundation of it, I labor against both. In our discussion you endeavor to cramp me continually, by charging me with raising false issues. When I omit counter evidence, you say I do not speak to the question. When I question your testimony, you take refuge behind authority. When I assail your authority, you go back to testimony. Verily, friend Strang, thou art difficult to please. Yours for the truth,

EDWIN BURGESS.

MINUTES OF THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD IN VOREE ON THE SIXTH, SEVENTH AND EIGHTH OF APRIL, 1849.

APRIL 6TH. FORENOON SESSION.—Conference was opened by the reading of the lxxix. lxxx. & lxxxi. Ps. by Pres. Strang. Singing. Consecration of the Conference by Pres. Strang. Singing. Bro. Samuel Graham, one of the Twelve, read the xv. Ps. and preached therefrom. Singing. Adjourned till 2 o'clock, P. M. Benediction by L. D. Hickey, of the Seventies.

AFTERNOON SESSION.—Opened by singing. Prayer by Ira J. Patten, one of the Twelve. Singing. Preaching by John E. Page, President of the quorum of the Twelve. He prefaced his discourse by making some remarks on the diversity of talent among the preachers of the gospel, and its beneficial results. He then read the 3d, 4th and 5th verses of the v. chap. of Matt., and preached therefrom. Singing. Adjourned till evening. Benediction by Pres. Strang.

EVENING SESSION.—Opened by singing. Pres. Strang read the i. and ii. chapters of Paul's first epistle to the Corinthians. Prayer by James Blakeslee, President pro tem of the High Priests quorum. Singing. Preaching by Pres. Strang from the following words of scripture: "The church is the pillar and ground of the truth."—Singing. Adjourned till 10 o'clock to-morrow.

APRIL 7TH. FORENOON SESSION.—Singing. Pres. Strang read the xciv. Ps. Prayer by H. P. Brown, of the Seventies. Singing. Preaching by L. D. Hickey. Singing. Adjourned two hours. Benediction by Pres. Strang.

AFTERNOON SESSION.—Opened by singing. Prayer by J. M. Wait, one of the Presidents of the Seventies. Singing.

On motion, resolved, unanimously, That we acknowledge Bro. James J. Strang President of this Conference, by virtue of his office as President of the church.

On motion, resolved, unaminously, That Bro. Gilbert Watson, the Recorder, act as Clerk of this Conference.

On motion, the following resolutions were passed unanimously, the vote being called separately on each:—

Resolved, 1. That we press as an imperative duty on all the saints to come up to the places of gathering, appointed of God, for the dwelling of the saints.

2. That we urge with earnestness upon the saints the duty of going up speedily to possess the lands that God has given unto the saints for a possession.

3. That a better example of obedience and respect to the word of God than has heretofore existed is pressingly called for by the work which God has required at our hands, and we are persuaded that it is vain for any one to preach the gospel or advocate the faith who constantly tramples on the word of wisdom and the commandments of God.

4. That we rejoice in the establishment and prosperity of the Order of Enoch, believing that thereby God will accomplish the great work of this dispensation; establish his Everlasting Kingdom, take away the power of the oppressor, and deliver the poor and needy from oppression and violence.

5. That we will not cease the work on the Temple at Voree and the payment of tithing therefor until the same is completed.

6. That we recommend to faithful brethren, living in distant places, to assist by free will offerings in the building of the Tower upon the Hill of Promise.

On motion, resolved, unanimously, That we recommend the "Gospel Herald," the only organ of the church, to the patronage of the saints.

On motion, resolved, unanimously, That we will receive, uphold and sustain Pres. Strang by our faith, confidence and prayers, as Prophet, Seer, Revelator and Translator unto the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

On motion, resolved, unanimously, That if Bro. George J. Adams will magnify his office according to the requirements of the revelation of Jan. 7th, that we will receive, uphold and sustain him by our faith, confidence and prayers as one of the First Presidency.

A similar resolution was presented in behalf of Bro. Wm. Marks, but as he was expected before the close of Conference it was, on motion, laid over till to-morrow.

On motion, resolved, unanimously, That we give our prayers daily for Joseph, the son of Joseph, that he may be raised up of God to fill the station to which he has been called by prophecy.

The following resolution was presented:—

Resolved, That we will receive, uphold and sustain Bro. John E. Page as President of the quorum of the Twelve, with our faith, confidence and prayers.

After remarks from several of the brethren, Conference adjourned until evening. Benediction by Gilbert Watson, Bishop.

Evening Session.—Services commenced by H. P. Brown reading the ii. chap. of Paul's first epistle to Timothy. Prayer by Elder Nathan Foster. Singing. Preaching by H. P. Brown, from the following words: "The foundation of God standeth sure." Remarks by Nathan Foster, Pres. Strang and Elder Thomas Andrew. Adjourned till half past 8 o'clock to-morrow. Benediction by Samuel Graham.

April 8th. Morning Session.—Opened by prayer by Thomas Andrew. Singing. Preaching by Pres. Strang on the subject of the kingdom of God. Adjourned to meet on the Temple ground for the purpose of laying a corner stone of the south-east Tower of the Temple. Benediction by Ira J. Patten.

(To be continued.)

PROCLAIM THE TRUTH.

Proclaim the truth, though men assail thee,
Speak boldly in the name of God;
For those who love the mists of error,
Must perish by Jehovah's rod.

Proclaim the truth,—reprove the evil
That revels in our fallen world;
Then God will smile on thee a welcome,
When Satan from his throne is hurled.

Proclaim the truth, be humble, faithful,
Urge on reform with helping hand;
For Soon shall dawn the glorious morning,
When thou shalt enter Eden's land.

O love the truth: let all your actions
Show to the wicked world around
That you delight in God your Savior—
That you in works of love abound.

Proclaim the truth; point out to sinning,
Erring man, a God on high;
And soon upon thy brow shall glisten
The crown of immortality.

REMITTANCE BY MAIL LAST WEEK FOR THE HERALD.

Jesse Seeley,	$1,00 to Vol. IV.	No. 4.
Anthony Lenss,	2,00 " "	32
Zimri Butterfield,	2,00 " "	44
Samuel Hicks,	1,00 " "	31
Hugh Graham,	1,00 " "	31
A. J. Graham,	1,00 " "	30
N. B. Graham,	1,00 " "	30
Wm. F. Parkinson,	1,00 " "	30
Ester Showers,	1,00 " "	30
Elder Reynolds,	1,00 " "	37
Orria Brown,	1,00 " "	37
H. B. Perry,	1,00 " "	29
Samuel Graham,	paid to Vol. V.	No. 30
(Paid by S. Graham.)
Ichabod B. Gifford,	$1,00 to Vol. IV.	No. 39
O. N. Higley,	2,00 3 to Vol. III.	No. 52
J. S. Gibson,	2,00 to Vol. IV.	No. 52
J. H. Potts,	1,00 " "	30
Wm. Harris,	1,00 " "	30
Geo. Stringer,	1,00 " "	30
Samuel Wood,	1,00 " "	30
Stephen Archer,	1,00 " "	30
Uriah U. Tyler,	2,00 " "	35
Tobias McNutt,	1,00 " "	34

We have an impression that two or three more payments were made, which, in the hurry of business during Conference, have failed of being entered. Any person having made payments for the Herald during Conference, not found in this list, will please communicate.

Correction.—In the list of advance subscribers in number one, Mrs. Polly Briggs should have been credited as paid to Vol. IV. No. 5, and J. W. Briggs to IV. 30.

☞ Elder G. J. Adams writes us that he was not excommunicated from the church of God, as asserted by J. V. Himes, but that he was honorably acquited. What has Himes to say for taking up a reproach against his neighbor?

Recorder, act as Clerk of this Conference.

On motion, the following resolutions were passed unanimously, the vote being called separately on each:—

Resolved, 1. That we press as an imperative duty on all the saints to come up to the places of gathering, appointed of God, for the dwelling of the saints.

2. That we urge with earnestness upon the saints the duty of going up speedily to possess the lands that God has given unto the saints for a possession.

3. That a better example of obedience and respect to the word of God than has heretofore existed is pressingly called for by the work which God has required at our hands, and we are persuaded that it is vain for any one to preach the gospel or advocate the faith who constantly tramples on the word of wisdom and the commandments of God.

4. That we rejoice in the establishment and prosperity of the Order of Enoch, believing that thereby God will accomplish the great work of this dispensation; establish his Everlasting Kingdom, take away the power of the oppressor, and deliver the poor and needy from oppression and violence.

5. That we will not cease the work on the Temple at Voree and the payment of tithing therefor until the same is completed.

6. That we recommend to faithful brethren, living in distant places, to assist by free will offerings in the building of the Tower upon the Hill of Promise.

On motion, resolved, unanimously, That we recommend the "Gospel Herald," the only organ of the church, to the patronage of the saints.

On motion, resolved, unanimously, That we will receive, uphold and sustain Pres. Strang by our faith, confidence and prayers, as Prophet, Seer, Revelator and Translator unto the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

On motion, resolved, unanimously, That if Bro. George J. Adams will magnify his office according to the requirements of the revelation of Jan. 7th, that we will receive, uphold and sustain him by our faith, confidence and prayers as one of the First Presidency.

A similar resolution was presented in behalf of Bro. Wm. Marks, but as he was expected before the close of Conference it was, on motion, laid over till to-morrow.

On motion, resolved, unanimously, That we give our prayers daily for Joseph, the son of Joseph, that he may be raised up of God to fill the station to which he has been called by prophecy.

The following resolution was presented:—

Resolved, That we will receive, uphold and sustain Bro. John E. Page as President of the quorum of the Twelve, with our faith, confidence and prayers.

After remarks from several of the brethren, Conference adjourned until evening. Benediction by Gilbert Watson, Bishop.

Evening Session.—Services commenced by H. P. Brown reading the ii. chap. of Paul's first epistle to Timothy. Prayer by Elder Nathan Foster. Singing. Preaching by H. P. Brown, from the following words: "The foundation of God standeth sure." Remarks by Nathan Foster, Pres. Strang and Elder Thomas Andrew. Adjourned till half past 8 o'clock to-morrow. Benediction by Samuel Graham.

April 8th. Morning Session.—Opened by prayer by Thomas Andrew. Singing. Preaching by Pres. Strang on the subject of the kingdom of God. Adjourned to meet on the Temple ground for the purpose of laying a corner stone of the south-east Tower of the Temple. Benediction by Ira J. Patten.

(To be continued.)

PROCLAIM THE TRUTH.

Proclaim the truth, though men assail thee,
Speak boldly in the name of God;
For those who love the mists of error,
Must perish by Jehovah's rod.

Proclaim the truth,—reprove the evil
That revels in our fallen world;
Then God will smile on thee a welcome,
When Satan from his throne is hurled.

Proclaim the truth, be humble, faithful,
Urge on reform with helping hand;
For Soon shall dawn the glorious morning,
When thou shalt enter Eden's land.

O love the truth: let all your actions
Show to the wicked world around
That you delight in God your Savior—
That you in works of love abound.

Proclaim the truth; point out to sinning,
Erring man, a God on high;
And soon upon thy brow shall glisten
The crown of immortality.

REMITTANCE BY MAIL LAST WEEK FOR THE HERALD.

Jesse Seeley,	$1,00	to Vol.	IV. No.	4.
Anthony Lenss,	2,00	"	"	32
Zimri Butterfield,	2,00	"	"	44
Samuel Hicks,	1,00	"	"	31
Hugh Graham,	1,00	"	"	31
A. J. Graham,	1,00	"	"	30
N. B. Graham,	1,00	"	"	30
Wm. F. Parkinson,	1,00	"	"	30
Ester Showers,	1,00	"	"	30
Elder Reynolds,	1,00	"	"	37
Orria Brown,	1,00	"	"	37
H. B. Perry,	1,00	"	"	29
Samuel Graham, (Paid by S. Graham.)	paid to Vol. V. No. 30
Ichabod B. Gifford,	$1,00	to Vol.	IV. No.	39
O. N. Higley,	2,00	3 to Vol.	III. No.	52
J. S. Gibson,	2,00	to Vol.	IV. No.	52
J. H. Potts,	1,00	"	"	30
Wm. Harris,	1,00	"	"	30
Geo. Stringer,	1,00	"	"	30
Samuel Wood,	1,00	"	"	30
Stephen Archer,	1,00	"	"	30
Uriah U. Tyler,	2,00	"	"	35
Tobias McNutt,	1,00	"	"	34

We have an impression that two or three more payments were made, which, in the hurry of business during Conference, have failed of being entered. Any person having made payments for the Herald during Conference, not found in this list, will please communicate.

Correction.—In the list of advance subscribers in number one, Mrs. Polly Briggs should have been credited as paid to Vol. IV. No. 5, and J. W. Briggs to IV. 30.

☞ Elder G. J. Adams writes us that he was not excommunicated from the church of God, as asserted by J. V. Himes, but that he was honorably acquited. What has Himes to say for taking up a reproach against his neighbor?

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 5.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. APRIL 19, 1849. [WHOLE No. 121.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

MINUTES OF THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD IN VOREE ON THE SIXTH, SEVENTH AND EIGHTH OF APRIL, 1849.

(Concluded.)

APRIL 8TH. FORENOON SESSION.—Assembled on the Temple ground pursuant to adjournment. The congregation was arranged in proper order by Samuel Graham, who acted as Marshal. Pres. Strang read part of the viii. chap. of 1st Kings, and consecrated the stone and the ground unto the Lord, that a Temple might be built thereon unto his name in which he has promised to reveal himself by many mighty works. The Choir sung the following hymn, composed for the occasion by Roswell Packard, one of the builders:—

On Zion's sacred ground we stand,
And humbly bow at God's command,
To lay a sure foundation stone,
Which myriads yet unborn shall own.

We'll rear a Temple to our God,
And here be taught his holy word,
And incense from our hearts shall rise,
A humble, broken, sacrifice.

And Ephraim's children soon shall come,
From western forests, to their home,
To chant with us Jehovah's name,
And tell the nations of his fame.

Our walls and towers shall surely rise,
Like lofty mountains to the skies;
And Gentile nations yet shall gaze
On Zion's walls and gates of praise.

O Lord, thine aid we now implore,
Never will we this work give o'er,
Until God's Temple here shall stand,
Upon this peaceful, promis'd land.

The stone was laid by Pres. Strang, assisted by Gilbert Watson and Payne W. Stilwell, masons. The congregation then marched in procession to the school house, under the direction of the marshal. The procession, marching in close order, was eighty rods in length. At the school house,—called to order by the President. Singing. The Conference resumed the consideration of the following resolution:—

Resolved, That we will receive, uphold and sustain Bro. John E. Page as President of the quorum of the Twelve, by our faith, confidence and prayers.

Remarks by Pres. Strang. Bro. John E. Page made some remarks, in which he expressed his faith and confidence in the church and in all her administrations, and his determination to sustain the work to the extent of his talent and understanding.—Remarks by James Blakeslee. The vote being called on the resolution, it was sustained unanimously, one excepted.

Similar resolutions were passed in behalf of Moses Smith, Jehiel Savage, Lester Brooks, Samuel Bennett, Ebenezer Page, Ira J. Patten, Samuel Graham, of the quorum of the Twelve, with an earnest desire to see them all in the field.

Similar resolutions were also passed in behalf of all the following presiding officers of all the church: Wm. Savage, Samuel E. Hull, Phineas Wright, James M. Wait, Presidents of the Seventies; Isaac Pierce, Nathan Wagener, Presidents of the Elders; John Porter, President of the Stake at Voree, B. G. Wright, assistant; Gilbert Watson, Bishop, E. Whitcomb, A. W. Prindle, Counselors; James J. Strang, Roswell Packard, Temple Committee. Adjourned two hours. Benediction by Samuel Graham.

AFTERNOON SESSION.—Opened by singing. Prayer by John E. Page. Singing.

The First President presented James Blakeslee and L. D. Hickey for Apostles. H. P. Brown for one of the seven Presidents of the Seventies.

On motion, resolved, unanimously, That P. W. Stilwell be ordained an Elder.

On motion of Bro. Nathan Foster, the Conference tendered their congratulations and thanks to the musicians and singers for the excellent music with which they have assisted us in the praise of God during our sitting.

James Blakeslee was ordained an Apostle and a special witness of the Lord Jesus Christ to the nations of the earth under the hands of Pres. Strang, John E. Page, Ira J. Patten and Samuel Graham.

L. D. Hickey was also ordained an Apostle and a special witness of the Lord Jesus Christ unto the nations of the earth by Pres. Strang, John E. Page, Ira J. Patten and Samuel Graham. H. P. Brown was ordained one of the Presidents of the Seventies under the hands of John E. Page, Samuel Graham, Apostles, and Wm. Savage and Phineas Wright, Presidents of the Seventies.

P. W. Stilwell was ordained an Elder by Pres. Strang, John E. Page and Isaac Pierce.

The Conference resumed the consideration of the following resolution:—

Resolved, That if Bro. Wm. Marks will magnify his office according to the requirements of the revelation of Jan. 7th, that we will receive, uphold and sustain him by our faith, confidence and prayers, as one of the First Presidency. The vote being called, it was passed unanimously.

Resolved, That Pres. Strang, J. E. Page and James Blakeslee be appointed a committee to draw up in order the laws concerning the authority, order and prerogatives and relations of the priesthood, and report to the next Conference, or as soon as possible.

Preaching on the subject of the kingdom of God by Pres. Strang. Singing. The Eucharist was administered by Ira J. Patten and James Blakeslee.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 5. VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, APRIL 19, 1849 [WHOLE No. 121.

GOSPEL HERALD.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE QUARTERLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be addressed to James J. Strang, post paid, or they will not be taken out of the post office.

MINUTES OF THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD IN VOREE ON THE SIXTH, SEVENTH AND EIGHTH OF APRIL, 1849.

Concluded.

APRIL 8TH. FORENOON SESSION.—Assembled on the Temple ground pursuant to adjournment. The congregation was arranged in proper order by Samuel Graham, who acted as Marshal. Pres. Strang read part of the viii. chap. of 1st Kings, and consecrated the stone and the ground unto the Lord, that a Temple might be built thereon unto his name in which he might be invoked to reveal himself by many mighty works. The Choir sung the following hymn, composed for the occasion by Rockwell Packard one of the builders:—

On Zion's sacred ground we stand,
And humbly bow at God's command.
To lay a sure foundation stone,
Which myriads yet unborn shall own.

We'll rear a Temple to our God,
And here be taught his holy ways,
And incense from our hearts shall rise,
A humble, broken, sacrifice.

And Ephraim's children soon shall come,
From western forests, to their home,
To chant with us Jehovah's name,
And tell the nations of his fame.

Our walls and towers shall surely rise,
Like lofty mountains to the skies;
And Gentile nations yet shall gaze
On Zion's walls and gates of praise.

O Lord, thine aid we now implore,
Never will we this work give o'er,
Until God's Temple is [illegible]
Upon this peaceful, promis'd [illegible]

The stone was laid by Pres. Strang, assisted by Gilbert Watson and Payne W. Stilwell, masons. The congregation then marched in procession to the school house, under the direction of the marshal. The procession, marching in close order, was eighty rods in length. At the school house,—called to order by the President. Singing. The Conference resumed the consideration of the following resolution:—

Resolved, That we will receive, uphold and sustain Bro. John E. Page as President of the quorum of the Twelve, by our faith, confidence and prayers.

Remarks by Pres. Strang. Bro. John E. Page made some remarks, in which he expressed his faith and confidence in the [illegible] and his determination to sustain the [illegible] with his whole heart and understanding.—Remarks by Jesse P. Greene. The vote being called on the resolution it was passed unanimously, one excepted.

Similar resolutions were passed in behalf of Moses Smith, Jehiel Savage, Lester Bidwell, Samuel Bennett, Ebenezer Page, Ira J. Patten, Seymour Graham, [illegible] of the Twelve, with an earnest desire [illegible] them.

Similar resolutions were passed in behalf of all the following presiding officers of the church: Wm. Savage, Samuel E. Hall, Phineas Wright, James M. Wait, Presidents of the Seventies; Isaac Pierce, Nathan Worcester, Presidents of the Elders; John Pierce, President of the Standing Order, B. G. Wright, assistant; Gilbert Watson, Bishop, E. Wheeler, A. W. Prindle, Counsellors; James J. Strang, Rockwell Packard, Temple Committee. Adjourned [illegible] Benediction by Samuel Graham.

AFTERNOON SESSION.—Opened by singing. Prayer by John E. Page. Singing.

The First Presidency presented James Blakeslee and L. D. Hickey for Apostles. H. P. Brown for one of the seven Presidents of the Seventies.

On motion, resolved, unanimously, That P. W. Stilwell be ordained an Elder.

On motion of Bro. Nathan Pierce, the Conference tendered their congratulations and thanks to the musicians and singers for the excellent music with which they have assisted us in the praise of God during our sittings.

James Blakeslee was ordained an Apostle and a special witness of the Lord Jesus Christ to the nations of the earth under the hands of Pres. Strang, John E. Page, Ira J. Patten and Samuel Graham. L. D. Hickey was also ordained an Apostle and a special witness of the Lord Jesus Christ unto the nations of the earth by Pres. Strang, John E. Page, Ira J. Patten and Samuel Graham. H. P. Brown was ordained one of the Presidents of the Seventies under the hands of John E. Page, Samuel Graham, Apostles, and Wm. Savage and Phineas Wright, Presidents of the Seventies.

P. W. Stilwell was ordained an Elder by Pres. Strang, John E. Page and Isaac Pierce.

The Conference resumed the consideration of the following resolution:—

Resolved, That if Bro. Wm. Marks will magnify his office according to the requirements of the revelation of Jan. 7th, that we will receive, uphold and sustain him by our faith, confidence and prayers, as one of the First Presidency. The vote being called, it was passed unanimously.

Resolved, That Pres. Strang, J. E. Page and James Blakeslee be appointed a committee to draw up in order the laws concerning the authority, order and prerogatives and relations of the priesthood, and report to the next Conference, or as soon as possible.

Preaching on the subject of the kingdom of God by Pres. Strang. Singing. The Eucharist was administered by Ira J. Patten and James Blakeslee.

On motion, Bro. Anson W. Prindle was appointed to be ordained a High Priest and President pro tem, of the High Priests Quorum. He was accordingly ordained a High Priest unto the most high God by James Blakeslee and Gilbert Watson.

On motion, Royal Tucker was appointed to be ordained a High Priest. He was accordingly ordained a High Priest unto the most high God by Ira J. Patten and James Blakeslee. Singing. Benediction by Pres. Strang.

Evening Session.—Opened by singing. Prayer by Elder M. Weston. Singing. Pres. Strang preached on the succession of prophets. Remarks by Elders Page, Blakeslee and Patten.

Resolved, unanimously, That this Conference renew the reccommendation heretofore given that the saints who are in possession of sufficient means to assist Bro. John E. Page in the publication of the collateral evidences of the Book of Mormon. Adjourned sine die. JAMES J. STRANG, Pres. Gilbert Watson, Clerk.

A REPORT FOR THE HERALD.

Voree, Wis., April 4th, 1849.

President J. J. Strang,—Dear Brother:—I take this method of informing the saints abroad (for the saints here know already) what I have been doing for the last seven or eight months, as I have not been out preaching during that time. It is well understood that about a year ago the middle of last January a few of the brethren here, under the direction of the prophet James, entered into an Equality Association, for the purpose more effectually of carrying out the order of God, as laid down in the gospel; that is, that the saints might become one in their temporal things, and thus put an end to the inequality that always exists where monopoly is suffered to have a foothold among the people of God. The few brethren who engaged in this most laudable of all causes (with few exceptions) labored and struggled on in poverty, and, in some instances, in want of almost all things, incessantly through the remainder of the winter and spring until the April Conference, at which time they had much of their spring crops already in the ground, and had built several houses, so that Conference found us in a prosperous situation both at home and abroad.

I had been engaged the previous winter in preaching the gospel in Illinois, and after Conference I was also engaged in preaching the gospel in that State until the forepart of wheat harvest, when I returned to Voree, after having visited and preached the gospel in Kane Co., and so on down the Fox River as far as Ottawa, visiting the saints on each side of the river, and endeavoring to stir them up in remembrance of the commandments of the Lord, telling them that the Lord required them to gather to the places appointed for refuge, and assist in building the Temple and Tower of Strength, according to the commandments of the Lord; and after visiting that region of country I went to Chicago, where I tarried and preached a few times, and feeling very anxious to see the Order of Enoch established at Voree, I concluded to lay aside my priestly garment for a while and go to work with my hands. Accordingly, when I arrived at home, I found the wheat about ready for the sickle, and with my brothers, High Priests and Elders, &c., I went to work in the harvest field, and labored on until the close of wheat harvest, when I went to work with a new threshing instrument having iron teeth, and continued to work with it until winter set in, when I took a horse team to take care of and to drive, and continued to drive it until now, and how long I shall continue to drive team I know not. But in all probability after our spring work is done here I shall go to Beaver Island to assist in establishing the Order of the Church of the First Born there. And who of the saints will meet me there to assist in so laudable an undertaking? and bring with them their gold and silver, their goods of all kinds which will be needed, both for food and raiment, and tools of all kinds, with workmen to use them? and books of history, and school books, and law books, and Books of Mormon? &c., &c., that we may have the means in our hands, not only to educate our own children, but to teach the sons of the forest (sons of Jacob) the arts and sciences, and make them acquainted with the fact that to be one in our religion, and one in our temporal things, in all things faring alike and receiving alike, is to be like Enoch and his company, who were too good to stay among the wicked on this earth, and therefore were translated?

Come, then, my brethren of the church of the last days, and let us show our faith by our works as Enoch did, and they that were with him, and Noah also, laboring for scores upon scores of years with his hands to build a place of refuge, thus showing his faith by the work of his own hands, and became heir of the righteousness of that kind of faith in God which was made perfect by the work of his hands in building an ark (or great boat) to float on the waters of a flood to save himself and family. And why was Noah's faith made perfect by building a great boat? Ans. Because that was the very thing God told him to do. And how is our faith to be made perfect in the dispensation of the fulness of times? Ans.—By doing the very things which God commands us to do by the mouth of his prophets in the dispensation of the fulness of times.—Again, what have his prophets in this dispensation commanded us to do? Ans. To gather ourselves together at Voree and the Islands in the great Lakes, to build and prepare places of refuge against the time when God will overthrow Mystery Babylon. Then if we have any faith in the work called Mormonism, we will surely show it by doing the work which the Lord requires at our hands, and by so doing become heirs of the righteousness which is by faith, and that faith made perfect by works, such as building cities, temples, towns, villages, towers of defence for a glory and dwelling of Zion, and improving farms and in raising cattle, and sheep, and horses, and fowls of every kind which are useful, and building of mills, and all kinds of machinery for the use of man. Therefore bring up your mechanics, and musicians, and all kinds of instruments of music to assist in singing and in making melody to the Lord with joyfulness, and also take part in carrying the gospel to the nations of the earth. And now, in regard to the Order of Enoch at Voree, it has prospered since its organization far beyond my most sanguine expectations, and it is now in a flourishing state, and is established on a firm foundation, and will prevail. JAMES BLAKESLEE.

PATCHING UP HIS REPUTATION.

The good christians of Geneva have recently been holding a protracted meeting, with what results we know not. But Col. Keeler, of the Standard, has been poking fun at them by publishing, first, that he had been forward for prayers, and afterwards that the meeting had put up prayers for a span of horses and a wagon lost in the mud at Geneva. This naughty talk, of course, brought a shower of indignation on the head of the little Col., as it ought, and now he is making amends by telling fibs on prophet Strang. That is the true vein, if you wish to ruin your paper, Col. Possibly some fool will forgive your making sport of his religion, provided you help him cry down somebody else. But no man of sense will. Many fools may thank you for so doing. But the day is past when a paper can be sustained by any such policy. The days of bigotry, superstition and intolerance are rapidly passing. We did not call the publisher of the Herald of the Prairies "a scamp." It was an impostor calling himself publisher of that paper that we called so.—And the reason for doing so was not that he spoke ill of the Mormons, (though we humbly conceive that would be a sufficient reason,) but after speaking in the severest terms of them, in the very next breath pretended to us the highest respect for them, ranking

On motion, Bro. Anson W. Prindle was appointed to be ordained a High Priest and President pro tem, of the High Priests Quorum. He was accordingly ordained a High Priest unto the most high God by James Blakeslee and Gilbert Watson.

On motion, Royal Tucker was appointed to be ordained a High Priest- He was accordinly ordained a High Priest unto the most high God by Ira J. Patten and James Blakeslee. Singing. Benediction by Pres. Strang.

Evening Session.—Opened by singing. Prayer by Elder M. Weston. Singing. Pres. Strang preached on the succession of prophets. Remarks by Elders Page, Blakeslee and Patten.

Resolved, unanimously, That this Conference renew the reccommendation heretofore given that the saints who are in possession of sufficient means to assist Bro. John E. Page in the publication of the collateral evidences of the Book of Mormon. Adjourned sine die. JAMES J. STRANG, Pres. Gilbert Watson, Clerk.

A REPORT FOR THE HERALD.

Voree, Wis., April 4th, 1849.

President J. J. Strang,—Dear Brother:—I take this method of informing the saints abroad (for the saints here know already) what I have been doing for the last seven or eight months, as I have not been out preaching during that time. It is well understood that about a year ago the middle of last January a few of the brethren here, under the direction of the prophet James, entered into an Equality Association, for the purpose more effectually of carrying out the order of God, as laid down in the gospel; that is, that the saints might become one in their temporal things, and thus put an end to the inequality that always exists where monopoly is suffered to have a foothold among the people of God. The few brethren who engaged in this most laudable of all causes (with few exceptions) labored and struggled on in poverty, and, in some instances, in want of almost all things, incessantly through the remainder of the winter and spring until the April Conference, at which time they had much of their spring crops already in the ground, and had built several houses, so that Conference found us in a prosperous situation both at home and abroad.

I had been engaged the previous winter in preaching the gospel in Illinois, and after Conference I was also engaged in preaching the gospel in that State until the forepart of wheat harvest, when I returned to Voree, after having visited and preached the gospel in Kane Co., and so on down the Fox River as far as Ottawa, visiting the saints on each side of the river, and endeavoring to stir them up in remembrance of the commandments of the Lord, telling them that the Lord required them to gather to the places appointed for refuge, and assist in building the Temple and Tower of Strength, according to the commandments of the Lord; and after visiting that region of country I went to Chicago, where I tarried and preached a few times, and feeling very anxious to see the Order of Enoch established at Voree, I concluded to lay aside my priestly garment for a while and go to work with my hands. Accordingly, when I arrived at home, I found the wheat about ready for the sickle, and with my brothers, High Priests and Elders, &c., I went to work in the harvest field, and labored on until the close of wheat harvest, when I went to work with a new threshing instrument having iron teeth, and continued to work with it until winter set in, when I took a horse team to take care of and to drive, and continued to drive it until now, and how long I shall continue to drive team I know not. But in all probability after our spring work is done here I shall go to Beaver Island to assist in establishing the Order of the Church of the First Born there. And who of the saints will meet me there to assist in so laudable an undertaking? and bring with them their gold and silver, their goods of all kinds which will be needed, both for food and raiment, and tools of all kinds, with workmen to use them? and books of history, and school books, and law books, and Books of Mormon? &c., &c., that we may have the means in our hands, not only to educate our own children, but to teach the sons of the forest (sons of Jacob) the arts and sciences, and make them acquainted with the fact that to be one in our religion, and one in our temporal things, in all things faring alike and receiving alike, is to be like Enoch and his company, who were too good to stay among the wicked on this earth, and therefore were translated!

Come, then, my brethren of the church of the last days, and let us show our faith by our works as Enoch did, and they that were with him, and Noah also, laboring for scores upon scores of years with his hands to build a place of refuge, thus showing his faith by the work of his own hands, and became heir of the righteousness of that kind of faith in God which was made perfect by the work of his hands in building an ark (or great boat) to float on the waters of a flood to save himself and family. And why was Noah's faith made perfect by building a great boat? Ans. Because that was the very thing God told him to do. And how is our faith to be made perfect in the dispensation of the fulness of times? Ans.—By doing the very things which God commands us to do by the mouth of his prophets in the dispensation of the fulness of times.—Again, what have his prophets in this dispensation commanded us to do? Ans. To gather ourselves together at Voree and the Islands in the great Lakes, to build and prepare places of refuge against the time when God will overthrow Mystery Babylon. Then if we have any faith in the work called Mormonism, we will surely show it by doing the work which the Lord requires at our hands, and by so doing become heirs of the righteousness which is by faith, and that faith made perfect by works, such as building cities, temples, towns, villages, towers of defence for a glory and dwelling of Zion, and improving farms and in raising cattle, and sheep, and horses, and fowls of every kind which are useful, and building of mills, and all kinds of machinery for the use of man. Therefore bring up your mechanics, and musicians, and all kinds of instruments of music to assist in singing and in making melody to the Lord with joyfulness, and also take part in carrying the gospel to the nations of the earth. And now, in regard to the Order of Enoch at Voree, it has prospered since its organization far beyond my most sanguine expectations, and it is now in a flourishing state, and is established on a firm foundation, and will prevail. JAMES BLAKESLEE.

PATCHING UP HIS REPUTATION.

The good christians of Geneva have recently been holding a protracted meeting, with what results we know not. But Col. Keeler, of the Standard, has been poking fun at them by publishing, first, that he had been forward for prayers, and afterwards that the meeting had PUT UP PRAYERS FOR A SPAN OF HORSES AND A WAGON lost in the mud at Geneva. This naughty talk, of course, brought a shower of indignation on the head of the little Col., as it ought, and now he is making amends by telling fibs on prophet Strang. That is the true vein, if you wish to ruin your paper, Col. Possibly some fool will forgive your making sport of his religion, provided you help him cry down somebody else. But no man of sense will. Many fools may thank you for so doing. But the day is past when a paper can be sustained by any such policy. The days of bigotry, superstition and intolerance are rapidly passing. We did not call the publisher of the Herald of the Prairies "a scamp." It was an impostor calling himself publisher of that paper that we called so.—And the reason for doing so was not that he spoke ill of the Mormons, (though we humbly conceive that would be a sufficient reason,) but after speaking in the severest terms of them, in the very next breath pretended to us the highest respect for them, ranking them as a religious denomination in the same category with Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Baptists, &c., and professing to regard prophet Strang in the very front rank of the age in point of moral character, intellectual attainments and theological acumen. It is the hypocrisy, the false pretenses, we call scampish.

Baltimore, March 19th, 1849.

PRESIDENT STRANG,—DEAR BROTHER:—Knowing that you delight in the spread of truth, I thought I could not better improve a few moments than by letting your readers know the prosperity of the work of God in this place. Our branch now numbers over twenty-five good saints, and a number more are going forward to obey the gospel soon. Prejudice is giving way on every side. Our meetings are constantly crowded. We have three Elders, faithful men of God. Brother Joseph Cannop is the presiding Elder over the Branch—a good, firm, patient man of God. Brother George Pope was the first Elder that I ordained, who has been assisting me from Sabbath to Sabbath, and will go forth and preach as soon as the way opens. He is also a faithful, upright man of God.

Bro. Whipple is now a priest, but we expect to ordain him an Elder soon, and let him go forth in the regions around about and do good in his day and generation. He was formerly a member of the Baptist church, and I have no doubt will win many souls to Christ. And last, but not least, Dr. Charles W. Appleton, one of the best temperance lecturers in the United States—a very skillful physician, an Elder, and formerly a very successful circuit preacher in the Methodist Episcopal church—a man of learning and eloquence.—I have ordained him an Elder in the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He had a vision a week ago last night—a mighty vision—at the conclusion of which God commanded him to arise and obey the gospel, for he had chosen him to bear his name in this the dispensation of the fulness of times, before kings and rulers of the earth. He was not disobedient to the heavenly vision, but went forward the same night and was baptized. Yesterday afternoon, before a large congregation, we confirmed and ordained him; and last night he preached a most powerful and soul stirring discourse on the great work of God in the last days. Hundreds listened and trembled, and fear came upon them. The people marvel at these things, but none dare say why do ye so? We hold a Conference here on the 24th and 25th of this month, the first ever held in this State. I expect to start for Voree on the 26th. I have to baptize some to-night. Let the saints fear not, for truth is mighty and will prevail. You may expect to hear more soon. I remain yours in the fulness of the gospel, G. J. ADAMS.

Long Plain, Mass., March 22d, 1849.

DEAR BROTHER STRANG:—I write at this time under peculiar emotions of spirit. Since I saw you in New York the hand of adversity has been upon me. Yet in it I can but acknowledge the kind influence of a Father in heaven. Most certainly do I feel the silent workings of a still small voice, that tells me that if I had heeded the counsels of the prophet all would have been well. Suffice it to say, I have wandered in darkness even to the doors of apostacy, but a hand unseen to mortal eye was stretched forth to draw me back into the narrow way of life and immortality, and I feel a determination to lead in future a life of righteouness in the name of him of Nazareth, who, though tempted in all things like unto us, was himself spotless as the robe of righteousness that will be worn by those triumphant saints who conquer the world, the flesh and the Devil. When darkness had clouded my mind to the obscurity of the light of truth, when despair had began to take hold of me, I had a vision, a dream I can no longer call it. I dreamed I saw in the stillness of night, my father in the gospel, Elder G. J. Adams. I saw his situation, the work that he was doing all so plainly, that I called it a vision. I heard his voice again sounding in my ears. He called me to arise and again lift up my voice on high to the people of the earth. So remarkable was the scene pictured to my mind, that I immediately wrote to him, and behold my vision was certain, and the interpretation was sure. And I feel to bless the God of all the earth for his mercy unto me. Brother Adams is doing a great work in Baltimore. The lion has come up from his thicket, the spirit of God, even the God of Jacob, is on him, and as usual the strong holds of Satan give way. The honest in heart receive the truth, and the kingdom is glorified. There is still a branch of the church in New Bedford, and arrangements will be made by the Elders to extend their influences to the surrounding country during the coming summer. There is a great field open in this vicinity at this time for a certain Elder, James Blakeslee, if he could be induced to come this way. It seems to me that now is the accepted time to spread the gospel. I entertain the hope of being able to assist in building up Zion's waste places in this vicinity, and ultimately coming up to Zion, rejoicing, bringing perhaps a few sheaves with me. Elder J. W. Nichols intends to labor in the gospel this summer in this neighborhood. There is a great deal of inquiry for a work explanatory of doctrines. Would you counsel the publication of a pamphlet of that description? I ask a remembrance at the throne of grace, that God will in mercy give me wisdom to overcome all temptations, and obtain a rest in this celestial kingdom. Yours in the new covenant, CHARLES A. ROGERS.

Georgetown, Mass., March 11th, 1849.

DEAR BROTHER STRANG:—It is with a sad and lonely spirit I sit down to address a few lines to you. Although I am not personally acquainted with you, yet through the acquaintance I have formed with you through my husband, who met with you in Conference at Boston more than two years since, I feel that I am addressing one who can sympathize with me in affliction, when I inform you that our beloved father and brother in the Church of Latter Day Saints, my companion in life and in the faith of the gospel is no more.—He has gone to that bourne from which no traveler returns. He had enjoyed comfortable health and his usual rigor, until Feb. the 16th, when he took a violent cold, which terminated in fever. He continued bright, and we had no apprehension of his being dangerously ill until the 20th, when he began to fail very fast, and at ten minutes past six his spirit took flight without a struggle or a groan, aged 73 years. Elder Holmes was among the first who embraced the fulness of the gospel in 1832. He was ordained presiding Elder over the Branford and Georgetown branch of the church, which office he held until 1844, when he was ordained presiding High Priest over the same branch, under the hand of W. Woodruff, one of the Twelve. And while the Twelve were dividing the church under their pretended claims to lead, he always said that twelve men could not lead the church except they led it to destruction.

When President Strang's authority was made known among us he took a decided stand in his favor. He unwaveringly declared to all that if Joseph Smith was a prophet of the Lord James J. Strang was his legal successor, for no other one had his claim to lead the church. The position he took was the result of his most careful and indefatigable study of the revelations and commandments contained in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. The law of the Lord was his delight, and he endeavored at all times to make it the man of his council. In 1846 there was a great division took place under the lead of the Brighamites, in which most of the members left him, and heaped to themselves other teachers, and but few names remained. The dissenting party, under the lead of one of the Brighamite Apostles, undertook in an unlawful and unchristian manner them as a religious denomination in the same category with Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Baptists, &c., and professing to regard prophet Strang in the very front rank of the age in point of moral character, intellectual attainments and theological acumen. It is the hypocrisy, the false pretenses, we call scampish.

Baltimore, March 19th, 1849.

PRESIDENT STRANG,—DEAR BROTHER:—Knowing that you delight in the spread of truth, I thought I could not better improve a few moments than by letting your readers know the prosperity of the work of God in this place. Our branch now numbers over twenty-five good saints, and a number more are going forward to obey the gospel soon. Prejudice is giving way on every side. Our meetings are constantly crowded. We have three Elders, faithful men of God. Brother Joseph Cannop is the presiding Elder over the Branch—a good, firm, patient man of God. Brother George Pope was the first Elder that I ordained, who has been assisting me from Sabbath to Sabbath, and will go forth and preach as soon as the way opens. He is also a faithful, upright man of God.

Bro. Whipple is now a priest, but we expect to ordain him an Elder soon, and let him go forth in the regions around about and do good in his day and generation. He was formerly a member of the Baptist church, and I have no doubt will win many souls to Christ. And last, but not least, Dr. Charles W. Appleton, one of the best temperance lecturers in the United States—a very skillful physician, an Elder, and formerly a very successful circuit preacher in the Methodist Episcopal church—a man of learning and eloquence.—I have ordained him an Elder in the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He had a vision a week ago last night—a mighty vision—at the conclusion of which God commanded him to arise and obey the gospel, for he had chosen him to bear his name in this the dispensation of the fulness of times, before kings and rulers of the earth. He was not disobedient to the heavenly vision, but went forward the same night and was baptized. Yesterday afternoon, before a large congregation, we confirmed and ordained him; and last night he preached a most powerful and soul stirring discourse on the great work of God in the last days. Hundreds listened and trembled, and fear came upon them. The people marvel at these things, but none dare say why do ye so? We hold a Conference here on the 24th and 25th of this month, the first ever held in this State. I expect to start for Voree on the 26th. I have to baptize some to-night. Let the saints fear not, for truth is mighty and will prevail. You may expect to hear more soon. I remain yours in the fulness of the gospel,

G. J. ADAMS.

Long Plain, Mass., March 22d, 1849.

DEAR BROTHER STRANG:—I write at this time under peculiar emotions of spirit. Since I saw you in New York the hand of adversity has been upon me. Yet in it I can but acknowledge the kind influence of a Father in heaven. Most certainly do I feel the silent workings of a still small voice, that tells me that if I had heeded the counsels of the prophet all would have been well. Suffice it to say, I have wandered in darkness even to the doors of apostacy, but a hand unseen to mortal eye was stretched forth to draw me back into the narrow way of life and immortality, and I feel a determination to lead in future a life of righteouness in the name of him of Nazareth, who, though tempted in all things like unto us, was himself spotless as the robe of righteousness that will be worn by those triumphant saints who conquer the world, the flesh and the Devil. When darkness had clouded my mind to the obscurity of the light of truth, when despair had began to take hold of me, I had a vision, a dream I can no longer call it. I dreamed I saw in the stillness of night, my father in the gospel, Elder G. J. Adams. I saw his situation, the work that he was doing all so plainly, that I called it a vision. I heard his voice again sounding in my ears. He called me to arise and again lift up my voice on high to the people of the earth. So remarkable was the scene pictured to my mind, that I immediately wrote to him, and behold my vision was certain, and the interpretation was sure. And I feel to bless the God of all the earth for his mercy unto me. Brother Adams is doing a great work in Baltimore. The lion has come up from his thicket, the spirit of God, even the God of Jacob, is on him, and as usual the strong holds of Satan give way. The honest in heart receive the truth, and the kingdom is glorified. There is still a branch of the church in New Bedford, and arrangements will be made by the Elders to extend their influences to the surrounding country during the coming summer. There is a great field open in this vicinity at this time for a certain Elder, James Blakeslee, if he could be induced to come this way. It seems to me that now is the accepted time to spread the gospel. I entertain the hope of being able to assist in building up Zion's waste places in this vicinity, and ultimately coming up to Zion, rejoicing, bringing perhaps a few sheaves with me. Elder J. W. Nichols intends to labor in the gospel this summer in this neighborhood. There is a great deal of inquiry for a work explanatory of doctrines. Would you counsel the publication of a pamphlet of that description? I ask a remembrance at the throne of grace, that God will in mercy give me wisdom to overcome all temptations, and obtain a rest in this celestial kingdom. Yours in the new covenant,

CHARLES A. ROGERS.

Georgetown, Mass., March 11th, 1849.

DEAR BROTHER STRANG:—It is with a sad and lonely spirit I sit down to address a few lines to you. Although I am not personally acquainted with you, yet through the acquaintance I have formed with you through my husband, who met with you in Conference at Boston more than two years since, I feel that I am addressing one who can sympathize with me in affliction, when I inform you that our beloved father and brother in the Church of Latter Day Saints, my companion in life and in the faith of the gospel is no more.—He has gone to that bourne from which no traveler returns. He had enjoyed comfortable health and his usual rigor, until Feb. the 16th, when he took a violent cold, which terminated in fever. He continued bright, and we had no apprehension of his being dangerously ill until the 20th, when he began to fail very fast, and at ten minutes past six his spirit took flight without a struggle or a groan, aged 73 years. Elder Holmes was among the first who embraced the fulness of the gospel in 1832. He was ordained presiding Elder over the Branford and Georgetown branch of the church, which office he held until 1844, when he was ordained presiding High Priest over the same branch, under the hand of W. Woodruff, one of the Twelve. And while the Twelve were dividing the church under their pretended claims to lead, he always said that twelve men could not lead the church except they led it to destruction.

When President Strang's authority was made known among us he took a decided stand in his favor. He unwaveringly declared to all that if Joseph Smith was a prophet of the Lord James J. Strang was his legal successor, for no other one had his claim to lead the church. The position he took was the result of his most careful and indefatigable study of the revelations and commandments contained in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. The law of the Lord was his delight, and he endeavored at all times to make it the man of his council. In 1846 there was a great division took place under the lead of the Brighamites, in which most of the members left him, and heaped to themselves other teachers, and but few names remained. The dissenting party, under the lead of one of the Brighamite Apostles, undertook in an unlawful and unchristian manner to cut him and his partner off from the church. Soon after two of their number came and demanded of him the church record, which he had ever kept. This he refused to give up. They forgot to, or did not request him to give up his license. These, with the church record, he retained until he died. As his death was sudden and unexpected to us all, and I think as much so to himself, he left no counsel on the subject. They are left in my care. I ask counsel of you what I shall do with them, if I shall send them to you to be recorded. It is my desire that his name, with my own, together with all things pertaining to his office and calling, be recorded on the general church record at Voree, if you think it right so to do. There is but one official member left of our number. He is very feeble, expecting soon to be called to depart. He also wishes me to request that his name may be recorded on the general church record. His name is Abner Rogers, holding the office of Priest.

ABIGAIL P. HOLMES.

Port Rowen, C. W., March 23d, 1849.

Brother James J. Strang,—

Beloved for the Gospel's Sake :—I write a few lines, by which you may know how the cause of Zion prospers in Canada West.—After contending earnestly for that faith which was once delivered to the saints, against superstition and sectarian bigotry, I succeeded in baptizing some new members. I held a Conference and organized a branch at the Round O, called the Harwich branch. I then left that place and came to Long Point, where I formerly labored. The saints here are in good standing, and many go heart and hand for the Order of Enoch, and calculate to go to Voree as soon as they can get ready. I expect to baptize some in this place before I leave. The prospect is good here. We have some opposition, but that we expect until the saints take the kingdom and possess it forever and ever. Then we can worship God under our own vine and fig tree, and none will molest or make us afraid. O what a blessed hope is ours! I would write more, but I soon shall see you, if God be pleased to prosper us. I remain, as ever, your brother in the gospel,

JOHN SHIPPY.

COMPLAIN NOT.

Whatever be your condition—inwardly or outwardly—let not a complaint fall from your lips. You may be poor and obliged to work hard day by day ; but this world is a place of toil. Millions have toiled before you, who are now at rest in their graves. Are you abused ? So was the most perfect man the world ever saw. Abuse will not injure a sterling character. Harsh words rebound to the speaker's own hurt. Are you cheated ? So is every honest man. If you complain at every mishap—at every slander—at every dog at your heels—you will pass a life of misery. The best course is, to suffer without complaining, and to discharge all your duties faithfully as in the fear of God. The man who has a snarl always in his brow—a scorn on his lips and a mountain on his back—not one of which he can muster courage to remove—is of all men the most miserable. If you complain at the trifles now, before you die, you will embitter every hour of existence, by your unhappy disposition.

Southern Literary Messenger.—Vol. xv. No. 3.—This able representative of the literature of the south is on our table. The leading article is a notice of the modern political history of Germany, a very able article, showing better than anything else we have yet seen the causes, the decline of Germany in political importance, and its certain loss of political influence in the affairs of the continent. For ourselves we confess also deep interest in brief notice (by the Paris correspondent) of Madame Rachel, the Jewish actress.

A SONG FOR THE SAINTS.

Some love to roam to a mountain home,
Towards California's sea ;
But I love to meet, the saints to greet,
In their quiet home, Voree.

And 'tis my choice, for a prophet's voice
Is the voice of God to me ;
And a happy throng, will dwell ere long,
In their quiet home, Voree.

And our brethren too, who left Nauvoo,
The usurpers slave to be,
Will mourn for the day, they were led away
From their happy home, Voree.

Then let the sound, of joy resound,
In a song of melody ;
For God's own hand, has bless'd the land,
In our happy home, Voree.

C. A. Rogers.

A Cave.—The following account is given of a cave in a limestone chain of hills not far from San Sebastin :—

"In the year 1838, a Mexican, Don Juan Flores, perceived the hidden entrance to a cave. He entered ; but seeing inside a council of Indian warriors sitting together in the deepest silence, he retreated and told it to his companions, who, well prepared, entered the cave together and discovered about 1000 well preserved Indian corpses squatted together on the ground, with their hands folded below their knees ; they were dressed in fine blankets, made of the fibres of iechuilla with sandals made of pieces of liano, on their feet, and ornamented with colored scarfs, with beads of seeds of fruit, polished bones, etc. This is a very insufficient account of the very mysterious burying place. The Mexicans suppose that it belonged to the Lioans, an old Indian tribe which from time immemorial has roved and is roving over the Boston de Mopine."

☞ The Wisconsin Farmer does not reach us. As we have puffed it pretty high, we should like to see whether it makes good our assurances.

☞ Bro. L. D. Hickey has read a letter from Newton Goodell, in the salt land, giving a deplorable account of the state of things there. Their wheat crop was cut off, and they are in a state of suffering for many of the necessaries of life. This letter was written in January last.

REMITTANCE BY MAIL LAST WEEK FOR THE HERALD.

D. S. Brown, $3,00 to Vol. IV. No. 52

Note.—We pay postage to Canada line $1,56, but if our subscribers in Canada will send one dollar extra, as in this case, it will be perfectly satisfactory. We will pay the 56 cents at our own cost.

Henry Glidden, $1,00 to Vol. IV. No. 12
George Adams, 1,00 " " 23

☞ On the 13th inst. three families left this place for Beaver Island. A number more will go in the course of a few weeks.—Pres. Strang, in company with J. E. Page and James Blakeslee, of the Twelve, has gone on a mission to the same place. He will probably be absent five or six weeks.

☞ Suffer not your spirit to be subdued by misfortunes ; but, on the contrary, steer right onward, with a courage greater than your fate seems to allow.

to cut him and his partner off from the church. Soon after two of their number came and demanded of him the church record, which he had ever kept. This he refused to give up. They forgot to, or did not request him to give up his license. These, with the church record, he retained until he died. As his death was sudden and unexpected to us all, and I think as much so to himself, he left no counsel on the subject. They are left in my care. I ask counsel of you what I shall do with them, if I shall send them to you to be recorded. It is my desire that his name, with my own, together with all things pertaining to his office and calling, be recorded on the general church record at Voree, if you think it right so to do. There is but one official member left of our number. He is very feeble, expecting soon to be called to depart. He also wishes me to request that his name may be recorded on the general church record. His name is Abner Rogers, holding the office of Priest.

ABIGAIL P. HOLMES.

Port Rowen, C. W., March 23d, 1849.

BROTHER JAMES J. STRANG.—

BELOVED FOR THE GOSPEL'S SAKE:—I write a few lines, by which you may know how the cause of Zion prospers in Canada West.—After contending earnestly for that faith which was once delivered to the saints, against superstition and sectarian bigotry, I succeeded in baptizing some new members. I held a Conference and organized a branch at the Round O, called the Hardwich branch. I then left that place and came to Long Point, where I formerly labored. The saints here are in good standing, and merry of heart and hand for the Order of Enoch, and calculate to go to Voree as soon as they can get ready. I expect to baptize some in this place before I leave. The prospect is good here. We have some opposition, but that we expect until the saints take the kingdom and possess it forever and ever. Then we can worship God under our own vine and fig tree, and none will molest or make us afraid. O what a blessed hope is ours! I would write more, but I soon shall see you, if God be pleased to prosper us. I remain, as ever, your brother in the gospel,

JOHN SHIPPY.

COMPLAIN NOT.

Whatever be your condition—inwardly or outwardly—let not a complaint fall from your lips. You may be poor and obliged to work hard day by day; but this world is a place of toil. Millions have toiled before you, who are now at rest in their graves. Are you abused? So was the most perfect man the world ever saw. Abuse will not injure a sterling character. Harsh words rebound to the speaker's own hurt. Are you cheated? So is every honest man. If you complain at every mishap—at every slander—at every dog at your heels—you will pass a life of misery. The best course is, to suffer without complaining, and to discharge all your duties faithfully as in the fear of God. The man who has a snarl always in his brow—a scorn on his lips and a mountain on his back—not one of which he can muster courage to remove—is of all men the most miserable. If you complain at the trifles now, before you die, you will embitter every hour of existence, by your unhappy disposition.

SOUTHERN LITERARY MESSENGER.—VOL. XV. No. 3.—This able representative of the literature of the south is on our table. The leading article is a notice of the modern political history of Germany, a very able article, showing better than anything else we have yet seen the causes, the decline of Germany in political importance, and its certain loss of political influence in the affairs of the continent. For ourselves we confess also deep interest in brief notice (by the Paris correspondent) of Madame Rachel, the Jewish actress.

A SONG FOR THE SAINTS.

Some love to roam to a mountain home,
Towards California's sea:
But I love to meet, the Saints to greet,
In their quiet home, Voree.

And 'tis my choice, for a prophet's voice
Is the voice of God to me;
And a happy throng, will dwell ere long,
In their quiet home, Voree.

And our brethren too, who left Nauvoo,
The usurpers slave to be,
Will mourn for the day, they were led away
From their happy home, Voree.

Then let the sound, of joy resound,
In a song of melody:
For God's own hand, has blessed the land,
In our happy home, Voree.

C. A. ROGERS.

A CAVE.—The following account is given of a cave in a limestone chain of hills not far from San Sebastian:—

"In the year 1838, a Mexican, Don Juan Flores, perceived the hidden entrance to a cave. He entered; but seeing inside a council of Indian warriors sitting together in the deepest silence, he retreated and told it to his companions, who, well prepared, entered the cave together and discovered about 1000 well preserved Indian corpses squatted together on the ground, with their hands folded below their knees; they were dressed in fine blankets, made of the fibres of ichuilla with sandals made of pieces of liano, on their feet, and ornamented with colored scarfs, with beads of seeds of fruit, polished bones, etc. This is a very insufficient account of the very mysterious burying place. The Mexicans suppose that it belonged to the Lipans, an old Indian tribe which from time immemorial has roved and is roving over the Boston de Mopine."

☞ THE WISCONSIN FARMER does not reach us. As we have puffed it pretty high, we should like to see whether it makes good our assurances.

☞ Bro. L. D. Hickey has read a letter from Newton Goodell, in the salt land, giving a deplorable account of the state of things there. Their wheat crop was cut off, and they are in a state of suffering for many of the necessaries of life. This letter was written in January last.

REMITTANCE BY MAIL LAST WEEK FOR THE HERALD.

D. S. Brown. $3,00 to Vol. IV. No. 52

NOTE.—We pay postage to Canada line $1,56, but if our subscribers in Canada will send one dollar extra, as in this case, it will be perfectly satisfactory. We will pay the 56 cents at our own cost.

Henry Gliddon, $1,00 to Vol. IV. No. 12
George Adams, 1,00 " " 23

☞ On the 13th inst. three families left this place for Beaver Island. A number more will go in the course of a few weeks.—Pres. Strang, in company with J. E. Page and James Blakeslee, of the Twelve, has gone on a mission to the same place. He will probably be absent five or six weeks.

☞ Suffer not your spirit to be subdued by misfortunes; but, on the contrary, steer right onward, with a courage greater than your fate seems to allow.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 6.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. APRIL 26, 1849. [WHOLE No. 122.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. STRANG TO MR. BURGESS.—No. 13.

Racine, April 14th, 1849.

DEAR SIR:—I shall not make a single remark, as to the nature of light, that wonderful agent, that plays so important a part in the process of creation, and which is so beautiful in itself, and moves with a velocity so immense, that with a slight poetic license, it might be regarded as a smile of the omnipresent Deity. I have only to do, at present, with its mathematical evolution.

314. Its first law is a strict algebraic formula and may be expressed thus:—the intensity of light decreases, as the square of its distance increases, and vice versa. Does the cause, whatsoever we may suppose it to be, which produces this mathematical ratio, understand the involution of numbers? If not, how, in the name of reason, can it be supposed to form these miraculous squares, that often sweep, in many circles, embracing millions of leagues in the stellar spaces? Let me pledge faith in the wildest fictions of fairy land, the impossible fables of false theology, sooner than in such inconceivable absurdities as a hypothesis like that!

315. The second law of light is stated mathematically, in a form equally luminous, and conveys a truth equally magnificent. The angles of incidence and reflection are always equal. Thus if a ray of light from the sun fall upon the table before me, at an angle of forty-five degrees, it is reflected again at a like angle; and so of all other lines of every possible obliquity. These angles never vary so much as a single hair's breadth. Euclid or Legendre has none so perfect. Try, Mr. Burgess, with all your skill, and see if you can trace any equally exact with the pen on the the smoothest paper. And, is it possible that, after all, the cause which thus geometrizes is devoid of all knowledge of geometry? If so, may a blind mole—nay, a non-entity itself, compose a treatise superior in splendor and accuracy to Newton's world renowned Principia.

316. But apply the doctrine of chances to these angles now being formed, every instant all over the universe, and even imagination staggers under the immensity of the idea. Only pause here for a moment. Think of all the beams that emenate from the sun during one long summer day—of all the rays that flash out from the stars for only a single night. Then let your mind travel back over the march of dim, distant centuries, gathering age upon age, and cycle on cycle, in vast segments of eternity, where prophetic years vanish into insignificant vibrations of the pendulum, and the duration of galaxies are seen but as shadows on the dial plate of infinitude.

317. Then bid imagination lift her glittering wing away on high, from world to world remote, as far beyond the reach of the telescope, as the glance of that magic tube transcends the vision of a flitting insect; and behold the horizon of space that knew no limits still opening forever onwards, and upwards and all around and thickening with columns of suns, and breaking into nebulous starry haze, and undulating like some shoreless sea, with waves of white light; and then tell me the number of the rays ever shot athwart the great immensity, since the first fire-sons of Heaven shouted their coral hymn, in the morning of creation; then answer me, who shall calculate the chances against the perpetual, universal observance of the law in relation to angles, in and by all these, on the supposition that there is no God? Only God himself may solve the mighty problem.

318. I may here note a remarkable law, in reference to light of different colors, to which my attention has been called since speaking on this subject in New York and Boston, in 1846, and for the knowledge as well as the language of which I am indebted to Mr. Arrington.

319. If two red rays, from two luminous points, be admitted in a dark chamber and falling on white paper, or other suitable reflecting surface, differ in their length by 0,0000258 part of an inch, their intensity is doubled. A like result is produced if such difference in length be any multiple of that nearly infinitesimal fraction, by a whole number. But, strange to say, a multiple by 2½, 3½, 4½, &c., gives the result of total darkness! While a multiple by 1¼, 2¼, &c., gives an intensity equal to one ray only. In one of these cases, the fact is seen, which, from the beginning of the world, has been regarded as the extreme of impossibility—light actually produces darkness!

320. Corresponding effects are witnessed in violet rays, if the difference in their length be equal to 0,0000157 part of an inch.—And the like results are given by experiments on all other rays, the difference in length varying with a steady uniformity of increase from the violet to the red. Who shall reckon the chances in two cases only, in such vast numbers as these?

321. Let not the shallow scholiast answer me by a pitiful evasion, "that all this is accounted for on the principle of mechanical vibration." Cannot the merest tyro in logic see that the difficulty remains the same? For the question immediately presents itself: what causes the vibrations? And how can unintelligent vibrations be supposed to arrange such wonderful combinations of arithmetic?

322. The uniformity of colors in refracted light is equally marvelous. See yon dark cloud, only a moment ago one thick mass of gloom, lurid, almost appalling to the gazer's eye! Suddenly the sun breaks forth in the western sky; and lo! in an instant the rainbow is born, and stretches afar the curved wings of its prismatic plumage, as if to play around the world! Count well its gaudy colors. There is the sacred number seven composed by the blending of the mystic three. The same that gleamed there the day when the family of Noah descended from the ark, and "each mother held aloft her child to bless the bow of God."

323. And never since that far distant hour, either on land or sea, in city or in solitude, hath a single cloud blushed to the kiss of the sunbeam, without the colors of sacred seven, painted by the divine ray brush, in heavenly enameling there. Oh! golden-haired sun! Oh! airy vapor! Father and mother of that beautiful child of the

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 6.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. APRIL 26, 1849. [WHOLE No. 192.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid; or they will not be taken from the post office.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. STRANG TO MR. BURGESS.—No. 13.

Racine, April 14th, 1849.

DEAR SIR:—I shall not make a single remark, as to the nature of light, that wonderful agent, that plays so important a part in the process of creation, and which is so beautiful in itself, and moves with a velocity so immense, that with a slight poetic license, it might be regarded as a smile of the omnipresent Deity. I have only to do, at present, with its mathematical evolution.

314. Its first law is a strict algebraic formula and may be expressed thus:—the intensity of light decreases, as the square of its distance increases, and vice versa. Does the cause, whatsoever we may suppose it to be, which produces this mathematical ratio, understand the involution of numbers? If not, how, in the name of reason, can it be supposed to form these miraculous squares, that often sweep, in many circles, embracing millions of leagues in the stellar spaces? Let me pledge faith in the wildest fictions of fairy land, the impossible fables of false theology, sooner than in such inconceivable absurdities as a hypothesis like that!

315. The second law of light is stated mathematically, in a form equally luminous, and conveys a truth equally magnificent. The angles of incidence and reflection are always equal. Thus if a ray of light from the sun fall upon the table before me, at an angle of forty-five degrees, it is reflected again at a like angle; and so of all other lines of every possible obliquity. These angles never vary so much as a single hair's breadth. Euclid or Legendre has none so perfect. Try, Mr. Burgess, with all your skill, and see if you can trace any equally exact with the pen on the the smoothest paper. And, is it possible that, after all, the cause which thus geometrizes is devoid of all knowledge of geometry? If so, may a blind mole—nay, a non-entity itself, compose a treatise superior in splendor and accuracy to Newton's world renowned Principia.

316. But apply the doctrine of chances to these angles now being formed, every instant all over the universe, and even imagination staggers under the immensity of the idea. Only pause here for a moment. Think of all the beams that emenate from the sun during one long summer day—of all the rays that flash out from the stars for only a single night. Then let your mind travel back over the march of dim, distant centuries, gathering age upon age, and cycle on cycle, in vast segments of eternity, where prophetic years vanish into insignificant vibrations of the pendulum, and the duration of galaxies are seen but as shadows on the dial plate of infinitude.

317. Then bid imagination lift her glittering wing away on high, from world to world remote, as far beyond the reach of the telescope, as the glance of that magic tube transcends the vision of a flitting insect; and behold the horizon of space that knew no limits still opening forever onwards, and upwards and all around and thickening with columns of suns, and breaking into nebulous starry haze, and undulating like some shoreless sea, with waves of white light; and then tell me the number of the rays ever shot athwart the great immensity, since the first fire-sons of Heaven shouted their coral hymn, in the morning of creation; then answer me, who shall calculate the chances against the perpetual, universal observance of the law in relation to angles, in and by all these, on the supposition that there is no God? Only God himself may solve the mighty problem.

318. I may here note a remarkable law, in reference to light of different colors, to which my attention has been called since speaking on this subject in New York and Boston, in 1846, and for the knowledge as well as the language of which I am indebted to Mr. Arrington.

319. If two red rays, from two luminous points, be admitted in a dark chamber and falling on white paper, or other suitable reflecting surface, differ in their length by 0,0000258 part of an inch, their intensity is doubled. A like result is produced if such difference in length be any multiple of that nearly infinitesimal fraction, by a whole number. But, strange to say, a multiple by 2½, 3½, 4½, &c., gives the result of total darkness! While a multiple by 1½, 2½, &c., gives an intensity equal to one ray only. In one of these cases, the fact is seen, which, from the beginning of the world, has been regarded as the extreme of impossibility—light actually produces darkness!

320. Corresponding effects are witnessed in violet rays, if the difference in their length be equal to 0,0000157 part of an inch.—And the like results are given by experiments on all other rays, the difference in length varying with a steady uniformity of increase from the violet to the red. Who shall reckon the chances in two cases only, in such vast numbers as these?

321. Let not the shallow scholiast answer me by a pitiful evasion, "that all this is accounted for on the principle of mechanical vibration." Cannot the merest tyro in logic see that the difficulty remains the same? For the question immediately presents itself: what causes the vibrations? And how can unintelligent vibrations be supposed to arrange such wonderful combinations of arithmetic?

322. The uniformity of colors in refracted light is equally marvelous. See yon dark cloud, only a moment ago one thick mass of gloom, lurid, almost appalling to the gazer's eye! Suddenly the sun breaks forth in the western sky; and lo! in an instant the rainbow is born, and stretches afar the curved wings of its prismatic plumage, as if to play around the world! Count well its gaudy colors. There is the sacred number seven composed by the blending of the mystic three. The same that gleamed there the day when the family of Noah descended from the ark, and "each mother held aloft her child to bless the bow of God."

323. And never since that far distant hour, either on land or sea, in city or in solitude, hath a single cloud blushed to the kiss of the sunbeam, without the colors of sacred seven, painted by the divine ray brush, in heavenly enameling there. Oh! golden-haired sun! Oh! airy vapor! Father and mother of that beautiful child of the sky, "brought forth in purple, cradled in vermillion, baptized in molten gold, and swathed in dun," know ye what ye do? Are ye indeed blind? Can ye count without arithmetic? without the algebra of a Euler? aye, without even poor instinct of the eagle, that dips his wing in the checkered cloud—would ye undertake to teach the whole world mathematics?

324. Were there no other proof of the existence of a Deity, this one consideration would settle the question forever. Every rainbow is an exact mathematical equation of every other rainbow in the universe! Awake, ye dreaming metaphysicians! Arouse from your darkling dormitories and those pale lucubrations which are more than half slumber.

325. Come away to the floods and the fields, the flower banks and the forest—out here, in open space and free air, where sea and earth and sky mingle in mutual embraces, like the greeting of youthful lovers! Listen to the pine-songs which are chants of praise, and the wind-warbles which are hymns of halleujah! Look up yonder on the fire-dance of innumerable rolling worlds, and then answer me before the sun and all the stars—"Is there no God?"

326. I. ALL THE PLANETARY ORBITS ARE REGULAR ELIPSES, IN THE LOWER FOCUS OF WHICH THE SUN IS PLACED. Propose the problem to yonder intelligent school boy. Tell him to trace, on the paper, with his pen, an elliptical curve, and dot the two foci. Can he do it? Come, sage skeptic, with all your boasted reason, can you do it yourself? The planets are masses of blind matter. Who then will dare assert, that such may trace, perpetually for thousands of years, mathematical lines, with a regularity that no college professor can ever hope to equal?

327. II. THE TIMES OCCUPIED BY ANY PLANET, IN DESCRIBING ANY GIVEN ARCS OF ITS ORBIT ARE ALWAYS AS THE AREAS OF SECTORS, THE BEGINNING AND END OF THE ARCS TO THE SUN, AS A CENTRE. Let no one attempt the solution of this problem, in any specified case, unless he be a thorough mathematician, God solves it for all the planets, and if he does not, then they—mere blind matter—do it for themselves. There is no other alternate, and this is impossible.

328. III. THE SQUARE OF THE PERIODS OF THE PLANETS REVOLUTIONS VARY, AS THE CUBES OF THEIR DISTANCE FROM THE SUN. What wonderful operations are these, to be the work of unthinking masses of matter! What music is this among the stars, to be sung by tongueless atoms! We will not speak of chances here. We may not even think of them, unless we might pilfer the algebra of the archangels! Truly and sincerly, JAMES J. STRANG.

☞ The following communication is from Pres. Strang to the printer of the Herald:—

Racine, April 14th, 1849.

DEAR BROTHER:—I send back the proceedings in the case of Shaw and Parmeter for publication. I had thought to retain them, and only publish in case they persist in their rebellion. But a more mature consideration has brought me to this conclusion: that as their sin is before the public, their rebuke should be. "Rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft." Witchcraft is sectarianism. And every rebel organization that ever sprung out of Mormonism is simply that, and no more. Samuel Shaw is not a Bishop, and never was. His entire pretence for the exercise of the power of a judge among God's people is an assumption. The extent of his power was merely to oversee the work of putting up a log house for the use of the mission school.

We take this occasion to say that no man will, under any circumstances, be sustained in any act of rebellion against the authorities of this church. The authorities may go wrong, but if they do an appeal is the only remedy. The Presidency at Beaver is made up of men of piety and virtue, and we take this occasion to say that their acts in the premises are entirely approved of by all who seek the prosperity of Zion. This emeute will, of course, end in nothing, because there is nothing of it. The day of such movements has gone by. ED.

Beaver Island, January 26th, 1849.

DEAR BELOVED BRO. J. J. STRANG,—Prophet of the living God and President of his Church in all the world:—It is with feelings of the greatest respect and of very deep interest that I address you at this time, feeling a deep interest in the promulgation of the gospel of Christ, and the good order of his church, it gives me pain and anguish to see members of this church leave their places and standing, and to use unhallowed measures and gross deceivings to exalt themselves to places that they are not called to stand in. I pray God that he may always influence my mind to better principles.—If it is the will of God that I should be but a layman in this church, I take the seat with pleasure. I boast not of greatness, but at the same time I feel a heavy responsibility resting upon my shoulders in performing the adequate duties belonging to a President of a Stake. Bros. Cole and Mills stand by me like faithful brothers.—I strongly desire, and at the same time pray to God, that we may act prudently, wisely and justly in all we do, especially in all matters of the church.

My heart burns for some direct teaching from you, but we have the scriptures, both ancient and modern, with us; and I make it my rule, and endeavor to teach the same, that is, to try the spirits by the word; for I will assure you that there are many spirits here, and some very strange ones too. I will now endeavor to give you somewhat of an understanding relative to the affairs of the church here. Directly after you left us in the summer we came into regulations as follows: Sunday school beginning at 9 o'clock on Sunday; meeting at 11, and also at 2, P. M.; and when the evenings got of sufficient length we had prayer meetings on Thursday and Sunday evenings, and day school by Mary Ann Barker; Sunday school was taught by sister Hall, but on account of the weakness of her eyes sister Barker now takes charge.

The above is our present arrangement. At the close of navigation I wrote brother Watson a letter, in which I inserted the above arrangement, and it was for fear that that letter did not reach him that I inserted the same in this. All things went on very well till about the first of Dec. last, when Samuel Shaw and Levi Parmeter seemed to act very cold and indifferent, and very negligent about attending the regular orthodox meetings. And after a little Parmeter withdrew his children from school, both Sunday and day school. And, as near as I could learn, they were holding some private meetings, and some private individual teaching. The next thing of note was that they broke out in revelations. They went to brother Brown and stated that Parmeter had a revelation from God that Brown was prophet to this people, and they should come to him for counsel in the future. Brown rejected them.

Parmeter also states that he was the lion to come out of the thicket and to go forth and destroy the Gentiles. And on the 2d day of Jan. inst. the above two men were at brother Brown's, and Shaw prophecied in the name of God that the Indians were going to assemble in a body and make awful destruction among the people this winter here; that they would go from house to house in the dead of the night and butcher the people. On the 3d inst. Shaw and Parmeter came to my house with a written revelation and a covenant along with them for the brethren to take. If they did not enter into said covenant they would be cut off by the Indians this winter, for the plot was already laid by them. I am somewhat of the opinion that they (the Indians) will not altogether like the slanderous report. Shaw and Parmeter said they were commanded to warn all the Mormons on the Island. I here insert a copy of Shaw's revesky, "brought forth in purple, cradled in vermillion, baptized in molten gold, and swathed in dun," know ye what ye do? Are ye indeed blind? Can ye count without arithmetic? without the algebra of a Euler? aye, without even poor instinct of the eagle, that dips his wing in the checkered cloud—would ye undertake to teach the whole world mathematics?

324. Were there no other proof of the existence of a Deity, this one consideration would settle the question forever. Every rainbow is an exact mathematical equation of every other rainbow in the universe! Awake, ye dreaming metaphysicians! Arouse from your darkling dormitories and those pale lucubrations which are more than half slumber.

325. Come away to the floods and the fields, the flower banks and the forest—out here, in open space and free air, where sea and earth and sky mingle in mutual embraces, like the greeting of youthful lovers! Listen to the pine-songs which are chants of praise, and the wind-warbles which are hymns of halleujah! Look up yonder on the fire-dance of innumerable rolling worlds, and then answer me before the sun and all the stars—"Is there no God?"

326. I. ALL THE PLANETARY ORBITS ARE REGULAR ELIPSES, IN THE LOWER FOCUS OF WHICH THE SUN IS PLACED. Propose the problem to yonder intelligent school boy. Tell him to trace, on the paper, with his pen, an eliptical curve, and dot the two foci. Can he do it? Come, sage skeptic, with all your boasted reason, can you do it yourself? The planets are masses of blind matter. Who then will dare assert, that such may trace, perpetually for thousands of years, mathematical lines, with a regularity that no college professor can ever hope to equal?

327. II. THE TIMES OCCUPIED BY ANY PLANET, IN DESCRIBING ANY GIVEN ARCS OF ITS ORBIT ARE ALWAYS AS THE AREAS OF SECTORS, THE BEGINNING AND END OF THE ARCS TO THE SUN, AS A CENTRE. Let no one attempt the solution of this problem in any specified case, unless he be a thorough mathematician. God solves it for all the planets, and if he does not, then they—mere blind matter—do it for themselves. There is no other alternate, and this is impossible.

328. III. THE SQUARE OF THE PERIODS OF THE PLANETS REVOLUTIONS VARY, AS THE CUBES OF THEIR DISTANCE FROM THE SUN. What wonderful operations are these, to be the work of unthinking masses of matter! What music is this among the stars, to be sung by tongueless atoms! We will not speak of chances here. We may not even think of them, unless we might pilfer the algebra of the archangels! Truly and sincerly, JAMES J. STRANG.

☞ The following communication is from Pres. Strang to the printer of the Herald:—

Racine, April 14th, 1849.

DEAR BROTHER:—I send back the proceedings in the case of Shaw and Parmeter for publication. I had thought to retain them, and only publish in case they persist in their rebellion. But a more mature consideration has brought me to this conclusion: that as their sin is before the public, their rebuke should be. "Rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft." Witchcraft is sectarianism. And every rebel organization that ever sprung out of Mormonism is simply that, and no more. Samuel Shaw is not a Bishop, and never was. His entire pretence for the exercise of the power of a judge among God's people is an assumption. The extent of his power was merely to oversee the work of putting up a log house for the use of the mission school.

We take this occasion to say that no man will, under any circumstances, be sustained in any act of rebellion against the authorities of this church. The authorities may go wrong, but if they do an appeal is the only remedy. The Presidency at Beaver is made up of men of piety and virtue, and we take this occasion to say that their acts in the premises are entirely approved of by all who seek the prosperity of Zion. This emeute will, of course, end in nothing, because there is nothing of it. The day of such movements has gone by. ED.

Beaver Island, January 26th, 1849.

DEAR BELOVED BRO. J. J. STRANG.—Prophet of the living God and President of his Church in all the world:—It is with feelings of the greatest respect and of very deep interest that I address you at this time, feeling a deep interest in the promulgation of the gospel of Christ, and the good order of his church, it gives me pain and anguish to see members of this church leave their places and standing, and to use unhallowed measures and gross deceivings to exalt themselves to places that they are not called to stand in. I pray God that he may always influence my mind to better principles.—If it is the will of God that I should be but a layman in this church, I take the seat with pleasure. I boast not of greatness, but at the same time I feel a heavy responsibility resting upon my shoulders in performing the adequate duties belonging to a President of a Stake. Bros. Cole and Mills stand by me like faithful brothers.—I strongly desire, and at the same time pray to God, that we may act prudently, wisely and justly in all we do, especially in all matters of the church.

My heart burns for some direct teaching from you, but we have the scriptures, both ancient and modern, with us; and I make it my rule, and endeavor to teach the same, that is, to try the spirits by the word; for I will assure you that there are many spirits here, and some very strange ones too. I will now endeavor to give you somewhat of an understanding relative to the affairs of the church here. Directly after you left us in the summer we came into regulations as follows: Sunday school beginning at 9 o'clock on Sunday; meeting at 11, and also at 2, P. M.; and when the evenings got of sufficient length we had prayer meetings on Thursday and Sunday evenings, and day school by Mary Ann Barker; Sunday school was taught by sister Hall, but on account of the weakness of her eyes sister Barker now takes charge.

The above is our present arrangement. At the close of navigation I wrote brother Watson a letter, in which I inserted the above arrangement, and it was for fear that that letter did not reach him that I inserted the same in this. All things went on very well till about the first of Dec. last, when Samuel Shaw and Levi Parmeter seemed to act very cold and indifferent, and very negligent about attending the regular orthodox meetings. And after a little Parmeter withdrew his children from school, both Sunday and day school. And, as near as I could learn, they were holding some private meetings, and some private individual teaching. The next thing of note was that they broke out in revelations. They went to brother Brown and stated that Parmeter had a revelation from God that Brown was prophet to this people, and they should come to him for counsel in the future. Brown rejected them.

Parmeter also states that he was the lion to come out of the thicket and to go forth and destroy the Gentiles. And on the 2d day of Jan. inst. the above two men were at brother Brown's, and Shaw prophecied in the name of God that the Indians were going to assemble in a body and make awful destruction among the people this winter here; that they would go from house to house in the dead of the night and butcher the people. On the 3d inst. Shaw and Parmeter came to my house with a written revelation and a covenant along with them for the brethren to take. If they did not enter into said covenant they would be cut off by the Indians this winter, for the plot was already laid by them. I am somewhat of the opinion that they (the Indians) will not altogether like the slanderous report. Shaw and Parmeter said they were commanded to warn all the Mormons on the Island. I here insert a copy of Shaw's revelation. A copy of the covenant I did not take. I called on him another day, but he would not let me see it.

A word of the Lord to the saints in this Stake, on Beaver Island: Hearken, O ye my people, that call yourselves by my name, and give ear unto my words which I now speak unto you, if you will be saved from the judgments which shall come upon the ungodly speedily; for the time has come to separate between the righteous and the wicked: for my law shall be kept on this land. Therefore I now call upon you for the last time to repent and give heed to my words, not only to say, but to do them. Now I the Lord require of you, all ye my people, to make a covenant with me that cannot be broken by transgression, except judgments shall immediately follow, to keep all my commandments, and live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God. Therefore you must be bound together by a bond and covenant which you cannot break, except you shall be cut off from the land; for I the Lord am no longer to be mocked in these things.

The above Samuel Shaw told me was revealed to him by God, on the 2d day of Jan. I went to him the next day after receiving this copy, which was on the 4th, to get him to put his signature to the above revelation, but for fear of some trap he refused. On a charge brought by N. Bower against S. Shaw and Levi Parmeter for usurpation, heresy, false revelation and introducing covenants contrary to the authorities of this church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, they being duly notified, appeared at the dwelling house of N. Bower, on the 7th day of Jan., at 6 o'clock, P. M., of said day. Charges being read, they answered to their names. Shaw plead for a non-suit, on the ground that he was a regular appointed, authorized acting Bishop of the church, and was amenable only to the First Presidency of the church. A non-suit would have been granted if there could have been any testimony found that would have proved him a Bishop of the church, so it was not granted him.

He also stated that Levi Parmeter was his counselor, and he held himself accountable for his (Parmeter's) acts. Parmeter left without making any plea for himself. Proceeded to the trial of Bro. Shaw. Bro. G. Brown called on, and stated that Bro. Shaw called on him on the 3d day of Jan. and introduced a revelation, which he said was revealed to him by God on the 2d inst., commanding the brethren here to keep all the law of God, and immediately to bind themselves under strong bonds and covenants that could not be broken without swift destruction speedily following. He further stated that brother Shaw has absented himself from the regular appointed meetings of the church for some time.

Bro. M. M. Aldrich called on, and stated that Bro. Shaw called on him and said that God had revealed to him on the 2d inst. a revelation, holding forth the same particulars as stated to Bro. Brown, and the whole matter contained therein must be heeded immediately by the brethren here or they would be cut off from the land, and that too speedily. He further stated that he took a copy of the revelation. Further, Shaw has not attended the regular meetings of the church for some time. And further, Shaw introdued a written covenant, but witness told him he would call another day and examine said covenant, and accordingly did. Shaw would not show it, and said there was no use in showing the covenant unless you believe in the revelation. Bro. D. Hickox called on, and stated that Shaw called on him and introduced the same matter as he did to Bros. Brown and Aldrich, and was very officious in the matter, and told him that unless the brethren here heeded the same they would speedily be cut off from the land.

Sister S. H. Hall called on, and stated that Shaw made the same errand to her as he did to Bros. Brown and Aldrich. She asked Bro. Shaw where he got his authority. His answer was, no matter. She further stated that Shaw said that he and Parmeter had entered into said covenant, and had consecrated to the Lord Shaw's pre-empted land lot, their household chattels and their wives and children, and also to one another. And further stated that they had some time previous withdrawn the hand of fellowship from all those that did not keep the law of the Lord, and be bound together with them in the above mentioned covenant.

Bro. G. Hickox called on, and stated that Bro. Shaw came to him with the same revelation above stated, and said he should appoint a general meeting for the better accommodation of administering the covenant, as stated by the other witnesses; and further stated that Shaw said that he and Parmeter had at a previous date withdrawn the hand of fellowship from all those that did not keep the law of the Lord, and enter into said covenant with himself and Parmeter. Further stated that Shaw told him by his entering into said covenant he would save himself from immediate destruction. Bro. H. G. Hall called on, and stated the same as his wife, sister S. H. Hall, and also stated that Bro. Shaw read a form of a covenant, to show what he and Parmeter had done and others must do the same or be cut off from the land speedily. Further, that he did not take a copy of the covenant. Further stated that Shaw said he and Parmeter had consecrated their land, chattels, wives and children and all to the Lord. And further, they had on the 14th day of Dec. last withdrawn the hand of fellowship from all those that did not keep the law of the Lord, and that they must then heed said revelation and covenant or be cut off from the land immediately. And further, Bro. Shaw has appeared to be very cool and indifferent, and to stand aloof from the regular organization of the church for some time. The case was submitted to the President and Counselors for their decision, which was given, that Samuel Shaw be cut off from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and delivered over to the buffetings of Satan, until he repents and comes into the church by baptism,

M. M. ALDRICH,
GALEN B. COLE, } Presidents.
R. F. MILLS,

Jan. 7th, 1849, at 6 o'clock, P. M.—Trial of Bro. Levi Parmeter. Bro. G. Brown called on, and stated that Bro. Parmeter and Bro. Shaw came to him some three weeks ago, and Parmeter said he had a revelation given to him by God that Bro. G. Brown was appointed prophet to the Lamanites, and that they (Parmeter and Shaw) should come to him in the future for counsel; and stated that Parmeter was an acting accomplice of Shaw's, and was very officious in Shaw's revelation and covenant. Sister Mary Ann Barker called on, and stated that Bro. Levi Parmeter said he had it revealed to him that Bro. G. Brown was appointed prophet to the Lamanites, and that Strang had no more to do on this Island than any other person. She asked Parmeter if Strang would ever come on the Island again. His answer was, he may, but he never will do any more business here. Parmeter asked sister Barker if she believed Shaw's revelation and covenant. He states, if you do not believe said revelation and covenant you will be cut off by the judgments of God speedily. He appeared to be very officious in all that Shaw was doing, and appeared to be an acting accomplice of Shaw's.

[Like or similar testimony was given by two other witnesses, which we omit for want of room.]

The case was submitted to the President and Counselors for their decision, which was given, that Levi Parmeter be excommunicated from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and delivered over to the buffetings of Satan, until he repents and comes into the church by baptism.

M. M. ALDRICH,
GALEN B. COLE, } Presidents.
R. F. MILLS,

☞ Our thanks to Hon. Senator Walker for Fremont's Map of California and Oregon.

lation. A copy of the covenant I did not take. I called on him another day, but he would not let me see it.

A word of the Lord to the saints in this Stake, on Beaver Island: Hearken, O ye my people, that call yourselves by my name, and give ear unto my words which I now speak unto you, if you will be saved from the judgments which shall come upon the ungodly speedily; for the time has come to separate between the righteous and the wicked: for my law shall be kept on this land. Therefore I now call upon you for the last time to repent and give heed to my words, not only to say, but to do them. Now I the Lord require of you, all ye my people, to make a covenant with me that cannot be broken by transgression, except judgments shall immediately follow, to keep all my commandments, and live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God. Therefore you must be bound together by a bond and covenant which you cannot break, except you shall be cut off from the land; for I the Lord am no longer to be mocked in these things.

The above Samuel Shaw told me was revealed to him by God, on the 2d day of Jan. I went to him the next day after receiving this copy, which was on the 4th, to get him to put his signature to the above revelation, but for fear of some trap he refused. On a charge brought by N. Bower against S. Shaw and Levi Parmeter for usurpation, heresy, false revelation and introducing covenants contrary to the authorities of this church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, they being duly notified, appeared at the dwelling house of N. Bower, on the 7th day of Jan., at 6 o'clock, P. M., of said day. Charges being read, they answered to their names. Shaw plead for a non-suit, on the ground that he was a regular appointed, authorized acting Bishop of the church, and was amenable only to the First Presidency of the church. A non-suit would have been granted if there could have been any testimony found that would have proved him a Bishop of the church, so it was not granted him.

He also stated that Levi Parmeter was his counselor, and he held himself accountable for his (Parmeter's) acts. Parmeter left without making any plea for himself. Proceeded to the trial of Bro. Shaw. Bro. G. Brown called on, and stated that Bro. Shaw called on him on the 3d day of Jan. and introduced a revelation, which he said was revealed to him by God on the 2d inst., commanding the brethren here to keep all the law of God, and immediately to bind themselves under strong bonds and covenants that could not be broken without swift destruction speedily following. He further stated that brother Shaw has absented himself from the regular appointed meetings of the church for some time.

Bro. M. M. Aldrich called on, and stated that Bro. Shaw called on him and said that God had revealed to him on the 2d inst. a revelation, holding forth the same particulars as stated to Bro. Brown, and the whole matter contained therein must be heeded immediately by the brethren here or they would be cut off from the land, and that too speedily. He further stated that he took a copy of the revelation. Further, Shaw has not attended the regular meetings of the church for some time. And further, Shaw introduced a written covenant, but witness told him he would call another day and examine said covenant, and accordingly did. Shaw would not show it, and said there was no use in showing the covenant unless you believe in the revelation. Bro. D. Hickox called on, and stated that Shaw called on him and introduced the same matter as he did to Bros. Brown and Aldrich, and was very officious in the matter, and told him that unless the brethren here heeded the same they would speedily be cut off from the land.

Sister S. H. Hall called on, and stated that Shaw made the same errand to her as he did to Bros. Brown and Aldrich. She asked Bro. Shaw where he got his authority. His answer was, no matter. She further stated that Shaw said that he and Parmeter had entered into said covenant, and had consecrated to the Lord Shaw's pre-empted land lot, their household chattels and their wives and children, and also to one another. And further stated that they had some time previous withdrawn the hand of fellowship from all those that did not keep the law of the Lord, and be bound together with them in the above mentioned covenant.

Bro. G. Hickox called on, and stated that Bro. Shaw [illegible] to him with the same revelation above stated, and said he should appoint a general meeting for the better accommodation of administering the covenant, as stated by the other witnesses; and further stated that Shaw said that he and Parmeter had at a previous date withdrawn the hand of fellowship from all those that did not keep the law of the Lord, and enter into said covenant with himself and Parmeter. Further stated that Shaw told him by his entering into said covenant he would save himself from immediate destruction. Bro. H. G. Hall called on, and stated the same as his wife, sister S. H. Hall, and also stated that Bro. Shaw read a form of a covenant, to show what he and Parmeter had done and others must do the same or be cut off from the land speedily. Further, that he did not take a copy of the covenant. Further stated that Shaw said he and Parmeter had consecrated their land, chattels, wives and children and all to the Lord. And further, they had on the 14th day of Dec. last withdrawn the hand of fellowship from all those that did not keep the law of the Lord, and that they must then heed said revelation and covenant or be cut off from the land immediately. And further, Bro. Shaw has appeared to be very cool and indifferent, and to stand aloof from the regular organization of the church for some time. The case was submitted to the President and Counselors for their decision, which was given, that Samuel Shaw be cut off from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and delivered over to the buffetings of Satan, until he repents and comes into the church by baptism,

M. M. ALDRICH.
GALEN B. COLE. } Presidents.
R. F. MILLS,

Jan. 7th, 1849, at 6 o'clock, P. M.—Trial of Bro. Levi Parmeter. Bro. G. Brown called on, and stated that Bro. Parmeter and Bro. Shaw came to him some three weeks ago, and Parmeter said he had a revelation given to him by God that Bro. G. Brown was appointed prophet to the Lamanites, and that they (Parmeter and Shaw) should come to him in the future for counsel; and stated that Parmeter was an acting accomplice of Shaw's, and was very officious in Shaw's revelation and covenant. Sister Mary Ann Barker called on, and stated that Bro. Levi Parmeter said he had it revealed to him that Bro. G. Brown was appointed prophet to the Lamanites, and that Strang had no more to do on this Island than any other person. She asked Parmeter if Strang would ever come on the Island again. His answer was, he may, but he never will do any more business here. Parmeter asked sister Barker if she believed Shaw's revelation and covenant. He stated, if you do not believe said revelation and covenant you will be cut off by the judgments of God speedily. He appeared to be very officious in all that Shaw was doing, and appeared to be an acting accomplice of Shaw's.

[Like or similar testimony was given by two other witnesses, which we omit for want of room.]

The case was submitted to the President and Counselors for their decision, which was given, that Levi Parmeter be excommunicated from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and delivered over to the buffetings of Satan, until he repents and comes into the church by baptism.

M. M. ALDRICH,
GALEN B. COLE. } Presidents.
R. F. MILLS,

☞ Our thanks to Hon. Senator Walker for Fremont's Map of California and Oregon.

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE HELD AT BALTIMORE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints having been called through the public papers, as well as by invitation to distant brethren, met in the city of Baltimore, Md., on Saturday, March 24th, 1849, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

Present, Elders G. J. Adams, Joseph Canox and Dr. C. W. Appleton, Priest Whipple, Deacon Hinson, and a number of brethren. Conference opened by reading the scriptures, and prayer by Elder Adams. On motion, Elder G. J. Adams was unanimously chosen President, and Elder Appleton Secretary.

Elder Adams stated the object of the Conference, viz.: to bring the doctrine and order of the church before the brethren and the public, and proceeded to demonstrate that the doctrine, usage and order of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints were the same as those preached by the Apostles and instituted by Jesus Christ, dwelling particularly upon the power and order of the priesthood.—He also declared emphatically that he wanted it understood distinctly that the church had no connection, directly or indirectly, with the people called Mormons, settled at "Salt Lake;" who, in consequence of their vicious and depraved conduct, have been cut off and excommunicated from the church, and are not recognized as in any way connected with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Another object of the Conference was to license and ordain brethren previously chosen to various offices in the church, &c.—On motion, Conference adjourned to meet at 3 o'clock, P. M. Benediction by Bro. Appleton.

3 o'clock, P. M.—Met pursuant to adjournment. Prayer by Bro. Appleton. Minutes of morning meeting read and approved. Present, brethren as in the morning.

Bro. Adams presented a brief view of the rise and progress of the church, together with the evidences from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and Bro. Joseph Smith's last letter, and the other evidences which establish the claims of Bro. Strang as the successor of Joseph Smith as the prophet and President of the church.

Bro. C. W. Appleton, M. D., was chosen a presiding High Priest to hold jurisdiction over the States of Maryland and Virginia. Bros. Albert N. Hosmer and David R. Whipple were unanimously chosen Elders.

Bro. Whipple made some feeling remarks, going to show that his strength and heart had been strengthened by seeing the providence of God manifested in the call and appointment of Bro. Appleton. On motion, adjourned with prayer by Elder Canox until 7½ o'clock, P. M.

7½ o'clock, P. M.—Met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the brethren, with the addition of Elder Geo. Pope. Opened with prayer by Bro. Adams. Bro. Adams gave a brief account of the restoration of the holy priesthood, showing that it was by revelation and the ministering of angels, and the history of Bro. Joseph Smith.

Bro. Joseph O. Batter was chosen Elder, and David Heath and Cornelius A. Montague were chosen Priests, and Moses Chase was chosen Teacher. On motion, adjourned until Sunday, the 25th, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

Sunday, March 25th, 10½ o'clock, A. M.—Met pursuant to adjournment. Members all present. Opened by reading the scriptures by Bro. Appleton, and prayer by Bro. Adams. Preaching by Bro. Adams, from Rev. xiv. 12, 13. Adjourned to 3, P. M.

3 o'clock, P. M.—Met pursuant to adjourment. Opened by singing. Prayer by Bro. Appleton.

Bro. C. W. Appleton, M. D., was ordained to the office of presiding High Priest, by the imposition of hands of Pres. Adams.—And the following brethren were ordained to their respective offices by the imposition of the hands of Presidents Adams and Appleton, viz.: Bro. Joseph Canox presiding Elder of the branch in Baltimore; Bros. Albert N. Hosmer, David R. Whipple and Joseph O. Batter, Elders; Bros. David Heath and Cornelius A. Montague, Priests, and Bro. Moses Chase, Teacher.

Confirmation of several persons previously baptized, after which the bread and wine was administered in commemoration of the death and sufferings of our Lord Jesus Christ. Bros. Adams and Appleton addressed the Conference in powerful appeals, confirming the saints in their most holy faith. Adjourned till 7½, P. M.

7½ o'clock, P. M.—Met pursuant to adjournment. Prayer by Bro. Adams. The Conference passed, unanimously, the following resolutions:—

Resolved, That this Conference recognize the claims of Bro. James J. Strang as the successor of Bro. Joseph Smith in the Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; and that we receive and acknowledge him as the Prophet, Seer, Revelator and Translator of said Church, called and ordained of God by direct revelation; that he enjoys our fullest confidence, and shall have our fullest support in his office and ministry.

Resolved, That whereas our beloved and faithful Bro., Elder G. J. Adams, has been faithfully laboring in word and doctrine, in baptisim, in the laying on of hands and ordination, in season and out of season, in all long suffering and patience, with the branch of the church in Baltimore, we recognize in him a faithful minister of our Lord Jesus Christ, one who has been mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds, and who has been the honored instrument in the hands of the Great Head of the church in raising up a branch of his church in this place to his praise and glory; that he possesses our fullest confidence, & has our ardent and limited prayers for his spiritual and temporal prosperity, that through him the word of God may have free course, may run and be glorified; and we cordially recommend him to the sympathy and support of all God's saints.

Bro. Adams preached from Phil. iii. 7, 8, to a large and attentive audience, and concluded by bidding the brethren an affectionate adieu, until his return from the Conference at Voree. On motion, adjourned to meet July 1st, 1849. G. J. ADAMS, Pres.

C. W. APPLETON, M. D., Sec.

NOTE.—Bro. Adams writes that he would have been here to Conference, had the Lakes been open so that he could have got here in season. He intends to be at the July Conference on Beaver Island without fail.

☞ John E. Page, President of the Twelve, when traveling out to Racine the other day, was overtaken by a gentleman in a carriage, who invited him to get in and ride. He accepted the invitation, and while riding with him taught him the way of life and salvation.—He believed the truth, and requested baptism. Bro. Page accordingly baptized him, and he went on his way rejoicing. This is certainly equal to Phillip and the Ethiopean of old.

THE CHOLERA AGAIN.—This dread scourge has again made its appearance in New York. It has also broke out in Madison, Ind., and several cases had terminated fatally. The utmost vigilance on the part of our city authorities should be observed, in thoroughly purifying the alleys, yards, &c.—Madison (Wis.) Argus.

REMITTANCE BY MAIL LAST WEEK FOR THE HERALD.

J. Routzen,	$2,00	to Vol.	IV.	No. 52
Albert N. Hosmer,	1,00	"	"	26
Moses Chase,	1,00	"	"	26

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE HELD AT BALTIMORE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints having been called through the public papers, as well as by invitation to distant brethren, met in the city of Baltimore, Md., on Saturday, March 24th, 1849, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

Present, Elders G. J. Adams, Joseph Canox and Dr. C. W. Appleton, Priest Whipple, Deacon Hinson, and a number of brethren. Conference opened by reading the scriptures, and prayer by Elder Adams. On motion, Elder G. J. Adams was unanimously chosen President, and Elder Appleton Secretary.

Elder Adams stated the object of the Conference, viz.: to bring the doctrine and order of the church before the brethren and the public, and proceeded to demonstrate that the doctrine, usage and order of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints were the same as those preached by the Apostles and instituted by Jesus Christ, dwelling particularly upon the power and order of the priesthood.—He also declared emphatically that he wanted it understood distinctly that the church had no connection, directly or indirectly, with the people called Mormons, settled at "Salt Lake;" who, in consequence of their vicious and depraved conduct, have been cut off and excommunicated from the church, and are not recognized as in any way connected with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Another object of the Conference was to license and ordain brethren previously chosen to various offices in the church, &c.—On motion, Conference adjourned to meet at 3 o'clock, P. M. Benediction by Bro. Appleton.

3 o'clock, P. M.—Met pursuant to adjournment. Prayer by Bro. Appleton. Minutes of morning meeting read and approved. Present, brethren as in the morning.

Bro. Adams presented a brief view of the rise and progress of the church, together with the evidences from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and Bro. Joseph Smith's last letter, and the other evidences which establish the claims of Bro. Strang as the successor of Joseph Smith as the prophet and President of the church.

Bro. C. W. Appleton, M. D., was chosen a presiding High Priest to hold jurisdiction over the States of Maryland and Virginia. Bros. Albert N. Hosmer and David R. Whipple were unanimously chosen Elders.

Bro. Whipple made some feeling remarks, going to show that his strength and heart had been strengthened by seeing the providence of God manifested in the call and appointment of Bro. Appleton. On motion, adjourned with prayer by Elder Canox until 7½ o'clock, P. M.

7½ o'clock, P. M.—Met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the brethren, with the addition of Elder Geo. Pope. Opened with prayer by Bro. Adams. Bro. Adams gave a brief account of the restoration of the holy priesthood, showing that it was by revelation and the ministering of angels, and the history of Bro. Joseph Smith.

Bro. Joseph O. Batter was chosen Elder, and David Heath and Cornelius A. Montague were chosen Priests, and Moses Chase was chosen Teacher. On motion, adjourned until Sunday, the 25th, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

Sunday, March 25th, 10½ o'clock, A. M.—Met pursuant to adjournment. Members all present. Opened by reading the scriptures by Bro. Appleton, and prayer by Bro. Adams. Preaching by Bro. Adams, from Rev. xiv. 12, 13. Adjourned to 3, P. M.

3 o'clock, P. M.—Met pursuant to adjourment. Opened by singing. Prayer by Bro. Appleton.

Bro. C. W. Appleton, M. D., was ordained to the office of presiding High Priest, by the imposition of hands of Pres. Adams.—And the following brethren were ordained to their respective offices by the imposition of the hands of Presidents Adams and Appleton, viz.: Bro. Joseph Canox presiding Elder of the branch in Baltimore; Bros. Albert N. Hosmer, David R. Whipple and Joseph O. Batter, Elders; Bros. David Heath and Cornelius A. Montague, Priests, and Bro. Moses Chase, Teacher.

Confirmation of several persons previously baptized, after which the bread and wine was administered in commemoration of the death and sufferings of our Lord Jesus Christ. Bros. Adams and Appleton addressed the Conference in powerful appeals, confirming the saints in their most holy faith. Adjourned till 7½, P. M.

7½ o'clock, P. M.—Met pursuant to adjournment. Prayer by Bro. Adams. The Conference passed, unanimously, the following resolutions:—

Resolved, That this Conference recognize the claims of Bro. James J. Strang as the successor of Bro. Joseph Smith in the Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; and that we receive and acknowledge him as the Prophet, Seer, Revelator and Translator of said Church, called and ordained of God by direct revelation; that he enjoys our fullest confidence, and shall have our fullest support in his office and ministry.

Resolved, That whereas our beloved and faithful Bro., Elder G. J. Adams, has been faithfully laboring in word and doctrine, in baptisim, in the laying on of hands and ordination, in season and out of season, in all long suffering and patience, with the branch of the church in Baltimore, we recognize in him a faithful minister of our Lord Jesus Christ, one who has been mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds, and who has been the honored instrument in the hands of the Great Head of the church in raising up a branch of his church in this place to his praise and glory; that he possesses our fullest confidence, & has our ardent and limited prayers for his spiritual and temporal prosperity, that through him the word of God may have free course, may run and be glorified; and we cordially recommend him to the sympathy and support of all God's saints.

Bro. Adams preached from Phil. iii. 7, 8, to a large and attentive audience, and concluded by bidding the brethren an affectionate adieu, until his return from the Conference at Voree. On motion, adjourned to meet July 1st, 1849. G. J. ADAMS, Pres.

C. W. APPLETON, M. D., Sec.

NOTE.—Bro. Adams writes that he would have been here to Conference, had the Lakes been open so that he could have got here in season. He intends to be at the July Conference on Beaver Island without fail.

☞ John E. Page, President of the Twelve, when traveling out to Racine the other day, was overtaken by a gentleman in a carriage, who invited him to get in and ride. He accepted the invitation, and while riding with him taught him the way of life and salvation.—He believed the truth, and requested baptism. Bro. Page accordingly baptized him, and he went on his way rejoicing. This is certainly equal to Phillip and the Ethiopean of old.

THE CHOLERA AGAIN.—This dread scourge has again made its appearance in New York. It has also broke out in Madison, Ind., and several cases had terminated fatally. The utmost vigilance on the part of our city authorities should be observed, in thoroughly purifying the alleys, yards, &c.—Madison (Wis.) Argus.

REMITTANCE BY MAIL LAST WEEK FOR THE HERALD.

J. Routzen,	$2,00	to	Vol. IV.	No. 52
Albert N. Hosmer,	1,00	"	"	26
Moses Chase,	1,00	"	"	26

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 7.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. MAY 3, 1849. [WHOLE No. 123.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.—No. 1.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

THE START.

Racine, Saturday, April 14th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I arrived this morning in this place with a company of some twenty persons, bound for the land which God has given the saints for an inheritance. Our journey was cold, and but for the good spirits of the party would have been very uncomfortable. The roads however were not as bad as we expected, and we got through without difficulty. We had the pleasure of stopping at an excellent house, where we were kindly entertained by Mr. Beers and his amiable wife—the brick tavern on the new road. I commend this house to all who have occasion to stop between Racine and Voree.

It is not yet certain how many our company may consist of when we go up, but if we should be hindered a few days here, as is quite probable, it may increase to thirty or forty by the accession of those now getting ready to start from other places. There is now a strong wind from the north, and as such winds seldom abate in less than three days, and this is the second, we cannot hope to get off until next week. You will recollect that I had sent two brethren on ahead to meet brethren from Pittsburgh, who were already on the way to Beaver. One of them got a passage last Thursday, but we found the other waiting here, the boat having but barely touched the wharf, and pulled off before he had time to go aboard.

A CONVERSION.

While on our way out John E. Page fell in with a stranger, who "took him in" TO HIS WAGON and brought him here. It was Mr. Phineas Cadwell, a gentleman of respectability and intelligance, and brother to an Episcopalian clergyman, and so diligently did brother Page teach him the way of life, and so faithfully did he hear, that in obedience to the holy calling the same day he went straitway down to the water and was baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus for the remission of his sins.

THE SCENERY.

The country between Fox River and Lake Michigan is inferior to that immediately around Voree. The ridge of hills which separates Voree from Burlington is a kind of connecting link between the knob country to the south and the lime stone hills to the north-east of Voree. A short distance east of Burlington we come into a country made up of similar hills, extensive marshes, occasional beds of peat, and small clear and beautiful lakes, well stocked with fish. Brown's lake, four miles from Voree, is about a mile in extent in either direction; has high wooded shores, deep clear water, and, on the whole, rather rich scenery. One beautiful island is embosomed in it, and its deep bays and long head lands give continual beauty to the ever varying scenery. In places even where the marshes naturally come down to the lake, the industrious beavers have long since erected their banks of gravel five or six feet in height, defining the uncertain boundary, and at the same time making their dwellings in the marsh and using the lake for a store house. Few countries were ever better stocked with beavers than this part of Wisconsin, and the remains of their industry every where seen are a strong feature of the country. But between the making of the treaty of 1783, between Great Britain and the United States, and the final surrender of Mackinac to the United States, several years after, the North Western Fur Company caused them all to be hunted out of the surrounding territory. So effectually was the work done that beavers have scarcely been seen this side of the treaty line since, and the country has never been restocked.

A few miles ride carried us past these small lakes, and the former home of the beavers, into a country just struggling between prairie and oak opening, having a luxuriant but rather damp soil, and a very limited supply of timber; some ten miles from here the timber disappears altogether. The broad treeless prairie forming the dividing ridge between lake Michigan and the branches of the Mississippi, looking off in boundless expanse to the north and south, and over the deep blue of lake Michigan to the east, is the marked feature of the country, and connects it in scenery and interest with the far off south-west.

RACINE.

Racine is a smart village of some 2500 or 3000 inhabitants, on the west shore of lake Michigan, but is dignified with the cognomen of "city," and with a Mayor and Aldermen. It is the seat of justice, or injustice, as it may happen to turn out for Racine county.—Moreover it is a flourishing place, having grown up from a mere wilderness within the last fourteen years; and having a harbor constructed at the expense of the inhabitants, without any aid from government; a very extensive trade for its population, and considerable manufactures. The best part of the town is built on a high narrow ridge, lying between the lake and Root river. It however extends to the north of the harbor (mouth of Root river) and across the river west. But to the south a large and beautiful quarter of the town extends over the school section; that is, the section No. 16, reserved from sale by the United States for the benefit of schools.

LAND TITLES.

This portion of Racine is an example which few places in the east ever witnessed, of a community of several hundred persons, many of them with commodious, finished and elegant houses, all erected on land to which they have not a shadow of title, and yet dwelling as securely as any ancient fire or deed holding purchaser in the old States. The mere force of public opinion is in fact all the law there is in the land; and the bold men of the borders have claimed that they can make public opinion law without a musty statute, as well as eastern wire pullers can defeat the statute with the common prejudice. All having a common interest, they will club together with all the friends each interested party has to get their possessions confirmed and legalized on their own terms, and they will succeed. Doubtless such a course will work a considerable injury to the school fund of the State, but after all it is difficult to

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 7.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. MAY 3, 1849. [WHOLE No. 123.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.—No. 1.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

THE START.

Racine, Saturday, April 14th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I arrived this morning in this place with a company of some twenty persons, bound for the land which God has given the saints for an inheritance. Our journey was cold, and but for the good spirits of the party would have been very uncomfortable. The roads however were not as bad as we expected, and we got through without difficulty. We had the pleasure of stopping at an excellent house, where we were kindly entertained by Mr. Beers and his amiable wife—the brick tavern on the new road. I commend this house to all who have occasion to stop between Racine and Voree.

It is not yet certain how many our company may consist of when we go up, but if we should be hindered a few days here, as is quite probable, it may increase to thirty or forty by the accession of those now getting ready to start from other places. There is now a strong wind from the north, and as such winds seldom abate in less than three days, and this is the second, we cannot hope to get off until next week. You will recollect that I had sent two brethren on ahead to meet brethren from Pittsburgh, who were already on the way to Beaver. One of them got a passage last Thursday, but we found the other waiting here, the boat having but barely touched the wharf, and pulled off before he had time to go aboard.

A CONVERSION.

While on our way out John E. Page fell in with a stranger, who "took him in" TO HIS WAGON and brought him here. It was Mr. Phineas Cadwell, a gentleman of respectability and intelligence, and brother to an Episcopalian clergyman, and so diligently did brother Page teach him the way of life, and so faithfully did he hear, that in obedience to the holy calling the same day he went straitway down to the water and was baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus for the remission of his sins.

THE SCENERY.

The country between Fox River and Lake Michigan is inferior to that immediately around Voree. The ridge of hills which separates Voree from Burlington is a kind of connecting link between the knob country to the south and the lime stone hills to the north-east of Voree. A short distance east of Burlington we come into a country made up of similar hills, extensive marshes, occasional beds of peat, and small clear and beautiful lakes, well stocked with fish. Brown's lake, four miles from Voree, is about a mile in extent in either direction; has high wooded shores, deep clear water, and, on the whole, rather rich scenery. One beautiful island is embosomed in it, and its deep bays and long head lands give continual beauty to the ever varying scenery. In places even where the marshes naturally come down to the lake, the industrious beavers have long since erected their banks of gravel five or six feet in height, defining the uncertain boundary, and at the same time making their dwellings in the marsh and using the lake for a store house. Few countries were ever better stocked with beavers than this part of Wisconsin, and the remains of their industry every where seen are a strong feature of the country. But between the making of the treaty of 1783, between Great Britain and the United States, and the final surrender of Mackinac to the United States, several years after, the North Western Fur Company caused them all to be hunted out of the surrounding territory. So effectually was the work done that beavers have scarcely been seen this side of the treaty line since, and the country has never been restocked.

A few miles ride carried us past these small lakes, and the former home of the beavers, into a country just struggling between prairie and oak opening, having a luxuriant but rather damp soil, and a very limited supply of timber; some ten miles from here the timber disappears altogether. The broad treeless prairie forming the dividing ridge between lake Michigan and the branches of the Mississippi, looking off in boundless expanse to the north and south, and over the deep blue of lake Michigan to the east, is the marked feature of the country, and connects it in scenery and interest with the far off south-west.

RACINE.

Racine is a smart village of some 2500 or 3000 inhabitants, on the west shore of lake Michigan, but is dignified with the cognomen of "city," and with a Mayor and Aldermen. It is the seat of justice, or injustice, as it may happen to turn out for Racine county.—Moreover it is a flourishing place, having grown up from a mere wilderness within the last fourteen years; and having a harbor constructed at the expense of the inhabitants, without any aid from government; a very extensive trade for its population, and considerable manufactures. The best part of the town is built on a high narrow ridge, lying between the lake and Root river. It however extends to the north of the harbor (mouth of Root river) and across the river west. But to the south a large and beautiful quarter of the town extends over the school section; that is, the section No. 16, reserved from sale by the United States for the benefit of schools.

LAND TITLES.

This portion of Racine is an example which few places in the east ever witnessed, of a community of several hundred persons, many of them with commodious, finished and elegant houses, all erected on land to which they have not a shadow of title, and yet dwelling as securely as any ancient fire or deed holding purchaser in the old States. The mere force of public opinion is in fact all the law there is in the land; and the bold men of the borders have claimed that they can make public opinion law without a musty statute, as well as eastern wire pullers can defeat the statute with the common prejudice. All having a common interest, they will club together with all the friends each interested party has to get their possessions confirmed and legalized on their own terms, and they will succeed. Doubtless such a course will work a considerable injury to the school fund of the State, but after all it is difficult to tell by what right the United States take any of these lands and keep them to sell on speculation to such as have money, while so many are homeless. If God really gave all the land to the government they are right in disposing of it, for it is certain that the poor are most in want of it. But we think government has no better title, to say the least of it, than these squatters, and that in buying in the claim of the United States, if they even do so, they but imita'e those who buy peace, rather than go to law with a rich neighbor. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.—No. 2.

THE DETENTION.

Racine, Sunday, April 15th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—Yet here, and like to be for a time. We have no encouragement of leaving till Tuesday. We learn however that the Straits of Mackinac are free from ice, and navigation is unobstructed. Boats are pa-sing daily in various directions, and several have come up and others gone down through the Straits, but they are not yet regular. A high wind blows up the lake, and it is very difficult to make head against, and dangerous stopping at the spring piers. The weather is now raw and cold; the themometer ranging from twenty-seven deg. to thirty-one in the morning, not higher than forty at noon, and down to freezing (thirty-two deg.) before sunset. There is not as much appearance of vegetation here as at Voree. The grass is a week later.

EVENING.—This has been a long and weary day, with the full employment I usually have in Voree from nine o'clock, A. M., to ten, P. M., it is difficult to while away the live long day with the congregation and classes around me. In the morning I longed for the prattling of the Sunday scholars at Voree. By 9½ o'clock I began to feel uneasy for the assembly of the class in the gospels. At 11 I was tired, but thought it would rest me if I had our attentive congregation to listen to the words of life for three or four hours. And if I was a little weary, how would our music inspire with strength. But it was not here. In the afternoon my heart ached to see the class in the study of the prophets at their lessons. But it could not be. Even the short sleep which I habitually take during the evening service is denied me. Here I stand mentally tired with one days rest, feeling about for the ideas which I usually have rolling up faster than I can put them on paper. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

IRA J. PATTEN, a servant of God and the Lord Jesus Christ, to the Church at Voree and to the saints scattered abroad:—

DEAR BRETHREN:—I am not in the habit of writing for publication, but since the Lord has said through his servant the prophet James of our day, let my servants the Apostles send forth a proclamation to the saints, calling their attention to the great work of God in our day, therefore, to be obedient to the commandment, I thus address you, by calling your minds to consider with me a portion of the Lord's prayer, contained in the following words: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." It is a fact known to the most common observer that this prayer, taught by Christ to his disciples, has been the standing prayer of all professed christians for the last eighteen hundred years, of which the above is a part.

And is not this petition in the mouth of every saint throughout the world? And when we pray thy kingdom come, what do we understand? Are we in earnest? Do we pray in faith, and with the understanding? Let us see. The kingdom of God spoken of by all the prophets, both of the Old and New Testament, was to them in the future. This is evident from the facts set forth in the prayer above alluded to. The kingdom had not come, neither was God's will done on earth as it was in heaven; for if it had come, and his will was done, this prayer and its design would have ceased, and Christ would have given them different instructions. But the prayer and its design continued, and even after the resurrection, when Christ had obtained all power both in heaven and on earth, he did not even then change its sentiment or its verbiage. And when the disciples asked him, wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel, the spirit of his answer was, it is not a work for you—it is not for this generation nor for this dispensation, for the kingdom is taken from them, and God has reserved the time and the setting up of his kingdom in his own power, and the time, with all things necessary for the setting up thereof, shall be revealed in his time.

Now, the kingdom spoken of by Daniel the prophet was what they alluded to or had in their minds, and there were many things that must transpire ere that day should come; for instance, the day spoken of by Isaiah, when darkness should cover the earth, and gross darkness the people, as also by Amos, when a famine should be in the land, not for bread, nor thirst for water, but for the word of the Lord. And this was to be of long continuance, so that men would run to and fro in the earth to seek it and should not find it.—That the predictions referred to above were not fulfilled up to the time of Christ, will not be denied by any one arrogating to himself in any degree an understanding of the scriptures; for the Jews had their prophets and priests up to the coming of Christ; for they received the administration of angels; they had visions and revelations, even till Christ was born. I refer to Zechariah, Simeon, and many who, in their time, received revelations from God. This was a day and time of light revealed from God, and will not compare with the darkness of Isaiah or famine by Amos, but will compare with the times of the Gentiles and the treading down of Jerusalem by them.

Hosea saw the same in substance, and says that the Jews, the people of God, should remain many days without a king, without a prince, without a sacrifice, without an ephod, and without teraphim. Question. Were all these offices and gifts taken from them till the time of Christ? I answer, no. And their history answers no.—Since Christ came, and they rejected him, have those powers and kingly priesthood continued? I answer, no, no; emphatically no. There is not one of all the sons that they have reared to take her by the hand. No, she is now without a prophet, king or priest of God. They have wandered long and lone, and far abroad.

Look, my brethren, at the mighty efforts put forth by uninspired men to redeem Jerusalem and her borders from the unhallowed tread of the wild barbarian. Look at Peter the hermit, with his enthusiastic and wild barbarians, shouting in prospect of the redemption of the sepulchre of Christ. Vain attempt! The decree had passed the lips of Jesus Christ, Jerusalem shall be trodden under foot of the Gentiles until their times be fulfilled. A time of light began their day, a time of darkness ends it, and this will constitute their times. But shall we be in darkness with them, and not see when good cometh? For the kingdom will come, be organized, set up and established in the end of the times of the Gentiles. Then, while we pray thy kingdom come, let us be consistent with our prayer and bring in our tithes and free will offerings and build the Temple and Tower of our God at Voree, that we may have a house wherein to worship our God, and a tower that will overlook the city of the saints when it is built up according to the vision thereof.

This is a work connected with the setting up of the kingdom of God in the last days. It is not my purpose to speak in detail of things that God requires at the hands of his saints in order that their faith and works may agree, and show to God, the saints and the world that we believe what we profess. One other subject connected with the kingdom is to establish a stake and corner of Zion at tell by what right the United States take any of these lands and keep them to sell on speculation to such as have money, while so many are homeless. If God really gave all the land to the government they are right in disposing of it, for it is certain that the poor are most in want of it. But we think government has no better title, to say the least of it, than these squatters, and that in buying in the claim of the United States, if they even do so, they but imitate those who buy peace, rather than go to law with a rich neighbor. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.—No. 2.

THE DETENTION.

Racine, Sunday, April 15th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—Yet here, and like to be for a time. We have no encouragement of leaving till Tuesday. We learn however that the Straits of Mackinac are free from ice, and navigation is unobstructed. Boats are passing daily in various directions, and several have come up and others gone down through the Straits, but they are not yet regular. A high wind blows up the lake, and it is very difficult to make head against, and dangerous stopping at the spring piers. The weather is now raw and cold; the themometer ranging from twenty-seven deg. to thirty-one in the morning, not higher than forty at noon, and down to freezing (thirty-two deg.) before sunset. There is not as much appearance of vegetation here as at Voree. The grass is a week later.

EVENING.—This has been a long and weary day, with the full employment I usually have in Voree from nine o'clock, A. M., to ten, P. M., it is difficult to while away the live long day with the congregation and classes around me. In the morning I longed for the prattling of the Sunday scholars at Voree. By 9½ o'clock I began to feel uneasy for the assembly of the class in the gospels. At 11 I was tired, but thought it would rest me if I had our attentive congregation to listen to the words of life for three or four hours. And if I was a little weary, how would our music inspire with strength. But it was not here. In the afternoon my heart ached to see the class in the study of the prophets at their lessons. But it could not be. Even the short sleep which I habitually take during the evening service is denied me. Here I stand mentally tired with one days rest, feeling about for the ideas which I usually have rolling up faster than I can put them on paper. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

IRA J. PATTEN, a servant of God and the Lord Jesus Christ, to the Church at Voree and to the saints scattered abroad:—

DEAR BRETHREN:—I am not in the habit of writing for publication, but since the Lord has said through his servant the prophet James of our day, let my servants the Apostles send forth a proclamation to the saints, calling their attention to the great work of God in our day, therefore, to be obedient to the commandment, I thus address you, by calling your minds to consider with me a portion of the Lord's prayer, contained in the following words: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." It is a fact known to the most common observer that this prayer, taught by Christ to his disciples, has been the standing prayer of all professed christians for the last eighteen hundred years, of which the above is a part.

And is not this petition in the mouth of every saint throughout the world? And when we pray thy kingdom come, what do we understand? Are we in earnest? Do we pray in faith, and with the understanding? Let us see. The kingdom of God spoken of by all the prophets, both of the Old and New Testament, was to them in the future. This is evident from the facts set forth in the prayer above alluded to. The kingdom had not come, neither was God's will done on earth as it was in heaven; for if it had come, and his will was done, this prayer and its design would have ceased, and Christ would have given them different instructions. But the prayer and its design continued, and even after the resurrection, when Christ had obtained all power both in heaven and on earth, he did not even then change its sentiment or its verbiage. And when the disciples asked him, wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel, the spirit of his answer was, it is not a work for you—it is not for this generation nor for this dispensation, for the kingdom is taken from them, and God has reserved the time and the setting up of his kingdom in his own power, and the time, with all things necessary for the setting up thereof, shall be revealed in his time.

Now, the kingdom spoken of by Daniel the prophet was what they alluded to or had in their minds, and there were many things that must transpire ere that day should come; for instance, the day spoken of by Isaiah, when darkness should cover the earth, and gross darkness the people, as also by Amos, when a famine should be in the land, not for bread, nor thirst for water, but for the word of the Lord. And this was to be of long continuance, so that men would run to and fro in the earth to seek it and should not find it.—That the predictions referred to above were not fulfilled up to the time of Christ, will not be denied by any one arrogating to himself in any degree an understanding of the scriptures; for the Jews had their prophets and priests up to the coming of Christ; for they received the administration of angels; they had visions and revelations, even till Christ was born. I refer to Zechariah, Simeon, and many who, in their time, received revelations from God. This was a day and time of light revealed from God, and will not compare with the darkness of Isaiah or famine by Amos, but will compare with the times of the Gentiles and the treading down of Jerusalem by them.

Hosea saw the same in substance, and says that the Jews, the people of God, should remain many days without a king, without a prince, without a sacrifice, without an ephod, and without teraphim. Question. Were all these offices and gifts taken from them till the time of Christ? I answer, no. And their history answers no.—Since Christ came, and they rejected him, have those powers and kingly priesthood continued? I answer, no, no; emphatically no. There is not one of all the sons that they have reared to take her by the hand. No, she is now without a prophet, king or priest of God. They have wandered long and lone, and far abroad.

Look, my brethren, at the mighty efforts put forth by uninspired men to redeem Jerusalem and her borders from the unhallowed tread of the wild barbarian. Look at Peter the hermit, with his enthusiastic and wild barbarians, shouting in prospect of the redemption of the sepulchre of Christ. Vain attempt! The decree had passed the lips of Jesus Christ, Jerusalem shall be trodden under foot of the Gentiles until their times be fulfilled. A time of light began their day, a time of darkness ends it, and this will constitute their times. But shall we be in darkness with them, and not see when good cometh? For the kingdom will come, be organized, set up and established in the end of the times of the Gentiles. Then, while we pray thy kingdom come, let us be consistent with our prayer and bring in our tithes and free will offerings and build the Temple and Tower of our God at Voree, that we may have a house wherein to worship our God, and a tower that will overlook the city of the saints when it is built up according to the vision thereof.

This is a work connected with the setting up of the kingdom of God in the last days. It is not my purpose to speak in detail of things that God requires at the hands of his saints in order that their faith and works may agree, and show to God, the saints and the world that we believe what we profess. One other subject connected with the kingdom is to establish a stake and corner of Zion at Beaver Island, together with a mission house, that the sons of the forest may receive the gospel in its purity. It is the will of God that all men should be saved. Are they not a part? Yea, verily. And when they are taught and come to a knowledge of their fathers and the promises of God made to them, then will their hearts rejoice; then will they pray, thy kingdom come, and we will do thy will on earth as it is done in heaven.

Dear brethren—while pestilence, that walketh in darkness, is abroad in the earth, and earthquakes, famine and war are distressing and plaguing mankind, and while all societies, conditions and ranks of men are in fear and looking at things as they are, and for those things that are coming on the earth, and is there not a cause? Yes, they have transgressed the laws of God, by which his kingdom ever was and ever will be governed. They have changed the ordinances of the gospel that Christ delivered, and some have broken the everlasting covenant. In view of these things, how shall we do? Shall we, like the different sectaries around us, pray for that that would scare them out of their senses? What! suppose their prayer answered, thy kingdom come. Rather than rejoice and support it, though they feared, yet would they war and fight it.—Fearfulness would surprise the hypocrite, and though they feared, as Esdras says, yet would they fight. Now, brethren, let us not fight against his law, for every kingdom is organized by law, and if by law there must of necessity be a law giver, or one to organize; for what avails the law, if there be no administrator? It is powerless. The transgressor fears not. Let us be up with our duty and fear not, for fear doth torment. I for one am determined to shake it off and go free, and act in view of my calling. More anon. Pray for me. My desire is to do good. God bless you all. Amen.

WORSHIPING FALSE GODS.

We are not going to say that the worship of false Gods and the building of Temples unto them exists in this country as it did among the ancient heathen nations, but we are persuaded there is as much practical devotion to idols, Devils and all manner of false Gods as there ever was. And the practice prevails among the saints nearly as much as elsewhere. A little better acquaintance with the forms of Paganism, and a more candid consideration of our own acts, will convince any one of this. Go into a crowd of men, and how many will you see puffing tobacco smoke?—About the same number as there are PRIESTS of BAAL. They are engaged in burning incense to their God, whom they worship. The occasional Priest of Molock burns opium to his God. Go to the supper table, and both Priests and Priestesses are engaged in pouring out and drinking libations to the Devil. At the tavern they do the same thing to the Dragon, whose dwelling is in the lake of fire.

We confess no little mortification in seeing Priests and High Priests in the church of God engaged in the service of heathen altars. But if they will do it we do not see that any thing is gained by improper names. We know of no possible use of tea, coffee and spirits as a beverage, except so far as it derives sanctity and power from the Devils, to whom it is offered in sacrifice. They have neither of them one single quality useful to the human constitution; not a virtue to the frame of man. Their sole use is to conform those who use them more perfectly to the Devils and false Gods, to whom they are sweet smelling incense, and acceptable libations. In the smoking of tobacco, not only the substance of the sacrifice, but the very form of offering prevails among both Saints & Gentiles in this country, which is in use at this day among hundreds of Pagan nations in the regular worship of the Devils they adore. It is a very shame! We hope the voice of the last Conference on this subject will echo in thunder from every branch. We can assure the scattered saints, as we have those with us, that health, strength, peace and prosperity are not for us while we thus relapse to heathenism.

Begin now and call things by their right names. Remember what our God has said to you, and live by his word lest ye perish. When you see a professed saint enveloped in the smoke of his pipe, remind him that you are not a worshiper of Baal, and cannot join in the prayer of the incense that he sends up to him. If he offers you a quid of tobacco, tell him you cannot seal a compact over a heathen altar by the taste of a sacrifice. If they pour out libations to Devils and Dragons, remember there is death in the cup. Do not talk to us of some incurable disease you have preying upon you, which you are thus keeping in check. Is your faith greater in false Gods than in the true? Do you hope for relief in oblations to Devils, and despair of it in the prayer of faith and the name of Jesus? Away with such nonsense. If a cup of tea will cure you of head ache, when the hands of the Priesthood will not, it is because you love Satan more than God. If a glass of spirits will still your nerves, when the ordinances of Gods house fail, it is the Dragon that has your heart. Remember this, and don't ask us to join in heathen orgeries when we visit you, for we are coming in the power of Israel's God.

☞ On Monday, the 22d ult., a constable visited our community for the first time, in search of stolen wheat, the property of Mr. Fisk of Burlington, Racine Co., and in justice to him, we would say he performed his duty faithfully, as every good citizen should, and as every officer in the State acting under oath is in duty bound to perform. But we give notice to all and to every one who has lost anything, and have any plausible reasons for resting their suspicions on us, that they need not be under the necessity or expense of employing officers to search among us, for our houses and all we possess shall ever be open for inspection to any gentleman who has had the misfortune to have his property stolen; for verily if we have any "Achans" in our camp we want them ferreted out. We would be the last to fellowship thieves, and the first to rid ourselves of them. And we hope that our light fingered neighbors (if any there be) will not pilfer too much on our credit, lest, unluckily, they might find themselves in as bad a fix as a scoundrel did a number of years ago in Kirtland, Ohio, of which we will relate the anecdote.

A certain gentleman had a house without any lock, in which he kept his meat and other necessaries. A neighbor of his came in and very gravely remarked, he thought him very negligent in leaving things in so loose a manner among the Mormons. He replied, he thought there was no danger. He had lived with them some time, and had never lost anything. A few nights after this conversation, sure enough, he thought the advice well timed, for he heard a noise at his little storage house. He carefully entered, and found somebody in the shape of a man busily engaged in packing away meat. He seized him forthwith, and when he brought him to the light, behold! it was the same grave creature that had given him this very friendly advice. Truly, a friend in need is a friend indeed. But amidst all the tirade of abuse that has ever been heaped upon the Latter Day Saints, and during all their sufferings, which have been severe, this one curse from the Almighty has been withheld from them, namely: "Woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you, for so did they of the false prophets." W.

A WIFE.

The fruit of a pious and somewhat severe education; of dignity, without luxury, economy without parsimony, strong affection without romantic sentiments, housewifely care without narrowness of spirit, domestic discipline and order, piety to parents, reverence of husbands, a large charity, and a serious devotion to God.

Beaver Island, together with a mission house, that the sons of the forest may receive the gospel in its purity. It is the will of God that all men should be saved. Are they not a part? Yea, verily. And when they are taught and come to a knowledge of their fathers and the promises of God made to them, then will their hearts rejoice; then will they pray, thy kingdom come, and we will do thy will on earth as it is done in heaven.

Dear brethren—while pestilence, that walketh in darkness, is abroad in the earth, and earthquakes, famine and war are distressing and plaguing mankind, and while all societies, conditions and ranks of men are in fear and looking at things as they are, and for those things that are coming on the earth, and is there not a cause? Yes, they have transgressed the laws of God, by which his kingdom ever was and ever will be governed. They have changed the ordinances of the gospel that Christ delivered, and some have broken the everlasting covenant. In view of these things, how shall we do? Shall we, like the different sectaries around us, pray for that that would scare them out of their senses? What! suppose their prayer answered, thy kingdom come. Rather than rejoice and support it, though they feared, yet would they war and fight it.—Fearfulness would surprise the hypocrite, and though they feared, as Esdras says, yet would they fight. Now, brethren, let us not fight against his law, for every kingdom is organized by law, and if by law there must of necessity be a law giver, or one to organize; for what avails the law, if there be no administrator? It is powerless. The transgressor fears not. Let us be up with our duty and fear not, for fear doth torment. I for one am determined to shake it off and go free, and act in view of my calling. More anon. Pray for me. My desire is to do good. God bless you all. Amen.

WORSHIPING FALSE GODS.

We are not going to say that the worship of false Gods and the building of Temples unto them exists in this country as it did among the ancient heathen nations, but we are persuaded there is as much practical devotion to idols, Devils and all manner of false Gods as there ever was. And the practice prevails among the saints nearly as much as elsewhere. A little better acquaintance with the forms of Paganism, and a more candid consideration of our own acts, will convince any one of this. Go into a crowd of men, and how many will you see puffing tobacco smoke?—About the same number as there are PRIESTS of BAAL. They are engaged in burning incense to their God, whom they worship. The occasional Priest of Moloch burns opium to his God. Go to the supper table, and both Priests and Priestesses are engaged in pouring out and drinking libations to the Devil. At the tavern they do the same thing to the Dragon, whose dwelling is in the lake of fire.

We confess no little mortification in seeing Priests and High Priests in the church of God engaged in the service of heathen altars. But if they will do it we do not see that any thing is gained by improper names. We know of no possible use of tea, coffee and spirits as a beverage, except so far as it derives sanctity and power from the Devils, to whom it is offered in sacrifice. They have neither of them one single quality useful to the human constitution; not a virtue to the frame of man. Their sole use is to conform those who use them more perfectly to the Devils and false Gods, to whom they are sweet smelling incense, and acceptable libations. In the smoking of tobacco, not only the substance of the sacrifice, but the very form of offering prevails among both Saints & Gentiles in this country, which is in use at this day among hundreds of Pagan nations in the regular worship of the Devils they adore. It is a very shame! We hope the voice of the last Conference on this subject will echo in thunder from every branch. We can assure the scattered saints, as we have those with us, that health, strength, peace and prosperity are not for us while we thus relapse to heathenism.

Begin now and call things by their right names. Remember what our God has said to you, and live by his word lest ye perish. When you see a professed saint enveloped in the smoke of his pipe, remind him that you are not a worshiper of Baal, and cannot join in the prayer of the incense that he sends up to him. If he offers you a quid of tobacco, tell him you cannot seal a compact over a heathen altar by the taste of a sacrifice. If they pour out libations to Devils and Dragons, remember there is death in the cup. Do not talk to us of some incurable disease you have preying upon you, which you are thus keeping in check. Is your faith greater in false Gods than in the true? Do you hope for relief in oblations to Devils, and despair of it in the prayer of faith and the name of Jesus? Away with such nonsense. If a cup of tea will cure you of head ache, when the hands of the Priesthood will not, it is because you love Satan more than God. If a glass of spirits will still your nerves, when the ordinances of Gods house fail, it is the Dragon that has your heart. Remember this, and don't ask us to join in heathen orgeries when we visit you, for we are coming in the power of Israel's God.

☞ On Monday, the 22d ult., a constable visited our community for the first time, in search of stolen wheat, the property of Mr. Fisk of Burlington, Racine Co., and in justice to him, we would say he performed his duty faithfully, as every good citizen should, and as every officer in the State acting under oath is in duty bound to perform. But we give notice to all and to every one who has lost anything, and have any plausible reasons for resting their suspicions on us, that they need not be under the necessity or expense of employing officers to search among us, for our houses and all we possess shall ever be open for inspection to any gentleman who has had the misfortune to have his property stolen; for verily if we have any "Achans" in our camp we want them ferreted out. We would be the last to fellowship thieves, and the first to rid ourselves of them. And we hope that our light fingered neighbors (if any there be) will not pilfer too much on our credit, lest, unluckily, they might find themselves in as bad a fix as a scoundrel did a number of years ago in Kirtland, Ohio, of which we will relate the anecdote.

A certain gentleman had a house without any lock, in which he kept his meat and other necessaries. A neighbor of his came in and very gravely remarked, he thought him very negligent in leaving things in so loose a manner among the Mormons. He replied, he thought there was no danger. He had lived with them some time, and had never lost anything. A few nights after this conversation, sure enough, he thought the advice well timed, for he heard a noise at his little storage house. He carefully entered, and found somebody in the shape of a man busily engaged in packing away meat. He seized him forthwith, and when he brought him to the light, behold! it was the same grave creature that had given him this very friendly advice. Truly, a friend in need is a friend indeed. But amidst all the tirade of abuse that has ever been heaped upon the Latter Day Saints, and during all their sufferings, which have been severe, this one curse from the Almighty has been withheld from them, namely: "Woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you, for so did they of the false prophets." W.

A WIFE.

The fruit of a pious and somewhat severe education; of dignity, without luxury, economy without parsimony, strong affection without romantic sentiments, housewifely care without narrowness of spirit, domestic discipline and order, piety to parents, reverence of husbands, a large charity, and a serious devotion to God.

☞ We have just now received the first exchange of the Voree Herald, published by James J. Strang. It evinces talent of a high order, but oh! how perverted.

We have met Mr. Strang; and in his intercourse he has proved himself a gentleman. We wish the Mormons were all as good as he.

It is a painful reflection upon humanity, to contemplate the fact of such men as he, being the leaders of so palpable a humbug.

There is one thing that we promised Mr. Strang that we have too long omitted. We bought of him an Imposing Stone, which printers who have seen it, pronounce to be the best they ever saw. It is a yellow marble, Mr. Strang says that there is an inexhaustable quarry of it at Voree. And as they go deeper, he says it grows better. He believes the quarry to contain pure white marble. And from our sample, we will say that if the people of Wisconsin want stone of an excellent quality, second only to (white) marble, they should patronize Mr. Strang.—Oshkosh Democrat.

☞ We thank Mr. Densmore for the compliment to our Marble Quarry, but not for that to Mr. Strang. The prophet sets up no pretentions to natural talent. Sure he is somewhat familiar with almost every thing essential to human happiness and the improvement of the human race. But it is only by the enlightening of God's spirit that he is so. He is in the popular sense eminently a God-made man. The goodness you give him credit for is much like that of his brethren, whom you wish were as good. It is known to all who know him, and believed by none who are unacquainted with him. What palpable nonsense it is to talk of his being a good man and a gentleman, and yet Mormonism a humbug. If Mormonism is a humbug, he knows it. And neither a gentleman nor a good man will maintain a humbug. Moreover if Mormonism is a palpable humbug, Mr. Densmore can show it to be so, and, as a journalist seeking the melioration of the condition of mankind, he is bound to. We confess we see many humbugs constantly gulling mankind, but we do not accuse good men and gentlemen of knowingly maintaining such, without being able and willing to give good reasons for saying it.

WHO IS A COWARD?

The man who attacks another by surprise, or with a weapon in his hand when the other has none, is a coward.

The man that carries weapons about his person in his intercourse with an unarmed society, is a coward.

The man who associates with him, and so goes with numbers to overpower an individual, or a smaller or feebler numbers, is a coward.

The man who, being challenged to a duel, is so much afraid of public sentiment that he dares not refuse it, is a coward.

In general, that man is a coward who shapes his course of action by his fears, and he alone is a man of real courage, who always dares to do right.

An Honest Beggar.—A gentleman reading a paper in an Albany hotel, was accosted by a little naked girl, who asked him for a penny. He handed her half a dollar by mistake. The girl went out, was absent a few minutes, and returned with forty-nine cents, which she handed the astonished man, saying "here is the change, sir." The gentleman immediately took measures to have the little innocent clothed and provided for.

☞ Some one, looking at a rich man, said, "Poor man, he toiled day and night until he was forty, to gain his wealth, and he has been watching it day and night, ever since, for his victuals and clothes."

POETRY.

Hark! list! my brethren, one and all,
Ye people, too, on you I call,
My invitation hear;
For I'm determin'd not to know
Myself or any man below,
Save Jesus crucified.

And now in weakness here I am,
In fear and trembling lo I come,
Salvation to proclaim:
Not by the wisdom of the world,
Devised by man's enticing words,
But by the spirit's power.

O let your prayers for me arise
To God through faith in Jesus Christ,
That wisdom may be given,
To preach the word and make it plain,
The gospel to the sons of men,
Through faith, the power of God.

We speak the word to those who know
God's perfect system here below,
This wisdom is from God;
For by the wisdom of the world
Our race to darkness has been hurl'd,
Gross darkness fills their minds.

O God, our Father, hear our prayer,
Oh give the spirit, do not spare,
Our hungry souls to feed:
Thy spirit it doth understand
The things of God, the things of man,
Without it who can know.

The way the holy prophets trod,
The way that leads from earth to God,
Their words are all divine:
The kingdom of our God will come,
His will on earth it shall be done—
O glory be to God.

Ira J. Patten.

☞ Dr. Beardsley, late of Milwaukee city, has permanently located himself in the village of Burlington, Racine Co., Wis., where he will be happy to attend to all calls in the line of medicine and surgery. We are informed that Dr. B. has been in the business nearly fifteen years, and is a regular graduate of medicine and surgery from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, & has adhered to the old established order of alopathy practice, until within the last three years, when he was induced, after much study and observation, to adopt partially the botanical. We consider him a gentleman of talent and enterprise in society, and of skill and ability in his profession, and would recommend all who want anything in his line to give him a call, especially those who have more faith in pills than prayers.

REMITTANCE BY MAIL LAST WEEK FOR THE HERALD.

Rodolph G. Steele,	$2,00	to Vol. IV.	No. 52.
I. Van Dusen,	1,00	" "	26
Elisha Morrill,	1,00	" "	93
Elisha Persons,	1,00	" "	1 26
Stephen Post, (2 copies,)	5,00	" "	28

☞ We have just now received the first exchange of the Voree Herald, published by James J. Strang. It evinces talent of a high order, but oh! how perverted.

We have met Mr. Strang; and in his intercourse he has proved himself a gentleman. We wish the Mormons were all as good as he.

It is a painful reflection upon humanity, to contemplate the fact of such men as he, being the leaders of so palpable a humbug.

There is one thing that we promised Mr. Strang that we have too long omitted. We bought of him an Imposing Stone, which printers who have seen it, pronounce to be the best they ever saw. It is a yellow marble, Mr. Strang says that there is an inexhaustable quarry of it at Voree. And as they go deeper, he says it grows better. He believes the quarry to contain pure white marble. And from our sample, we will say that if the people of Wisconsin want stone of an excellent quality, second only to (white) marble, they should patronize Mr. Strang.—Oshkosh Democrat.

☞ We thank Mr. Densmore for the compliment to our Marble Quarry, but not for that to Mr. Strang. The prophet sets up no pretentions to natural talent. Sure he is somewhat familiar with almost every thing essential to human happiness and the improvement of the human race. But it is only by the enlightening of God's spirit that he is so. He is in the popular sense eminently a God-made man. The goodness you give him credit for is much like that of his brethren, whom you wish were as good. It is known to all who know him, and believed by none who are unacquainted with him. What palpable nonsense it is to talk of his being a good man and a gentleman, and yet Mormonism a humbug. If Mormonism is a humbug, he knows it. And neither a gentleman nor a good man will maintain a humbug. Moreover if Mormonism is a palpable humbug, Mr. Densmore can show it to be so, and, as a journalist seeking the melioration of the condition of mankind, he is bound to. We confess we see many humbugs constantly gulling mankind, but we do not accuse good men and gentlemen of knowingly maintaining such, without being able and willing to give good reasons for saying it.

WHO IS A COWARD?

The man who attacks another by surprise, or with a weapon in his hand when the other has none, is a coward.

The man that carries weapons about his person in his intercourse with an unarmed society, is a coward.

The man who associates with him, and so goes with numbers to overpower an individual, or a smaller or feebler numbers, is a coward.

The man who, being challenged to a duel, is so much afraid of public sentiment that he dares not refuse it, is a coward.

In general, that man is a coward who shapes his course of action by his fears, and he alone is a man of real courage, who always dares to do right.

An Honest Beggar.—A gentleman reading a paper in an Albany hotel, was accosted by a little naked girl, who asked him for a penny. He handed her half a dollar by mistake. The girl went out, was absent a few minutes, and returned with forty-nine cents, which she handed the astonished man, saying "here is the change, sir." The gentleman immediately took measures to have the little innocent clothed and provided for.

☞ Some one, looking at a rich man, said, "Poor man, he toiled day and night until he was forty, to gain his wealth, and he has been watching it day and night, ever since, for his victuals and clothes."

POETRY.

Hark! list! my brethren, one and all,
Ye people, too, on you I call,
My invitation hear;
For I'm determin'd not to know
Myself or any man below,
Save Jesus crucified.

And now in weakness here I am,
In fear and trembling lo I come,
Salvation to proclaim:
Not by the wisdom of the world,
Devised by man's enticing words,
But by the spirit's power.

O let your prayers for me arise
To God through faith in Jesus Christ,
That wisdom may be given,
To preach the word and make it plain,
The gospel to the sons of men,
Through faith, the power of God.

We speak the word to those who know
God's perfect system here below,
This wisdom is from God;
For by the wisdom of the world
Our race to darkness has been hurl'd,
Gross darkness fills their minds.

O God, our Father, hear our prayer,
Oh give the spirit, do not spare,
Our hungry souls to feed:
Thy spirit it doth understand
The things of God, the things of man,
Without it who can know.

The way the holy prophets trod,
The way that leads from earth to God,
Their words are all divine:
The kingdom of our God will come,
His will on earth it shall be done—
O glory be to God.

Ira J. Patten.

☞ Dr. Beardsley, late of Milwaukee city, has permanently located himself in the village of Burlington, Racine Co., Wis., where he will be happy to attend to all calls in the line of medicine and surgery. We are informed that Dr. B. has been in the business nearly fifteen years, and is a regular graduate of medicine and surgery from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, & has adhered to the old established order of alopathy practice, until within the last three years, when he was induced, after much study and observation, to adopt partially the botanical. We consider him a gentleman of talent and enterprise in society, and of skill and ability in his profession, and would recommend all who want anything in his line to give him a call, especially those who have more faith in pills than prayers.

REMITTANCE BY MAIL LAST WEEK FOR THE HERALD.

Rodolph G. Steele,	$3,00	to Vol.	IV.	No. 32.
I. Van Dusen,	1,00	"	"	26
Elisha Morrill,	1,00	"	"	23
Elisha Persons,	1,00	"	"	26
Stephen Post, (3 copies,)	5,00	"	"	29

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 8.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, MAY 10, 1849. [WHOLE No. 124.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. BURGESS TO MR. STRANG.—No. 7.

Racine, April 30th, 1849.

MR. JAMES J. STRANG :—I shall now proceed to reply to your No. 7, after considerable delay on my part, occasioned principally by inflammation of the eyes. I do not think it necessary to follow you in conclusions, which result from mistatements. Your bee and ant argument does not mend the matter for you, as both choose and prepare their own governors, which is still republican. And their governors are only the governors of families, not of universes.

166. You think, par. 189, it is no worse for the Canaanites to be overrun and destroyed by the judgments of God, than for modern nations to overrun and destroy each other. I think both wrong, because promotive of misery. But the former becomes a precedent, an example and excuse for the latter, to those who reason as you do. Who, when they see a modern wrong, appeal to an ancient one with the sanction of a Deity appended to justify it. And when an ancient wrong is complained of, they justify it by a modern one of equal enormity. Strange logic of morals! I thought murder and plunder were wrong, whether done by a Deity or a Devil.

167. Because I objected to historic testimony as proof sufficient of the present existence of a God, in par. 93, you say, par. 190, "that my rule is that all testimony must be discarded, unless proved true." I think all testimony is necessarily uncertain, in proportion as the thing testified of is difficult to understand; or, in other words, extraordinary; and that extraordinary affirmations require corresponding proof. What do we mean by proof? I think to make that perceptible which was not, or to increase the perceptibility of that which was less clear or strong, as in the case of the microscope, telescope, or proving a problem in figures. &c. Now, the testimony of numbers does not make the thing testified more perceptible, and, if my definition be right, does not prove the thing at all in philosophy, whatever it may in law. Do we necessarily resort to testimony to prove a visible reality, such as you say God is? you having "seen him in the exercise of his power." You appear to me to confound proof in law and philosophy very conveniently together, for the purpose of mystification. Though I believe you have a rule in law, "that the evidence adduced should always be the best the case will admit of."

168. You say, par. 191, "I have not shown why testimony is more credible in the natural than the supernatural." I have said, in natural existences, the testimony may be compared with the thing spoken of. Not so in the supernatural. But perhaps I am wrong, for your supernatural God is material and visible. If so, why can we not test your testimony and rely on the evidence of our own senses, instead of yours?

169. You say, further, "but individually we have experienced very little even of the natural, and as far as other people's experience is involved we can only know it by this testimony, which you discard." How can we know the experience of others by what they testify? We know they do testify, but not that they testify truly; or testimony would always agree with testimony and fact, which it does not. This confounding testimony and knowledge appears strange from you, who have before distinguished the difference so clearly. "Testimony," you said, "was the statement of a witness, knowledge the witnessing itself."

170. Your argument of the Pope appears to me lame and lengthy. My argument went to show that between the existence of the Pope and God there was no parallel, and consequently one rule could not apply to both. First, the Pope is said to be a man like ourselves. Our existence is self-evident to any one who chooses to examine us. Not so the existence of God, or I should not question it. Second, the Pope is described as doing that which others could do in similar circumstances, or I should question the testimony. The Pope is not described as ruling the universe by the force of his will, and making inanimate matter move obedient to his desire without mechanical force. Here the difference appears to me so distinct as not to be easily confounded, and yet you profess to think that as I believe in the Pope by testimony, so by testimony I ought to believe in God.

171. Again, governing is said to be a condition inseparable from God, without which he would not be God, as it is advanced to prove his existence. Not so with the man who fills the office of Pope.—But if you consider God to be a great visible being, composed of refined matter, I should be happy to learn the size, appearance, &c., of the Deity, so that, should I be favored with an interview as well as you, I may be able to recognize him without mistake, and not be imposed on by the Devil or some other vagabond. Would it not be well, in this age of light, to get a photographic likeness of your Deity, so that if the vulgar laity cannot see him they may see his likeness at least? Would it not be a grand speculation to preface every new revelation with a likeness of its author?

172. Again, the seers of the Pope do not claim special privileges to tithe those who believe, as the professed seers of God do, so they are not quite such interested witnesses. Do you think if the priests had the control of a rail road and telegraph reaching to heaven, they would let us have a revelation or a ride there without first paying them?

Yes, pay! pay!! pay!!!
Though you've scarcely the means to live.
The great command of the hireling priest
Is to give! give!! give!!!

173. You may complain that this is out of place. I think not, more than your questioning the veracity of the testimony of a witness in a common court, or even questioning the truth of a lawyers plea or defense, when he was richly paid for making it. The prospect of power and profit have always been strong incentives to action. It has sustained falsehood, fraud, war and murder, and does now. Do we not right then to question the integrity of our witnesses, as well as their liabil*ity* to be deceived?

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 8.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, MAY 10, 1849. [WHOLE No. 124.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. BURGESS TO MR. STRANG.—No. 7.

Racine, April 30th, 1849.

MR. JAMES J. STRANG :—I shall now proceed to reply to your No. 7, after considerable delay on my part, occasioned principally by inflammation of the eyes. I do not think it necessary to follow you in conclusions, which result from mistatements. Your bee and ant argument does not mend the matter for you, as both choose and prepare their own governors, which is still republican. And their governors are only the governors of families, not of universes.

166. You think, par. 189, it is no worse for the Canaanites to be overrun and destroyed by the judgments of God, than for modern nations to overrun and destroy each other. I think both wrong, because promotive of misery. But the former becomes a precedent, an example and excuse for the latter, to those who reason as you do. Who, when they see a modern wrong, appeal to an ancient one with the sanction of a Deity appended to justify it. And when an ancient wrong is complained of, they justify it by a modern one of equal enormity. Strange logic of morals! I thought murder and plunder were wrong, whether done by a Deity or a Devil.

167. Because I objected to historic testimony as proof sufficient of the present existence of a God, in par. 93, you say, par. 190, "that my rule is that all testimony must be discarded, unless proved true." I think all testimony is necessarily uncertain, in proportion as the thing testified of is difficult to understand; or, in other words, extraordinary; and that extraordinary affirmations require corresponding proof. What do we mean by proof? I think to make that perceptible which was not, or to increase the perceptibility of that which was less clear or strong, as in the case of the microscope, telescope, or proving a problem in figures. &c. Now, the testimony of numbers does not make the thing testified more perceptible, and, if my definition be right, does not prove the thing at all in philosophy, whatever it may in law. Do we necessarily resort to testimony to prove a visible reality, such as you say God is? you having "seen him in the exercise of his power." You appear to me to confound proof in law and philosophy very conveniently together, for the purpose of mystification. Though I believe you have a rule in law, "that the evidence adduced should always be the best the case will admit of."

168. You say, par. 191, "I have not shown why testimony is more credible in the natural than the supernatural." I have said, in natural existences, the testimony may be compared with the thing spoken of. Not so in the supernatural. But perhaps I am wrong, for your supernatural God is material and visible. If so, why can we not test your testimony and rely on the evidence of our own senses, instead of yours?

169. You say, further, "but individually we have experienced very little even of the natural, and as far as other people's experience is involved we can only know it by this testimony, which you discard." How can we know the experience of others by what they testify? We know they do testify, but not that they testify truly; or testimony would always agree with testimony and fact, which it does not. This confounding testimony and knowledge appears strange from you, who have before distinguished the difference so clearly. "Testimony," you said, "was the statement of a witness, knowledge the witnessing itself."

170. Your argument of the Pope appears to me lame and lengthy. My argument went to show that between the existence of the Pope and God there was no parallel, and consequently one rule could not apply to both. First, the Pope is said to be a man like ourselves. Our existence is self-evident to any one who chooses to examine us. Not so the existence of God, or I should not question it. Second, the Pope is described as doing that which others could do in similar circumstances, or I should question the testimony. The Pope is not described as ruling the universe by the force of his will, and making inanimate matter move obedient to his desire without mechanical force. Here the difference appears to me so distinct as not to be easily confounded, and yet you profess to think that as I believe in the Pope by testimony, so by testimony I ought to believe in God.

171. Again, governing is said to be a condition inseparable from God, without which he would not be God, as it is advanced to prove his existence. Not so with the man who fills the office of Pope.—But if you consider God to be a great visible being, composed of refined matter, I should be happy to learn the size, appearance, &c., of the Deity, so that, should I be favored with an interview as well as you, I may be able to recognize him without mistake, and not be imposed on by the Devil or some other vagabond. Would it not be well, in this age of light, to get a photographic likeness of your Deity, so that if the vulgar laity cannot see him they may see his likeness at least? Would it not be a grand speculation to preface every new revelation with a likeness of its author?

172. Again, the seers of the Pope do not claim special privileges to tithe those who believe, as the professed seers of God do, so they are not quite such interested witnesses. Do you think if the priests had the control of a rail road and telegraph reaching to heaven, they would let us have a revelation or a ride there without first paying them?

Yes, pay! pay!! pay!!!
Though you've scarcely the means to live.
The great command of the hireling priest
Is to give! give!! give!!!

173. You may complain that this is out of place. I think not, more than your questioning the veracity of the testimony of a witness in a common court, or even questioning the truth of a lawyers plea or defense, when he was richly paid for making it. The prospect of power and profit have always been strong incentives to action. It has sustained falsehood, fraud, war and murder, and does now. Do we not right then to question the integrity of our witnesses, as well as their liability to be deceived?

174. Again, we generally consider the statement of a witness valuable (when his honesty is conceded) in proportion to his capacity to understand the subject in question. Were it a question of medicine, a man skilled in medicine would be preferred. Were it a question of law, one skilled in law would be preferred. In minerology, a minerologist. In chemistry, a chemist. But in theology, which is not demonstrable, one guess is about as good as another, without conclusive evidence. And for this reason I question your testimony, not to abuse you because we differ, but to learn what is true and right, that I may be better enabled to speak truly, and do what is right to promote the happiness of all.

175. My impertinent issue you mention in par. 197, grew out of your impertinent comparison of God to the British queen. You say, "you do not undertake to show that God had no officers, counselors, messengers and assistants in his government." Then am I to understand that the government of the universe is now carried on by JEHOVAH, STRANG AND COMPANY.

176. In par. 198 you say, if I will supply any intervening link in my evidence so as to connect the argument, you will be happy to review it. If you will show where you think a link is needed to connect the argument, I will endeavor to supply it, or leave it to those more able, we being but partial judges at the best.

177. In reply to par. 199, my question grew out of your statement that "testimony proves facts." In law this may be admitted, in philosophy it cannot without making experiments useless.

178. Again, you said, "authority establishes principles." To which I replied by asking, if authority is contradictory, how can it establish principles? Now, authority is frequently contradictory, but in that case you say the higher prevails. Query. Which is the higher, the fool in office or the philosopher out? What is the standard of height? If authority establishes principles, they will be as variable as the authorities from whom they emanate. I have been taught to consider principles invariable, and shall probably continue to think so until you or some one else proves it otherwise, by something more than testimony.

179. In reply to par. 200, I did say we generally appeal to facts to prove testimony, and I might have added, when practicable, and where the truth of the testimony appears doubtful, as in my hog illustration. You are right in the case of murder. It would not do to commit murder over again. And if we could raise the dead to life to kill them again, it would be no proof that the same one who committed the second murder did the first, consequently would not be practical or promotive of truth. So we are compelled to depend on testimony, it being the best evidence we can get to prove the probability, not the certainty, of the question in issue.

180. You refer to charts also, which you say, when in good repute, are received as evidence, without proving the authorship. I am told there is an old chart, I think Woodbridge's, which was in good repute, which, if it proved anything, proved Grand river to enter into Niagara river, instead of lake Erie.

181. You say, par. 201, it is a principle in law that a note or bill running to the bearer is negotiable by delivery merely. Why the note is positive evidence of the agreement of the parties, that it should be negotiable, by being made payable to the bearer. You say a lawyer will prove it before a judge who is ignorant of it, by the decision of the superior courts. Would not a lawyer or any one else be a dunce who could not prove it, without reference to the superior courts? How did they prove it prior to the existence of the superior courts? or if the judge of the superior court should be too ignorant to perceive it, what would become of the high authority?

182. As I am not satisfied with your summary of my notions of evidence, I will tell you what I do think—that our decisions in all doubtful cases should be governed by the best evidence the case will admit of. Which, in a material, omnipotent God, would be to examine him, to see and talk with him, as you say yon have done — What your idea of long established tests of truth are, I know not. My test of truth is consistency.

183. In par. 203 you urge as an excuse for not putting your best foot foremost, that you had such bad luck in previous discussions by your opponents backing out on the first encounter. I think that a better reason for putting your best arguments forward first, for if they were true they would be promotive of truth in the quickest and best manner, which would save time and labor to both of us.—

Yours for the truth, EDWIN BURGESS.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.—No. 3.

Racine, Wednesday, April 18th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—We have been waiting here since my last. We have engaged a passage direct to Beaver by the new propeller Troy, which was due here yesterday, but the winds have been unfavorable, and she has not yet arrived.

THE DISAPPOINTMENT.

This morning the report ran through town, "a boat coming down." I went to the wharf and met the agent, who said it was the Troy.—In hot haste I engaged two carts to take our stuff down. As usual, when the hurrying time came almost every man was absent. Two or three of us trundled things on the carts in hot haste, and after two loads had gone we learned that it was not the boat, and had not stopped. It was running very close to the land for a lee, because the wind was strong from the north-west, and made a very heavy sea off shore.

THE LAKE COAST AND HARBORS.

As I having nothing more interesting to write in the way of incident, I may as well give you a little in the way of description.—Racine harbor is formed by extending two piers out into the lake on either side of Root river, and has but about five feet water. Vessels run in and take in freight down to about that depth, and lay off to receive the rest of their loading either by lighters or from the spring pier. Southport has no harbor, but there is a deep cove which it is supposed can be made a harbor by the same means used in the construction of this at Racine. Chicago harbor was constructed in the same manner, but has been done more effectually. Southport is about as large a town as Racine, and has the same age—the settlement of this country dating back only fourteen years. Chicago is a city of some 20,000 inhabitants, and dates back sixteen or seventeen years, previous to which there was only an old fort and two or three trading houses there. Milwaukee lies twenty-five mile north from here; has a population of some 14,000, and a harbor sufficient for craft of a moderate draft, varying from six to nine feet. The harbor is formed by running out piers on each side of the Milwaukee River at its mouth. In the upper part of the town is a fine water power, on the same stream, formed at great cost by the Territory of Wisconsin, in that swindling operation, the Rock river Canal humbug, and owned exclusively by the individuals who inveighed the public or by their assigns. There is an extensive swamp in the midst of Milwuakee which, however, is being rapidly filled up and built. The stream winds by a meandering course through the city, and abrupt broken hills rise to a small elevation all round except at the entrance of the harbor, giving a pleasing scene.

THE INHABITANTS.

The first settlers of all these towns were generally Americans, but the foreign population has been constantly on the increase, until at this time it probably makes the majority. Milwuakee has half its population Germans, a quarter from other foreign nations, and only a quarter natives. Probably about the same proportion

174. Again, we generally consider the statement of a witness valuable (when his honesty is conceded) in proportion to his capacity to understand the subject in question. Were it a question of medicine, a man skilled in medicine would be preferred. Were it a question of law, one skilled in law would be preferred. In minerology, a minerologist. In chemistry, a chemist. But in theology, which is not demonstrable, one guess is about as good as another, without conclusive evidence. And for this reason I question your testimony, not to abuse you because we differ, but to learn what is true and right, that I may be better enabled to speak truly, and do what is right to promote the happiness of all.

175. My impertinent issue you mention in par. 197, grew out of your impertinent comparison of God to the British queen. You say, "you do not undertake to show that God had no officers, counselors, messengers and assistants in his government." Then am I to understand that the government of the universe is now carried on by JEHOVAH, STRANG AND COMPANY.

176. In par. 198 you say, if I will supply any intervening link in my evidence so as to connect the argument, you will be happy to review it. If you will show where you think a link is needed to connect the argument, I will endeavor to supply it, or leave it to those more able, we being but partial judges at the best.

177. In reply to par. 199, my question grew out of your statement that "testimony proves facts." In law this may be admitted, in philosophy it cannot without making experiments useless.

178. Again, you said, "authority establishes principles." To which I replied by asking, if authority is contradictory, how can it establish principles? Now, authority is frequently contradictory, but in that case you say the higher prevails. Query. Which is the higher, the fool in office or the philosopher out? What is the standard of height? If authority establishes principles, they will be as variable as the authorities from whom they emanate. I have been taught to consider principles invariable, and shall probably continue to think so until you or some one else proves it otherwise, by something more than testimony.

179. In reply to par. 200, I did say we generally appeal to facts to prove testimony, and I might have added, when practicable, and where the truth of the testimony appears doubtful, as in my hog illustration. You are right in the case of murder. It would not do to commit murder over again. And if we could raise the dead to life to kill them again, it would be no proof that the same one who committed the second murder did the first, consequently would not be practical or promotive of truth. So we are compelled to depend on testimony, it being the best evidence we can get to prove the probability, not the certainty, of the question in issue.

180. You refer to charts also, which you say, when in good repute, are received as evidence, without proving the authorship. I am told there is an old chart, I think Woodbridge's, which was in good repute, which, if it proved anything, proved Grand river to enter into Niagara river, instead of lake Erie.

181. You say, par. 201, it is a principle in law that a note or bill running to the bearer is negotiable by delivery merely. Why the note is positive evidence of the agreement of the parties, that it should be negotiable, by being made payable to the bearer. You say a lawyer will prove it before a judge who is ignorant of it, by the decision of the superior courts. Would not a lawyer or any one else be a dunce who could not prove it, without reference to the superior courts? How did they prove it prior to the existence of the superior courts? or if the judge of the superior court should be too ignorant to perceive it, what would become of the high authority?

182. As I am not satisfied with your summary of my notions of evidence, I will tell you what I do think—that our decisions in all doubtful cases should be governed by the best evidence the case will admit of. Which, in a material, omnipotent God, would be to examine him, to see and talk with him, as you say you have done—What your idea of long established tests of truth are, I know not. My test of truth is consistency.

183. In par. 203 you urge as an excuse for not putting your best foot foremost, that you had such bad luck in previous discussions by your opponents backing out on the first encounter. I think that a better reason for putting your best arguments forward first, for if they were true they would be promotive of truth in the quickest and best manner, which would save time and labor to both of us.—Yours for the truth,

EDWIN BURGESS.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.—No. 3.

Racine, Wednesday, April 18th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—We have been waiting here since my last. We have engaged a passage direct to Beaver by the new propeller Troy, which was due here yesterday, but the winds have been unfavorable, and she has not yet arrived.

THE DISAPPOINTMENT.

This morning the report ran through town, "a boat coming down." I went to the wharf and met the agent, who said it was the Troy.—In hot haste I engaged two carts to take our stuff down. As usual, when the hurrying time came almost every man was absent. Two or three of us trundled things on the carts in hot haste, and after two loads had gone we learned that it was not the boat, and had not stopped. It was running very close to the land for a lee, because the wind was strong from the north-west, and made a very heavy sea off shore.

THE LAKE COAST AND HARBORS.

As I having nothing more interesting to write in the way of incident, I may as well give you a little in the way of description.—Racine harbor is formed by extending two piers out into the lake on either side of Root river, and has but about five feet water. Vessels run in and take in freight down to about that depth, and lay off to receive the rest of their loading either by lighters or from the spring pier. Southport has no harbor, but there is a deep cove which it is supposed can be made a harbor by the same means used in the construction of this at Racine. Chicago harbor was constructed in the same manner, but has been done more effectually. Southport is about as large a town as Racine, and has the same age—the settlement of this country dating back only fourteen years. Chicago is a city of some 20,000 inhabitants, and dates back sixteen or seventeen years, previous to which there was only an old fort and two or three trading houses there. Milwaukee lies twenty-five mile north from here; has a population of some 14,000, and a harbor sufficient for craft of a moderate draft, varying from six to nine feet. The harbor is formed by running out piers on each side of the Milwaukee River at its mouth. In the upper part of the town is a fine water power, on the same stream, formed at great cost by the Territory of Wisconsin, in that swindling operation, the Rock river Canal humbug, and owned exclusively by the individuals who inveighed the public or by their assigns. There is an extensive swamp in the midst of Milwaukee which, however, is being rapidly filled up and built. The stream winds by a meandering course through the city, and abrupt broken hills rise to a small elevation all round except at the entrance of the harbor, giving a pleasing scene.

THE INHABITANTS.

The first settlers of all these towns were generally Americans, but the foreign population has been constantly on the increase, until at this time it probably makes the majority. Milwaukee has half its population Germans, a quarter from other foreign nations, and only a quarter natives. Probably about the same proportion prevails at Chicago. In Racine and Southport there is a greater proportion of native citizens, though strange tongues are constantly heard and Dutch signs appear on all the streets. The Roman Catholic religion prevails, and is constantly gaining ground. The leading business men of Protestant parentage, who have no particular attachment to any one Protestant church, generally connect themselves with the Roman church. The attachment of such men to that church is not generally very strong. The hope of gain, of political influence or of professional eminence is the principal spring of action with them. Should they return to a country strongly Protestant, they would doubtless drop Romanism. But their children will be truly Roman in their faith, and will regard Protestants merely as schismatics and heretics. Their religion will be hearty. The system of propagandism, pursued by the Romish clergy, is thorough and eminently successful.

THE REGRET.

Noon.—Bro. J. E. Page has left us and returned towards Voree, out of health. We parted with him with deep regret, all assured that health, peace and prosperity are ahead, and that there is no difficulty which perseverance and a fixed and unchangeable resolution will not overcome.

THE WEATHER.

The weather is gradually and slowly becoming warmer and better for our journey. The wind is yet up, and a heavy sea rolls in shore, though the wind is off the land. There is an improvement in that respect since morning however, and we hope to be off this evening. It is however difficult landing unless the lake is still, except by the boats that enter the harbors.

SPRING PIERS.

In lake Michigan most of the ports are provided with spring piers; that is, wharfs built by driving piles and bridging on them out to deep water. They are superior to the wharfs built by cribbing and filling with stone, because the waters roll freely under and through them, forming no bars, and dashing far less on the piers.

AN INCIDENT.

To-day several gentlemen, both citizens and strangers, called on me to make inquiries concerning the plates of Manchou and Mormonism in general. Some listened with much attention and interest, and appeared to feel that they heard the truth. Yes, truth, simply told, is all powerful. It is the most eloquent preaching. Embellishments and long arguments are useless. It is the simple truth, adorned only with its own native beauties, that works deep, lasting conviction.

We have not got up meetings here, because we are constantly waiting for a boat, which we must be ready to take whenever it comes, without one moments delay. Nevertheless Bro. Page preached once at the house of Bro. Lenss, a little out of town. There has been very little preaching of the true gospel here at any time, and the religious people are very anxious to prevent our geting a foot hold. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

THE CHOLERA.

The following, from the New York "Journal of Commerce," is a communication from Dr. J. H. Shearman, a physician of that city, in which he gives some results of his observation upon this disease, and also some good advice for its prevention:—

"Almost all the cases of cholera that I attended—and they were very numerous—commenced during the night. A man would be seized with it at 11 or 12 o'clock at night, and often be dead in the course of two or three hours. The coldness of the night seemed to be the last determining cause of its attack.

"Diminished or suspended breathing gives occasion for all other symptoms to appear. I now wish that it may be observed that in health our breathing is diminished one half during the night, and as the heat and life depend upon breathing, the night, when life and heat are lowest, is the most likely time for an attack.

"Warmth at night, therefore, is most essential. I never knew a case of cholera to occur in a warm room. Some persons have a great dread of sleeping in a warm room. I know no reason for such fear. If we sleep in a warm room, we require less covering; but when the clothing is adapted to the temperature, the sleep is just as certain as in a cold room with plenty of clothing, and we are surer of warmth and life, and therefore safer from disease.

"Sound sleep is essential to sound health. Sleep is the only mode by which the brain is restored and renewed. During our waking hours, we constantly use the brain. We may give the muscles rest by repose—but the brain rests only in sleep. Now, as the brain is the course of the voluntary part of respiration, if the brain be not well rested and renewed by sleep, the breathing is deficient, and the life and heat are both low. I never knew one attacked with cholera, in a sound sleep, in a warm bed or room.

"The soundest sleep is the earliest—sound sleep depends upon good blood, and the blood is best just after the last meal is digested. Consequently, the earliest part of the sleep is the best and soundest. Those who mean to have good health, should go to bed early.—There are some persons in society, whose employments are, unhappily, at night. Let such persons be aware of their danger, and not add to it, by being cold, or taking poison.

"Good blood is made of good food. Food is anything which can become blood. Alcohol cannot—therefore it is not food.—That which is not food, is either inoperative, or a poison. Alcohol is poison. Alcohol decomposes the blood—therefore prepares for disease. The man who drinks, is as ready for the cholera as oiled paper is for taking fire. Nine-tenths of all that were attacked drank.

"Dirty, clammy skin, prevents good circulation in that large part of the body. None breathe well with bad skins. If every person were cleansed, body and clothing daily, few cases of cholera would occur. All the people who took it without infection, were dirty.

"A regular time for wholsome meals, and a regular opportunity for the bowels and bladder, are indispensable. How strange that people can remember their stomachs three times a day, and cannot remember their bowels once. Take your own time, morning, noon, or night, but take it. If you are given to looseness, drink clove tea. If you are given to constipation, take fruits, dried or fresh, vegetables, and sweets.

"A body and mind, well employed, and a consciousness of being right before man and God, are of as much value as many medicines. Tranquility of mind, and rectitude of feeling, give a healthful vigor to the brain, and, therefore, improve the breathing, and by consequence, the condition of the blood. All the cholera patients, except those who took it by contagion, were immoral and vicious.

"I am afraid to send you more this time, lest I weary you. The Divine Being keeps us in health by laws, not by medicine. He punishes us by laws, when we offend—and He heals us by laws when we cease to offend. Would that we all knew and obeyed his laws. We should not have much cause to fear the cholera."

THE LIGHT OF KNOWLEDGE.

Knowledge cannot be stolen by or from you. It cannot be sold or bought. You may be poor, and be troubled by the sheriff on the journey of life. He may break into your house and sell your furniture at auction; drive away your ewe lamb, and leave you homeless and penniless; but he cannot lay the law's hand upon prevails at Chicago. In Racine and Southport there is a greater proportion of native citizens, though strange tongues are constantly heard and Dutch signs appear on all the streets. The Roman Catholic religion prevails, and is constantly gaining ground. The leading business men of Protestant parentage, who have no particular attachment to any one Protestant church, generally connect themselves with the Roman church. The attachment of such men to that church is not generally very strong. The hope of gain, of political influence or of professional eminence is the principal spring of action with them. Should they return to a country strongly Protestant, they would doubtless drop Romanism. But their children will be truly Roman in their faith, and will regard Protestants merely as schismatics and heretics. Their religion will be hearty. The system of propagandism, pursued by the Romish clergy, is thorough and eminently successful.

THE REGRET.

Noon.—Bro. J. E. Page has left us and returned towards Voree, out of health. We parted with him with deep regret, all assured that health, peace and prosperity are ahead, and that there is no difficulty which perseverance and a fixed and unchangeable resolution will not overcome.

THE WEATHER.

The weather is gradually and slowly becoming warmer and better for our journey. The wind is yet up, and a heavy sea rolls in shore, though the wind is off the land. There is an improvement in that respect since morning however, and we hope to be off this evening. It is however difficult landing unless the lake is still, except by the boats that enter the harbors.

SPRING PIERS.

In lake Michigan most of the ports are provided with spring piers; that is, wharfs built by driving piles and bridging on them out to deep water. They are superior to the wharfs built by cribbing and filling with stone, because the waters roll freely under and through them, forming no bars, and dashing far less on the piers.

AN INCIDENT.

To-day several gentlemen, both citizens and strangers, called on me to make inquiries concerning the plates of Manchou and Mormonism in general. Some listened with much attention and interest, and appeared to feel that they heard the truth. Yes, truth, simply told, is all powerful. It is the most eloquent preaching. Embellishments and long arguments are useless. It is the simple truth, adorned only with its own native beauties, that works deep, lasting conviction.

We have not got up meetings here, because we are constantly waiting for a boat, which we must be ready to take whenever it comes, without one moments delay. Nevertheless Bro. Page preached once at the house of Bro. Lenss, a little out of town. There has been very little preaching of the true gospel here at any time, and the religious people are very anxious to prevent our geting a foot hold. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

THE CHOLERA.

The following, from the New York "Journal of Commerce," is a communication from Dr. J. H. Shearman, a physician of that city, in which he gives some results of his observation upon this disease, and also some good advice for its prevention:—

"Almost all the cases of cholera that I attended—and they were very numerous—commenced during the night. A man would be seized with it at 11 or 12 o'clock at night, and often be dead in the course of two or three hours. The coldness of the night seemed to be the last determining cause of its attack.

"Diminished or suspended breathing gives occasion for all other symptoms to appear. I now wish that it may be observed that in health our breathing is diminished one half during the night, and as the heat and life depend upon breathing, the night, when life and heat are lowest, is the most likely time for an attack.

"Warmth at night, therefore, is most essential. I never knew a case of cholera to occur in a warm room. Some persons have a great dread of sleeping in a warm room. I know no reason for such fear. If we sleep in a warm room, we require less covering; but when the clothing is adapted to the temperature, the sleep is just as certain as in a cold room with plenty of clothing, and we are surer of warmth and life, and therefore safer from disease.

"Sound sleep is essential to sound health. Sleep is the only mode by which the brain is restored and renewed. During our waking hours, we constantly use the brain. We may give the muscles rest by repose—but the brain rests only in sleep. Now, as the brain is the course of the voluntary part of respiration, if the brain be not well rested and renewed by sleep, the breathing is deficient, and the life and heat are both low. I never knew one attacked with cholera, in a sound sleep, in a warm bed or room.

"The soundest sleep is the earliest—sound sleep depends upon good blood, and the blood is best just after the last meal is digested. Consequently, the earliest part of the sleep is the best and soundest. Those who mean to have good health, should go to bed early.—There are some persons in society, whose employments are, unhappily, at night. Let such persons be aware of their danger, and not add to it, by being cold, or taking poison.

"Good blood is made of good food. Food is anything which can become blood. Alcohol cannot—therefore it is not food.—That which is not food, is either inoperative, or a poison. Alcohol is poison. Alcohol decomposes the blood—therefore prepares for disease. The man who drinks, is as ready for the cholera as oiled paper is for taking fire. Nine-tenths of all that were attacked drank.

"Dirty, clammy skin, prevents good circulation in that large part of the body. None breathe well with bad skins. If every person were cleansed, body and clothing daily, few cases of cholera would occur. All the people who took it without infection, were dirty.

"A regular time for wholsome meals, and a regular opportunity for the bowels and bladder, are indispensable. How strange that people can remember their stomachs three times a day, and cannot remember their bowels once. Take your own time, morning, noon, or night, but take it. If you are given to looseness, drink clove tea. If you are given to constipation, take fruits, dried or fresh, vegetables, and sweets.

"A body and mind, well employed, and a consciousness of being right before man and God, are of as much value as many medicines. Tranquility of mind, and rectitude of feeling, give a healthful vigor to the brain, and, therefore, improve the breathing, and by consequence, the condition of the blood. All the cholera patients, except those who took it by contagion, were immoral and vicious.

"I am afraid to send you more this time, lest I weary you. The Divine Being keeps us in health by laws, not by medicine. He punishes us by laws, when we offend—and He heals us by laws when we cease to offend. Would that we all knew and obeyed his laws. We should not have much cause to fear the cholera."

THE LIGHT OF KNOWLEDGE.

Knowledge cannot be stolen by or from you. It cannot be sold or bought. You may be poor, and be troubled by the sheriff on the journey of life. He may break into your house and sell your furniture at auction; drive away your ewe lamb, and leave you homeless and penniless; but he cannot lay the law's hand upon the jewelry of your mind. This cannot be taken for debt; neither can you give it away, though you give enough to fill a million minds. I will tell you what such giving is like.

Suppose now that there were no sun nor stars in the heavens, nor anything that shone in the black brown of night, and suppose that a lighted lamp were put in your hand, which should burn wasteless and clear amid all the tempests that should brood upon this lower world. Suppose, next, that there were a thousand millions of human beings on the earth with you, each holding in his hand an unlighted lamp, with the same oil as yours, and capable of giving as much light. Suppose these millions should come, one by one, to you, and light each his lamp at yours, would they rob you of any light? Would less of it shine on your own path? Would your own lamp burn more dimly for lighting a thousand millions?

Thus it is, young friends. In getting rich in things which perish in the using, men have often obeyed to the letter that first commandment of selfishsess: 'Keep what you can get, and get what you can.' In filling your minds with the wealth of knowledge, you must reverse this rule, and obey this law: 'Keep what you give, and give what you can.' The fountain of knowledge is filled by its outlets. You can learn nothing which you do not teach; you can acquire nothing in intellectual wealth except by giving. In the illustration of the lamps which I have given you was not the light of the thousand millions which were lighted at yours, as much your light as if it all came from your solitary lamp? Did you not dispel darkness by giving away light?

Remember this parable, and whenever you fall in with an unlighted mind in your walk of life, drop a kind and glowing thought upon it from yours, and set it burning in the world with a light that shall shine in some dark place to beam on the benighted.

ELIHU BURRITT.

☞ We crave pardon of President STRANG—we should most pos-i-tive-ly have kept silent, had we thought our article would have called forth such a burst of small thunder from the Great I Am, JAMES J. Strang. As far as the Col. is concerned in the matter of which the Herald speaks, we will exonerate him from all part in the same.—The associate editor of the Standard stands accountable for all those outrageous sayings. The senior editor might have taken a different course had he been at home—the junior has no sympathy with the Herald, or its impostor, nor with the people, as religionists, over which Mr. STRANG is called to preside—we believe them to be a poor deluded set of fanatics, without one particle of foundation for the creed they put forth. As for the other insinuations about the paper, &c., we would merely say—when we become so reduced in the scale of being as to become a nuisance to ourself, we may advocate Mormonism, but even then we presume we should prefer some other occupation.—Wisconsin Standard.

☞ A curious way, Mr. Standard, to "crave pardon of President Strang" for telling fibs on him, and immediately after heaping upon him incongruous epithets. The wise man says: "He that uttereth a slander is a fool," and "though thou shouldest bray a fool in a mortar among wheat with a pestle, yet will not his foolishness depart from him." We would inform the "Standard" that we are not sustained by "sympathy," so that the want of his will make no particular difference. We would also remind him that nick names and beliefs are not arguments, although they may be swallowed as such by those who float with the popular current, be what it may. Men of sound and independent minds want something more substantial. If the junior editor of the "Standard" believes Mormonism to be a humbug, let him show it to be such by fair reasoning and sound argument. If he can do so, he can do what the combined wisdom and learning of this generation have as yet failed in. Mormonism is truth, and we are not surprised that our neighbor, with his present feelings, "should prefer" to "advocate" something else more congenial to his propensities.

POETRY.

The saints in Enoch's days
Through tribulations deep
Did walk in wisdoms ways,
And Jesus' laws did keep.

They of one heart and mind,
By no distractions torn,
A peaceful rest did find,
The church of the first born.

If we like them would rise
Triumphant in our day,
Our cross we'll not despise,
But without ceasing pray.

Then Zion will rejoice,
In glory, faith and power,
Cheered by the Savior's voice,
Proclaim the eleventh hour.

C. A. ROGERS.

THE PROSPECT.

The dark clouds which have been hanging over the church for the last three years like Egyptian darkness are almost dispersed. The day has dawned. The time to favor Zion is at hand. She has come out of her afflictions "seven times" purified. The lustful and the ungodly have left, and have gone to seek company with their own kind. The few who have toiled in the midst of poverty, afflictions, false brethren and apostates, have overcome. And it has pleased God to give unto his saints possessions as he gave to Abraham of old. Let the saints continue faithful, and the church will rise, and rise to prevail. All the combined powers of earth and hell cannot stop it. God is on our side if we will only serve him, and if he be on our side who can stand against us? It is the Father's good pleasure to give us the kingdom. Who is willing to possess it?

W.

CORRECT SPEAKING.

We advise all young people to acquire in early life the habit of using good language, both in speaking and writing, and to abandon as early as possible the use of slang words or phrases. The longer they live, the more difficult the acquisition of such language will be; and if the golden age of youth—the proper season for the acquisition of language be passed in its abuse, the unfortunate victim of neglected education, is very probably doomed to talk slang for life. Money is not necessary to procure this education. Every man has it in his power. He has merely to use the language which he reads instead of the slang which he hears—to form his taste from the popular speakers, writers and poets of the country, to treasure up choice phrases in his memory, and habituate himself to their use—avoiding at the same time that pedantic precision and bombast, which bespeak rather the weakness of a vain ambition than the polish of an educated mind. There is no man, however low in rank, who may not materially benefit his financial condition by following this advice, and cultivating at the same time such morals and manners as correspond in character with good words.

NOTICE.

Brother Henry Leonard, of the North Bay branch, N. Y., is suspended and under admonition for refusing to submit to the authorities of the church, and other immoralities.

ALDEN HALE, H. P.

REMITTANCE BY MAIL LAST WEEK FOR THE HERALD.

David Powell,	$1,00 to	Vol. IV.	No. 15
Ethan Griffith,	2,00 "	"	34
Wm. Snell,	2,50 "	"	52

the jewelry of your mind. This cannot be taken for debt; neither can you give it away, though you give enough to fill a million minds. I will tell you what such giving is like.

Suppose now that there were no sun nor stars in the heavens, nor anything that shone in the black brown of night, and suppose that a lighted lamp were put in your hand, which should burn wasteless and clear amid all the tempests that should brood upon this lower world. Suppose, next, that there were a thousand millions of human beings on the earth with you, each holding in his hand an unlighted lamp, with the same oil as yours, and capable of giving as much light. Suppose these millions should come, one by one, to you, and light each his lamp at yours, would they rob you of any light? Would less of it shine on your own path? Would your own lamp burn more dimly for lighting a thousand millions?

Thus it is, young friends. In getting rich in things which perish in the using, men have often obeyed to the letter that first commandment of selfishsess: 'Keep what you can get, and get what you can.' In filling your minds with the wealth of knowledge, you must reverse this rule, and obey this law: 'Keep what you give, and give what you can.' The fountain of knowledge is filled by its outlets. You can learn nothing which you do not teach; you can acquire nothing in intellectual wealth except by giving. In the illustration of the lamps which I have given you was not the light of the thousand millions which were lighted at yours, as much your light as if it all came from your solitary lamp? Did you not dispel darkness by giving away light?

Remember this parable, and whenever you fall in with an unlighted mind in your walk of life, drop a kind and glowing thought upon it from yours, and set it burning in the world with a light that shall shine in some dark place to beam on the benighted.

ELIHU BURRITT.

☞ We crave pardon of President STRANG—we should most pos-i-tive-ly have kept silent, had we thought our article would have called forth such a burst of small thunder from the Great I Am, JAMES J. Strang. As far as the Col. is concerned in the matter of which the Herald speaks, we will exonerate him from all part in the same.—The associate editor of the Standard stands accountable for all those outrageous sayings. The senior editor might have taken a different course had he been at home—the junior has no sympathy with the Herald, or its impostor, nor with the people, as religionists, over which Mr. STRANG is called to preside—we believe them to be a poor deluded set of fanatics, without one particle of foundation for the creed they put forth. As for the other insinuations about the paper, &c., we would merely say—when we become so reduced in the scale of being as to become a nuisance to ourself, we may advocate Mormonism, but even then we presume we should prefer some other occupation.—Wisconsin Standard.

☞ A curious way, Mr. Standard, to "crave pardon of President Strang" for telling fibs on him, and immediately after heaping upon him incongruous epithets. The wise man says: "He that uttereth a slander is a fool," and "though thou shouldest bray a fool in a mortar among wheat with a pestle, yet will not his foolishness depart from him." We would inform the "Standard" that we are not sustained by "sympathy," so that the want of his will make no particular difference. We would also remind him that nick names and beliefs are not arguments, although they may be swallowed as such by those who float with the popular current, be what it may. Men of sound and independent minds want something more substantial. If the junior editor of the "Standard" believes Mormonism to be a humbug, let him show it to be such by fair reasoning and sound argument. If he can do so, he can do what the combined wisdom and learning of this generation have as yet failed in. Mormonism is truth, and we are not surprised that our neighbor, with his present feelings, "should prefer" to "advocate" something else more congenial to his propensities.

POETRY.

The saints in Enoch's days
Through tribulations deep
Did walk in wisdoms ways,
And Jesus' laws did keep.

They of one heart and mind,
By no distractions torn,
A peaceful rest did find,
The church of the first born.

If we like them would rise
Triumphant in our day,
Our cross we'll not despise,
But without ceasing pray.

Then Zion will rejoice,
In glory, faith and power,
Cheered by the Savior's voice,
Proclaim the eleventh hour. C. A. ROGERS.

THE PROSPECT.

The dark clouds which have been hanging over the church for the last three years like Egyptian darkness are almost dispersed. The day has dawned. The time to favor Zion is at hand. She has come out of her afflictions "seven times" purified. The lustful and the ungodly have left, and have gone to seek company with their own kind. The few who have toiled in the midst of poverty, afflictions, false brethren and apostates, have overcome. And it has pleased God to give unto his saints possessions as he gave to Abraham of old. Let the saints continue faithful, and the church will rise, and rise to prevail. All the combined powers of earth and hell cannot stop it. God is on our side if we will only serve him, and if he be on our side who can stand against us? It is the Father's good pleasure to give us the kingdom. Who is willing to possess it?

W.

CORRECT SPEAKING.

We advise all young people to acquire in early life the habit of using good language, both in speaking and writing, and to abandon as early as possible the use of slang words or phrases. The longer they live, the more difficult the acquisition of such language will be; and if the golden age of youth—the proper season for the acquisition of language be passed in its abuse, the unfortunate victim of neglected education, is very probably doomed to talk slang for life. Money is not necessary to procure this education. Every man has it in his power. He has merely to use the language which he reads instead of the slang which he hears—to form his taste from the popular speakers, writers and poets of the country, to treasure up choice phrases in his memory, and habituate himself to their use—avoiding at the same time that pedantic precision and bombast, which bespeak rather the weakness of a vain ambition than the polish of an educated mind. There is no man, however low in rank, who may not materially benefit his financial condition by following this advice, and cultivating at the same time such morals and manners as correspond in character with good words.

NOTICE.

Brother Henry Leonard, of the North Bay branch, N. Y., is suspended and under admonition for refusing to submit to the authorities of the church, and other immoralities.

ALDEN HALE, H. P.

REMITTANCE BY MAIL LAST WEEK FOR THE HERALD.

David Powell,	$1,00	to	Vol. IV.	No. 15
Ethan Griffith,	2,00	"	"	34
Wm. Snell,	2,50	"	"	52

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 9.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. MAY 17, 1849. [WHOLE No. 125.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

"Behold the kingdom of God is within you." Luke xvii. 21.

The popular exposition of the preceding text is, "that the kingdom of God is in the heart." But upon examination we find nothing that could be more unsound. That we may have a proper understanding of its connection we will insert the whole paragraph:—"And when he (Christ) was demanded of the Pharisees when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them, and said, The kingdom of God cometh not by observation. Neither shall they say, Lo here! or lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you." Luke xvii. 20, 21.

From the connection it plainly appears to be the conclusion of Christ's answer to the Pharisees' question, "when the kingdom of God should come." It is, in fact, the answer itself. The accompanying words being simply expletive. This being the fact, it does away with the popular exposition, that the kingdom of God is in the heart; for the Pharisees were unbelievers, consequently the kingdom of God could not be within them in this sense. We presume there is no one however hackneyed in this exposition that will contend that the kingdom of God could be in their hearts, unless they were "converted." That they were not, is evident from the fact of their asking the question, "when the kingdom of God should come." If they had been, according to this exposition the kingdom of God would have been in their hearts, and of course they would not have asked it. Having shown the utter fallacy of this exposition, we will give another one in short.

The first question that presents itself, is, what is the kingdom of God? It is generally admitted that a kingdom is a people or nation, governed by a king. If this be correct, the kingdom of God is the people or nation who is governed by God. Such were the Israelites of old. God lead them up out of the land of Egypt, by the hand of his servant Moses. By the power of God their enemies were overthrown. Although on account of their transgressions they were put under a law of curse, yet it was by his power they were established as a nation on the land of promise. By his authority they were governed. It was by his word that kings were made and unmade. And by his word that they made war and proclaimed peace. God continued to govern them until they utterly refused to submit to his government, then he took his royal authority from them and left them to follow their own ways. After it was taken away they no longer existed as an independent nation, but enjoyed the possessions God had given them, by paying tribute to other nations. Yet they looked forward anxiously to the time when the Messiah should come and restore unto them the kingdom. But they had no immediate assurance that it was near at hand, until the days of Herod the king, when John the Baptist came preaching in the wilderness of Judea, saying: "Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Testifying also of one who should come after him, mightier than he. Of whom he said, "whose shoes I am not worthy to bear; he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire; whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat unto the garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire. Matt. iii. 11, 12.

That John might recognize the Messiah, and bear witness of him, he that sent him said: "Upon whom thou shalt see the spirit descending and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost." John i. 33. So great was the success of John's preaching that it is said, there "went out to him Jerusalem and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins." Matt. iii. 5, 6. By the history we learn that Jesus also went from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan. "And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens opened, and the spirit like a dove descending upon him. And there came a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Mark i. 10, 11. And John bore record of him, that he was the Son of God. John i. 34.

Jesus was the son of Joseph, and of the tribe of Judah in the royal line. The angel Gabriel said of him, before he was born, that "he shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 32, 33. The prophet Isaiah says: "The government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." Isa. ix. 6, 7.

By these scriptures, and many more which might be quoted, it clearly appears that he was lawful heir to the throne of David, and the king of Israel by right divine. After his baptism he commenced his public ministry, traveling and preaching the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, healing the sick, &c., and while so engaged "the Pharisees demanded of him when the kingdom of God should come." In other words, when the royal authority should come to Israel. "He answered them, the kingdom of God cometh not with observation. Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you." The same as to say, "the kingdom of God cometh not with that pomp and splendor that you expect, but so much unobserved that they should not say lo here, or lo there, for, behold, the king and his officers holding the royal priesthood or authority to rule and govern the kingdom of God are in your midst." The embryo of the kingdom was among the people, but they would not receive it. Although multitudes received the preaching of John, and were elated with the glad tidings that the kingdom of God was at hand, yet when it came they would not receive it, because it came so different from their expectations.—They rejected their king and crucified him. Christ, perceiving what they would do, said: "The kingdom of God shall be taken

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 9.] VOREE, WIS., THURSDAY, MAY 17, 1849. [WHOLE No. 125.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

"Behold the kingdom of God is within you." Luke xvii. 21.

The popular exposition of the preceding text is, "that the kingdom of God is in the heart." But upon examination we find nothing that could be more unsound. That we may have a proper understanding of its connection we will insert the whole paragraph:—"And when he (Christ) was demanded of the Pharisees when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them, and said, The kingdom of God cometh not by observation. Neither shall they say, Lo here! or lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you." Luke xvii. 20, 21.

From the connection it plainly appears to be the conclusion of Christ's answer to the Pharisees' question, "when the kingdom of God should come." It is, in fact, the answer itself. The accompanying words being simply expletive. This being the fact, it does away with the popular exposition, that the kingdom of God is in the heart; for the Pharisees were unbelievers, consequently the kingdom of God could not be within them in this sense. We presume there is no one however hackneyed in this exposition that will contend that the kingdom of God could be in their hearts, unless they were "converted." That they were not, is evident from the fact of their asking the question, "when the kingdom of God should come." If they had been, according to this exposition the kingdom of God would have been in their hearts, and of course they would not have asked it. Having shown the utter fallacy of this exposition, we will give another one in short.

The first question that presents itself, is, what is the kingdom of God? It is generally admitted that a kingdom is a people or nation, governed by a king. If this be correct, the kingdom of God is the people or nation who is governed by God. Such were the Israelites of old. God lead them up out of the land of Egypt, by the hand of his servant Moses. By the power of God their enemies were overthrown. Although on account of their transgressions they were put under a law of curse, yet it was by his power they were established as a nation on the land of promise. By his authority they were governed. It was by his word that kings were made and unmade. And by his word that they made war and proclaimed peace. God continued to govern them until they utterly refused to submit to his government, then he took his royal authority from them and left them to follow their own ways. After it was taken away they no longer existed as an independent nation, but enjoyed the possessions God had given them, by paying tribute to other nations. Yet they looked forward anxiously to the time when the Messiah should come and restore unto them the kingdom. But they had no immediate assurance that it was near at hand, until the days of Herod the king, when John the Baptist came preaching in the wilderness of Judea, saying: "Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Testifying also of one who should come after him, mightier than he. Of whom he said, "whose shoes I am not worthy to bear; he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire; whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat unto the garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire. Matt. iii. 11, 12.

That John might recognize the Messiah, and bear witness of him, he that sent him said: "Upon whom thou shalt see the spirit descending and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost." John i. 33. So great was the success of John's preaching that it is said, there "went out to him Jerusalem and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins." Matt. iii. 5, 6. By the history we learn that Jesus also went from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan. "And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens opened, and the spirit like a dove descending upon him. And there came a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Mark i. 10, 11. And John bore record of him, that he was the Son of God. John i. 34.

Jesus was the son of Joseph, and of the tribe of Judah in the royal line. The angel Gabriel said of him, before he was born, that "he shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 32, 33. The prophet Isaiah says: "The government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." Isa. ix. 6, 7.

By these scriptures, and many more which might be quoted, it clearly appears that he was lawful heir to the throne of David, and the king of Israel by right divine. After his baptism he commenced his public ministry, traveling and preaching the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, healing the sick, &c., and while so engaged "the Pharisees demanded of him when the kingdom of God should come." In other words, when the royal authority should come to Israel. "He answered them, the kingdom of God cometh not with observation. Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you." The same as to say, "the kingdom of God cometh not with that pomp and splendor that you expect, but so much unobserved that they should not say lo here, or lo there, for, behold, the king and his officers holding the royal priesthood or authority to rule and govern the kingdom of God are in your midst." The embryo of the kingdom was among the people, but they would not receive it. Although multitudes received the preaching of John, and were elated with the glad tidings that the kingdom of God was at hand, yet when it came they would not receive it, because it came so different from their expectations.—They rejected their king and crucified him. Christ, perceiving what they would do, said: "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

AN OBJECTION ANSWERED.—Some may still contend for the common exposition, because Paul said: "The kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." Rom. xiv. 17. Very good. The Apostle used the prominent attributes of the kingdom for the kingdom itself. A figure of speech called by grammarians a synecdoche or comprehension. So prominent attributes are they of the kingdom, that they are found no where else. There righteousness is executed: peace and joy in the Holy Ghost enjoyed. W.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.—No. 4.

THE START.

On board Propeller "Lady of the Lake," Lake Mich.,
Thursday evening, April 19th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—After numerous delays and petty annoyances, we are finally on the wave, speeding for Beaver. We had engaged our passage on the Propeller Troy, which has been daily expected down from Chicago, but the wind has continued so high that it is only with difficulty and danger that any craft can lay aside of the pier. This morning the agent reported the Troy in the offing. We got ready in hot haste to go on board, as we had done once before.—She did not come in, and it is uncertain whether she was seen. Afternoon she was reported as laying by at Milwaukee. Towards evening the agent informed us that he had telegraphed to her to delay at Milwaukee for us, and contracted for our passage to the Troy on the "Lady of the Lake," which was laying in the harbor at Racine. We accordingly went aboard, in haste, and at considerable expense for drayage, wharfage, &c., thirty eight in number, and are now on our way, over a rough sea, in a small unsteady rolling Propeller, neither a sea worthy craft, nor, so far as I can observe, a gentlemanly officer on board.

Nearly all the company are sea sick. For the first time in my life I am strongly predisposed to it, & have walked the deck with my eyes to the mast head, till I am tired out, to avoid it. The weather is cold, and the wind high. The women and children sleep on the deck, pretty well closed in to be sure, but without fire; and if I sleep at all it will be on a woodpile, by the side of which I write this with a dim light and most unsteady position. I have met more difficulties than I usually do thus far, and if I had known any such word as fail, should have given up the expedition before to-day.—The company have some of them lost heart; and had they known the difficulties that I have encountered there is not more than two or three that would not.

STOP AT MILWAUKEE.

Friday morning, April 20th,—On the pier.—A little before midnight we arrived at Milwaukee, cold, tired and nearly all helpless with sea sickness. In hot haste we were removed from the boat to the wharf, a spring pier, sixty rods out in the Lake, loosely covered with plank, through which the water occasionally dashed up, and a cold northeaster sweeping over it furiously. Immediately on arriving Capt. Wilson, of the "Lady," imformed us that the Troy had already gone, and though he had contracted expressly with the agent of the Troy to carry us at his expense, without cost to us, and knew that we had paid our fare, while our goods were being removed from the boat he seized upon a large portion of them, and detained them till I had paid him $14,00. This extortion was made with perfectly cool effrontery, as though he was well acquainted with robbery, and perfectly at home in the business. He did not even pretend to any excuse for it, but merely insisted that I could easier submit to the extortion than go to law to get rid of it, and he would not give up the goods without it. He robbed us! God reward him according to his works. There is another day coming.

A NIGHT IN MILWAUKEE.

After standing and delivering a lecture to Capt. Wilson I visited two other boats, and engaged a passage up to Beaver on one of them, the new Propeller "Sciota;" returned and spread beds on the wharf for the women and children, and received a message from the wharfinger to walk up and pay him $8,75, for staying with a crowd of women and children upon a few naked planks of his pier half the night, in as severe a northeaster as April ever sends us. After an hours higgling, in consideration that we had been badly used, and that I was an editor, and could give him a first rate puff, he let me off on payment of $4,00.

THE PUFF.

In justice to Mr. B. Humphrey, of the north pier, at Milwaukee, I feel bound to inform the public through the Herald that his wharfinger only took from me the sum of four dollars, for the privilege of standing or laying on the floor of his wharf some six hours, without shelter, and the thermometer below freezing point.

OFF AGAIN.

Before sun rise the Propeller Sciota came along side, and we commenced going aboard. Now we are on the waves again, and though the sea rolls high, are making good progress. The wind has shifted and is somewhat in our favor, and has blown down the swells, so that though it was with some difficulty that the Propeller lay by the wharf for us to come on board, we now have a tolerably pleasant passage. Indeed we are all so utterly tired of the annoyances we have suffered, that anything which does not involve the thought of abuse and positive robbery is pleasant to us. We are a happy company, bounding over the waves, not without some privations, but with high hopes.

SHEBOYAGAN.

Arrived at Sheboyagan, fifty miles north of Milwaukee, before noon. Sheboyagan is a considerable town, containing perhaps 2,000 inhabitants. It was laid out about the same time with Racine and Southport, but had very little growth till three years since, when it commenced a rapid course of improvement. It is in the timbered country; but thirty or forty miles back commence the prairie and openings, and one of the best wheat countries in the world. Sheboyagan will be the market for this religion many years, and though destitute of a harbor, will make a place of great trade. It lays on rising ground, and has a fine appearance from the water. Off, off again. O'er the waves we bound, happy in the thought that the next land we stop on will be the inheritance of the saints. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES J. STRANG.

For the Gospel Herald.

Beaver Island, Friday, April 27th, 1849.

DEAR BRO. COOPER:—I write to inform you that I am still on the Island. I arrived last Saturday, in company with President Strang, and some thirty odd others. The brethren on the Island received us gladly, and we were soon provided with places to stop among them until houses can be built. During my stop here we have explored part of the Island, and find it as good or better than it has been represented. There is plenty of sugar maple and beech timber on this Island, and as handsome as I ever saw. The land is also good for farming purposes, except immediately at or about the harbor and the shores of the Island, which are sandy and rocky.—There is also plenty of cedar for posts and rails for fences and other purposes, and as handsome as grows in any part of the world.—There is also some balsam of fir, very fine, and some white and Norway pine, of a good quality, and some oak.

I have visited many of the brethren and friends here, and find them all well pleased with the location. Wood sells at $1,50 per cord to the boats which stop at this port on their way up and down from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

An Objection Answered.—Some may still contend for the common exposition, because Paul said: "The kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." Rom. xiv. 17. Very good. The Apostle used the prominent attributes of the kingdom for the kingdom itself. A figure of speech called by grammarians a synecdoche or comprehension. So prominent attributes are they of the kingdom, that they are found no where else. There righteousness is executed: peace and joy in the Holy Ghost enjoyed.

W.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.—No. 4.

THE START.

On board Propeller "Lady of the Lake," Lake Mich., Thursday evening, April 19th, 1849.

Dear Frank:—After numerous delays and petty annoyances, we are finally on the wave, speeding for Beaver. We had engaged our passage on the Propeller Troy, which has been daily expected down from Chicago, but the wind has continued so high that it is only with difficulty and danger that any craft can lay aside of the pier. This morning the agent reported the Troy in the offing. We got ready in hot haste to go on board, as we had done once before.—She did not come in, and it is uncertain whether she was seen. Afternoon she was reported as laying by at Milwaukee. Towards evening the agent informed us that he had telegraphed to her to delay at Milwaukee for us, and contracted for our passage to the Troy on the "Lady of the Lake," which was laying in the harbor at Racine. We accordingly went aboard, in haste, and at considerable expense for drayage, wharfage, &c., thirty eight in number, and are now on our way, over a rough sea, in a small unsteady rolling Propeller, neither a sea worthy craft, nor, so far as I can observe, a gentlemanly officer on board.

Nearly all the company are sea sick. For the first time in my life I am strongly predisposed to it, & have walked the deck with my eyes to the mast head, till I am tired out, to avoid it. The weather is cold, and the wind high. The women and children sleep on the deck, pretty well closed in to be sure, but without fire; and if I sleep at all it will be on a woodpile, by the side of which I write this with a dim light and most unsteady position. I have met more difficulties than I usually do thus far, and if I had known any such word as fail, should have given up the expedition before to-day.—The company have some of them lost heart; and had they known the difficulties that I have encountered there is not more than two or three that would not.

STOP AT MILWAUKEE.

Friday morning, April 20th,—On the pier.—A little before midnight we arrived at Milwaukee, cold, tired and nearly all helpless with sea sickness. In hot haste we were removed from the boat to the wharf, a spring pier, sixty rods out in the Lake, loosely covered with plank, through which the water occasionally dashed up, and a cold northeaster sweeping over it furiously. Immediately on arriving Capt. Wilson, of the "Lady," imformed us that the Troy had already gone, and though he had contracted expressly with the agent of the Troy to carry us at his expense, without cost to us, and knew that we had paid our fare, while our goods were being removed from the boat he seized upon a large portion of them, and detained them till I had paid him $14,00. This extortion was made with perfectly cool effrontery, as though he was well acquainted with robbery, and perfectly at home in the business. He did not even pretend to any excuse for it, but merely insisted that I could easier submit to the extortion than go to law to get rid of it, and he would not give up the goods without it. He robbed us! God reward him according to his works. There is another day coming.

A NIGHT IN MILWAUKEE.

After standing and delivering a lecture to Capt. Wilson I visited two other boats, and engaged a passage up to Beaver on one of them, the new Propeller "Sciota;" returned and spread beds on the wharf for the women and children, and received a message from the wharfinger to walk up and pay him $8,75, for staying with a crowd of women and children upon a few naked planks of his pier half the night, in as severe a northeaster as April ever sends us. After an hours higgling, in consideration that we had been badly used, and that I was an editor, and could give him a first rate puff, he let me off on payment of $4,00.

THE PUFF.

In justice to Mr. B. Humphrey, of the north pier, at Milwaukee, I feel bound to inform the public through the Herald that his wharfinger only took from me the sum of four dollars, for the privilege of standing or laying on the floor of his wharf some six hours, without shelter, and the thermometer below freezing point.

OFF AGAIN.

Before sun rise the Propeller Sciota came along side, and we commenced going aboard. Now we are on the waves again, and though the sea rolls high, are making good progress. The wind has shifted and is somewhat in our favor, and has blown down the swells, so that though it was with some difficulty that the Propeller lay by the wharf for us to come on board, we now have a tolerably pleasant passage. Indeed we are all so utterly tired of the annoyances we have suffered, that anything which does not involve the thought of abuse and positive robbery is pleasant to us. We are a happy company, bounding over the waves, not without some privations, but with high hopes.

SHEBOYAGAN.

Arrived at Sheboyagan, fifty miles north of Milwaukee, before noon. Sheboyagan is a considerable town, containing perhaps 2,000 inhabitants. It was laid out about the same time with Racine and Southport, but had very little growth till three years since, when it commenced a rapid course of improvement. It is in the timbered country; but thirty or forty miles back commence the prairie and openings, and one of the best wheat countries in the world. Sheboyagan will be the market for this religion many years, and though destitute of a harbor, will make a place of great trade. It lays on rising ground, and has a fine appearance from the water. Off, off again. O'er the waves we bound, happy in the thought that the next land we stop on will be the inheritance of the saints. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES J. STRANG.

For the Gospel Herald.

Beaver Island, Friday, April 27th, 1849.

Dear Bro. Cooper:—I write to inform you that I am still on the Island. I arrived last Saturday, in company with President Strang, and some thirty odd others. The brethren on the Island received us gladly, and we were soon provided with places to stop among them until houses can be built. During my stop here we have explored part of the Island, and find it as good or better than it has been represented. There is plenty of sugar maple and beech timber on this Island, and as handsome as I ever saw. The land is also good for farming purposes, except immediately at or about the harbor and the shores of the Island, which are sandy and rocky.—There is also plenty of cedar for posts and rails for fences and other purposes, and as handsome as grows in any part of the world.—There is also some balsam of fir, very fine, and some white and Norway pine, of a good quality, and some oak.

I have visited many of the brethren and friends here, and find them all well pleased with the location. Wood sells at $1,50 per cord to the boats which stop at this port on their way up and down the lakes, and the wood business makes employment for a good number of hands now, and it will increase yearly. Wood choppers get fifty cents per cord, cash, for chopping wood, and the timber is about the right size to make it a good business. Any smart boy, of a dozen or thirteen years of age, can chop a cord of steamboat wood in a day, and do it easy. They cut the wood a little short of four feet, and do not split it very fine.

The fishing business employs a good many hands, and is a good business also. If the business of growing potatoes here was entered into with more energy and far more extensively, it would still be a profitable business. I have eaten potatoes grown on the Island, which were kept in a pit or hole out of doors, covered first with hemlock boughs and then with dirt, and was informed that not one of the potatoes was found to be affected with rot or any disease whatever, and I have not eaten as good since I left the Isle of Man in 1841. I ate as good there, but no better. And better maple sugar cannot be made or manufactured in any country than is manufactured on this and the adjoining Islands, both by the whites and also by the Lamanites. Last Monday I passed through a Lamanite sugar works, and had expected or anticipated a pleasant visit with them. But, Oh! what was my disappointment, when passing through their bush for some fifty or sixty rods, and observing on either side of the foot path, as far as the eye could reach, the birch bark vessels full of sugar water and running over; and on arriving at a wigwam, instead of finding the Lamanite men, women and children capable of conversing with us on any matter of moment to them or ourselves, we found the most of them had learned, not only how to make sugar from maple trees, but had learned how to exchange their sugar for fire water, and had been trafficking with the whites and obtained a sufficiency of the "critter," not only to put a full stop to their work, but to put some of them to sleep and others to fighting and quarreling. And finding our Lamanite brethren in that situation, we felt to mourn for them, and also to remember in our prayers those who had done so wickedly as to sell poison to them, when we should learn who they were.

There are two stores at the harbor, which are pretty well supplied with all things necessary. All with whom I have conversed say that they have wanted for nothing since coming to the Island, and no industrious person need want for any of the comforts of life on this land. Indeed it is just the place for the saints to gather to, and it would be well for the brethren who have capital to come on immediately with as little delay as possible, and come prepared to put up a good steam saw mill at the harbor; it will be good property here, and is greatly needed. And it would be well for the brethren who come to the Island to settle, to prepare to furnish a good assortment of goods, such as are wanted on the islands, and make their calculations to sell as cheap as any establishment in the State, and a good business can be done in that line. A word to the wise is, or should be, sufficient. We want a good chair maker here.—That will be a good business in this place. And mechanics of nearly all kinds would do well here. A good boot and shoe maker is wanted here. Come, then, my brethren who are scattered abroad, gather up your families and property and come up to the places that God has appointed for the saints to gather to, and take an active part in preparing places of safety against the day when the wrath of God is poured out upon the wicked.

I expect to leave here in a day or two for Louisburg, Ohio, by way of Detroit, where I expect to tarry until our Conference on the Island in July next, when I expect to be here, and then build a house for my family, and move them on this season. The Island is organized into a township, with the town officers and a post office appointed here, called the Beaver Island post office, and a side mail weekly from Mackinac will run to and from the Island, so that letters and papers can be directed to Beaver now, via. Mackinac, Mich. We learned by Capt. Snow, of the schooner Telegraph, last evening, that a company of the brethren from Chicago of about fifteen families would start for the Island in a few days. Capt. Snow came in night before last, and is still here wind bound. Bro. Samuel Graham, Nathan Foster and myself will start together I expect, and it may be we shall go with Capt. Snow to Detroit. The brethren who came with us are pleased with the Island, and are all at work preparing to build houses, &c. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES BLAKESLEE.

For the Gospel Herald.

Beaver Island, Mich., April 28th, 1849.

To the Brethren in Koskonong and Porter:—Having stopped several days on Beaver on my way east, I thought I would write you my views of the importance of gathering up to the places appointed for the salvation of God's people. I am much pleased with this land, much better than I anticipated. The brethren here are industrious and united in the cause of Zion, and must prevail, for the Lord has spoken it. I have explored to the centre of the Island. The timber is very beautiful. The hard timbered land, which is about two-thirds of the Island, is very good for farming. The remainder is timbered with pine and cedar of the best quality. This is a good place for the rich and the poor, the widow and fatherless, freedom and equal rights to all the saints throughout the world, and no deaths from starvation. Thanks be to God. Now, brethren, you that can gather up with me when I return from the east for my family, which will be in the course of two months, I should be glad of your company.

NATHAN FOSTER.

Beaver Island, Sunday afternoon, May 6th, 1849.

Dear Bro. Cooper:—I have a few moments to spend in writing to you. I had expected to have been off before now, but last Sunday about noon three of the brethren from Pittsburgh, Pa., arrived, namely: James Smith, James M. Greig and John Prince, or, rather, Bro. Greig came from Brighton. Bro. Strang, myself and the brethren above named spent the time last week exploring the Island. The brethren from Pittsburgh have made a location here at the bay, and are now going to return home as soon as possible after their families and effects, and to return immediately to the Island to commence operations. They intend to have a good steam saw mill in operation within three months from this time at Beaver harbor. They are well pleased with the Island in all respects, and are getting fat and hearty, and so are all of us who came on this spring. A contented mind and a clear conscience, with as good a climate and as good fish and potatoes and pure water, and other good things as are to be had here, will make any people fat. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES BLAKESLEE.

☞ We call the attention of our readers to the following extract, from Roger's Newspaper Writings, page 285, which exhibits the baneful effects of property monopoly in bold relief. Read it for yourselves:—

PROPERTY.

I hazard the opinion here, that mankind have got to abandon it, in practice and in idea, or they never can live peaceably or honestly. And what is more they cannot have a living. There cannot be enough raised on the earth, under any conceivable degree of cultivation, to feed the race, and keep off starvation, on the property system. If the whole earth's surface were a garden, there could'nt be. Vast multitudes would have to starve to death, and nearly all the rest would live in fear of it—and the few who didn't feel ap[prehen]sive enough, of coming to want, to lead them to occ[upy] their minds the lakes, and the wood business makes employment for a good number of hands now, and it will increase yearly. Wood choppers get fifty cents per cord, cash, for chopping wood, and the timber is about the right size to make it a good business. Any smart boy, of a dozen or thirteen years of age, can chop a cord of steamboat wood in a day, and do it easy. They cut the wood a little short of four feet, and do not split it very fine.

The fishing business employs a good many hands, and is a good business also. If the business of growing potatoes here was entered into with more energy and far more extensively, it would still be a profitable business. I have eaten potatoes grown on the Island, which were kept in a pit or hole out of doors, covered first with hemlock boughs and then with dirt, and was informed that not one of the potatoes was found to be affected with rot or any disease whatever, and I have not eaten as good since I left the Isle of Man in 1841. I ate as good there, but no better. And better maple sugar cannot be made or manufactured in any country than is manufactured on this and the adjoining Islands, both by the whites and also by the Lamanites. Last Monday I passed through a Lamanite sugar works, and had expected or anticipated a pleasant visit with them. But, Oh! what was my disappointment, when passing through their bush for some fifty or sixty rods, and observing on either side of the foot path, as far as the eye could reach, the birch bark vessels full of sugar water and running over: and on arriving at a wigwam, instead of finding the Lamanite men, women and children capable of conversing with us on any matter of moment to them or ourselves, we found the most of them had learned, not only how to make sugar from maple trees, but had learned how to exchange their sugar for fire water, and had been trafficking with the whites and obtained a sufficiency of the "critter;" not only to put a full stop to their work, but to put some of them to sleep and others to fighting and quarreling. And finding our Lamanite brethren in that situation, we felt to mourn for them, and also to remember in our prayers those who had done so wickedly as to sell poison to them, when we should learn who they were.

There are two stores at the harbor, which are pretty well supplied with all things necessary. All with whom I have conversed say that they have wanted for nothing since coming to the Island, and no industrious person need want for any of the comforts of life on this land. Indeed it is just the place for the saints to gather to, and it would be well for the brethren who have capital to come on immediately with as little delay as possible, and come prepared to put up a good steam saw mill at the harbor; it will be good property here, and is greatly needed. And it would be well for the brethren who come to the Island to settle, to prepare to furnish a good assortment of goods, such as are wanted on the islands, and make their calculations to sell as cheap as any establishment in the State, and a good business can be done in that line. A word to the wise is, or should be, sufficient. We want a good chair maker here.—That will be a good business in this place. And mechanics of nearly all kinds would do well here. A good boot and shoe maker is wanted here. Come, then, my brethren who are scattered abroad, gather up your families and property and come up to the places that God has appointed for the saints to gather to, and take an active part in preparing places of safety against the day when the wrath of God is poured out upon the wicked.

I expect to leave here in a day or two for Louisburg, Ohio, by way of Detroit, where I expect to tarry until our Conference on the Island in July next, when I expect to be here, and then build a house for my family, and move them on this season. The Island is organized into a township, with the town officers and a post office appointed here, called the Beaver Island post office, and a side mail weekly from Mackinac will run to and from the Island, so that letters and papers can be directed to Beaver now, via. Mackinac, Mich. We learned by Capt. Snow, of the schooner Telegraph, last evening, that a company of the brethren from Chicago of about fifteen families would start for the Island in a few days. Capt. Snow came in night before last, and is still here wind bound. Bro. Samuel Graham, Nathan Foster and myself will start together I expect, and it may be we shall go with Capt. Snow to Detroit. The brethren who came with us are pleased with the Island, and are all at work preparing to build houses, &c. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES BLAKESLEE.

For the Gospel Herald.

Beaver Island, Mich., April 28th, 1849.

To the Brethren in Koskonong and Porter:—Having stopped several days on Beaver on my way east, I thought I would write you my views of the importance of gathering up to the places appointed for the salvation of God's people. I am much pleased with this land, much better than I anticipated. The brethren here are industrious and united in the cause of Zion, and must prevail, for the Lord has spoken it. I have explored to the centre of the Island. The timber is very beautiful. The hard timbered land, which is about two-thirds of the Island, is very good for farming. The remainder is timbered with pine and cedar of the best quality. This is a good place for the rich and the poor, the widow and fatherless, freedom and equal rights to all the saints throughout the world, and no deaths from starvation. Thanks be to God. Now, brethren, you that can gather up with me when I return from the east for my family, which will be in the course of two months, I should be glad of your company.

NATHAN FOSTER.

Beaver Island, Sunday afternoon, May 6th, 1849.

Dear Bro. Cooper:—I have a few moments to spend in writing to you. I had expected to have been off before now, but last Sunday about noon three of the brethren from Pittsburgh, Pa., arrived, namely: James Smith, James M. Greig and John Prince, or, rather, Bro. Greig came from Brighton. Bro. Strang, myself and the brethren above named spent the time last week exploring the Island. The brethren from Pittsburgh have made a location here at the bay, and are now going to return home as soon as possible after their families and effects, and to return immediately to the Island to commence operations. They intend to have a good steam saw mill in operation within three months from this time at Beaver harbor. They are well pleased with the Island in all respects, and are getting fat and hearty, and so are all of us who came on this spring. A contented mind and a clear conscience, with as good a climate and as good fish and potatoes and pure water, and other good things as are to be had here, will make any people fat. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES BLAKESLEE.

☞ We call the attention of our readers to the following extract, from Roger's Newspaper Writings, page 285, which exhibits the baneful effects of property monopoly in bold relief. Read it for yourselves:—

PROPERTY.

I hazard the opinion here, that mankind have got to abandon it, in practice and in idea, or they never can live peaceably or honestly. And what is more they cannot have a living. There cannot be enough raised on the earth, under any conceivable degree of cultivation, to feed the race, and keep off starvation, on the property system. If the whole earth's surface were a garden, there could'nt be. Vast multitudes would have to starve to death, and nearly all the rest would live in fear of it—and the few who didn't feel ap[illegible] sive enough, of coming to want, to lead them to occu[illegible]pr[illegible]ren-ply their minds and cares almost constantly, through life in getting a living, would run for relief from their lonely, rare, and strange condition, to suicide, in some of its forms. Property can't give mankind a living, "any way you can fix it." I throw out the idea.

ANOTHER IDEA.

Every human creature is entitled to the means of living—ex officio—from the fact that he is here on the earth. It won't do to starve an infant—or an idiot—or an old man past his labor—or any body else, who from deficiency or incapacity of any kind, can't get a living. If he is put here, or found here—if he is here, he is, ipso facto, (therefore) entitled to comfortable means. He is entitled to it—consequently—whether he earns it or not—for he is so when he cannot possibly earn it. It is not charity (unless of that kind they call good will—the kind friend Paul speaks of, where he puts it ahead of "hope and faith.") It isn't supplies furnished to a pauper. He is entitled to it—no thanks to any body. He is as much entitled to it—free and above board—as a trout is to a brook, or a lark to the blue sky. He can eat and drink, as independently as he can inhale the air or see the light. Why not? If he can't, he'd better not be introduced here. Is it well to put a human "young one" here to die of hunger, or thirst, or even of nakedness, or else be preserved as a pauper? Is this fair earth but a poor house, by creation and intent? Was it made for that—and were those other round things, we see dancing in the firmament to the "music of the spheres"—are they all great shiny Poor Houses, with chance of escape to the few upon their respective surfaces, who can manage to monopolize the wherewithal, and become the overseers of the poor, for their spheres? I don't believe pauperism is the natural condition of humanity. It is its inevitable, as well as actual condition, wherever the means of living are trasmuted into "property," and held as such. The very fact of propertyizing the means of living—will turn mankind—or whatever kind—into paupers, and overseers of the poor. It cannot be avoided. One fair glance at human affairs, shows it has done it for the race, now. One retrospect, through the tube of history, discovers it so in all the past. And no expedient—no varied effort, no shifting of machinery can make it result otherwise. Make air the subject of ownership—of exclusive property—and there isn't enough of it, in our forty-five mile stratum round the earth, for the lungs of ever so scanty a population—much less for the hundreds of millions now panting upon it. Make "property" of sunshine and nine-tenths of the human race would have to grope in unintermitted darkness—and the other tenth have their eye-sight dazzled out by excess of light. Nobody could see by it. And there isn't water enough on the earth, fresh or salt, to give the people drink, if it were made "property." And they would have made it so, if they could have guarded it from common use. And so of the air and sunshine. This hateful, wolfish principle of appropriation wouldn't have left a breath of air, or a ray of light—free to the use of any soul on God's earth, if it could have possibly prevented it. But air and sunshine "won't stay" owned. They can't be appropriated. Ownership has laid hold of humanity itself—and appropriated it, directly and confusedly—body and soul—but it can't grasp the subtile sunshine and the "nimble air," and hold them to self, "heirs, executors and admistrators." If it could, it would, and we should see air sold out by the breath, and sunshine by the ray—for what they could be made to bring. And the mass of mankind wouldn't have a comfortable supply of either, and myriads would die for want of both. There would be as abundant a supply of all the other means of living—necessaries, comforts, elegancies—luxuries if you will—as there is now of air and sunshine and water, were they not made "property." That is, if there were good nature enough and good sense enough in exercise to leave them free. To appropriate them, is to appropriate human life. To make them "property" is to make life property. To make them subject of ownership, of accumulation, of loss, of theft, &c., is to make human life subject of all these. He takes my life, said Shakespeare, who takes the means whereby I live.

I mention the authority, for people think something of him. To appropriate the land and its products—spontaneous or produced—is inevitably to debar mankind a living. I say inevitably. Make these things "property," and there isn't and can't be, enough of them on earth, to keep the people alive, be they many or few. Henry Clay says, "that is property, which the Law makes property." The brilliant creature was driven to say it, to maintain slavery. Law is the author of "property," and it can as legitimately make one common thing, or creature, so, as another. A creature, as legitimately as a thing, and one creature, legitimately as another. A biped, as a quadruped—a man, as an ox. Accordingly custom law has made man "property." It has chosen the Negro. He is docile, and pliant, and will bear being appropriated—alias enslaved. It would enslave, alias appropriate any other class of mankind, that could be kept and used in that state. The law is no respecter of person or thing, in this behalf. May be I am impracticably fine here. May be not. I am sick as death at heart, at this mortal—miserable struggle among mankind for a living.—"Poor devils"—they better never have been born, a million fold—than to run this gauntlet of—after a living—or the bare means of running it! Look about you, and see your squirming neighbors, writhing and twisting like so many angle worms in a fisher's bait-box—or the wriggling animalculæ, seen through a magnifying glass, in a vinegar drop held up to the burning sun. How they look, and how they feel. How base it makes them all—all but a few, rare, eccentric spitits, who, while others have monopolized all the goods, have monopolized all the soul that ought to belong to the human race. I know some it could'nt spoil. But coming from the house to the printing office this morning—even in our small city—I felt dismayed at the aspect of the struggling and panting people—pushed to death for a living! Nobody is safe on the earth amid such a system. Laws as severe as fate can't protect any body. Let it be abandoned—or let this be the winding up of the generation—I say.—Herald of Freedom of March 15, 1844.

A WORD TO APPRENTICES.—Stick to your trade, boys, and learn how to work, if you wish to be independent. There is no more pitiable sight than a half-learned mechanic applying for work. He is always at the foot of the hill, and labor as he may, unless he has become perfect in his trade before he attains the years of majority, he will never become perfect at all, and can calculate on poverty as his portion, with a good deal of safety. Parents, if you wish well to your children, urge them to learn their trades perfectly.

A CHARACTER.—Don't you know, or haven't you seen precisely such a person as this, in the whole course of your life? We have:—He is acquainted with every body, but knows nobody; he is always talking, but never says anything; is perpetually putting some sudden interrogation, and before it is possible for him to understand the answer putting another. His brain is a kind of rag shop, receiving and returning nothing but rubbish.

MARRIED,

In this place, on the 5th inst., by Gilbert Watson, Bishop, Mr. PHINEAS WRIGHT to Miss REBECCA WAGENER, both of Voree.

REMITTANCE BY MAIL LAST WEEK FOR THE HERALD.

Arza Bartholomew,	$2,00 to Vol. III. No. 52
John T. Leatherbury,	2,00 to Vol. IV. No. 52

and cares almost constantly, through life in getting a living, would run for relief from their lonely, rare, and strange condition, to suicide, in some of its forms. Property can't give mankind a living, "any way you can fix it." I throw out the idea.

ANOTHER IDEA.

Every human creature is entitled to the means of living—ex officio—from the fact that he is here on the earth. It won't do to starve an infant—or an idiot—or an old man past his labor—or any body else, who from deficiency or incapacity of any kind, can't get a living. If he is put here, or found here—if he is here, he is, ipso facto, (therefore) entitled to comfortable means. He is entitled to it—consequently—whether he earns it or not—for he is so when he cannot possibly earn it. It is not charity (unless of that kind they call good will—the kind friend Paul speaks of, where he puts it ahead of "hope and faith.") It isn't supplies furnished to a pauper. He is entitled to it—no thanks to any body. He is as much entitled to it—free and above board—as a trout is to a brook, or a lark to the blue sky. He can eat and drink, as independently as he can inhale the air or see the light. Why not? If he can't, he'd better not be introduced here. Is it well to put a human "young one" here to die of hunger, or thirst, or even of nakedness, or else be preserved as a pauper? Is this fair earth but a poor house, by creation and intent? Was it made for that—and were those other round things, we see dancing in the firmament to the "music of the spheres"—are they all great shiny Poor Houses, with chance of escape to the few upon their respective surfaces, who can manage to monopolize the wherewithal, and become the overseers of the poor, for their spheres? I don't believe pauperism is the natural condition of humanity. It is its inevitable, as well as actual condition, wherever the means of living are trasmuted into "property," and held as such. The very fact of propertyizing the means of living—will turn mankind—or whatever kind—into paupers, and overseers of the poor. It cannot be avoided. One fair glance at human affairs, shows it has done it for the race, now. One retrospect, through the tube of history, discovers it so in all the past. And no expedient—no varied effort, no shifting of machinery can make it result otherwise. Make air the subject of ownership—of exclusive property—and there isn't enough of it, in our forty-five mile stratum round the earth, for the lungs of ever so scanty a population—much less for the hundreds of millions now panting upon it. Make "property" of sunshine and nine-tenths of the human race would have to grope in uninterrmitted darkness—and the other tenth have their eye-sight dazzled out by excess of light. Nobody could see by it. And there isn't water enough on the earth, fresh or salt, to give the people drink, if it were made "property." And they would have made it so, if they could have guarded it from common use. And so of the air and sunshine. This hateful, wolfish principle of appropriation wouldn't have left a breath of air, or a ray of light—free to the use of any soul on God's earth, if it could have possibly prevented it. But air and sunshine "won't stay" owned. They can't be appropriated. Ownership has laid hold of humanity itself—and appropriated it, directly and confusedly—body and soul—but it can't grasp the subtile sunshine and the "nimble air," and hold them to self, "heirs, executors and admistrators." If it could, it would, and we should see air sold out by the breath, and sunshine by the ray—for what they could be made to bring. And the mass of mankind wouldn't have a comfortable supply of either, and myriads would die for want of both. There would be as abundant a supply of all the other means of living—necessaries, comforts, elegancies—luxuries if you will—as there is now of air and sunshine and water, were they not made "property." That is, if there were ...d nature enough and good sense enough in exercise to leave ... them free. To appropriate them, is to appropriate human life. To make them "property" is to make life property. To make them subject of ownership, of accumulation, of loss, of theft, &c., is to make human life subject of all these. He takes my life, said Shakespeare, who takes the means whereby I live.

I mention the authority, for people think something of him. To appropriate the land and its products—spontaneous or produced, is inevitably to debar mankind a living. I say inevitably. Make these things "property," and there isn't and can't be, enough of them on earth, to keep the people alive, be they many or few. Henry Clay says, "that is property, which the Law makes property." The brilliant creature was driven to say it, to maintain slavery. Law is the author of "property," and it can as legitimately make one common thing, or creature, so, as another. A creature, as legitimately as a thing, and one creature, legitimately as another. A biped, as a quadruped—a man, as an ox. Accordingly custom law has made man "property." It has chosen the Negro. He is docile, and pliant, and will bear being appropriated—alias enslaved. It would enslave, alias appropriate any other class of mankind, that could be kept and used in that state. The law is no respecter of person or thing, in this behalf. May be I am impracticably fine here. May be not. I am sick as death at heart, at this mortal—miserable struggle among mankind for a living.—"Poor devils"—they better never have been born, a million fold—than to run this gauntlet of—after a living—or the bare means of running it! Look about you, and see your squirming neighbors. writhing and twisting like so many angle worms in a fisher's bait-box—or the wriggling animalculæ, seen through a magnifying glass, in a vinegar drop held up to the burning sun. How they look, and how they feel. How base it makes them all—all but a few, rare, eccentric spitits, who, while others have monopolized all the goods, have monopolized all the soul that ought to belong to the human race. I know some it could'nt spoil. But coming from the house to the printing office this morning—even in our small city—I felt dismayed at the aspect of the struggling and panting people—pushed to death for a living! Nobody is safe on the earth amid such a system. Laws as severe as fate can't protect any body. Let it be abandoned—or let this be the winding up of the generation—I say.—Herald of Freedom of March 15, 1844.

A WORD TO APPRENTICES.—Stick to your trade, boys, and learn how to work, if you wish to be independent. There is no more pitiable sight than a half-learned mechanic applying for work. He is always at the foot of the hill, and labor as he may, unless he has become perfect in his trade before he attains the years of majority, he will never become perfect at all, and can calculate on poverty as his portion, with a good deal of safety. Parents, if you wish well to your children, urge them to learn their trades perfectly.

A CHARACTER.—Don't you know, or haven't you seen precisely such a person as this, in the whole course of your life? We have:—He is acquainted with every body, but knows nobody; he is always talking, but never says anything; is perpetually putting some sudden interrogation, and before it is possible for him to understand the answer putting another. His brain is a kind of rag shop, receiving and returning nothing but rubbish.

MARRIED,

In this place, on the 5th inst., by Gilbert Watson, Bishop, Mr. PHINEAS WRIGHT to Miss REBECCA WAGENER, both of Voree.

REMITTANCE BY MAIL LAST WEEK FOR THE HERALD.

Asa Bartholomew,	$2,00 to Vol. III. No. 52
John T. Leatherbury,	2,00 to Vol. IV. No. 52

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 10.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, MAY 24, 1849. [WHOLE No. 126.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. BURGESS TO MR. STRANG.—No. 8.

Racine, May 7th, 1849.

MR. JAMES J. STRANG:—In reply to your third review of my third letter, par. 205, I still think weighing the hog proves the testimony true or false; for if "testimony proved the fact," why do we demonstrate by weighing?

185. You ask, par. 206, "whence originated this principle in weights, this standard to which all weights must conform?" You say the authority established it. But what established the authority? Is not the authority derived from the people by their delegates? In despotism authority may be usurped by force. Among the superstitious a pretended revelation might suffice. But with a free and enlightened people, authority must be the expression of their will. Succeeding generations may recognize the same standard, till they discover a better. But the authority will still be founded on their agreement. You speak of "authority" as the opinion of some great officer, and yet you tell me there is a natural impossibility in making an issue between testimony and authority. Why, they are so frequently in opposition, that I should be puzzled to know whether they agree or differ most.

186. You say, par. 207, you know of no greater dupe than he who thinks nobody honest, wise or true but himself. For once we agree. You continue, "and gives precedence to the common thief over the learned professions." I spoke of the "quacks," not the "learned," and should prefer your correspondence with less plagiarism. To return the compliment, if Mr. Strang prefers the company of "quacks" and plagiarists, I do not.

187. In reply to par. 209, when you can show a proposition which is self-evident or evident in itself, but not evident to yourself, or myself, or some other self, I shall be glad to learn the distinction. And when you can show anything which is perceptible to the eye and not to the mind, I will certainly own beat. Such distinctions quite overpower my comprehension.

188. You ask, "what is it to prove by demonstration, but to demonstrate by proof?" Par. 211. If you are really sincere when you say, "you confess yourself annoyed by such nonsense," why do you say testimony proves the fact? which is but saying that testimony testifies the fact. Our own nonsense does not seem so troublesome to us as that of others, probably from being more used to it, or in blissful ignorance of it.

"Oh wad some power the giftie gie us,
To see ourselves as others see us."

So says Burns. Do the priests, "who know how to avoid these expressions, know too much to debate at all?" It appears to me a pitiful way of lengthening a debate to cavil at common expressions, in which the question at issue is not involved. A chemist says he will prove a fact in chemistry, which he demonstrates, and then claims he has proved it by demonstration. I will be silent if I find nothing more objectionable than that to reply to.

189. You say, par. 213, "the rotundity of the earth is demonstrated by the testimony of great numbers of witnesses." I cannot even now believe, notwithstanding your high authority, that the rotundity of the earth or the existence of God can by any possibility be demonstrated by testimony; else demonstration and testimony are synonymous, and you again utter that "nonsense" of which you complain in me.

190. In par. 216 you boast your extensive acquaintance with all kinds of society, a majority of whom profess to have seen and received communications from the supernatural. How does this agree with par. 86, where, speaking of spirits, you say, I am not aware that in any true sense they are supernatural? If, as you admit, there is nothing really supernatural, but only portions of nature relatively fine, which cannot govern the whole themselves, being parts, and subject to the governing influence of other parts, I think the point in issue is decided. You admit all I claim, that all the phenomena we witness are natural, and the different portions of nature mutually govern each other. If not, pray tell me how to distinguish the natural from the supernatural. I have asked the question so often in vain, that I am without hope of obtaining an answer.

191. In par. 225 you say you cannot distinguish between the natural and the supernatural, except by the popular distinction, or by saying that which is highest is super. Query. What is the standard of the highest? The difficulty still remains. And what the "popular distinction" is, I cannot even guess.

192. You say, par. 216, speaking of the Mormon doctrine, "it is believed by those who examine its evidence, because they cannot fail to appreciate its evidences," unless they are deeply interested in opposition. This might be said by the advocates of all kinds of superstition or notions, true or false, without helping us to perceive their truth or falsehood. However, having no vested interest in opposition to Mormonism, unless my aversion to being duped by priests be considered such, I shall be happy to examine the evidences at our leisure, if you desire to advance them. For this reason I stated in the opening of our discussion, that "my denial extended to the existence of the supernatural, and the revelation of his will in any written form whatever."

193. You say, par. 220, you "have exposed the absurdity of my grounds of doubt, by showing that the most certain facts in history and science are no better proved, and as much doubted." This only shows how little reason we have to believe those things called facts in history and science, and is good evidence for doubt instead of belief. If I desired to govern the credulous with my notions, I would advance such arguments as you do. But if I wished them to be governed by truth, I would encourage them to inquire continually concerning it. In fine, to do their own thinking, and let the priests do their own working, and thus make the minds and bodies of both more efficient for the promotion of happiness to the race, and less liable to be dupes or slaves. Yours for the truth,

EDWIN BURGESS.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 10.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. MAY 24, 1849. [WHOLE No. 126.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. BURGESS TO MR. STRANG.—No. 8.

Racine, May 7th, 1849.

MR. JAMES J. STRANG:—In reply to your third review of my third letter, par. 205, I still think weighing the hog proves the testimony true or false; for if "testimony proved the fact," why do we demonstrate by weighing?

185. You ask, par. 206, "whence originated this principle in weights, this standard to which all weights must conform?" You say the authority established it. But what established the authority? Is not the authority derived from the people by their delegates? In despotism authority may be usurped by force. Among the superstitious a pretended revelation might suffice. But with a free and enlightened people, authority must be the expression of their will. Succeeding generations may recognize the same standard, till they discover a better. But the authority will still be founded on their agreement. You speak of "authority" as the opinion of some great officer, and yet you tell me there is a natural impossibility in making an issue between testimony and authority. Why, they are so frequently in opposition, that I should be puzzled to know whether they agree or differ most.

186. You say, par. 207, you know of no greater dupe than he who thinks nobody honest, wise or true but himself. For once we agree. You continue, "and gives precedence to the common thief over the learned professions." I spoke of the "quacks," not the "learned," and should prefer your correspondence with less plagiarism. To return the compliment, if Mr. Strang prefers the company of "quacks" and plagiarists, I do not.

187. In reply to par. 209, when you can show a proposition which is self-evident or evident in itself, but not evident to yourself, or myself, or some other self, I shall be glad to learn the distinction. And when you can show anything which is perceptible to the eye and not to the mind, I will certainly own beat. Such distinctions quite overpower my comprehension.

188. You ask, "what is it to prove by demonstration, but to demonstrate by proof?" Par. 211. If you are really sincere when you say, "you confess yourself annoyed by such nonsense," why do you say testimony proves the fact? which is but saying that testimony testifies the fact. Our own nonsense does not seem so troublesome to us as that of others, probably from being more used to it, or in blissful ignorance of it.

"Oh wad some power the giftie gie us,
To see ourselves as others see us."

So says Burns. Do the priests, "who know how to avoid these expressions, know too much to debate at all?" It appears to me a pitiful way of lengthening a debate to cavil at common expressions, in which the question at issue is not involved. A chemist says he will prove a fact in chemistry, which he demonstrates, and then claims he has proved it by demonstration. I will be silent if I find nothing more objectionable than that to reply to.

189. You say, par. 213, "the rotundity of the earth is demonstrated by the testimony of great numbers of witnesses." I cannot even now believe, notwithstanding your high authority, that the rotundity of the earth or the existence of God can by any possibility be demonstrated by testimony; else demonstration and testimony are synonymous, and you again utter that "nonsense" of which you complain in me.

190. In par. 216 you boast your extensive acquaintance with all kinds of society, a majority of whom profess to have seen and received communications from the supernatural. How does this agree with par. 86, where, speaking of spirits, you say, I am not aware that in any true sense they are supernatural? If, as you admit, there is nothing really supernatural, but only portions of nature relatively fine, which cannot govern the whole themselves, being parts, and subject to the governing influence of other parts, I think the point in issue is decided. You admit all I claim, that all the phenomena we witness are natural, and the different portions of nature mutually govern each other. If not, pray tell me how to distinguish the natural from the supernatural. I have asked the question so often in vain, that I am without hope of obtaining an answer.

191. In par. 225 you say you cannot distinguish between the natural and the supernatural, except by the popular distinction, or by saying that which is highest is super. Query. What is the standard of the highest? The difficulty still remains. And what the "popular distinction" is, I cannot even guess.

192. You say, par. 216, speaking of the Mormon doctrine, "it is believed by those who examine its evidence, because they cannot fail to appreciate its evidences," unless they are deeply interested in opposition. This might be said by the advocates of all kinds of superstition or notions, true or false, without helping us to perceive their truth or falsehood. However, having no vested interest in opposition to Mormonism, unless my aversion to being duped by priests be considered such, I shall be happy to examine the evidences at our leisure, if you desire to advance them. For this reason I stated in the opening of our discussion, that "my denial extended to the existence of the supernatural, and the revelation of his will in any written form whatever."

193. You say, par. 220, you "have exposed the absurdity of my grounds of doubt, by showing that the most certain facts in history and science are no better proved, and as much doubted." This only shows how little reason we have to believe those things called facts in history and science, and is good evidence for doubt instead of belief. If I desired to govern the credulous with my notions, I would advance such arguments as you do. But if I wished them to be governed by truth, I would encourage them to inquire continually concerning it. In fine, to do their own thinking, and let the priests do their own working, and thus make the minds and bodies of both more efficient for the promotion of happiness to the race, and less liable to be dupes or slaves. Yours for the truth,

EDWIN BURGESS.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.—No. 5.

Beaver Island, May 10th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—What is not done in season is apt to go undone, or at best ill done. So it has been with my attempted notes and incidents. I have got behind and don't know how to get up with the time, unless I do it just as I sometimes get up with my private correspondence; that is, by laying by fifty or one hundred letters without answering, and possibly not half read, and beginning with the present date. But as this would be unpleasant to many, and I am not quite hopelessly behind, I will try, with this new gold pen which brother Smith gave me, to make up what time I have lost by cutting across the corners, and giving a brief account of the unrecorded events since my last. This pen is a very rapid workman, though, as you will learn without my saying it, it does not make quite so good letters as the one brother Graham gave me. And that mighty few could read after. If you are able to put this letter in type, you have a gift of discernment which few compositors are blessed with. The editor would be in a poor streak of luck without you.

THE PASSAGE.

I have forgotten the date when I left off, but the time was about when we came from Sheboyagan on the Sciota, I believe. Well, we made a rapid and rather pleasant passage to this place, arriving at Big Beaver harbor on Saturday, the 28th April, about noon. On the west shore of the South Manitou saw the schooner Tempest sunk in seven feet water, cargo partly on shore, and crew on board hoping to get her off. The Sciota hove to and offered aid, which however was not needed, and we passed on to the west of the South Manitou and east of all the other islands. The weather was quite foggy, and it was not till past nine o'clock that we discovered the Big Beaver. The first glance of it, but dimly seen in the misty distance, gave the most sincere joy to more than a score of hearts.—Indeed, though the weather was most uncomfortable, men, women and children kept the deck, gazing with satisfaction and cheerfulness at our future home. The desponding heart, worn with care, toil, suffering, disappointment and injuries, became exuberant in joy and happiness. A new face was on all of us. We felt at home again, because we could see the home God had given us. Every gift of God is good.

THE LANDING.

At one o'clock we made the pier of E. J. Moore, at the west side of Paradise Bay. By the way, this name is new to you, as it is also to me, but I understand that this harbor has always been so called by the sailors, and for reasons which none can appreciate more than they. The outer bay indents between broad points more than a mile into the east shore of Big Beaver. Here is a strait, ninety rods wide, and from forty to one hundred and fifty feet deep, running up into the harbor, which is about one mile across in either direction, and throughout one half its extent, varying in depth from twenty-five to one hundred and fifty feet, and throughout the other half from nine to sixteen feet. On two sides the water shoals out several rods, and then drops off into deep water, but about half the distance around the deep water comes up very near the water's edge, and in some parts so close that passengers can be landed from a steamboat without a wharf.

Well, we arrived. Man, woman and child all rushed for shore, glad of deliverance from a run of annoyances which had lasted so long that we were as anxious to be clear of them as from real peril, of which we had none. The saints met us in considerable numbers on the wharf, and received us with great kindness. We are under particular obligations to Bros. Graham and Aldrich for much needed kindness, which many need among strangers, but few award.—The weather was unsettled and unpleasant several days after our arrival, and assisted to depress the spirits of the company, already much worn down with annoyances and that ill treatment of which saints receive so much. The spirits of several of the party ran very low in the course of the week following our arrival. Yet even then, with every external and internal influence conspiring against contentment, I think none were homesick. Several were positively unhappy who are now in exuberant spirits. We spent several days looking over a small portion of the north end of the Island. The mission house and a dwelling built by Bro. Mills furnished accomdations for the most of us.

May 12th, morning.—The Propeller Troy has just arrived with a company from Chicago. The boat is a fine one. The passengers are in excellent spirits, and speak in the highest terms of the boat and officers, and they in turn of their passengers. I have arranged for as many of the saints as are ready to come down the last of May, to come with her on her next trip down. She will stop here regularly up and down. The Clerk is a gentlemanly business man, and can be relied on to buy anything that is wanted either above or below, and leave it here for those that want supplies.

Bros. Smith and Prince, from Pittsburgh, and Greig, from Brighton, have been here and made arrangements for building a steam saw mill, machine shop, &c., and after contracting for part of the work are just gone back. Bro. Greig will be here in about three weeks with his family, machines, engine, &c. The work is going up on Aldrich's point, the south side of the harbor. Bro. Blakeslee has gone to Lewisburg, Ohio. I have a letter from another company coming up from Illinois, and look for them daily, among whom are his son George. We have not heard from Bro. Page's company. They have fixed their time for starting from Fort Plain, N. Y., 20th May.

The apostacy which took place here is a small affair. Parmeter left the day before my arrival. All the rest have seen the folly of their ways, and confessed their faults. I hear that Parmeter persuaded two brethren at Chicago not to come. Certainly it tells poorly for a saint that he will disbelieve God's word on the say so of one apostate. There must be some mistake about it. The saints here are in the best of spirits, and there is a growing disposition to rely on God's word and law as alone sufficient for us. But they do not, like Parmeter, expect that to support us without work. They are generally well persuaded that where common labor brings $1,00 per day, and mechanical work in proportion, it is easy to live. I shall go east and back to Voree in a very brief time. In great haste,

JAMES J. STRANG.

☞ The following extracts from a letter in the Dublin Freeman's Journal, of April 7th, contain a few specimens of the sufferings of many thousands within the last two years:—

"FRIGHTFUL SCENES IN MAYO.—Last week a man named Thomas Kelly, lay for nights on the mail road leading from Newport to Achil, where he died of starvation, and remained exposed, a prey to the dogs, from Wednesday to Saturday!

"Within a few perches of said place a man of the name of Sweeney died of starvation in the same week, and on the road, where he remained some time exposed and unburied.

"Same week I saw about thirty men, under a steward named Stretton, breaking stones under a wall inclosing a farm, from whence they (the men) were expelled, now lying waste. These men, if fed, were all suited to agricultural labor; the stones broken during the week, if in the London market, would not pay the steward's wages. Same week, Rev. Mr. Scully, R. R. C., stated he attended a man dying of starvation, from whose mouth froth issued, when bailiffs threw the ends of the house down. Same week the wife of O'Donnell Smith, Knockluga, who died of starvation, was sent to

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.—No. 5.

Beaver Island, May 10th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—What is not done in season is apt to go undone, or at best ill done. So it has been with my attempted notes and incidents. I have got behind and don't know how to get up with the time, unless I do it just as I sometimes get up with my private correspondence; that is, by laying by fifty or one hundred letters without answering, and possibly not half read, and beginning with the present date. But as this would be unpleasant to many, and I am not quite hopelessly behind, I will try, with this new gold pen which brother Smith gave me, to make up what time I have lost by cutting across the corners, and giving a brief account of the unrecorded events since my last. This pen is a very rapid workman, though, as you will learn without my saying it, it does not make quite so good letters as the one brother Graham gave me. And that mighty few could read after. If you are able to put this letter in type, you have a gift of discernment which few compositors are blessed with. The editor would be in a poor streak of luck without you.

THE PASSAGE.

I have forgotten the date when I left off, but the time was about when we came from Sheboyagan on the Sciota, I believe. Well, we made a rapid and rather pleasant passage to this place, arriving at Big Beaver harbor on Saturday, the 28th April, about noon. On the west shore of the South Manitou saw the schooner Tempest sunk in seven feet water, cargo partly on shore, and crew on board hoping to get her off. The Sciota hove to and offered aid, which however was not needed, and we passed on to the west of the South Manitou and east of all the other islands. The weather was quite foggy, and it was not till past nine o'clock that we discovered the Big Beaver. The first glance of it, but dimly seen in the misty distance, gave the most sincere joy to more than a score of hearts.—Indeed, though the weather was most uncomfortable, men, women and children kept the deck, gazing with satisfaction and cheerfulness at our future home. The desponding heart, worn with care, toil, suffering, disappointment and injuries, became exuberant in joy and happiness. A new face was on all of us. We felt at home again, because we could see the home God had given us. Every gift of God is good.

THE LANDING.

At one o'clock we made the pier of E. J. Moore, at the west side of Paradise Bay. By the way, this name is new to you, as it is also to me, but I understand that this harbor has always been so called by the sailors, and for reasons which none can appreciate more than they. The outer bay indents between broad points more than a mile into the east shore of Big Beaver. Here is a strait, ninety rods wide, and from forty to one hundred and fifty feet deep, running up into the harbor, which is about one mile across in either direction, and throughout one half its extent, varying in depth from twenty-five to one hundred and fifty feet, and throughout the other half from nine to sixteen feet. On two sides the water shoals out several rods, and then drops off into deep water, but about half the distance around the deep water comes up very near the water's edge, and in some parts so close that passengers can be landed from a steamboat without a wharf.

Well, we arrived. Man, woman and child all rushed for shore, glad of deliverance from a run of annoyances which had lasted so long that we were as anxious to be clear of them as from real peril, of which we had none. The saints met us in considerable numbers on the wharf, and received us with great kindness. We are under particular obligations to Bros. Graham and Aldrich for much needed kindness, which many need among strangers, but few award.—The weather was unsettled and unpleasant several days after our arrival, and assisted to depress the spirits of the company, already much worn down with annoyances and that ill treatment of which saints receive so much. The spirits of several of the party ran very low in the course of the week following our arrival. Yet even then, with every external and internal influence conspiring against contentment, I think none were homesick. Several were positively unhappy who are now in exuberant spirits. We spent several days looking over a small portion of the north end of the Island. The mission house and a dwelling built by Bro. Mills furnished accomdations for the most of us.

May 12th, morning.—The Propeller Troy has just arrived with a company from Chicago. The boat is a fine one. The passengers are in excellent spirits, and speak in the highest terms of the boat and officers, and they in turn of their passengers. I have arranged for as many of the saints as are ready to come down the last of May, to come with her on her next trip down. She will stop here regularly up and down. The Clerk is a gentlemanly business man, and can be relied on to buy anything that is wanted either above or below, and leave it here for those that want supplies.

Bros. Smith and Prince, from Pittsburgh, and Greig, from Brighton, have been here and made arrangements for building a steam saw mill, machine shop, &c., and after contracting for part of the work are just gone back. Bro. Greig will be here in about three weeks with his family, machines, engine, &c. The work is going up on Aldrich's point, the south side of the harbor. Bro. Blakeslee has gone to Lewisburg, Ohio. I have a letter from another company coming up from Illinois, and look for them daily, among whom are his son George. We have not heard from Bro. Page's company. They have fixed their time for starting from Fort Plain, N. Y., 20th May.

The apostacy which took place here is a small affair. Parmeter left the day before my arrival. All the rest have seen the folly of their ways, and confessed their faults. I hear that Parmeter persuaded two brethren at Chicago not to come. Certainly it tells poorly for a saint that he will disbelieve God's word on the say so of one apostate. There must be some mistake about it. The saints here are in the best of spirits, and there is a growing disposition to rely on God's word and law as alone sufficient for us. But they do not, like Parmeter, expect that to support us without work. They are generally well persuaded that where common labor brings $1,00 per day, and mechanical work in proportion, it is easy to live. I shall go east and back to Voree in a very brief time. In great haste,

JAMES J. STRANG.

☞ The following extracts from a letter in the Dublin Freeman's Journal, of April 7th, contain a few specimens of the sufferings of many thousands within the last two years:—

"FRIGHTFUL SCENES IN MAYO.—Last week a man named Thomas Kelly, lay for nights on the mail road leading from Newport to Achil, where he died of starvation, and remained exposed, a prey to the dogs, from Wednesday to Saturday!

"Within a few perches of said place a man of the name of Sweeney died of starvation in the same week, and on the road, where he remained some time exposed and unburied.

"Same week I saw about thirty men, under a steward named Stretton, breaking stones under a wall inclosing a farm, from whence they (the men) were expelled, now lying waste. These men, if fed, were all suited to agricultural labor; the stones broken during the week, if in the London market, would not pay the steward's wages. Same week, Rev. Mr. Scully, R. R. C., stated he attended a man dying of starvation, from whose mouth froth issued, when bailiffs threw the ends of the house down. Same week the wife of O'Donnell Smith, Knockluga, who died of starvation, was sent to the grave on a ladder, without coffin or covering."

☞ Reader, remember these things happened in a christian country, and under a christian government, in the midst of plenty, where Protestant reformers are the principal owners of the land, whose tables creak beneath the loads of luxuries, which are daily heaped upon them. Is such christianity the religion taught by Christ and his Apostles? No, it is heathenism—worse than heathenism, it is devilism; for such oppression is not known among those who are commonly called heathens. Can such things pass unpunished and there be a God in heaven? Nay, verily. "For the oppression of the poor, for the sighing of the needy now will I arise, saith the Lord; I will set him in safety from him that puffeth at him," and "break in pieces the oppressor."

TESTIMONY.—John Q. Adams says: "I have often wished that every individual of the human race afflicted with this artificial passion, could prevail upon himself to try but for three months the experiment which I have—giving up smoking and chewing—I am sure it would turn every acre of tobacco land into a wheat field, and add five years of longevity to the average of human life."

Tobacco and Rum, are the annoyance of modesty—the spoiler of civility—destroyer of reason—brewer's agent—alewife's benefactor—the wife's sorrow—the children's trouble—his neighbor's scoff—a walking swill tub—a picture of a beast—a monster of a man.

SMOKING AND SNUFFING.—A French Legislator has proposed to the assembly, to pass a law to tax smoking and snuffing; the proposition being, that every person intending to smoke or snuff shall obtain a license to do so, the price of which is to be fixed at five francs—ninety-four cents.

Too cheap, by far.

THE GOSPEL HERALD says, "the combined wisdom and learning of this generation have as yet failed," to prove Mormonism to be a humbug. We never saw a man with common reason who presumed it to be anything else, but a humbug. As for proving it to be such, the great difficulty has been that there is nothing of it—it acts upon the moonshine principle—nothing but a shadow for a belief; and that very shallow. Mormonism is antagonistical to common sense, and has so been treated by all who have investigated the subject.—Wisconsin Standard.

☞ The editor of the "Standard" must mean one of two things. Either that he never saw a Mormon, or they are destitute of "common reason." If the former, he must have kept himself very close; for in another department of his editorial, he says: "Almost every village throughout the west contains more or less Mormons." If the latter, then it is rather singular, to say the least of it, that a society founded on "humbug," commencing with only six members, destitute of "common reason," should hold discussions with some of the best talents of the age, and every time come off victorious, and in the short space of nineteen years bring into its embraces some 200,000 members, principally from the "enlightened" christian denomonations of the day. Men who believe this must have very large credulity. The "Standard" backs out by resorting to ridicule, but as ridicule is not argument, we will let it pass, knowing that men of intellectual worth will look at it with contempt. He is evidently ignorant of what Mormonism is, or of what it purports to be. Solomon says: "He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is folly and shame unto him." We assure him that Mormonism is not "antagonistical to common sense," but agreeable to it, and that we never knew an individual who thoroughly investigated it but that embraced it. The great difficulty is to break the iron bands of prejudice so that men will investigate. If the Editor of the "Standard" would lay aside his bitterness and prejudice, and carefully investigate Mormonism in search of truth, we are confident that he would embrace it.

GROWING IMMORALITY OF BOSTON.—The criminal statistics of Boston have just been published. It appears, the increase of crime in the municipal court over last year is 200 per cent., in the police court, 27 per cent; for attempts to kill, 1700 per cent; complaints for capital offences, 266 per cent; burglary 250 per cent. In addition to this alarming increase, the report discloses other grievous evils. Some of the police officers state, that within the last year, a large number of women go armed with dirk knives and other dangerous weapons. Young boys are frequently taken with six or four barrelled revolvers in their pockets. Numbers of young men apparently respectable, when found engaged in their dissipations, are armed with dirks, pistols and knives. The watchmen and police are frequently threatened by weapons pointed at them, when they are attemping to preserve order. Houses of ill-fame are increasing at a wonderful rate.

☞ This talks loud for the capitol of the State whose "people are famous for the liberality with which they support literary, humane and religious institutions," and whose "colleges and high schools are more numerous and better endowed by private munificence than those of any other State." What is the matter? Ah, your literature is demoralizing in its tendency, and your religion corrupting in its influence. If it were not so, would crime, misery and debauchery increase most rapidly where such institutions are most numerous?

EXTRAORDINARY PHENOMENON.

We have received a circumstantial description of an extraordinary appearance in the heavens, which was recently witnessed by two men, who were out in a fishing boat, off Quigley's Point, in Lough Foyle. At a former period, this strange Phenomenon, for which the known law of optics account only imperfectly, would have been regarded as prophetic of rational destinies; but the Fata Morgana of Italy, and the singular appearances frequently witnessed in the high arctic latitudes, as well as around some parts of the Antrim coast, demonstrate the essential reference of all these optical wonders to some natural law, which science has yet thoroughly to investigate. From the character of the men to whom, in the present case, we allude, not the slightest doubt can be entertained in regard to the fidelity of their statement, which is in substance, the following, namely:—That while recently, at about two o'clock A. M., out in a boat fishing, off Quigley's Point, they observed a phenomenon of a very strange description. At the hour we have mentioned, the sky was more than of an ordinary dark and lurid aspect, so much so that the men were apprehensive that there would be a heavy fall of rain, when almost instantaneously the clouds to the westward parted, and an opening, as it were, of a reddish hue, became visible, to which their attention was directed. Then there appeared in the heavens a regiment of men in uniform; and so minute was the representation, that the dresses of the officers could easily be distinguished from those of the men. This passed away in a panoramic manner, and was quickly succeeded by the view of two large three-masted vessels of war under full sail, which traversed the same space as their predecessors on the scene, and at length they faded from the sight. The mysterious vision was not, however, yet completed; for their wandering eyes now beheld the appearance of two human forms, male and female, standing with their faces towards each other, as if engaged in conversation: and so vivid was the outline of these figures, that they distinguished the male from the female, being apparently clothed in a frock coat. This aerial personation of humanity, occupied about the same space of time as the

the grave on a ladder, without coffin or covering."

☞ Reader, remember these things happened in a christian country, and under a christian government, in the midst of plenty, where Protestant reformers are the principal owners of the land, whose tables creak beneath the loads of luxuries, which are daily heaped upon them. Is such christianity the religion taught by Christ and his Apostles? No, it is heathenism—worse than heathenism, it is devilism; for such oppression is not known among those who are commonly called heathens. Can such things pass unpunished and there be a God in heaven? Nay, verily. "For the oppression of the poor, for the sighing of the needy now will I arise, saith the Lord; I will set him in safety from him that puffeth at him," and "break in pieces the oppressor."

Testimony.—John Q. Adams says: "I have often wished that every individual of the human race afflicted with this artificial passion, could prevail upon himself to try but for three months the experiment which I have—giving up smoking and chewing—I am sure it would turn every acre of tobacco land into a wheat field, and add five years of longevity to the average of human life."

Tobacco and Rum, are the annoyance of modesty—the spoiler of civility—destroyer of reason—brewer's agent—alewife's benefactor—the wife's sorrow—the children's trouble—his neighbor's scoff—a walking swill tub—a picture of a beast—a monster of a man.

Smoking and Snuffing.—A French Legislator has proposed to the assembly, to pass a law to tax smoking and snuffing; the proposition being, that every person intending to smoke or snuff shall obtain a license to do so, the price of which is to be fixed at five francs—ninety-four cents.

Too cheap, by far.

The Gospel Herald says, "the combined wisdom and learning of this generation have as yet failed," to prove Mormonism to be a humbug. We never saw a man with common reason who presumed it to be anything else, but a humbug. As for proving it to be such, the great difficulty has been that there is nothing of it—it acts upon the moonshine principle—nothing but a shadow for a belief; and that very shallow. Mormonism is antagonistical to common sense, and has so been treated by all who have investigated the subject.—Wisconsin Standard.

☞ The editor of the "Standard" must mean one of two things. Either that he never saw a Mormon, or they are destitute of "common reason." If the former, he must have kept himself very close; for in another department of his editorial, he says: "Almost every village throughout the west contains more or less Mormons." If the latter, then it is rather singular, to say the least of it, that a society founded on "humbug," commencing with only six members, destitute of "common reason," should hold discussions with some of the best talents of the age, and every time come off victorious, and in the short space of nineteen years bring into its embraces some 200,000 members, principally from the "enlightened" christian denomonations of the day. Men who believe this must have very large credulity. The "Standard" backs out by resorting to ridicule, but as ridicule is not argument, we will let it pass, knowing that men of intellectual worth will look at it with contempt. He is evidently ignorant of what Mormonism is, or of what it purports to be. Solomon says: "He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is folly and shame unto him." We assure him that Mormonism is not "antagonistical to common sense," but agreeable to it, and that we never knew an individual who thoroughly investigated it but that embraced it. The great difficulty is to break the iron bands of prejudice so that men will investigate. If the Editor of the "Standard" would lay aside his bitterness and prejudice, and carefully investigate Mormonism in search of truth, we are confident that he would embrace it.

Growing Immorality of Boston.—The criminal statistics of Boston have just been published. It appears, the increase of crime in the municipal court over last year is 200 per cent., in the police court, 27 per cent; for attempts to kill, 1700 per cent; complaints for capital offences, 266 per cent; burglary 250 per cent. In addition to this alarming increase, the report discloses other grievous evils. Some of the police officers state, that within the last year, a large number of women go armed with dirk knives and other dangerous weapons. Young boys are frequently taken with six or four barrelled revolvers in their pockets. Numbers of young men apparently respectable, when found engaged in their dissipations, are armed with dirks, pistols and knives. The watchmen and police are frequently threatened by weapons pointed at them, when they are attemping to preserve order. Houses of ill-fame are increasing at a wonderful rate.

☞ This talks loud for the capitol of the State whose "people are famous for the liberality with which they support literary, humane and religious institutions," and whose "colleges and high schools are more numerous and better endowed by private munificence than those of any other State." What is the matter? Ah, your literature is demoralizing in its tendency, and your religion corrupting in its influence. If it were not so, would crime, misery and debauchery increase most rapidily where such institutions are most numerous?

EXTRAORDINARY PHENOMENON.

We have received a circumstantial description of an extraordinary appearance in the heavens, which was recently witnessed by two men, who were out in a fishing boat, off Quigley's Point, in Lough Foyle. At a former period, this strange Phenomenon, for which the known law of optics account only imperfectly, would have been regarded as prophetic of rational destinies; but the Fata Morgana of Italy, and the singular appearances frequently witnessed in the high arctic latitudes, as well as around some parts of the Antrim coast, demonstrate the essential reference of all these optical wonders to some natural law, which science has yet thoroughly to investigate. From the character of the men to whom, in the present case, we allude, not the slightest doubt can be entertained in regard to the fidelity of their statement, which is in substance, the following, namely:—That while recently, at about two o'clock A. M., out in a boat fishing, off Quigley's Point, they observed a phenomenon of a very strange description. At the hour we have mentioned, the sky was more than of an ordinary dark and lurid aspect, so much so that the men were apprehensive that there would be a heavy fall of rain, when almost instantaneously the clouds to the westward parted, and an opening, as it were, of a reddish hue, became visible, to which their attention was directed. Then there appeared in the heavens a regiment of men in uniform; and so minute was the representation, that the dresses of the officers could easily be distinguished from those of the men. This passed away in a panoramic manner, and was quickly succeeded by the view of two large three-masted vessels of war under full sail, which traversed the same space as their predecessors on the scene, and at length they faded from the sight. The mysterious vision was not, however, yet completed; for their wandering eyes now beheld the appearance of two human forms, male and female, standing with their faces towards each other, as if engaged in conversation: and so vivid was the outline of these figures, that they distinguished the male from the female, being apparently clothed in a frock coat. This aerial personation of humanity, occupied about the same space of time as the two first mentioned. This most bewildering scene closed by the forms of a swan and a peahen moving across, and disappearing; after which the sky assumed the sombre hue which it wore previous to this strange illusion. Our informants stated that one of the men who witnessed this scene was filled with the greatest terror during its continuance.—Derry Sentinel.

THE FOUR MONARCHIES.

By Babel's streams, in slavish chains,
The Hebrew captive stood,
His heart was big with grief and pain,
And pensive was his mood.
Come, sing a song of Zion now,
And wipe the moisture from thy brow.

A holy, just, and faithful God,
Has marked th' Assyrian's pride:
In seventy years the righteous rod
In wrath shall be applied.
Thy king 'midst revelry shall fall—
God's judgments shall all hearts appall.

The time rolled on; in haughty pride
Babel's first monarch stands;
"These princely halls," he boasting cried,
"I've built by my own hands."
A voice from heaven announced his doom—
"Go forth from men with beasts to roam."

His son Belshazzar comes to reign,
And makes an impious feast,
Invites the great, of lordly mien,
The banquet rich to taste.
The sacred vessels quickly bring—
Drink to his gods, and to the king!

The time is out; a phantom hand
Wrote over on the wall:
Behold the King in horror stand!—
The monarch doomed to fall.
That night was proud Belshazzar slain,
And Persia's prince began his reign.

Proud head of Gold! thy sun is down,
Thy pomp and pride are o'er:
Media and Persia wear the crown
Thy monarch lately wore.
The breast and arms of silver now
Receive the crown from Babel's brow.

The brazen kingdom, next in train
Of cruelty and pride,
Maintains a short and bloody reign,
Then lays the crown aside.
Thus three great powers did pass away,
Succeeded by the iron and clay.

Next comes the iron, of cruel forms,
With strength exceeding great,
With seven heads and ten crowned horns,
One stouter than his mates.
His time, times, and a half are fled,
God's judgments hang just o'er his head.

Pope, cardinal, and bishop, all—
Inquisition, nuns, and friars,
In one dread day shall swiftly fall
Before the gathering ire.
God's magazines, with fury red,
Shall play in vengeance on thy head.

The Kingdom of our Lord is near,
As signs do clearly show;
The Lord's "anointed" now is here,
To lay the oppressor low.
Gold, silver, brass, the iron, and clay,
Like summer chaff shall pass away.

Deep, muttering tones of fiery wrath
Come booming from afar;
Earth's legions now are in the path
For Armageddon's war.
That day of wrath! O who shall stand?
O, place me, Lord, at thy right hand!

IDLENESS A CRIME.

As in this day of the world fruits do not spontaneously spring up from the earth as they did in the garden of Eden, nor manna drop down from the clouds as it did in the wilderness, and inasmuch as man is dependent upon the labor of his hands, and the sweat of his brow, for the sustenance of life, I conceive it something more than a mere fault to be idle. Sluggishness is a crime; and that man, whether he be young or old, black or white, who is content to pass his days without physical exertions, sufficient to produce the necessaries of life, is guilty of a moral aberration, the stain of which on his skirt can scarcely be less foul than that of theft; for, though he may not, indeed, practice pilfering, modo et formo, he yet appropriates to himself and consumes that which is the product of another's toil; which, in point of conscience, if men were properly sensible and sensitive in the premises, would be regarded, as it really is, equally culpable. And, it is not a merit in one, that he be rich, and peculiary guarded against the ordinary wants and requirements of his animal nature, that shall exonerate him from the common obligation to be industrious. But, as well as the poor and the low, who are goaded into habits of assiduity by their wants, and driven to their toils by necessities, the rich and the high are likewise under a binding moral obligation to perform labor with their hands. Laziness is an abomination. 'Six days shalt thou labor.' Then, 'why stand ye here all the day idle?'—Hutchen.

Irascibility of Temper.—The greatest plague in life is a bad temper. It is a great waste of time to complain of other people's; the best thing is to amend our own; and the next best quality is to learn to bear with what we meet in others. A bad temper will always tire itself out, if it find no one to resent it; and this very knowledge is worth a trifle. Irascibility is very injurious to health, and so, in fact, is every morbid indulgence of our inferior nature—low spirits, melancholy, diffidence, disinclination for ordinary duties, discontent, fretfulness, even down to mental lassitude, indolence, despair—are very inimical to enjoyment in life, and every possible effort should be made to cast them all to the winds, and look unblushingly into the truth of the fact. It is astonishing what a little reflection will do—the fears are mostly imaginary, and with one dash of resolution may all be overcome.

REMITTANCE BY MAIL LAST WEEK FOR THE HERALD.

Lorenzo Tubbs,	$2,00 to Vol. V. No. 26.
Thomas Cahoon,	1,00 to Vol. IV. No. 26
Luther Z. Cook,	1,00 " " 26

two to be mentioned. This most bewildering scene closed by the forms of a swan and a peahen moving across, and disappearing; after which the sky assumed the sombre hue which it wore previous to this strange illusion. Our informants stated that one of the men who witnessed this scene was filled with the greatest terror during its continuance.—Derry Sentinel.

THE FOUR MONARCHIES.

By Babel's streams, in slavish chains,
The Hebrew captive stood,
His heart was big with grief and pain,
And pensive was his mood.
Come, sing a song of Zion now,
And wipe the moisture from thy brow.

A holy, just, and faithful God,
Has marked th' Assyrian's pride:
In seventy years the righteous rod
In wrath shall be applied.
Thy king 'midst revelry shall fall—
God's judgments shall all hearts appall.

The time rolled on; in haughty pride
Babel's first monarch stands;
"These princely halls," he boasting cried,
"I've built by my own hands."
A voice from heaven announced his doom—
"Go forth from men with beasts to roam."

His son Belshazzar comes to reign,
And makes an impious feast,
Invites the great, of lordly mien,
The banquet rich to taste.
The sacred vessels quickly bring—
Drink to his gods, and to the king!

The time is out; a phantom hand
Wrote over on the wall:
Behold the King in horror stand!—
The monarch doomed to fall.
That night was proud Belshazzar slain,
And Persia's prince began his reign.

Proud head of Gold! thy sun is down,
Thy pomp and pride are o'er:
Media and Persia wear the crown
Thy monarch lately wore.
The breast and arms of silver now
Receive the crown from Babel's brow.

The brazen kingdom, next in train
Of cruelty and pride,
Maintains a short and bloody reign,
Then lays the crown aside.
Thus three great powers did pass away,
Succeeded by the iron and clay.

Next comes the iron, of cruel forms,
With strength exceeding great,
With seven heads and ten crowned horns,
One stouter than his mates.
His time, times, and a half are fled,
God's judgments hang just o'er his head.

Pope, cardinal, and bishop, all—
Inquisition, nuns, and friars,
In one dread day shall swiftly fall
Before the gathering ire.
God's magazines, with fury red,
Shall play in vengeance on thy head.

The Kingdom of our Lord is near,
As signs do clearly show;
The Lord's "anointed" now is here,
To lay the oppressor low.
Gold, silver, brass, the iron, and clay,
Like summer chaff shall pass away.

Deep, muttering tones of fiery wrath
Come booming from afar;
Earth's legions now are in the path
For Armageddon's war.
That day of wrath! O who shall stand?
O, place me, Lord, at thy right hand!

IDLENESS A CRIME.

As in this day of the world fruits do not spontaneously spring up from the earth as they did in the garden of Eden, nor manna drop down from the clouds as it did in the wilderness, and inasmuch as man is dependent upon the labor of his hands, and the sweat of his brow, for the sustenance of life, I conceive it something more than a mere fault to be idle. Sluggishness is a crime; and that man, whether he be young or old, black or white, who is content to pass his days without physical exertions, sufficient to produce the necessaries of life, is guilty of a moral aberration, the stain of which on his skirt can scarcely be less foul than that of theft; for, though he may not, indeed, practice pilfering, modo et formo, he yet appropriates to himself and consumes that which is the product of another's toil; which, in point of conscience, if men were properly sensible and sensitive in the premises, would be regarded, as it really is, equally culpable. And, it is not a merit in one, that he be rich, and peculiary guarded against the ordinary wants and requirements of his animal nature, that shall exonerate him from the common obligation to be industrious. But, as well as the poor and the low, who are goaded into habits of assiduity by their wants, and driven to their toils by necessities, the rich and the high are likewise under a binding moral obligation to perform labor with their hands. Laziness is an abomination. 'Six days shalt thou labor.' Then, 'why stand ye here all the day idle?'—Hutchen.

Irascibility of Temper.—The greatest plague in life is a bad temper. It is a great waste of time to complain of other people's; the best thing is to amend our own; and the next best quality is to learn to bear with what we meet in others. A bad temper will always tire itself out, if it find no one to resent it; and this very knowledge is worth a trifle. Irascibility is very injurious to health, and so, in fact, is every morbid indulgence of our inferior nature—low spirits, melancholy, diffidence, disinclination for ordinary duties, discontent, fretfulness, even down to mental lassitude, indolence, despair—are very inimical to enjoyment in life, and every possible effort should be made to cast them all to the winds, and look unblushingly into the truth of the fact. It is astonishing what a little reflection will do—the fears are mostly imaginary, and with one dash of resolution may all be overcome.

REMITTANCE BY MAIL LAST WEEK FOR THE HERALD.

Lorenzo Tubbs,	$2,00 to Vol. V. No. 26.
Thomas Cahoon,	1,00 to Vol. IV. No. 25
Luther Z. Cook,	1,00 " " 25

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 11.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. MAY 31, 1849. [WHOLE No. 127.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. STRANG TO MR. BURGESS.—No. 14.

City of James, Beaver Island, May 12th, 1849.

MR. BURGESS:—A few days since I was wandering over one of the beautiful islands of lake Mich., called, in the expressive nomenclature of the Indians, "Beaver's house". Amid the large forest trees of a dense wilderness I discovered the ancient hearth stones of a city long desolated. In the earth was the vacant holes where the wooden pillars of their houses have rotted away. The graves were there, but the inhabitants have gone to the spirit land. The silent forest alone filled the city of which history tells no tale. There are no sculptured marbles to give the date of its being. Nothing remaining of its architecture to give it affinity to any period in known events.

330. We wish to learn when this city was destroyed. Who has kept the count? The silent tree that speaks only in the marring.—I cut down one, and the concentric circles tells the days it has grown over the ruins of a lost race. I chopped into an aged pine, and the ax marks of boyish playdays found near its centre is a memorial of the time when inhabitants dwelt there. The count of its circles, outside those marks, gives the number of years. Between these dates the desolation took place.

331. Some years since I discovered tumuli in western New York, the antiquity of which I wished to learn. On one grew a gigantic pine. A few of us cut it down and counted the grains, that is, the concentric circles, to the number of nearly eight hundred. This was decisive. For that period at least the tumuli must have existed. Millions have lived and died; nations have flourished and fallen; genius had sung its flame-songs, and love had breathed its burning sighs, and all had passed away;—and still the forest born grew on, buffeted by tempests and chilled by freezing frosts, but nurtured also by genial summers, and fed on silver-shining rains; and listening to the bird-music in its branches, till three-fourths a millenium is gone by; and still all that time it hath kept an exact account of its age, never losing a single year, all noted in beautiful circles, amid the fine wood of its own fibres. It is so with every cone of wood in the wide world. And again we ask, can aught but reason trace circles or reckon the count of passing time?

332. But let us select a last example. If any where we might suppose the absence of mathematical motion, we would expect to find it in hurricanes that desolate whole countries. But modern science teaches us "that hurricanes are only whirlwinds on a large scale.—That they all have a regular axis of rotary motion, which axis itself is progressive, like a planet in its orbit, tracing an eliptical or parabolical curve."

333. Sometimes the vortex of a storm covers an area of five hundred square miles, and sweeps over distant seas, for hundreds of leagues; but ever this dual motion is preserved. Aye, beyond question, the hand that launches the tornado, and girds its dark bosom with thunder, is the same that originally, "weighed the hills in scales, and the mountains in a balance;" and not poor, blind, and utterly impossible chance! THUS IT IS PLAIN, THAT ALL THE MOTIONS IN NATURE are mathematical.

334. But the skeptic may object the proposition is not proven.—For although we may admit, that such a truth holds within the sphere of our actual observation, still what right have we to extend the predicate beyond the limits of that sphere? What right can we show to carry it back into the everlasting ages of the eternity without a beginning, and down to the incalculable years of that time which shall never end? What right have we to break over the impassible limits of the sense of sight, and cite a law that we know only to appertain to a little segment of the circle of infinitude, to all the untrodden fields that may bloom with worlds of which we behold but a twinkling point?

335. I have stated the objection in its full force, because it is much easier to answer than to state it. ALL THE FORMS OF MATTER MUST BE, OF NECESSITY, MATHEMATICAL, SIMPLY BECAUSE IT IS MATTER; AS ALL ITS MOTIONS MUST BE SO, FOR THE REASON THAT MATTER IS INERT. ALL THE FIGURES POSSIBLE IN SPACE, ARE RESOLVABLE INTO THE TRIANGLE, AND OF COURSE MUST BE MATHEMATICAL. A MOTION MUST BE IN A STRAIGHT LINE, UNLESS CONTROLLED BY SOME INTERFERING FORCE, WHEN IT TAKES THE DIRECTION OF A CURVE. SO ALL MOTION MUST BE MATHEMATICAL OR NOT BE AT ALL.

336. We see nothing but mathematical harmony in all motions in our own sphere—we can conceive of nothing but mathematical harmony in any other sphere. We see the unequivical footsteps of a God within our sphere: and every gush of light from the remotest sun, adds to the evidence that it is so everywhere else in the wide universe. And this is enough. We are not called upon to roam over all space, and ascend the heights of all eternity, merely to answer a supposition destitute of even a shadow of proof, and verging close on the confines of absurdity! If we have a God ourselves, that is sufficient. We need not stop to inquire whether some little mote or molecule of sand does not gyrate without a God, somewhere in the vast void of immensity.

337. Now let us put together syllogistically the two propositions demonstrated in this division of our argument, and note the logical result. I. Nothing but mind can work mathematically. II. ALL THE MOTIONS OF NATURE ARE STRICTLY MATHEMAICAL. THEN MUST IT FOLLOW, AS A CONCLUSION UTTERLY UNASSAILABLE, THAT EVERY EFFECT IN THE UNIVERSE, IS PRODUCED BY THE IMMEDIATE AGENCY OF MIND. AND EQUALLY DOES IT FOLLOW THAT THAT MIND EVER HAS BEEN AND EVER MUST BE EVERYWHERE ACTIVE, AND IN ITS EXERCISE ALMIGHTY. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

☞ A mother admonishing her son, a lad of about six years of age, told him he should never defer till to-morrow what he could do to-day. The little urchin replied, "Then mother let us eat the remainder of the plumb pudding to-night."

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 11.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. MAY 31, 1849. [WHOLE No. 127.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. STRANG TO MR. BURGESS.—No. 14.

City of James, Beaver Island, May 12th, 1849.

MR. BURGESS:—A few days since I was wandering over one of the beautiful islands of lake Mich., called, in the expressive nomenclature of the Indians, "Beaver's house". Amid the large forest trees of a dense wilderness I discovered the ancient hearth stones of a city long desolated. In the earth was the vacant holes where the wooden pillars of their houses have rotted away. The graves were there, but the inhabitants have gone to the spirit land. The silent forest alone filled the city of which history tells no tale. There are no sculptured marbles to give the date of its being. Nothing remaining of its architecture to give it affinity to any period in known events.

330. We wish to learn when this city was destroyed. Who has kept the count? The silent tree that speaks only in the marring.—I cut down one, and the concentric circles tells the days it has grown over the ruins of a lost race. I chopped into an aged pine, and the ax marks of boyish playdays found near its centre is a memorial of the time when inhabitants dwelt there. The count of its circles, outside those marks, gives the number of years. Between these dates the desolation took place.

331. Some years since I discovered tumuli in western New York, the antiquity of which I wished to learn. On one grew a gigantic pine. A few of us cut it down and counted the grains, that is, the concentric circles, to the number of nearly eight hundred. This was decisive. For that period at least the tumuli must have existed. Millions have lived and died; nations have flourished and fallen; genius had sung its flame-songs, and love had breathed its burning sighs, and all had passed away;—and still the forest born grew on, buffeted by tempests and chilled by freezing frosts, but nurtured also by genial summers, and fed on silver-shining rains; and listening to the bird-music in its branches, till three-fourths a millenium is gone by; and still all that time it hath kept an exact account of its age, never losing a single year, all noted in beautiful circles, amid the fine wood of its own fibres. It is so with every cone of wood in the wide world. And again we ask, can aught but reason trace circles or reckon the count of passing time?

332. But let us select a last example. If any where we might suppose the absence of mathematical motion, we would expect to find it in hurricanes that desolate whole countries. But modern science teaches us that hurricanes are only whirlwinds on a large scale.—That they all have a regular axis of rotary motion, which axis itself is progressive, like a planet in its orbit, tracing an eliptical or parabolical curve."

333. Sometimes the vortex of a storm covers an area of five hundred square miles, and sweeps over distant seas, for hundreds of leagues; but ever this dual motion is preserved. Aye, beyond question, the hand that launches the tornado, and girds its dark bosom with thunder, is the same that originally, "weighed the hills in scales, and the mountains in a balance;" and not poor, blind, and utterly impossible chance! THUS IT IS PLAIN, THAT ALL THE MOTIONS IN NATURE are mathematical.

334. But the skeptic may object the proposition is not proven.—For although we may admit, that such a truth holds within the sphere of our actual observation, still what right have we to extend the predicate beyond the limits of that sphere? What right can we show to carry it back into the everlasting ages of the eternity without a beginning, and down to the incalculable years of that time which shall never end? What right have we to break over the impassible limits of the sense of sight, and cite a law that we know only to appertain to a little segment of the circle of infinitude, to all the untrodden fields that may bloom with worlds of which we behold but a twinkling point?

335. I have stated the objection in its full force, because it is much easier to answer than to state it. ALL THE FORMS OF MATTER MUST BE, OF NECESSITY, MATHEMATICAL, SIMPLY BECAUSE IT IS MATTER; AS ALL ITS MOTIONS MUST BE SO, FOR THE REASON THAT MATTER IS INERT. ALL THE FIGURES POSSIBLE IN SPACE, ARE RESOLVABLE INTO THE TRIANGLE, AND OF COURSE MUST BE MATHEMATICAL. A MOTION MUST BE IN A STRAIGHT LINE, UNLESS CONTROLLED BY SOME INTERFERING FORCE, WHEN IT TAKES THE DIRECTION OF A CURVE. SO ALL MOTION MUST BE MATHEMATICAL OR NOT BE AT ALL.

336. We see nothing but mathematical harmony in all motions in our own sphere—we can conceive of nothing but mathematical harmony in any other sphere. We see the unequivical footsteps of a God within our sphere: and every gush of light from the remotest sun, adds to the evidence that it is so everywhere else in the wide universe. And this is enough. We are not called upon to roam over all space, and ascend the heights of all eternity, merely to answer a supposition destitute of even a shadow of proof, and verging close on the confines of absurdity! If we have a God ourselves, that is sufficient. We need not stop to inquire whether some little mote or molecule of sand does not gyrate without a God, somewhere in the vast void of immensity.

337. Now let us put together syllogistically the two propositions demonstrated in this division of our argument, and note the logical result. I. Nothing but mind can work mathematically. II. ALL THE MOTIONS OF NATURE ARE STRICTLY MATHEMAICAL. THEN MUST IT FOLLOW, AS A CONCLUSION UTTERLY UNASSAILABLE, THAT EVERY EFFECT IN THE UNIVERSE, IS PRODUCED BY THE IMMEDIATE AGENCY OF MIND. AND EQUALLY DOES IT FOLLOW THAT THAT MIND EVER HAS BEEN AND EVER MUST BE EVERYWHERE ACTIVE, AND IN ITS EXERCISE ALMIGHTY. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

☞ A mother admonishing her son, a lad of about six years of age, told him he should never defer till to-morrow what he could do to-day. The little urchin replied, "Then mother let us eat the remainder of the plumb pudding to-night."

☞ The Geneva Standard has for some weeks past teemed with malicious articles abusing ourselves and others, gentlemen of first standing in society, some of which relating to us we noticed as they deserved, and expressed our real surprise that Col. Keeler, the editor, should be guilty of such scurrility. It appears by the Standard of 19th May that the Col. was absent on a tour to Washington, and M. S. Barnes acted as editor. Col. Keeler exonerates himself in the following handsome paragraph:—

"It was my intention, immediately on my return from Washington, to have alluded editorially to several indiscretions that appeared in that department of the Standard during my absence. Among others, to the following article, containing certain strictures upon the proceedings of a public meeting, held in this village on the 9th of April last, in which personal allusion seems to have been made to some one. The tone and spirit of the article were foreign to my inclinations, and it most assuredly would not have been published with my knowledge or consent. I deem it but an honorable act of justice to state that I disclaim all agency in the matter, and a sincere regret that it should have found publicity. I disclaim, so far as I am individually concerned, all intention to injure any one personally in the columns of this paper; and should there be any one in the community who feels aggrieved, I can only say, that, in addition to expressing a regret at the occurrence, I make all due acknowledgments of reparation."

The following is the concluding paragraph of one of Mr. Barnes' libels on Dr. Macnish, one of the most distinguished physicians and enterprising and public spirited citizens of the State:—

"The meeting was held last Monday evening. We did not attend it, but are informed that it was a 'small potatoe' affair, and was the richest thing of the season. In reference to this congregation of saints, we would say:

'The world is still deceiv'd with ornament,
In politics, what plea so tainted and corrupt,
But, being seasoned with a gracious voice
Obscures the show of evil?
How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false
As stars of sand, wear yet upon their chins
The beards of Hercules, and frowning Mars;
Who inward search'd, have livers white as milk?'

The standing orator and prime mover of this meeting, with ample cloak, pompous strut, and fiery speech, with a strong foreign accent, &c., was a thing who believes firmly in the principle of 'dot and go one,' and has figured heretofore somewhat extensively in a certain Fire Insurance Company—he is too well known in this community to need a minute description, and we should be loath to couple his name with anything in our paper—he is altogether too great a blockhead—his billingsgate falls unworthy of notice from us. He is a dangerous man.

'May life's unblessed cup, for him,
Be drugg'd with treacheries to the brim—
With hopes, that but allure to fly,
With joys that vanish while he sips,
Like Dead Sea fruits, that tempt the eye,
But turn to ashes on the lip!
May he, at last, with lips of flame
On the parch'd desert thirsting die,—
While lakes that shone in mockery nigh
Are fading off, untouch'd, untasted.
And, when from earth his spirit flies,
Just Prophet, let the damn'd one dwell
Full in the sight of Paradise,
Beholding heaven and feeling hell.'"

Mr. Barnes has since published the following acknowledgment that he is a liar and a slanderer:—

"I acknowledge myself the author of the above article, and that I meant Doctor J. Macnish—that it was written under excitement, in the absence and without the knowledge or consent of the editor—that I am now sorry it was ever written, and feel to declare that I firmly believe each and every one of the above insinuations against Doctor Macnish's moral character to be without the shadow of foundation in truth. I would also attest that the Doctor is highly respected in this community, (where he has resided some ten or eleven years,) both as it regards his intellectual attainments and professional skill."

How far this late reparation was done in respect to the truth, the reader may form his own judgment, when he considers that this was doubtless drawn out under the terror of a prosecution by an enterprising and persevering neighbor. If we had plenty of money to employ lawyers and pay expenses, &c., we could as easily draw a similar acknowledgment of his indecency and villainy in our case. But we cannot expect justice from such, unless we are prepared to enforce it. Nearly five years since we heard four very religious persons in Geneva expressing their joy at the recent murder of the prophet Joseph, and we heard this Dr. Macnish, who makes no pretensions to religion, give them a most withering rebuke. Undoubtedly Mr. Barnes would rejoice in the martyrdom of prophets.

G. J. Adams writes us that he was not excommunicated from the church of God, as asserted by J. V. Himes, but that he was honorably acquitted.—Voree Herald.

We have said nothing of the kind—never knew that he belonged to the church of God. We said, excommunicated by Joseph Smith. Thomas M'Kenzie, Mormon preacher, told us last week, that he was at Nauvoo when Adams was excommunicated by Smith, that he was a bad man, and they should not be considered responsible for his wickedness.—Advent Herald, April 28.

This, Mr. Himes, is a mere quibble, unworthy the leader of a numerous, enterprising and comparatively intelligent sect. Every one perfectly understands what church we speak of as the church of God, and consequently knows that with us it is all one thing whether you say "excommunicated from the church," &c., or "excommunicated by Joseph." who presided over that church. The next week, however, the Advent Herald comes out with the following:—

"Correction.—Thomas M'Kenzie informs us that we misunderstood him last week, respecting Adams. He was tried before Smith for a violation of the seventh commandment, and confessed his guilt. In virtue of his penitence, he was acquitted. Since Smith's death, he was again tried, for like offences, at Nauvoo, by the Twelve, and excommunicated—T. M'K. being present."

There is not the least probability that Mr. Himes misunderstood M'Kenzie. The first story was a lie, and the second is also a lie. They are too unlike for one to be misunderstood for the other. Mr. M'Kenzie having told one lie involved the necessity of another, and told the latter to escape the first. This involves the necessity of still another, as the Twelve notoriously had no jurisdiction over him. They could not try him if they would, and if Mr. Himes thinks that P. P. Pratt, Orson Hyde and their set tried him for any such offence, he is greener than we ever gave him credit for.

We tell Mr. Himes further, that this Thomas M'Kenzie is no Mormon at all, and is not sent out to gather up books for the benefit of the Mormons, as the Herald states in another article. This is a mere imposture, a regular swindle. Probably at this time the books committed to him may be found at some second hand book store, where he has parted with them to raise the wind. This is bad business, Mr. Himes. You can find men enough to scandalize the Mormons, without paying them for it with a puff.

☞ The Geneva Standard has for some weeks past teemed with malicious articles abusing ourselves and others, gentlemen of first standing in society, some of which relating to us we noticed as they deserved, and expressed our real surprise that Col. Keeler, the editor, should be guilty of such scurrility. It appears by the Standard of 19th May that the Col. was absent on a tour to Washington, and M. S. Barnes acted as editor. Col. Keeler exonerates himself in the following handsome paragraph:—

"It was my intention, immediately on my return from Washington, to have alluded editorially to several indiscretions that appeared in that department of the Standard during my absence. Among others, to the following article, containing certain strictures upon the proceedings of a public meeting, held in this village on the 9th of April last, in which personal allusion seems to have been made to some one. The tone and spirit of the article were foreign to my inclinations, and it most assuredly would not have been published with my knowledge or consent. I deem it but an honorable act of justice to state that I disclaim all agency in the matter, and a sincere regret that it should have found publicity. I disclaim, so far as I am individually concerned, all intention to injure any one personally in the columns of this paper; and should there be any one in the community who feels aggrieved, I can only say, that, in addition to expressing a regret at the occurrence, I make all due acknowledgments of reparation."

The following is the concluding paragraph of one of Mr. Barnes' libels on Dr. Macnish, one of the most distinguished physicians and enterprising and public spirited citizens of the State:—

"The meeting was held last Monday evening. We did not attend it, but are informed that it was a 'small potatoe' affair, and was the richest thing of the season. In reference to this congregation of saints, we would say:

'The world is still deceiv'd with ornament,
In politics, what plea so tainted and corrupt,
But, being seasoned with a gracious voice
Obscures the show of evil?
How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false
As stars of sand, wear yet upon their chins
The beards of Hercules, and frowning Mars;
Who inward search'd, have livers white as milk?'

The standing orator and prime mover of this meeting, with ample cloak, pompous strut, and fiery speech, with a strong foreign accent, &c., was a thing who believes firmly in the principle of 'dot and go one,' and has figured heretofore somewhat extensively in a certain Fire Insurance Company—he is too well known in this community to need a minute description, and we should be loath to couple his name with anything in our paper—he is altogether too great a blockhead—his billingsgate falls unworthy of notice from us. He is a dangerous man.

'Nay life's unblessed cup, for him,
Be drugg'd with treacheries to the brim—
With hopes, that but allure to fly,
With joys that vanish while he sips,
Like Dead Sea fruits, that tempt the eye,
But turn to ashes on the lip!
May he, at last, with lips of flame
On the parch'd desert thirsting die,—
While lakes that shone in mockery nigh
Are fading off, untouch'd, untasted.
And, when from earth his spirit flies,
Just Prophet, let the damn'd one dwell
Full in the sight of Paradise,
Beholding heaven and feeling hell.'"

Mr. Barnes has since published the following acknowledgment that he is a liar and a slanderer:—

"I acknowledge myself the author of the above article, and that I meant Doctor J. Macnish—that it was written under excitement, in the absence and without the knowledge or consent of the editor—that I am now sorry it was ever written, and feel to declare that I firmly believe each and every one of the above insinuations against Doctor Macnish's moral character to be without the shadow of foundation in truth. I would also attest that the Doctor is highly respected in this community, (where he has resided some ten or eleven years,) both as it regards his intellectual attainments and professional skill."

How far this late reparation was done in respect to the truth, the reader may form his own judgment, when he considers that this was doubtless drawn out under the terror of a prosecution by an enterprising and persevering neighbor. If we had plenty of money to employ lawyers and pay expenses, &c., we could as easily draw a similar acknowledgment of his indecency and villainy in our case. But we cannot expect justice from such, unless we are prepared to enforce it. Nearly five years since we heard four very religious persons in Geneva expressing their joy at the recent murder of the prophet Joseph, and we heard this Dr. Macnish, who makes no pretensions to religion, give them a most withering rebuke. Undoubtedly Mr. Barnes would rejoice in the martyrdom of prophets.

G. J. Adams writes us that he was not excommunicated from the church of God, as asserted by J. V. Himes, but that he was honorably acquitted.—Voree Herald.

We have said nothing of the kind—never knew that he belonged to the church of God. We said, excommunicated by Joseph Smith. Thomas M'Kenzie, Mormon preacher, told us last week, that he was at Nauvoo when Adams was excommunicated by Smith, that he was a bad man, and they should not be considered responsible for his wickedness.—Advent Herald, April 28.

This, Mr. Himes, is a mere quibble, unworthy the leader of a numerous, enterprising and comparatively intelligent sect. Every one perfectly understands what church we speak of as the church of God, and consequently knows that with us it is all one thing whether you say "excommunicated from the church," &c., or "excommunicated by Joseph." who presided over that church. The next week, however, the Advent Herald comes out with the following:—

"Correction.—Thomas M'Kenzie informs us that we misunderstood him last week, respecting Adams. He was tried before Smith for a violation of the seventh commandment, and confessed his guilt. In virtue of his penitence, he was acquitted. Since Smith's death, he was again tried, for like offences, at Nauvoo, by the Twelve, and excommunicated—T. M'K. being present."

There is not the least probability that Mr. Himes misunderstood M'Kenzie. The first story was a lie, and the second is also a lie. They are too unlike for one to be misunderstood for the other. Mr. M'Kenzie having told one lie involved the necessity of another, and told the latter to escape the first. This involves the necessity of still another, as the Twelve notoriously had no jurisdiction over him. They could not try him if they would, and if Mr. Himes thinks that P. P. Pratt, Orson Hyde and their set tried him for any such offence, he is greener than we ever gave him credit for.

We tell Mr. Himes further, that this Thomas M'Kenzie is no Mormon at all, and is not sent out to gather up books for the benefit of the Mormons, as the Herald states in another article. This is a mere imposture, a regular swindle. Probably at this time the books committed to him may be found at some second hand book store, where he has parted with them to raise the wind. This is bad business, Mr. Himes. You can find men enough to scandalize the Mormons, without paying them for it with a puff.

For the Gospel Herald.

COLLATERAL TESTIMONY OF THE TRUTH AND DIVINITY OF THE BOOK OF MORMON.—No. 5.

All who are familiar with the Book of Mormon know that the peculiar, dark, swarthy complexion of skin that distinguishes the present race of American Indians from the present race of the Anglo Saxon origin of men, is in consequence of a direct curse of God on them, (the Indians,) called in the Book of Mormon "Lamanites," (page 223,) as distinguishing them from the Nephites, who descended from the same family of one "Lehi," who left Jerusalem (of Palestine) six hundred years before the christian era. Said "curse" was placed on the progeny of "Laman," (one of the sons of Lehi,) because of their apostacy and intolerable wickedness and persecutions which they practiced on the progeny of Nephi, (Laman's brother.) The Book of Mormon informs that the Nephites were a "white and delightsome people," and so were the Lamanites until a certain time, when God placed a severe and chastising curse on them, for the reasons above stated; which "curse" is still manifest in both their complexion, filthiness and barbarous practical character.

And further, the Book of Mormon informs us that said "curse" is to remain on the Lamanites until they are restored to the favor and blessings of God in the "latter days," through the medium of the gospel of Jesus Christ contained in the Book of Mormon, the record of their fathers. The Book of Mormon further informs us that the Lamanites declared an extirminating "war" against the Nephites, near the close of the fourth century of the christian era, in the country now called "Mexico," near the head of the gulf of the same name. Said war was pushed on with great rage and fury, the Nephites continually falling and retreating before the "battle ax, sword, arrows and spears" of the Lamanites, until the Nephites were all destroyed to a man, except "twenty-four" persons, who fled to a place unknown to "Moroni," the only remaining person left to record the sad tale of woes and disasters that had befallen his brethren, the Nephites, leaving the Lamanites the principal masters of the American continent. This war closed at the hill "Cumorah," Manchester, Ontario Co., N. Y., in the A. D., 420. As collateral to the point that the people spoken of in the following account are probably the descendants of the "twenty-four" persons spoken of above, I present the following. The same is strongly hinted at by Messrs. Catherwood and Stephens in their account of their antiquarian researches in Central America, as published in New York, 1841.

"North of about latitude 30 and west of longitude 107, comprising a portion of both the Californias, lies a vast tract of country, as yet wholly unexplored. No map presents the slightest feature of its configuration, drawn from any other authority than that of conjecture, and the foot of no civilized adventurer has broken the stillness of its seclusion. It is the Ethiopia of the American continent. Until recently the world knew not even if it were inhabited, nor as yet have we learned much of other value than merely to assure us that it is peopled by a peculiar race, and to stimulate the desire to explore the country and learn its history and condition. The California Indians report the existence of a people of whom they have only a slight knowledge, and whose habits are entirely different from their own. The Catholics of Mexico have endeavored to pierce the country, for the purpose of establishing missions, but have failed—not having been permitted to enter. They are said to be a semi-civilized race, with blue eyes, and straight, light hair. So far as accounts furnish ground for opinions, they are supposed to be a nation of indepentent farmers, decently clad, dwelling in good houses, with some fine towns, rich in precious metals and stones, practicing the arts to some degree of perfection, and worshiping fire. They are thought by some to be the descendants of the people who have left their memorials and all the history the world has of them, in the mysterious and remarkable ruins of Mexico and Central America. Doubtless ere long, by some means or other, the country will be explored by the adventurers now populating the Pacific coast."—Beloit Journal.

Look for more of the same nature soon. JOHN E. PAGE.

☞ The following comes to us marked:—

"An Offer.—It seems that Mr. Strang, editor of the Voree Herald, (a Mormon paper,) is the owner of a fine marble quarry, and that he deals to a limited extent in an article known in every printing office as 'imposing stone.' We have an offer to make to Br. Strang—if he will deliver us at Milwaukee, free of charge, a stone 2 feet wide and 6 feet long, duly dressed, we will furnish him a correct history of the rise of Mormonism, from notes personally taken upon the birth place of that precious humbug, 21 years ago.—We want the stone, and if Br. S. wants the history, we see not why a bargain may not be struck up. What say you, Brother?"—Watertown Chronicle.

☞ We beg to be excused making the exchange. Some time since Dr. Franklin filed his protest against asses being represented in Congress. We now file ours against their writing histories.—Tie up one of your ears for a sack and fetch us twelve dollars, and we will let you have as good a stone as a human printer ever made up a form on. As we are not beasts of burden, we will leave you to carry it to Watertown, via. Milwaukee.

What Labor Does.—Labor pays all rents and usury, besides sustaining all waste and decay of different descriptions of wealth. Not a penny does the merchant pay for the use of his place, or residence, or for the capital he employs, but that its value must be, in some way or other, drawn from the hands of toil. Not a broker shaves a note, but what labor must foot the bill.

What the Steam Engine Does.—"It propels, it rows, it skulls, it screws, it warps, it tows, it elevates, it lowers, it lifts, it pumps, it drains, it irrigates, it draws, it pulls, it drives, it pushes, it carries, it brings, it scatters, it collects, it condenses, it extracts, it splits, it breaks, it confines, it opens, it shuts, it digs, it shovels, it excavates, it plows, it threshes, it separates, it winnows, it washes, it grinds, it crushes, it sifts, it bolts, it mixes, it kneads, it moulds, it stamps, it punches, it beats, it presses, it picks, it hews, it cuts, it shaves, it saws, it planes, it turns, it bores, it mortices, it drills, it heads, it blows, it forges, it rolls, it hammers, it rasps, it files, it polishes, it rivets, it sweeps, it brushes, it scutches, it cards, it spins, it winds, it twists, it throws, it weaves, it shears, it coins, it prints."

The Best is Left.—"I am fallen," cried Jeremy Taylor, "into the hands of publicans and sequestrators, and they have taken all from me. What now? Let me look about me! They have left me sun and moon, fire and water, a loving wife, and many friends to pity me, and some to relieve me; and I can still discourse, and, unless I list, they have not taken away my merry countenance, and my cheerful spirits, and a good conscience; they have still left me the providence of God, and all the promises of the gospel, and my religion, and my hopes of heaven, and my charity to them too. And still I sleep, and digest, and eat, and drink; I read and meditate; I can walk in my neighbor's pleasant fields and see the varieties of natural beauties, and delight in all that in which God delights, that is, in virtue and wisdom, in the whole creation, and in God himself."

For the Gospel Herald.

COLLATERAL TESTIMONY OF THE TRUTH AND DIVINITY OF THE BOOK OF MORMON.—No. 5.

All who are familiar with the Book of Mormon know that the peculiar, dark, swarthy complexion of skin that distinguishes the present race of American Indians from the present race of the Anglo Saxon origin of men, is in consequence of a direct curse of God on them, (the Indians,) called in the Book of Mormon "Lamanites," (page 223,) as distinguishing them from the Nephites, who descended from the same family of one "Lehi," who left Jerusalem (of Palestine) six hundred years before the christian era. Said "curse" was placed on the progeny of "Laman," (one of the sons of Lehi,) because of their apostacy and intolerable wickedness and persecutions which they practiced on the progeny of Nephi, (Laman's brother.) The Book of Mormon informs that the Nephites were a "white and delightsome people," and so were the Lamanites until a certain time, when God placed a severe and chastising curse on them, for the reasons above stated; which "curse" is still manifest in both their complexion, filthiness and barbarous practical character.

And further, the Book of Mormon informs us that said "curse" is to remain on the Lamanites until they are restored to the favor and blessings of God in the "latter days," through the medium of the gospel of Jesus Christ contained in the Book of Mormon, the record of their fathers. The Book of Mormon further informs us that the Lamanites declared an extirminating "war" against the Nephites, near the close of the fourth century of the christian era, in the country now called "Mexico," near the head of the gulf of the same name. Said war was pushed on with great rage and fury, the Nephites continually falling and retreating before the "battle ax, sword, arrows and spears" of the Lamanites, until the Nephites were all destroyed to a man, except "twenty-four" persons, who fled to a place unknown to "Moroni," the only remaining person left to record the sad tale of woes and disasters that had befallen his brethren, the Nephites, leaving the Lamanites the principal masters of the American continent. This war closed at the hill "Cumorah," Manchester, Ontario Co., N. Y., in the A. D., 420. As collateral to the point that the people spoken of in the following account are probably the descendants of the "twenty-four" persons spoken of above, I present the following. The same is strongly hinted at by Messrs. Catherwood and Stephens in their account of their antiquarian researches in Central America, as published in New York, 1841.

"North of about latitude 30 and west of longitude 107, comprising a portion of both the Californias, lies a vast tract of country, as yet wholly unexplored. No map presents the slightest feature of its configuration, drawn from any other authority than that of conjecture, and the foot of no civilized adventurer has broken the stillness of its seclusion. It is the Ethiopia of the American continent. Until recently the world knew not even if it were inhabited, nor as yet have we learned much of other value than merely to assure us that it is peopled by a peculiar race, and to stimulate the desire to explore the country and learn its history and condition. The California Indians report the existence of a people of whom they have only a slight knowledge, and whose habits are entirely different from their own. The Catholics of Mexico have endeavored to pierce the country, for the purpose of establishing missions, but have failed—not having been permitted to enter. They are said to be a semi-civilized race, with blue eyes, and straight, light hair. So far as accounts furnish ground for opinions, they are supposed to be a nation of indepentent farmers, decently clad, dwelling in good houses, with some fine towns, rich in precious metals and stones, practicing the arts to some degree of perfection, and worshiping fire. They are thought by some to be the descendants of the people who have left their memorials and all the history the world has of them, in the mysterious and remarkable ruins of Mexico and Central America. Doubtless ere long, by some means or other, the country will be explored by the adventurers now populating the Pacific coast."—Beloit Journal.

Look for more of the same nature soon. JOHN E. PAGE.

☛ The following comes to us marked:—

"AN OFFER.—It seems that Mr. Strang, editor of the Voree Herald, (a Mormon paper,) is the owner of a fine marble quarry, and that he deals to a limited extent in an article known in every printing office as 'imposing stone.' We have an offer to make to Br. Strang—if he will deliver us at Milwaukee, free of charge, a stone 2 feet wide and 6 feet long, duly dressed, we will furnish him a correct history of the rise of Mormonism, from notes personally taken upon the birth place of that precious humbug, 21 years ago.—We want the stone, and if Br. S. wants the history, we see not why a bargain may not be struck up. What say you, Brother?"—Watertown Chronicle.

☛ We beg to be excused making the exchange. Some time since Dr. Franklin filed his protest against asses being represented in Congress. We now file ours against their writing histories.—Tie up one of your ears for a sack and fetch us twelve dollars, and we will let you have as good a stone as a human printer ever made up a form on. As we are not beasts of burden, we will leave you to carry it to Watertown, via. Milwaukee.

WHAT LABOR DOES.—Labor pays all rents and usury, besides sustaining all waste and decay of different descriptions of wealth. Not a penny does the merchant pay for the use of his place, or residence, or for the capital he employs, but that its value must be, in some way or other, drawn from the hands of toil. Not a broker shaves a note, but what labor must foot the bill.

WHAT THE STEAM ENGINE DOES.—"It propels, it rows, it skulls, it screws, it warps, it tows, it elevates, it lowers, it lifts, it pumps, it drains, it irrigates, it draws, it pulls, it drives, it pushes, it carries, it brings, it scatters, it collects, it condenses, it extracts, it splits, it breaks, it confines, it opens, it shuts, it digs, it shovels, it excavates, it plows, it threshes, it separates, it winnows, it washes, it grinds, it crushes, it sifts, it bolts, it mixes, it kneads, it moulds, it stamps, it punches, it beats, it presses, it picks, it hews, it cuts, it shaves, it saws, it planes, it turns, it bores, it mortices, it drills, it heads, it blows, it forges, it rolls, it hammers, it rasps, it files, it polishes, it rivets, it sweeps, it brushes, it scutches, it cards, it spins, it winds, it twists, it throws, it weaves, it shears, it coins, it prints."

THE BEST IS LEFT.—"I am fallen," cried Jeremy Taylor, "into the hands of publicans and sequestrators, and they have taken all from me. What now? Let me look about me! They have left me sun and moon, fire and water, a loving wife, and many friends to pity me, and some to relieve me; and I can still discourse, and, unless I list, they have not taken away my merry countenance, and my cheerful spirits, and a good conscience; they have still left me the providence of God, and all the promises of the gospel, and my religion, and my hopes of heaven, and my charity to them too. And still I sleep, and digest, and eat, and drink; I read and meditate; I can walk in my neighbor's pleasant fields and see the varieties of natural beauties, and delight in all that in which God delights, that is, in virtue and wisdom, in the whole creation, and in God himself."

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. BURGESS TO MR. STRANG.—No. 9.

Racine, May 10th, 1849.

MR. JAMES J. STRANG :—I will now make a few observations on your concluding review of my letters 3 and 4. I am happy to find you do not think we merit punishment for unbelief, or an effect which must depend on a cause independent of ourselves for its existence. Though you say, in your article on faith to J. E. Page, "there is no merit in the faith that believes with a reason, only in that which believes because of a mandate." This appears to me inconsistent; much like the doctrine of the priests of old, who,

To prove what look'd like lies was true,
They gave us miracles strange and new:
But to faith they gave the greatest prize,
That knaves the better might live on lies:
For who like a priest can understand
How to live in ease, on the fat of the land,
And work the "forbidden" day in seven,
To teach blind sinners the road to heaven?
Then hurrah for the good things every where,
To pay for preaching, creeds and prayer.

195. When you have informed me where I can perceive that star which has none beyond it, its name and place, it will be time enough for me to argue as though it was a fact. I have no reason to believe that you can see the boundary of the planetary region better than myself. So I trust you will consider my denial of the fact a sufficient excuse for not attempting to answer it. When the fact is established I will reply. When we have to assume planets in the regions of fancy, and affirm that they exist in nature to prove the existence of the supernatural, it is a sign we consider the facts which are near us are useless for the purpose. Probably you have proved that to your own satisfaction.

196. Our issue here was on my position that the different parts of nature mutually govern each other. I did say better take our illustrations (or facts) where we can best examine them. But you prefer supposing a star which we cannot examine, to prove a supposed supernatural being, equally beyond our reach. In my examples I said, "in the atmosphere the cold and heavy seeks an equilibrium with the warm and light, and if attraction exclusively governed all things, where would be the tendency to equilibrium?" According to you, the force called repulsion, pervading equally with attraction all planets, is the supernatural force. (Par. 83.) Had you discovered signs of repulsion and not of attraction, then attraction would have been the supernatural force, by the same rule. Thus your knowledge corresponds to the natural, and your ignorance to the supernatural, which is still but a name for the unknown cause of natural phenomena.

197. When I said, par. 74, "in the atmosphere the cold and heavy (air) seeks an equilibrium with the warm and light," as a proof of the different portions of nature governing each other, you say, par. 224, I have so connected these ideas together as to convey the idea that planets and stars, being warm and light, float in a cold and heavy atmosphere, at an immense distance from the earth, sun or something else, just as the balloon does from the earth. Then you inform me, "you make no war on sucklings." Well, perhaps I do. Pray, read it again, friend Strang; and if you cannot understand by common means, try the "Urim and Thummim." Why did you omit the first part of the sentence, as you frequently do?—Is it the force of habit? "If such errors are for want of understanding," did you ought to "give up discussion," as you recommend me? I can bear with such "nonsense," and seeing it comes from a prophet, I have more charity for common men.

198. You think, par. 225, that the nearest approach to the unchangeable and indestructible is in organization, not in the elements. Then plants and animals change less than oxygen, hydrogen, light, heat, &c. I hope you have not "changed brains with a baboon," as you seem to think I have, (par. 296,) and judge others by yourself.

199. You think, par. 227, that the evidence of the existence of God, Exodus chapt. 3, "would be well received if the author was dead, but generally rejected if living." I believe you are about right; for while Christ lived few believed he was the Son of God, and those were mostly ignorant, for appearances were against the belief. But when Christ was dead the priests' word was sufficient for the majority, as now, who are too indolent to think for themselves, and the appearances were wanting to deny it, we can believe without evidence better than against it.

Thus oft on earth the veriest Tartar
When dead, is thought a sacred martyr,
And proved by "epitaph" and "preaching,"
"Newspaper puffs" and "gospel teaching:"
While those who died for truth and right,
Are sent to hell by priests of mammon,
And doomed to grope in endless night;
Now is not this infernal gammon?

200. On the langunge argument, par. 229, you say I overlook the force of the fact "that whatever language is natural to any living creature, every one of the species possesses untaught." That is your definition of "natural language," but is it not natural to man to make articulate language also? I think so. 2d. You say "that articulate language is possessed by no human being, to the extent of a single word, unless it is taught him." The question then comes, could articulate language originate with mankind? Of what is it composed, but sounds common to all mankind? (whose articulating organs are perfect,) which sounds are stopped and compounded to represent by common consent the ideas we wish to express. We have now to trace the origin of the language we use to our teachers, they to their teachers, and so on, as far as practical, and as we cannot trace it to its first formation, take the best evidence we can to indicate its origin.

201. I think it most probable that as our first parents would necessarily have few ideas, like children, they needed and had but few words to express them; that as they gradually acquired new ideas they would utter new sounds to express them, and as their families increased the children would use the language of their parents, and add to it as they acquired new ideas, which they desired to express to each other. This is what we do now, which is the best reason we can have for supposing our parents did the same, as it accords with experience and reason.

202. The faculties necessary to effect this are those of the voice and imitation, which I presume you will admit are natural to man, and the effect of their cultivation is articulate language. Here we need no supposition of the supernatural to account for articulate language, nor the supposition that man could not originate language to prove the existence of the supernatural; both suppositions appear to me to vanish before the growing intelligence of mankind, communicated to each other by articulate language, writing and printing.

203. When you misrepresent me (in par. 230) by saying, "that by my rule there is to be neither faith in testimony, nor logic in argument," I consider falsehood and abuse are the best arguments you have to offer. It shows likewise that your testimony is unworthy of credence, and proves the divinity within you. According to your logic, if there is no evidence advanced against an assumption the evidence is conclusive that there is none. So if I affirm that a man of the moon came to Adam and taught him articulate language, I am not required to prove it; and if no one takes the trouble to

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. BURGESS TO MR. STRANG.—No. 9.

Racine, May 10th, 1849.

Mr. James J. Strang :—I will now make a few observations on your concluding review of my letters 3 and 4. I am happy to find you do not think we merit punishment for unbelief, or an effect which must depend on a cause independent of ourselves for its existence. Though you say, in your article on faith to J. E. Page, "there is no merit in the faith that believes with a reason, only in that which believes because of a mandate." This appears to me inconsistent; much like the doctrine of the priests of old, who,

To prove what look'd like lies was true,
They gave us miracles strange and new:
But to faith they gave the greatest prize,
That knaves the better might live on lies:
For who like a priest can understand
How to live in ease, on the fat of the land,
And work the "forbidden" day in seven,
To teach blind sinners the road to heaven?
Then hurrah for the good things every where,
To pay for preaching, creeds and prayer.

195. When you have informed me where I can perceive that star which has none beyond it, its name and place, it will be time enough for me to argue as though it was a fact. I have no reason to believe that you can see the boundary of the planetary region better than myself. So I trust you will consider my denial of the fact a sufficient excuse for not attempting to answer it. When the fact is established I will reply. When we have to assume planets in the regions of fancy, and affirm that they exist in nature to prove the existence of the supernatural, it is a sign we consider the facts which are near us are useless for the purpose. Probably you have proved that to your own satisfaction.

196. Our issue here was on my position that the different parts of nature mutually govern each other. I did say better take our illustrations (or facts) where we can best examine them. But you prefer supposing a star which we cannot examine, to prove a supposed supernatural being, equally beyond our reach. In my examples I said, "in the atmosphere the cold and heavy seeks an equilibrium with the warm and light, and if attraction exclusively governed all things, where would be the tendency to equilibrium?" According to you, the force called repulsion, pervading equally with attraction all planets, is the supernatural force. (Par. 83.) Had you discovered signs of repulsion and not of attraction, then attraction would have been the supernatural force, by the same rule. Thus your knowledge corresponds to the natural, and your ignorance to the supernatural, which is still but a name for the unknown cause of natural phenomena.

197. When I said, par. 74, "in the atmosphere the cold and heavy (air) seeks an equilibrium with the warm and light," as a proof of the different portions of nature governing each other, you say, par. 224, I have so connected these ideas together as to convey the idea that planets and stars, being warm and light, float in a cold and heavy atmosphere, at an immense distance from the earth, sun or something else, just as the balloon does from the earth. Then you inform me, "you make no war on suckliugs." Well, perhaps I do. Pray, read it again, friend Strang; and if you cannot understand by common means, try the "Urim and Thummim." Why did you omit the first part of the sentence, as you frequently do?—Is it the force of habit? "If such errors are for want of understanding," did you ought to "give up discussion," as you recommend me? I can bear with such "nonsense," and seeing it comes from a prophet, I have more charity for common men.

198. You think, par. 225, that the nearest approach to the unchangeable and indestructible is in organization, not in the elements. Then plants and animals change less than oxygen, hydrogen, light, heat, &c. I hope you have not "changed brains with a baboon," as you seem to think I have, (par. 296,) and judge others by yourself.

199. You think, par. 227, that the evidence of the existence of God, Exodus chapt. 3, "would be well received if the author was dead, but generally rejected if living." I believe you are about right; for while Christ lived few believed he was the Son of God, and those were mostly ignorant, for appearances were against the belief. But when Christ was dead the priests' word was sufficient for the majority, as now, who are too indolent to think for themselves, and the appearances were wanting to deny it, we can believe without evidence better than against it.

Thus of: on earth the veriest Tartar
When dead, is thought a sacred martyr,
And proved by "epitaph" and "preaching,"
"Newspaper puffs" and "gospel teaching:"
While those who died for truth and right,
Are sent to hell by priests of mammon,
And doomed to grope in endless night;
Now is not this infernal gammon?

200. On the language argument, par. 229, you say I overlook the force of the fact "that whatever language is natural to any living creature, every one of the species possesses untaught." That is your definition of "natural language," but is it not natural to man to make articulate language also? I think so. 2d. You say "that articulate language is possessed by no human being, to the extent of a single word, unless it is taught him." The question then comes, could articulate language originate with mankind? Of what is it composed, but sounds common to all mankind? (whose articulating organs are perfect,) which sounds are stopped and compounded to represent by common consent the ideas we wish to express. We have now to trace the origin of the language we use to our teachers, they to their teachers, and so on, as far as practical, and as we cannot trace it to its first formation, take the best evidence we can to indicate its origin.

201. I think it most probable that as our first parents would necessarily have few ideas, like children, they needed and had but few words to express them; that as they gradually acquired new ideas they would utter new sounds to express them, and as their families increased the children would use the language of their parents, and add to it as they acquired new ideas, which they desired to express to each other. This is what we do now, which is the best reason we can have for supposing our parents did the same, as it accords with experience and reason.

202. The faculties necessary to effect this are those of the voice and imitation, which I presume you will admit are natural to man, and the effect of their cultivation is articulate language. Here we need no supposition of the supernatural to account for articulate language, nor the supposition that man could not originate language to prove the existence of the supernatural; both suppositions appear to me to vanish before the growing intelligence of mankind, communicated to each other by articulate language, writing and printing.

203. When you misrepresent me (in par. 230) by saying, "that by my rule there is to be neither faith in testimony, nor logic in argument," I consider falsehood and abuse are the best arguments you have to offer. It shows likewise that your testimony is unworthy of credence, and proves the divinity within you. According to your logic, if there is no evidence advanced against an assumption the evidence is conclusive that there is none. So if I affirm that a man of the moon came to Adam and taught him articulate language, I am not required to prove it; and if no one takes the trouble to prove the contrary, it is conclusive evidence that it was so. This might be convenient to prove the divinity of Mormonism, Mohammedanism, or any other "ism," destitute of evidence. That a lawyer should advance such notions, and accuse others of opposing logic, I can account for on no other principle than that of a quack, calling others quacks to avoid suspicion. Were I to use such arguments, I should expect you would ask if I was sane or honest.

204. You say, par. 233, I might as well express my own opinion and offer it as proof as refer to A. J. Davis' revelations. Is that what you do? I have read some revelations of Davis', Smith and Strang, all appear to me to contain more of the weakness and ignorance of humanity than anything else. Though I think those of Davis the best. But if you will show me how I can distinguish divine revelations from human revelations, I shall be most happy to learn. Yours for the truth, EDWIN BURGESS.

THE GATHERING.

The doctrine of the gathering is generally understood among the saints, but it is not so generally lived up to as we could wish. In the revelation given Jan. 7th, the Lord says: "I have called you together to enjoy the blessings of my people, and ye have not heeded my call." Brethren, let this be said of you no longer. Be obedient to the word of the Lord in gathering to the places of safety which he has appointed. There is no promise of peace, health or prosperity only in the stakes of Zion, and there only in obedience to God's law and the shepherds he has appointed over us. The Lord has promised the saints his choicest blessings, even the blessings of his everlasting kingdom, if they would gather together and serve him. Are they not worth serving for? Let those who believe they are, show their faith by their works. The Apostle informs us that faith without works is dead. Numbers have manifested their living faith by going up to possess the land God has given us in the great lakes. By the last mail from Beaver Island we learn that two companies have already arrived, and two more are expected soon. We hope many more will go in the course of the season.—The work of the Lord requires it. In the revelation before referred to, he says: "Let many gather to the islands which I have appointed for your gathering, that this Order (the Order of Enoch) may be kept more perfectly." This is the order of God's everlasting kingdom—the order of the Church of the first born—the law of the celestial kingdom. Fifteen years ago the Lord said:—

"Behold, I say unto you, were it not for the transgressions of my people, speaking concerning the church and not individuals, they might have been redeemed even now: but behold, they have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands, but are full of all manner of evil, and do not impart of their substance, as becometh saints, to the POOR and AFFLICTED among them, and are not UNITED according to the UNION required by the LAW of the CELESTIAL KINGDOM: and Zion CANNOT be built up unless it is by the principles of the LAW of the CELESTIAL KINGDOM, otherwise I cannot receive her unto myself; and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer." D. & C. sec. cii. par. 2.

May God forbid that this should again be said of us. We have suffered enough. Let us obey God and prevail.

Beaver Island, April 12th, 1849.

NOT DEAD YET.

Well, Strang, this is the 12th of April. I have lived to see the death of anno domini 1848. He is dead and gone, never more to return. But he has left a name never to be forgotten. The future historian will once and again refer back to his name as one of the most eventful periods since the death of our Savior. But '48 is gone, and a new year now reigns in his stead. I am not dead yet, of course I am not, notwithstanding the fact that I have been cursed even unto death, by an apostate of course, except that I speedily retraced my steps. I am not dead yet, neither do I expect to be soon. Why, his curses slid off just like water from a gooses' back. What! talk about dying here on Beaver! Vain thought! Why, we have not got a school boy on the Island but what can tell you that people have to go off the Island to die. But to return to the intended subject.

Since I last saw you many events worthy of note have transpired. Dire winter with all of its gloomy scenes has passed, and beautiful spring with all its manifold blessings has returned. I said dire winter, not because it has been more direful than other winters, but because all winters are comparatively gloomy. We have, to be sure, had a cold winter, but it has been a steady cold. No rains or mud to encounter here. In fact, we have no mud at any time in the year to perplex us, like you have off in the States. This day is just as beautiful a day as the sun ever shone upon. Many undoubtedly suppose this to be a very lonesome place to spend the winter. So thought I last winter, consequently wintered down in the fertile Buckeye State, as you well remember. This winter I gave Beaver a trial, and of the more than twenty winters that I have lived I never enjoyed one better.

The fore part of the winter we got up a lyceum, which afforded much recreation as well as an excellent chance for the young to learn to speak, also for the experienced to improve. President Aldrich himself took an active part in the discussions, notwithstanding the fact that Parmeter proclaimed that all who had anything to do with the lyceum would apostatize. Yes, this is the same hocus pocus who has since become the great Heresiarch of that apostate band. Yes, he is the man who has done all that a man of his abilities possibly could do to cause jealous and malignant feelings towards us, and to discompose and cause disaffection among ourselves. Yes, he is the self same and identical man who said you had no more authority here, and that you would never live to see the Island again, or if you did possibly come you would keep secreted, insomuch that there would no one see you save himself and one or two others of his band. Thus prophecied this excrementuous groveler. Sage hypocrite! He has now entirely swayed. He has fallen, fallen to rise no more. His notoriety is here too well known.

I have given you thus much of the history of Parmeter. I will return to the subject of the Island. We have not received the mail yet this spring, and only once during the winter, owing to our not being up and doing, for individuals went down to Mackinac several times last winter. The St. Joseph arrived here on the 13th of March, being the first that called this spring, as well as last; the last boat that called in the fall was the 26th of Nov., making some four months and a half between. More anon. Respectfully yours,

GREELY.

Since writing the above Parmeter has left the Island. His farewell adieu was, "I have had enough of this place—no place to get a living here—more here now than can get a living." Quite likely, if they were all like you. A pretty thing it is to sit down all the live long winter and never do a stroke of work, then get up, "can't get a living here." Quite a different yarn from what you told me last summer, when I wished to employ you to do some carpenter work. Just mark the answer you gave me then: "Why, you will not be willing to give me as much, I don't suppose, as I am making at the business I am engaged in now. Well, I am making my four and five dollars per day." Can't get a living, eh! Away with such trifling consummate liars. Well and truthfully did our neighbors, on his disappearance, exclaim, "good riddance to bad rubbish."

G.

prove the contrary, it is conclusive evidence that it was so. This might be convenient to prove the divinity of Mormonism, Mohammedanism, or any other "ism," destitute of evidence. That a lawyer should advance such notions, and accuse others of opposing logic, I can account for on no other principle than that of a quack, calling others quacks to avoid suspicion. Were I to use such arguments, I should expect you would ask if I was sane or honest.

204. You say, par. 233, I might as well express my own opinion and offer it as proof as refer to A. J. Davis' revelations. Is that what you do? I have read some revelations of Davis', Smith and Strang, all appear to me to contain more of the weakness and ignorance of humanity than anything else. Though I think those of Davis the best. But if you will show me how I can distinguish divine revelations from human revelations, I shall be most happy to learn. Yours for the truth, EDWIN BURGESS.

THE GATHERING.

The doctrine of the gathering is generally understood among the saints, but it is not so generally lived up to as we could wish. In the revelation given Jan. 7th, the Lord says: "I have called you together to enjoy the blessings of my people, and ye have not heeded my call." Brethren, let this be said of you no longer. Be obedient to the word of the Lord in gathering to the places of safety which he has appointed. There is no promise of peace, health or prosperity only in the stakes of Zion, and there only in obedience to God's law and the shepherds he has appointed over us. The Lord has promised the saints his choicest blessings, even the blessings of his everlasting kingdom, if they would gather together and serve him. Are they not worth serving for? Let those who believe they are, show their faith by their works. The Apostle informs us that faith without works is dead. Numbers have manifested their living faith by going up to possess the land God has given us in the great lakes. By the last mail from Beaver Island we learn that two companies have already arrived, and two more are expected soon. We hope many more will go in the course of the season.—The work of the Lord requires it. In the revelation before referred to, he says: "Let many gather to the islands which I have appointed for your gathering, that this Order (the Order of Enoch) may be kept more perfectly." This is the order of God's everlasting kingdom—the order of the Church of the first born—the law of the celestial kingdom. Fifteen years ago the Lord said:—

"Behold, I say unto you, were it not for the transgressions of my people, speaking concerning the church and not individuals, they might have been redeemed even now: but behold, they have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands, but are full of all manner of evil, and do not impart of their substance, as becometh saints, to the POOR and AFFLICTED among them, and are not UNITED according to the UNION required by the LAW of the CELESTIAL KINGDOM: and Zion CANNOT be built up unless it is by the principles of the LAW of the CELESTIAL KINGDOM, otherwise I cannot receive her unto myself; and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer." D. & C. sec. cii. par. 2.

May God forbid that this should again be said of us. We have suffered enough. Let us obey God and prevail.

Beaver Island, April 12th, 1849.

NOT DEAD YET.

Well, Strang, this is the 12th of April. I have lived to see the death of anno domini 1848. He is dead and gone, never more to return. But he has left a name never to be forgotten. The future historian will once and again refer back to his name as one of the most eventful periods since the death of our Savior. But '48 is gone, and a new year now reigns in his stead. I am not dead yet, of course I am not, notwithstanding the fact that I have been spread even unto death, by an apostate of course, except that I speedily retraced my steps. I am not dead yet, neither do I expect to be soon. Why, his curses slid off just like water from a gooses' back. What! talk about dying here on Beaver! Vain thought! Why, we have not got a school boy on the Island but what can tell you that people have to go off the Island to die. But to return to the intended subject.

Since I last saw you many events worthy of note have transpired. Dire winter with all of its gloomy scenes has passed, and beautiful spring with all its manifold blessings has returned. I said dire winter, not because it has been more direful than other winters, but because all winters are comparatively gloomy. We have, to be sure, had a cold winter, but it has been a steady cold. No rains or mud to encounter here. In fact, we have no mud at any time in the year to perplex us, like you have off in the States. This day is just as beautiful a day as the sun ever shone upon. Many undoubtedly suppose this to be a very lonesome place to spend the winter. So thought I last winter, consequently wintered down in the fertile Buckeye State, as you well remember. This winter I gave Beaver a trial, and of the more than twenty winters that I have lived I never enjoyed one better.

The fore part of the winter we got up a lyceum, which afforded much recreation as well as an excellent chance for the young to learn to speak, also for the experienced to improve. President Aldrich himself took an active part in the discussions, notwithstanding the fact that Parmeter proclaimed that all who had anything to do with the lyceum would apostatize. Yes, this is the same hocus pocus who has since become the great Heresiarch of that apostate band. Yes, he is the man who has done all that a man of his abilities possibly could do to cause jealous and malignant feelings towards us, and to discompose and cause disaffection among ourselves. Yes, he is the self same and identical man who said you had no more authority here, and that you would never live to see the Island again, or if you did possibly come you would keep secreted, insomuch that there would no one see you save himself and one or two others of his band. Thus prophecied this excrementuous groveler. Sage hypocrite! He has now entirely swayed. He has fallen, fallen to rise no more. His notoriety is here too well known.

I have given you thus much of the history of Parmeter. I will return to the subject of the Island. We have not received the mail yet this spring, and only once during the winter, owing to our not being up and doing, for individuals went down to Mackinac several times last winter. The St. Joseph arrived here on the 13th of March, being the first that called this spring, as well as last; the last boat that called in the fall was the 26th of Nov., making some four months and a half between. More anon. Respectfully yours,

GREELY.

Since writing the above Parmeter has left the Island. His farewell adieu was, "I have had enough of this place—no place to get a living here—more here now than can get a living." Quite likely, if they were all like you. A pretty thing it is to sit down all the live long winter and never do a stroke of work, then get up, "can't get a living here." Quite a different yarn from what you told me last summer, when I wished to employ you to do some carpenter work. Just mark the answer you gave me then: "Why, you will not be willing to give me as much, I don't suppose, as I am making at the business I am engaged in now. Well, I am making my four and five dollars per day." Can't get a living, eh! Away with such trifling consummate liars. Well and truthfully did our neighbors, on his disappearance, exclaim, "good riddance to bad rubbish." G.

☞ This letter, like all we have before published, gives an importance to Parmeter's apostacy which never attached to it. At Beaver it is now forgotten. If Parmeter is not the laziest man living, it is because he is too lazy to be ahead in anything. The first cause of his apostacy is, that Pres. Aldrich would not support him in his laziness and find him bread when he would not work. All his operations were a sheer contrivance to get his living without labor. When the chance run out here, he went off to try it elsewhere. God grant his lot may fall among his like. [Ed.

THE PILLAR OF SALT—LOT'S WIFE.

In the library of Congress, at Washington, may be seen a specimen of rock salt, taken from a pillar of salt in the Dead Sea, fancifully called Lot's wife. For an account of this curiosity, and other objects of interest in Palestine and the remote east, we are indebted to a work about to be published by Carey and Hart, of Philadelphia, entitled, "A Narrative of the late Expedition to the Dead Sea, from a Diary by one of the Party. Edited by Edward P. Montague."—We quote the following description.—Chris. Intel.

"Wednesday, April 26th, 1848.—This morning we are examining the hills of Usdom, and seeking with a good deal of curiosity the ever famous 'Pillar of Salt,' which marks the judgment of God upon Lot's wife. On pulling round the shores of the sea, we saw an immense column, rounded and turret shaped, facing towards the south-east. This, we were told by our Arabs, was the pillar of salt in which Lot's wife was encased at the overthrow of Sodom. With some difficulty we landed here, and our esteemed commander and Dr. Anderson obtained specimens from it, and Mr. Dale took a sketch of it. Our boat's crew landed also, and their curiosity was gratified by their gathering specimens, some from its summit, and others from its base. It was measured, and found to be sixty feet in circumference. We cannot suppose that Lot's wife was a person so large that her dimensions equaled those of this column.—Many think the stature of Lot's wife was equal to the pillar of salt which the Bible speaks of. Let that pillar be where it may, and whatever be its size, they will not probably credit that this is the pillar. Their preconceived notions having much to do with the matter, they would have everybody think that she was at once transformed into a column of very fine grained, beautifully white salt, about five feet, or a few inches more in height, and in circumference that of a common sized person of the nineteenth century. Be that as it may, no two minds have, perhaps, formed exactly the same opinion on this matter who have not visited this spot. But here we are, around this immense column, and we find that it is really of solid rock salt—one mass of crystalization. It is in the vicinity which is pointed out in the Bible in relation to the matter in question, and appears to be the only one of its kind here. And the Arabs of the district to whom this pillar is pointed out, declare it to be that of Lot's wife—the identical pillar of salt to which the Bible has reference—the tradition having been handed down from each succeeding generation to their children, as the Americans hand down to succeeding generations the traditions of Bunker Hill Monument, in Boston. My own opinion of the matter is, that, Lot's wife having lingered behind, in disobedience to the express command of God—given in order to insure her safety—that while so lingering she became overwhelmed in the descending fluid, and formed the model, or foundation, of this extraordinary column. If it has been produced by common, by natural causes, it is but right to suppose that others might be found of a similar description. One is scarcely able to abandon the idea that it stands here as a lasting memorial of God's punishing a most deliberate act of disobedience, committed at a time when he was about to show distinguishing regard for the very person.

"We carefully brought away our specimens, intending to show them to our friends in America, when we shall have the good fortune to arrive there, and talk with them on the subject. This end of the sea is very shallow, and its waters more dense, more salt than where they are of greater depth; here it is from one to five feet in depth. We now leave this 'Pillar of Salt,' and return to our boats, richly laden with specimens from it. We cross the sea, and obtain soundings on our way. We had nearly reached the opposite side, when a new danger assailed us. We had braved all the dangers of the Jordan, in its streams and on its banks, and the peculiar storms on the Dead Sea, and now a specimen of the dangers to which man is subject visits us. The fearful scorching sirocco rages around, threatening us with suffocation and blindness, and causing almost insupportable thirst. The 'fiery atmosphere' seems as though it would doom us to the very fate of the unfortunate citizens who now lie engulphed below our boats; but we fearlessly pulled away until, coming to a place called Meserah, we land amidst the raging heat of the wind, and there encamp for the night."

PHYSICAL ADVANTAGES OF THE SABBATH.

The Sabbath is God's gracious present to a world, and for wearied minds and bodies it is the grand restorative. The Creator has given us a natural restorative—sleep; and a moral restorative—Sabbath keeping; and it is ruin to dispense with either. Under the pressure of high excitement, individuals have passed weeks together with little sleep, or none; but when the process is long continued, the ever driven powers rebel, and fever, delirium, and death come on. Nor can the natural amount be systematically curtailed without corresponding mischief. The Sabbath does not arrive like sleep. The day of rest does not steal over us like the hours of slumber. It does not entrace us almost whether we will or not; but, addressing us as intelligent beings, our Creator assures us that we need it, and bids us notice its return, and court its renovation. And if going in the face of the Creator's kindness, we force ourselves to work all days alike, it is not long till we pay the forfeit. The mental worker, the man of business or the man of letters, finds his ideas becoming turbid and slow, the equipoise of his faculties is upset; he grows moody, fitful, and capricious; and with his mental elasticity broken, should any disaster occur, he subsides into habitual melancholy, or in self destruction, speeds his guilty exit from a gloomy world. And the manual worker, the artizan, the engineer—toiling on from day to day, and week to week, the bright intuition of his eye gets blunted, and, fogetful of their cunning, his fingers no longer perform their feats of twinkling agility, nor by a plastic and tuneful touch mould dead matter, or wield mechanic power; but mingling his life's blood in his daily drudgery, his locks are prematurely gray, his genial humor sours, and slaving it till he has become a morose or reckless man, for any extra effort or any blink of balmy feeling he must stand indebted to opium or alchohol. To an industrious population, so essential is the periodic rest that, when the attempt was made in France to abolish the weekly Sabbath, it was found necessary to issue a decree suspending labor one day in every ten.

Master manufacturers have stated that they could perceive an evident deterioration in quality of the goods produced, as the week drew near a close, just because the tact alertness and energy of the workers began to experience inevitible exhaustion. When a steamer on the Thames blew up, a few months ago, the firemen and stocker laid the blame on their broken Sabbath; it stupified and embittered them, made them blunder at their work, and heedless what havoc those blunders might create. And we have been informed when the engines of an extensive steam packet company, in the south of England, were getting constantly damaged, the mischief

☞ This letter, like all we have before published, gives an importance to Parmeter's apostacy which never attached to it. At Beaver it is now forgotten. If Parmeter is not the laziest man living, it is because he is too lazy to be ahead in anything. The first cause of his apostacy is, that Pres. Aldrich would not support him in his laziness and find him bread when he would not work. All his operations were a sheer contrivance to get his living without labor. When the chance run out here, he went off to try it elsewhere. God grant his lot may fall among his like. [Ed.

THE PILLAR OF SALT—LOT'S WIFE.

In the library of Congress, at Washington, may be seen a specimen of rock salt, taken from a pillar of salt in the Dead Sea, fancifully called Lot's wife. For an account of this curiosity, and other objects of interest in Palestine and the remote east, we are indebted to a work about to be published by Carey and Hart, of Philadelphia, entitled, "A Narrative of the late Expedition to the Dead Sea, from a Diary by one of the Party. Edited by Edward P. Montague."—We quote the following description.—Chris. Intel.

"Wednesday, April 26th, 1848.—This morning we are examining the hills of Usdom, and seeking with a good deal of curiosity the ever famous 'Pillar of Salt,' which marks the judgment of God upon Lot's wife. On pulling round the shores of the sea, we saw an immense column, rounded and turret shaped, facing towards the south-east. This, we were told by our Arabs, was the pillar of salt in which Lot's wife was encased at the overthrow of Sodom. With some difficulty we landed here, and our esteemed commander and Dr. Anderson obtained specimens from it, and Mr. Dale took a sketch of it. Our boat's crew landed also, and their curiosity was gratified by their gathering specimens, some from its summit, and others from its base. It was measured, and found to be sixty feet in circumference. We cannot suppose that Lot's wife was a person so large that her dimensions equaled those of this column.—Many think the stature of Lot's wife was equal to the pillar of salt which the Bible speaks of. Let that pillar be where it may, and whatever be its size, they will not probably credit that this is the pillar. Their preconceived notions having much to do with the matter, they would have everybody think that she was at once transformed into a column of very fine grained, beautifully white salt, about five feet, or a few inches more in height, and in circumference that of a common sized person of the nineteenth century. Be that as it may, no two minds have, perhaps, formed exactly the same opinion on this matter who have not visited this spot. But here we are, around this immense column, and we find that it is really of solid rock salt—one mass of crystalization. It is in the vicinity which is pointed out in the Bible in relation to the matter in question, and appears to be the only one of its kind here. And the Arabs of the district to whom this pillar is pointed out, declare it to be that of Lot's wife—the identical pillar of salt to which the Bible has reference—the tradition having been handed down from each succeeding generation to their children, as the Americans hand down to succeeding generations the traditions of Bunker Hill Monument, in Boston. My own opinion of the matter is, that Lot's wife having lingered behind, in disobedience to the express command of God—given in order to insure her safety—that while so lingering she became overwhelmed in the descending fluid, and formed the model, or foundation, of this extraordinary column. If it has been produced by common, by natural causes, it is but right to suppose that others might be found of a similar description. One is scarcely able to abandon the idea that it stands here as a lasting memorial of God's punishing a most deliberate act of disobedience, committed at a time when he was about to show distinguishing regard for the very person.

"We carefully brought away our specimens, intending to show them to our friends in America, when we shall have the good fortune to arrive there, and talk with them on the subject. This end of the sea is very shallow, and its waters more dense, more salt than where they are of greater depth; here it is from one to five feet in depth. We now leave this 'Pillar of Salt,' and return to our boats, richly laden with specimens from it. We cross the sea, and obtain soundings on our way. We had nearly reached the opposite side, when a new danger assailed us. We had braved all the dangers of the Jordan, in its streams and on its banks, and the peculiar storms on the Dead Sea, and now a specimen of the dangers to which man is subject visits us. The fearful scorching sirocco rages around, threatening us with suffocation and blindness, and causing almost insupportable thirst. The 'fiery atmosphere' seems as though it would doom us to the very fate of the unfortunate citizens who now lie engulphed below our boats; but we fearlessly pulled away until, coming to a place called Meserah, we land amidst the raging heat of the wind, and there encamp for the night."

PHYSICAL ADVANTAGES OF THE SABBATH.

The Sabbath is God's gracious present to a world, and for wearied minds and bodies it is the grand restorative. The Creator has given us a natural restorative—sleep; and a moral restorative—Sabbath keeping; and it is ruin to dispense with either. Under the pressure of high excitement, individuals have passed weeks together with little sleep, or none; but when the process is long continued, the ever driven powers rebel, and fever, delirium, and death come on. Nor can the natural amount be systematically curtailed without corresponding mischief. The Sabbath does not arrive like sleep. The day of rest does not steal over us like the hours of slumber. It does not entrace us almost whether we will or not; but, addressing us as intelligent beings, our Creator assures us that we need it, and bids us notice its return, and court its renovation. And if going in the face of the Creator's kindness, we force ourselves to work all days alike, it is not long till we pay the forfeit. The mental worker, the man of business or the man of letters, finds his ideas becoming turbid and slow, the equipoise of his faculties is upset; he grows moody, fitful, and capricious; and with his mental elasticity broken, should any disaster occur, he subsides into habitual melancholy, or in self destruction, speeds his guilty exit from a gloomy world. And the manual worker, the artizan, the engineer—toiling on from day to day, and week to week, the bright intuition of his eye gets blunted, and, fogetful of their cunning, his fingers no longer perform their feats of twinkling agility, nor by a plastic and tuneful touch mould dead matter, or wield mechanic power; but mingling his life's blood in his daily drudgery, his locks are prematurely gray, his genial humor sours, and slaving it till he has become a morose or reckless man, for any extra effort or any blink of balmy feeling he must stand indebted to opium or alchohol. To an industrious population, so essential is the periodic rest that, when the attempt was made in France to abolish the weekly Sabbath, it was found necessary to issue a decree suspending labor one day in every ten.

Master manufacturers have stated that they could perceive an evident deterioration in quality of the goods produced, as the week drew near a close, just because the tact alertness and energy of the workers began to experience inevitible exhaustion. When a steamer on the Thames blew up, a few months ago, the firemen and stocker laid the blame on their broken Sabbath; it stupified and embittered them, made them blunder at their work, and heedless what havoc those blunders might create. And we have been informed when the engines of an extensive steam packet company, in the south of England, were getting constantly damaged, the mischief was instantly repaired by giving the men what the bounty of our Creator had given them long before, the rest of each seventh day. And what is so essential to industrial efficiency, is no less indispensable to the laborer's health and longevity.—North British Review.

GEMS "OF POOR RICHARD."—One of our contemporaries has seen a copy of Dr. Franklin's Almanac of unbroken files for twenty-five years, from which it makes the following selections:—

If pride leads the van, beggary brings up the rear.

Keep thy shop, and thy shop will keep thee.

God heals, and the doctor takes the fees.

Mary's mouth cost her nothing, for she never opens it but at others expense.

The worst wheel of the cart makes the most noise.

Tart words makes no friends; a spoonful of honey will catch more flies than a gallon of vinegar.

Beware of little expenses; a small leak will sink a great ship.

A mob is a monster; heads enough, but no brains.

Nothing humbler than ambition when it is about to climb.

When prosperity was well mounted, she let go the bridle, and soon came tumbling out of the saddle.

A change of fortune hurts a wise man no more than a change in the moon.

A false friend and a shadow attend only while the sun shines.

If you would not be forgotten as soon as you are dead and rotten, either write things worth reading, or do something worth writing.

Nothing dries sooner than a tear.

Kings and bears often worry their keepers.

He's a fool that makes his doctor his heir.

Love well, whip well.

Hunger never saw bad bread.

Great talkers, little doers.

The poor have little—beggars none—the rich too much—enough, not one.

Mankind are very odd creatures. One half censure what they practice, and the other half practice what they censure. The rest always say and do as they ought.

Old boys have their playthings as well as young ones; the difference is only in the price.

If man could have half his wishes, he would double his troubles.

Christianity commands us to pass by injuries, policy to let them pass by us.

If you would keep your secret from an enemy tell it not to a friend.

THERE WERE GIANTS IN THOSE DAYS.

Professor Silliman, in one of his lectures, mentions the discovery of an enormous animal of the lizard tribe, measuring eighty feet in length, from which he infers that all animals have degenerated in size—and this supposition is fortified by a reference to the history of giants in the olden time. It appears from the list furnished by the Professor, that we of the present day are mere "Tom Thumbs," when compared with the huge individualities of antiquity. Here is the list:—

The giant exhibited in Rome, in 1745, measured over eighteen feet.

Gorapins saw a girl who was ten feet high.

Funnman, who lived in the time of Eugene II., measured eleven feet and a half.

The chevalier Seorg, in his voyage to the peaks of Teneriffe, found in one of the caverns of that mountain the head of Guance, which had eighty teeth, and it was supposed that his body was not less than fifteen feet long.

The giant Ferragus, slain by Atlando, nephew to Charlemagne, was eighteen feet high.

In 1614, near St. Germain, was found the tomb of the giant Isoret, who was twenty feet high.

In 1590, near Rouen, they found a skeleton whose skull held a bushel of corn, and whose body must have been eighteen feet long.

Platerus saw at Lucerne, the bones of a human subject nineteen feet long.

The bones of the giant Buart were found in 1702, near the banks of the river Moderi. He was twenty-two and a half feet high.

In 1618, near a castle in Dauphine, a tomb was found thirty feet long, twelve wide, and eight high, on which was cut on a grey stone the words, "Kentolochus Rex." The skeleton was found entire, and was twenty-five and a half feet long, ten feet across the shoulders, and five feet deep from the breast bone to the back.

Near Mazarine, in Sicily, in 1516, was found the skeleton of a giant thirty feet high. His head was the size of a hogshead, and each of his teeth weighed five ounces.

Near Palermo, in Sicily, in 1548, was found the skeleton of a giant thirty feet long, and another in 1550 thirty feet high.

REMARKABLE TRACE OF ANTIQUITY.—The perfect skeleton of an Indian woman was found last Wednesday afternoon in the sand bank excavation adjoining Niagara river, immediately back of Major Whitney's new residence. We understand that it rested in a sitting posture, with its head facing towards the north, about four feet below the surface. Immediately above grew a large Hickory 3 feet in diameter, at least 200 years old, whose huge roots encircled the skeleton on every side. Owing to the frost in the sand, and the number of roots to be removed, it was obtained with great difficulty. Rumor says Indian relics were found with it. One of Dr. Conger's students, who was present at the time of the exhumation, says he has no doubt that when the frost leaves the ground the jewels accustomed to be worn by Indian ladies may then be found.—To all appearance 200 years must have passed by on the wings of the wind since vitality left these remnants of perhaps a once mighty and powerful chief's daughter.—Iris

LOVE OF NATURE.—He who has a love for nature can never be alone. In the shells he picks up on the shore—in the leaf, fading at his feet—in the grain of sand and the morning dew—he sees enough to employ his mind for hours. Such a mind is never idle. He studies the works of his Maker which he sees all around him, and finds a pleasure of which the devotee of sin and folly can form no conception.

HEAD WORK.—Head work is the hardest work in the world.—The artisan feels this if at any time he has to spend a whole day in calculation. All men of learning testify to the same truth, and their meager frames and sallow complexions tell a plainer tale than their words. Sir Edward Coke, the great English lawyer, speaks thus concerning his great work:—"While we were in hand with these four parts of the Institutes, we often having occasion to go into the country, did in some sort envy the honest ploughmen and other mechanics. For one, when he was at work, would merrily sing, and the ploughman whistle some self-pleasing tune, and yet their work both proceeded and succeeded; but he that takes upon himself to write, doth captivate all the faculties and powers both of his mind and body, and must be only attentive to that which he collecteth, without any expression of joy or cheerfulness while he is at work."

SOUND ADVICE.—Never do anything that can denote an angry mind, for although every body is born with a certain degree of passion, and from untoward circumstances will sometimes feel its operation and be what is called "out of humor," yet a sensible man or woman will never allow it to be discovered. Check and restrain it; never make any determination until it has entirely subsided; and always avoid saying anything which you may wish unsaid.

was instantly repaired by giving the men what the bounty of our Creator had given them long before, the rest of each seventh day. And what is so essential to industrial efficiency, is no less indispensable to the laborer's health and longevity.—North British Review.

GEMS "OF POOR RICHARD."—One of our contemporaries has seen a copy of Dr. Franklin's Almanac of unbroken files for twenty-five years, from which it makes the following selections:—

If pride leads the van, beggary brings up the rear.

Keep thy shop, and thy shop will keep thee.

God heals, and the doctor takes the fees.

Mary's mouth cost her nothing, for she never opens it but at others expense.

The worst wheel of the cart makes the most noise.

Tart words makes no friends; a spoonful of honey will catch more flies than a gallon of vinegar.

Beware of little expenses; a small leak will sink a great ship.

A mob is a monster; heads enough, but no brains.

Nothing humbler than ambition when it is about to climb.

When prosperity was well mounted, she let go the bridle, and soon came tumbling out of the saddle.

A change of fortune hurts a wise man no more than a change in the moon.

A false friend and a shadow attend only while the sun shines.

If you would not be forgotten as soon as you are dead and rotten, either write things worth reading, or do something worth writing.

Nothing dries sooner than a tear.

Kings and bears often worry their keepers.

He's a fool that makes his doctor his heir.

Love well, whip well.

Hunger never saw bad bread.

Great talkers, little doers.

The poor have little—beggars none—the rich too much—enough, not one.

Mankind are very odd creatures. One half censure what they practice, and the other half practice what they censure. The rest always say and do as they ought.

Old boys have their playthings as well as young ones; the difference is only in the price.

If man could have half his wishes, he would double his troubles.

Christianity commands us to pass by injuries, policy to let them pass by us.

If you would keep your secret from an enemy tell it not to a friend.

THERE WERE GIANTS IN THOSE DAYS.

Professor Silliman, in one of his lectures, mentions the discovery of an enormous animal of the lizard tribe, measuring eighty feet in length, from which he infers that all animals have degenerated in size—and this supposition is fortified by a reference to the history of giants in the olden time. It appears from the list furnished by the Professor, that we of the present day are mere "Tom Thumbs," when compared with the huge individualities of antiquity. Here is the list:—

The giant exhibited in Rome, in 1745, measured over eighteen feet.

Gorapins saw a girl who was ten feet high.

Funnman, who lived in the time of Eugene II., measured eleven feet and a half.

The chevalier Seorg, in his voyage to the peaks of Teneriffe, found in one of the caverns of that mountain the head of Guance, which had eighty teeth, and it was supposed that his body was not less than fifteen feet long.

The giant Ferrargus, slain by Atlando, nephew to Charlemagne, was eighteen feet high.

In 1614, near St. Germain, was found the tomb of the giant Isoret, who was twenty feet high.

In 1590, near Rouen, they found a skeleton whose skull held a bushel of corn, and whose body must have been eighteen feet long.

Platerus saw at Lucerne, the bones of a human subject nineteen feet long.

The bones of the giant Buart were found in 1702, near the banks of the river Moderi. He was twenty-two and a half feet high.

In 1618, near a castle in Dauphine, a tomb was found thirty feet long, twelve wide, and eight high, on which was cut on a grey stone the words, "Kentolochus Rex." The skeleton was found entire, and was twenty-five and a half feet long, ten feet across the shoulders, and five feet deep from the breast bone to the back.

Near Mazarine, in Sicily, in 1516, was found the skeleton of a giant thirty feet high. His head was the size of a hogshead, and each of his teeth weighed five ounces.

Near Palermo, in Sicily, in 1548, was found the skeleton of a giant thirty feet long, and another in 1550 thirty feet high.

REMARKABLE TRACE OF ANTIQUITY.—The perfect skeleton of an Indian woman was found last Wednesday afternoon in the sand bank excavation adjoining Niagara river, immediately back of Major Whitney's new residence. We understand that it rested in a sitting posture, with its head facing towards the north, about four feet below the surface. Immediately above grew a large Hickory 2 feet in diameter, at least 200 years old, whose huge roots encircled the skeleton on every side. Owing to the frost in the sand, and the number of roots to be removed, it was obtained with great difficulty. Rumor says Indian relics were found with it. One of Dr. Conger's students, who was present at the time of the exhumation, says he has no doubt that when the frost leaves the ground the jewels accustomed to be worn by Indian ladies may then be found.—To all appearance 200 years must have passed by on the wings of the wind since vitality left these remnants of perhaps a once mighty and powerful chief's daughter.—Iris

LOVE OF NATURE.—He who has a love for nature can never be alone. In the shells he picks up on the shore—in the leaf, fading at his feet—in the grain of sand and the morning dew—he sees enough to employ his mind for hours. Such a mind is never idle. He studies the works of his Maker which he sees all around him, and finds a pleasure of which the devotee of sin and folly can form no conception.

HEAD WORK.—Head work is the hardest work in the world.—The artisan feels this if at any time he has to spend a whole day in calculation. All men of learning testify to the same truth, and their meager frames and sallow complexions tell a plainer tale than their words. Sir Edward Coke, the great English lawyer, speaks thus concerning his great work:—"While we were in hand with these four parts of the Institutes, we often having occasion to go into the country, did in some sort envy the honest ploughman and other mechanics. For one, when he was at work, would merrily sing, and the ploughman whistle some self-pleasing tune, and yet their work both proceeded and succeeded; but he that takes upon himself to write, doth captivate all the faculties and powers both of his mind and body, and must be only attentive to that which he collecteth, without any expression of joy or cheerfulness while he is at work."

SOUND ADVICE.—Never do anything that can denote an angry mind, for although every body is born with a certain degree of passion, and from untoward circumstances will sometimes feel its operation and be what is called "out of humor," yet a sensible man or woman will never allow it to be discovered. Check and restrain it; never make any determination until it has entirely subsided; and always avoid saying anything which you may wish unsaid.

CONDITION OF THE LABORER.

There is a great deal of mock philanthropy on this subject, which ought not to pass for more than it is worth. Men talk fluently about the education of the working classes, the melioration of their physical circumstances, and the like, and often wind up with some high flown phrases about the dignity of labor and the equal rights of man. At the same time, these very men are devoting all their energies to the support of a system which must necessarily depress the laborer, and defraud him of his inherent rights. They are perfectly willing to pocket the avails of the poor man's labor, but shudder at the thought of being obliged themselves to take part in his toil; they would as lief go to the funeral of a daughter or a sister as see her a household drudge or a factory girl; but they are eloquent apostles of progressive democracy, and no doubt gain many votes by their loud talk in favor of the rights of labor. But so long as labor is toilsome and repulsive as it now is, every body who can do so will get rid of it, and of course must be supported by the industry of another. Labor must be so organized that it will be attractive to all that will engage in it, and that all will reap the fruits of their endeavors. Nature has made physical existence a necessity, and under congenial circumstances a pleasure. She has always made a pair of hands, where she has made human stomach and brain. A man might as well be all stomach, all brain, as to think of living without the use of his hands. And what better for the hands than productive industry—industry that will feed the mouth, clothe the back and provide the eye and ear with all the delights which they crave?

ORATORS AND NEWSPAPERS.

Compare the orator, one of the noblest vehicles for the diffusion of thought, with the newspaper, and we may gain a faint glimpse of the ubiquituous power of the latter. The orator speaks to a few hundreds, the newspaper addresses millions, the words of the orator may die in the air, the language of the newspaper is stamped on tablets imperishable as marble. The arguments of the orator may follow each other so rapidly that a majority of the audience may struggle in a net ratiocination; the reading of a newspaper may be scanned at leisure without a fear of perplexity. The passion of the orator influences an assembly, the feeling of a newspaper electrifies a continent. The orator is for an edifice, the newspaper for the world—the one shines for an hour, the other glows for all time—the orator may be compared to lightning, which flashes over a valley for a moment, but leaves it again in darkness; the newspaper to a sun blazing steadily over the whole earth, and "fixed on the basis of its own eternity." Printing has been happily defined 'the art which preserves all arts.' Printing makes the orator more than an orator. It catches up his dying words, and breathes into them the breath of life. It is the speaking gallery through which the orator thunders in the ears of ages. He leans from the tomb over the cradle of the rising generations.—Mann's Family Physician.

Not a Bad Custom.—The Lamnites, a people descended from the Sacedemonians, had a custom among themselves which must have produced an excellent effect upon their morals. At an oppointed time the young people were all assembled at one place, their conduct was closely examined, and he who was found most eminent for virtue and services to his country, had permission to choose for his wife any lady he preferred out of the whole country. "Admirable institution!" exclaims Montesque. The only recommendation that young men could have on this occasion, was owing to virtue, and to the services done their country. Love, beauty, chastity, birth, and even wealth itself were all, in some measure, the dowery of virtue. A nobler and grander recompense, less chargeable to a pretty state, and more capable of influencing both sexes, could scarce be imagined.—Ex. paper.

THE ERRING.

BY JULIA A. FLETCHER.

Think gently of the erring!
Ye know not of the power
With which the dark temptation came,
In some unguarded hour.
Ye may not know how earnestly
They struggled, or how well,
Until the hour of weakness came,
And sadly thus they fell.

Think gently of the erring!
Oh do not thou forget,
However daily stained by sin,
He is thy brother yet.
Heir of the self-same heritage!
Child of the self-same God!
He hath but stumbled in the path,
Thou hast in weakness trod.

Speak gently to the erring!
For is it not enough
That innocence and peace have gone,
Without thy censure rough!
It sure must be a weary lot
That sin-crushed heart to bear,
And they who share a happier fate,
Their chidings well may spare.

Speak kindly to the erring!
Thou yet mayest lead them back,
With holy words and tones of love,
From misery's thorny track.
Forget not thou hast often sinned,
And sinful yet must be—
Deal gently with the erring one
As God hath dealt with thee!

Recipe to Make a Readable Article.—First, select an attractive subject. If it be an event of recent occurrence, or a striking anecdote, or a novel idea, all the better.

Secondly, begin at once with a subject. Eschew long introductions about anything in general, and nothing in particular. If you have a story to tell, out with it at once, and make your moral reflections at the close. Many are prevented from reading an article by a dull introduction, the bearing of which they do not discover; and they reasonably infer that the whole article is as dull as the begining. But a pointed remark at the onset, or the relation of an incident, or the mention of a distinguished name, would have secured their attention, and they would have been tempted to pursue the writer through his essay.

Thirdly, be short. O that men would learn to write short articles. The gift of continuance is a most unhappy gift, especially when received by those who write for the newspapers.

Let the subject be well chosen, well begun, and close when it is finished, and it will probably be read. Almost any man, (however unaccustomed to writing), by following these rules, may do something with his pen. But this taking a dull theme, and writing about it, and then a few words by way of introduction, and a few more by way of conclusion, is a misrerable style of writing for the press in this age of the world.—N. Y. Obs.

CONDITION OF THE LABORER.

There is a great deal of mock philanthropy on this subject, which ought not to pass for more than it is worth. Men talk fluently about the education of the working classes, the melioration of their physical circumstances, and the like, and often wind up with some high flown phrases about the dignity of labor and the equal rights of man. At the same time, these very men are devoting all their energies to the support of a system which must necessarily depress the laborer, and defraud him of his inherent rights. They are perfectly willing to pocket the avails of the poor man's labor, but shudder at the thought of being obliged themselves to take part in his toil; they would as lief go to the funeral of a daughter or a sister as see her a household drudge or a factory girl; but they are eloquent apostles of progressive democracy, and no doubt gain many votes by their loud talk in favor of the rights of labor. But so long as labor is toilsome and repulsive as it now is, every body who can do so will get rid of it, and of course must be supported by the industry of another. Labor must be so organized that it will be attractive to all that will engage in it, and that all will reap the fruits of their endeavors. Nature has made physical existence a necessity, and under congenial circumstances a pleasure. She has always made a pair of hands, where she has made human stomach and brain. A man might as well be all stomach, all brain, as to think of living without the use of his hands. And what better for the hands than productive industry—industry that will feed the mouth, clothe the back and provide the eye and ear with all the delights which they crave?

ORATORS AND NEWSPAPERS.

Compare the orator, one of the noblest vehicles for the diffusion of thought, with the newspaper, and we may gain a faint glimpse of the ubiquituous power of the latter. The orator speaks to a few hundreds, the newspaper addresses millions, the words of the orator may die in the air, the language of the newspaper is stamped on tablets imperishable as marble. The arguments of the orator may follow each other so rapidly that a majority of the audience may struggle in a net ratiocination; the reading of a newspaper may be scanned at leisure without a fear of perplexity. The passion of the orator influences an assembly, the feeling of a newspaper electrifies a continent. The orator is for an edifice, the newspaper for the world—the one shines for an hour, the other glows for all time—the orator may be compared to lightning, which flashes over a valley for a moment, but leaves it again in darkness; the newspaper to a sun blazing steadily over the whole earth, and "fixed on the basis of its own eternity." Printing has been happily defined 'the art which preserves all arts.' Printing makes the orator more than an orator. It catches up his dying words, and breathes into them the breath of life. It is the speaking gallery through which the orator thunders in the ears of ages. He leans from the tomb over the cradle of the rising generations.—Mann's Family Physician.

NOT A BAD CUSTOM.—The Lamnites, a people descended from the Sacedemonians, had a custom among themselves which must have produced an excellent effect upon their morals. At an oppointed time the young people were all assembled at one place, their conduct was closely examined, and he who was found most eminent for virtue and services to his country, had permission to choose for his wife any lady he preferred out of the whole country. "Admirable institution!" exclaims Montesque. The only recommendation that young men could have on this occasion, was owing to virtue, and to the services done their country. Love, beauty, chastity, birth, and even wealth itself were all, in some measure, the dowery of virtue. A nobler and grander recompense, less chargeable to a pretty state, and more capable of influencing both sexes, could scarce be imagined.—Ex. paper.

THE ERRING.

BY JULIA A. FLETCHER.

Think gently of the erring!
Ye know not of the power
With which the dark temptation came,
In some unguarded hour.
Ye may not know how earnestly
They struggled, or how well,
Until the hour of weakness came,
And sadly thus they fell.

Think gently of the erring!
Oh do not thou forget,
However daily stained by sin,
He is thy brother yet.
Heir of the self-same heritage!
Child of the self-same God!
He hath but stumbled in the path,
Thou hast in weakness trod.

Speak gently to the erring!
For is it not enough
That innocence and peace have gone,
Without thy censure rough!
It sure must be a weary lot
That sin-crushed heart to bear,
And they who share a happier fate,
Their chidings well may spare.

Speak kindly to the erring!
Thou yet mayest lead them back,
With holy words and tones of love,
From misery's thorny track.
Forget not thou hast often sinned,
And sinful yet must be—
Deal gently with the erring one
As God hath dealt with thee!

RECIPE TO MAKE A READABLE ARTICLE.—First, select an attractive subject. If it be an event of recent occurrence, or a striking anecdote, or a novel idea, all the better.

Secondly, begin at once with a subject. Eschew long introductions about anything in general, and nothing in particular. If you have a story to tell, out with it at once, and make your moral reflections at the close. Many are prevented from reading an article by a dull introduction, the bearing of which they do not discover; and they reasonably infer that the whole article is as dull as the begining. But a pointed remark at the onset, or the relation of an incident, or the mention of a distinguished name, would have secured their attention, and they would have been tempted to pursue the writer through his essay.

Thirdly, be short. O that men would learn to write short articles. The gift of continuance is a most unhappy gift, especially when received by those who write for the newspapers.

Let the subject be well chosen, well begun, and close when it is finished, and it will probably be read. Almost any man, (however unaccustomed to writing), by following these rules, may do something with his pen. But this taking a dull theme, and writing about it, and then a few words by way of introduction, and a few more by way of conclusion, is a miserable style of writing for the press in this age of the world.—N. Y. Obs.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 12.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. JUNE 7, 1849. [WHOLE No. 128.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

☞ The following letter was not written for publication, but for the private use of a personal friend of the writer. Bro. G. J. Adams sent it to us with permission to publish.

Baltimore, Md., April 9th, 1849.

MR. PETER HESS,—DEAR BROTHER:—Yours of the 29th ult. was duly handed over to me by Bro. Parkinson, and nothing but an hourly press of business all last week prevented my answering it immediately. In relation to the vision you refer to, it is out of my power to give it in detail. Language is too poor to describe the grandeur and glory of its conclusion. Even while I write I am overwhelmed by the remembrance of its brightness and dazzling splendor. Besides this, as there was such a manifest and direct allusion to myself even by name, that I feel much timidity in speaking of the subject for fear that I might be suspected of being puffed up with vain glory. God forbid that this should be so. I will endeavor, my dear brother, to give you some of its leading features, this is all I can do.

But before doing this it may be well to premise a little in relation to what went before. In the first place, remember that there lives not the man who held in more supreme contempt and utter detestation the doctrine and usages of the saints than I did. I do not think that my nature or sense of right would have permitted me to persecute their persons, but with the name of "Mormon," and follower of "Joe Smith," was associated all that was base, vile and dishonorable. I looked upon the leaders as a set of designing knaves, and the people as a poor deluded crowd, for whom straight jackets would be the proper apparel, and lunatic asylums the most fit receptacles.

But I praise God that he has convinced me that I was the fool and madman, and that that which I regarded as fanaticism and delusion was God's glorious truth. I first met Bro. George with prejudice and personal dislike, but in spite of what I deemed my better reason I was induced to hear him. You may depend upon it I heard him with astonishment and wonder. I gazed, I listened, I was humbled and convinced, light from eternity burst in upon my soul. My prejudices fell before the power and light of glorious truth. I was awed and overwhelmed. But will you believe it, that, notwithstanding this, owing to former prejudices and predilections, I deemed it impossible that I could become connected with the poor, despised, persecuted saints. I desired to be honest. I felt at last willing to throw myself into the hands of God, determined at all hazards to follow in the path that divine wisdom should point. I felt, I knew that here I could not err. I lacked wisdom. God had promised to bestow it. I ventured to the great fountain. I humbly asked the great head of the church for a revelation of his will, not only concerning me, but in relation to the church of his saints. I approached him with confidence. I believed, I felt, I knew that I would not be repulsed. I was not disappointed. But my dear brother, I feel myself inadequate to the task you have imposed upon me. With fear and awe, and yet with delight, I will venture upon it however.

In the night vision I first found myself associated with Bro. George in attending a religious meeting. It was in appearance like an old fashioned Methodist love feast. I arose to relate my experience as in former times, but for a time my mouth seemed closed. I could not give utterance to the thoughts and feelings which filled my soul. Suddenly my mouth was opened, my tongue gave utterance to my pent up feelings, but the burden of my tale was news. I spake of revelations, the ministry of angels and God's work in the last days. I was astonished at myself. I was frightened. I tried to check the current of my speech and thoughts, but in vain. Suddenly the preacher having charge of the meeting sprung upon me. His countenance was changed, his features were no longer human, they assumed the characteristics that we attribute to demons. I struggled firmly with him. I thought he would crush me to the earth. My heart seemed ready to melt within me. I was about to yield to his apparent superior strength. He whispered in my ear, "renounce your position, retract your assertions, take back what you have uttered, (though it is God's truth, and from God,) and I will spare you." "Never! NEVER!" I exclaimed, "so help me the great Jehovah; fiend of darkness, I defy you, I am beyond your power: I trust in the living God." With a yell of savage disappointment he fled from me, and I was left all alone; even brother George had left me, which I thought very strange.

When I had a little recovered myself, an old negro came to me and proffered me aid to leave the place; for I found myself entirely destitute and far from the place I had left, in a desolate region, and I knew not the way back. I told him I was without means to recompense him for his trouble. He replied, that another and greater would reward him for all he would do for me, and even if he did not, he would do it for truth's sake. We started on our way, but every step were beset by difficulties, dangerous precipices, thorny woods, stagnant swamps, deep and rapid rivers were passed in succession, hunger and thirst, fatigue and toil all were mine, but every difficulty was overcome, and at last I found myself by the side of a rail road, which led to the place or city which I had left, and to which I felt anxious to return. But I was hindered. Train after train passed with the speed of lightning. I could not get a conveyance. I thought far off as it was I would foot it. In an instant I was seized with a numbness in my feet, and rendered incapable of travel.

At this moment a man of strange apparel and singular countenance came to me, saying, "Doctor, you will never return to your former position or location; another sphere awaits you. Be humble and submissive, trust in God, and all will be well." Then turning and pointing towards the east, he said, "thither lies your road." I looked, but could see no road, no way of travel. All appeared an impenetrable forest. "Fear not," said he, "your way will be opened, only go forward." I told him I had no means of travel. "It will come," said he. With that several persons ap-

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 12.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. JUNE 7, 1849. [WHOLE No. 128.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

☞ The following letter was not written for publication, but for the private use of a personal friend of the writer. Bro. G. J. Adams sent it to us with permission to publish.

Baltimore, Md., April 9th, 1849.

MR. PETER HESS,—DEAR BROTHER:—Yours of the 29th ult. was duly handed over to me by Bro. Parkinson, and nothing but an hourly press of business all last week prevented my answering it immediately. In relation to the vision you refer to, it is out of my power to give it in detail. Language is too poor to describe the grandeur and glory of its conclusion. Even while I write I am overwhelmed by the remembrance of its brightness and dazzling splendor. Besides this, as there was such a manifest and direct allusion to myself even by name, that I feel much timidity in speaking of the subject for fear that I might be suspected of being puffed up with vain glory. God forbid that this should be so. I will endeavor, my dear brother, to give you some of its leading features, this is all I can do.

But before doing this it may be well to premise a little in relation to what went before. In the first place, remember that there lives not the man who held in more supreme contempt and utter detestation the doctrine and usages of the saints than I did. I do not think that my nature or sense of right would have permitted me to persecute their persons, but with the name of "Mormon," and follower of "Joe Smith," was associated all that was base, vile and dishonorable. I looked upon the leaders as a set of designing knaves, and the people as a poor deluded crowd, for whom straight jackets would be the proper apparel, and lunatic asylums the most fit receptacles.

But I praise God that he has convinced me that I was the fool and madman, and that that which I regarded as fanaticism and delusion was God's glorious truth. I first met Bro. George with prejudice and personal dislike, but in spite of what I deemed my better reason I was induced to hear him. You may depend upon it I heard him with astonishment and wonder. I gazed, I listened, I was humbled and convinced, light from eternity burst in upon my soul. My prejudices fell before the power and light of glorious truth. I was awed and overwhelmed. But will you believe it, that, notwithstanding this, owing to former prejudices and predilections, I deemed it impossible that I could become connected with the poor, despised, persecuted saints. I desired to be honest. I felt at last willing to throw myself into the hands of God, determined at all hazards to follow in the path that divine wisdom should point. I felt, I knew that here I could not err. I lacked wisdom. God had promised to bestow it. I ventured to the great fountain. I humbly asked the great head of the church for a revelation of his will, not only concerning me, but in relation to the church of his saints. I approached him with confidence. I believed, I felt, I knew that I would not be repulsed. I was not disappointed. But my dear brother, I feel myself inadequate to the task you have imposed upon me. With fear and awe, and yet with delight, I will venture upon it however.

In the night vision I first found myself associated with Bro. George in attending a religious meeting. It was in appearance like an old fashioned Methodist love feast. I arose to relate my experience as in former times, but for a time my mouth seemed closed. I could not give utterance to the thoughts and feelings which filled my soul. Suddenly my mouth was opened, my tongue gave utterance to my pent up feelings, but the burden of my tale was news. I spake of revelations, the ministry of angels and God's work in the last days. I was astonished at myself. I was frightened. I tried to check the current of my speech and thoughts, but in vain. Suddenly the preacher having charge of the meeting sprung upon me. His countenance was changed, his features were no longer human, they assumed the characteristics that we attribute to demons. I struggled firmly with him. I thought he would crush me to the earth. My heart seemed ready to melt within me. I was about to yield to his apparent superior strength. He whispered in my ear, "renounce your position, retract your assertions, take back what you have uttered, (though it is God's truth, and from God,) and I will spare you." "Never! never!" I exclaimed, "so help me the great Jehovah; fiend of darkness, I defy you, I am beyond your power: I trust in the living God." With a yell of savage disappointment he fled from me, and I was left all alone; even brother George had left me, which I thought very strange.

When I had a little recovered myself, an old negro came to me and proffered me aid to leave the place; for I found myself entirely destitute and far from the place I had left, in a desolate region, and I knew not the way back. I told him I was without means to recompense him for his trouble. He replied, that another and greater would reward him for all he would do for me, and even if he did not, he would do it for truth's sake. We started on our way, but every step were beset by difficulties, dangerous precipices, thorny woods, stagnant swamps, deep and rapid rivers were passed in succession, hunger and thirst, fatigue and toil all were mine, but every difficulty was overcome, and at last I found myself by the side of a rail road, which led to the place or city which I had left, and to which I felt anxious to return. But I was hindered. Train after train passed with the speed of lightning. I could not get a conveyance. I thought far off as it was I would foot it. In an instant I was seized with a numbness in my feet, and rendered incapable of travel.

At this moment a man of strange apparel and singular countenance came to me, saying, "Doctor, you will never return to your former position or location; another sphere awaits you. Be humble and submissive, trust in God, and all will be well." Then turning and pointing towards the east, he said, "thither lies your road." I looked, but could see no road, no way of travel. All appeared an impenetrable forest. "Fear not," said he, "your way will be opened, only go forward." I told him I had no means of travel. "It will come," said he. With that several persons approached me. As they did so the strange being left me. The persons who now came up seemed to be like myself, poor, many of them poor women. Without saying a word, save God speed you, they all put money in my hand, some more, some less, but none much. I had an impression at the time that what I received was to be shared with Bro. George, but still he was not with me. Yet I expected to meet him again.

I commenced my journey eastward. As I came to the border of the woods I perceived a small path leading in the direction I was to take. I entered it and pursued my journey. It appeared strange to me that I was alone, yet I felt that Bro. George was somewhere about; that he had not deserted me, but was in some way associated with my travels. I had not gone far when, upon looking back, I saw the strange man who had sent me, together with two others, rapidly coming after me. As soon as they overtook me they threw me to the earth, and took from me all that had been given to me, but did not seem disposed to harm me. Indeed, upon rising, the elder of the three said to me, looking kindly upon me, "go on, it is all right, you do not need this, persevere, keep straight forward, always tending to the east." In an instant they were out of sight, and I was again alone. Directly after they had left me I went on my way, but shortly came to a broad water, over which it seemed impossible that I should pass, as I saw no conveyance, and if there had been I was without means.

While I was pondering upon my situation I felt a weight in my pockets, and to my astonishment found my money not only restored, but greatly increased, changed into gold, but in foreign coin, together with several bills of credit. How I got over the water I do not remember, but I got over, and now the scene changed. I was in woods in which were trees of foreign growth. Palm trees, and olive, and large cedars, and many unknown shrubs and plants were around me. Again the vision changed. I was in a strange city. The buildings were antiquated. The signs and letters on the houses were in an unknown tongue, like the Arabic, and the thronged streets had crowds of people in outlandish garments.—Again the scene changed. I was in the midst of war and bloodshed, ruin and devastation was around me, burning and falling houses, flame and smoke filled the air, shrieks of women and frantic cries of children mingled in wild confusion, heard high above the din of battle and the crash of falling walls.

Again the vision changed. All now was peace. But, my brother, I cannot describe the mild, beautiful grandeur of the scene which burst upon my sight. A light above the brightness of the sun was around me. The most ravishing prospect of a beauteous landscape was before me. I was overwhelmed, and fell prostrate to the earth. I saw no one, but I heard a voice that seemed to proceed from the excellent glory say, as if addressing saints, behold! my servant, whom I have chosen as one of my faithful witnesses to bring about the things he has beheld, and in my name shall he stand before nations and kings and rulers of the earth, and he shall be mighty through me to bring about the restoration of my people in the last days. Behold, his name is Appleton. Behold, he was a dweller in the community of Philadelphia. With all my strength, and from my heart, I shouted, amen!

The vision ended, but, my brother, the impression will never be effaced from my mind. I wait patiently for what awaits me, and in all things feel disposed to say, the will of God be done. Thus, my dear brother Hess, I have given you what I have not so fully revealed to any one. Use it as you like, but prudently. In relation to your other questions, I can only say that I have baptized none since our beloved brother George left us. The brethren are all strong in the faith, giving glory to God. We are expecting an increase to the membership of the faithful. We enjoy sweet communion with each other and with the great head of the church, and "are of one heart and one mind." God bless you and yours and keep you to the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. The saints salute you. I am your fellow laborer in the new and everlasting covenant,

C. W. APPLETON.

☞ The following letter was received by one of the brethren here a few days since. We publish it with pleasure for the information of all. [Ed.

Zodiac, [Texas,] March 15th, 1849.

Dear Sir:—I take this opportunity to answer your letter of October 21st, 1848. I will firstly give you a slight sketch of our circumstances, in addition to what is written in the pamphlet. We have added to our improvements until we have eleven hundred acres under good fence, between two and three hundred acres of corn, which is ready to commence tending, it having been planted in the forepart of February. We are making preparations to plant a large amount of stock corn in this month and next. We also calculate to put in fifty acres of sweet potatoes, and plant in cotton as much as will do us. Our mills and other machinery are doing extraordinary good business. We have tried the experiment with wheat, and find it to do well in this country, and have several acres on the ground this season, which looks extraordinary well. We have bought twenty-eight hundred acres of land four miles from this place, with excellent timber and water.

Now as touching the price of grain and other things, they are very high in this new country. Common lumber is worth from $25,00 to $30,00 a thousand. Good cypress lumber is worth $50,00 a thousand. I could enter into a contract, if I would, at $1,00 a bushel for all the corn we will have to spare, which, if the season is good, will be several thousand bushels. We have about four hundred head of cattle and horses, and mules sufficient to do our business.

Cows here bear a high price, say from $12,00 to $16,00, for which I am selling them daily. One hundred and fifty miles from this place, where I have bought a great many head of cattle, they can be had for from $3,00 to $4,00 a head, in average lots, viz.: a cow and calf, and yearling, one two year old, a three year old and a four year old. One hundred miles from this place corn can be had for 37½ cents a bushel, pork in the same vicinity is worth from $2,-00 to $2,50 a hundred, but we raise our own. While at the old mill, 75 miles below this, we purchased a good many thousand bushels of corn, and sold the same in meal, but we anticipate the time is near at hand when we will be able to stock our own mills, as we calculate by another year to have from 500 to 600 acres of broke ground. There might some sixteen or eighteen hands more work to good advantage at our machinery, at making all kinds of furniture. But we have no use for any, only such as are willing to live on an equality with their neighbor, and not to call aught they possess their own, but that it all belongs to the Lord, and we are his servants for Christ's sake. However, the valley is very large, and those wishing to live by a dissected interest can find convenient locations.

It is not prudent to bring any stock whatever from the north country to this, for it is very seldom that anything like the half that is brought here will live. For the want of this information we suffered the loss of many hundred dollars. We sold all our beds and bedding except one blanket and pillow to each person, until twenty-three persons could put all their goods and effects aboard of one wagon, and their helpless women and children on the same, and the whole of the cooking and eating utensils weighed but twenty-one pounds, and I myself was one of the twenty-three persons. I remain as ever your friend and brother, proached me. As they did so the strange being left me. The persons who now came up seemed to be like myself, poor, many of them poor women. Without saying a word, save God speed you, they all put money in my hand, some more, some less, but none much. I had an impression at the time that what I received was to be shared with Bro. George, but still he was not with me. Yet I expected to meet him again.

LYMAN WIGHT.

I commenced my journey eastward. As I came to the border of the woods I perceived a small path leading in the direction I was to take. I entered it and pursued my journey. It appeared strange to me that I was alone, yet I felt that Bro. George was somewhere about; that he had not deserted me, but was in some way associated with my travels. I had not gone far when, upon looking back, I saw the strange man who had sent me, together with two others, rapidly coming after me. As soon as they overtook me they threw me to the earth, and took from me all that had been given to me, but did not seem disposed to harm me. Indeed, upon rising, the elder of the three said to me, looking kindly upon me, "go on, it is all right, you do not need this, persevere, keep straight forward, always tending to the east." In an instant they were out of sight, and I was again alone. Directly after they had left me I went on my way, but shortly came to a broad water, over which it seemed impossible that I should pass, as I saw no conveyance, and if there had been I was without means.

While I was pondering upon my situation I felt a weight in my pockets, and to my astonishment found my money not only restored, but greatly increased, changed into gold, but in foreign coin, together with several bills of credit. How I got over the water I do not remember, but I got over, and now the scene changed. I was in woods in which were trees of foreign growth. Palm trees, and olive, and large cedars, and many unknown shrubs and plants were around me. Again the vision changed. I was in a strange city. The buildings were antiquated. The signs and letters on the houses were in an unknown tongue, like the Arabic, and the thronged streets had crowds of people in outlandish garments.—Again the scene changed. I was in the midst of war and bloodshed, ruin and devastation was around me, burning and falling houses, flame and smoke filled the air, shrieks of women and frantic cries of children mingled in wild confusion, heard high above the din of battle and the crash of falling walls.

Again the vision changed. All now was peace. But, my brother, I cannot describe the mild, beautiful grandeur of the scene which burst upon my sight. A light above the brightness of the sun was around me. The most ravishing prospect of a beauteous landscape was before me. I was overwhelmed, and fell prostrate to the earth. I saw no one, but I heard a voice that seemed to proceed from the excellent glory say, as if addressing saints, behold! my servant, whom I have chosen as one of my faithful witnesses to bring about the things he has beheld, and in my name shall he stand before nations and kings and rulers of the earth, and he shall be mighty through me to bring about the restoration of my people in the last days. Behold, his name is Appleton. Behold, he was a dweller in the community of Philadelphia. With all my strength, and from my heart, I shouted, amen!

The vision ended, but, my brother, the impression will never be effaced from my mind. I wait patiently for what awaits me, and in all things feel disposed to say, the will of God be done. Thus, my dear brother Hess, I have given you what I have not so fully revealed to any one. Use it as you like, but prudently. In relation to your other questions, I can only say that I have baptized none since our beloved brother George left us. The brethren are all strong in the faith, giving glory to God. We are expecting an increase to the membership of the faithful. We enjoy sweet communion with each other and with the great head of the church, and "are of one heart and one mind." God bless you and yours and keep you to the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. The saints salute you. I am your fellow laborer in the new and everlasting covenant,

C. W. APPLETON.

☞ The following letter was received by one of the brethren here a few days since. We publish it with pleasure for the information of all. [Ed.

Zodiac, [Texas,] March 15th, 1849.

Dear Sir:—I take this opportunity to answer your letter of October 21st, 1848. I will firstly give you a slight sketch of our circumstances, in addition to what is written in the pamphlet. We have added to our improvements until we have eleven hundred acres under good fence, between two and three hundred acres of corn, which is ready to commence tending, it having been planted in the forepart of February. We are making preparations to plant a large amount of stock corn in this month and next. We also calculate to put in fifty acres of sweet potatoes, and plant in cotton as much as will do us. Our mills and other machinery are doing extraordinary good business. We have tried the experiment with wheat, and find it to do well in this country, and have several acres on the ground this season, which looks extraordinary well. We have bought twenty-eight hundred acres of land four miles from this place, with excellent timber and water.

Now as touching the price of grain and other things, they are very high in this new country. Common lumber is worth from $25,00 to $30,00 a thousand. Good cypress lumber is worth $50,00 a thousand. I could enter into a contract, if I would, at $1,00 a bushel for all the corn we will have to spare, which, if the season is good, will be several thousand bushels. We have about four hundred head of cattle and horses, and mules sufficient to do our business.

Cows here bear a high price, say from $12,00 to $16,00, for which I am selling them daily. One hundred and fifty miles from this place, where I have bought a great many head of cattle, they can be had for from $3,00 to $4,00 a head, in average lots, viz.: a cow and calf, and yearling, one two year old, a three year old and a four year old. One hundred miles from this place corn can be had for 37½ cents a bushel, pork in the same vicinity is worth from $2,-00 to $2,50 a hundred, but we raise our own. While at the old mill, 75 miles below this, we purchased a good many thousand bushels of corn, and sold the same in meal, but we anticipate the time is near at hand when we will be able to stock our own mills, as we calculate by another year to have from 500 to 600 acres of broke ground. There might some sixteen or eighteen hands more work to good advantage at our machinery, at making all kinds of furniture. But we have no use for any, only such as are willing to live on an equality with their neighbor, and not to call aught they possess their own, but that it all belongs to the Lord, and we are his servants for Christ's sake. However, the valley is very large, and those wishing to live by a dissected interest can find convenient locations.

It is not prudent to bring any stock whatever from the north country to this, for it is very seldom that anything like the half that is brought here will live. For the want of this information we suffered the loss of many hundred dollars. We sold all our beds and bedding except one blanket and pillow to each person, until twenty-three persons could put all their goods and effects aboard of one wagon, and their helpless women and children on the same, and the whole of the cooking and eating utensils weighed but twenty-one pounds, and I myself was one of the twenty-three persons. I remain as ever your friend and brother,

LYMAN WIGHT.

St. Louis, April 14th, 1849.

To Pres. James J. Strang,—Dear Brother of the last dispensation:—I have recently received your epistle of Feb. 15th, together with your papers, the Voree Herald, and am gratified, instructed and pleased with the intelligence which I have obtained from them. Long may it continue to go forth the herald of light and truth, the harbinger of better days to come, when man shall no more oppress his fellow man, but every one in every place shall meet a brother and a friend. And may God grant that you may continually be endowed with wisdom, knowledge and intelligence, that all honest and true hearted saints may be blessed thereby.

I had not time to close my letter on Saturday, but I will give you some additional information this morning, and then close for the present. I do not know when I may write again. I have some business at Quincy and at Nauvoo. At the latter place I will probably give you a line, if there is anything there that will interest either you or the saints at Voree. The Brighamites here have a large Baptist meeting house on Third st., near Chestnut, in which they hold their meetings. Yesterday it was filled to overflowing. Elders Orson Spencer, Phineas Young, (brother to Brigham,) and the presiding Elder, N. H. Felt, preached. Phineas Young has recently returned from Texas, from his mission to the Wild Man of the Woods. He gives but little account of his success—baptized twelve individuals. Col. Johnson, also, who has returned from Texas, stated that he almost wished God had chosen that land for the gathering of the saints, in preference to Salt Lake Valley. The climate, he says, is beautiful. Time flies, business calls me, and in conclusion I will only say, God grant the preservation of your life for the benefit of the saints of the last days, and for the good of the whole human family, that they may be blessed by the truths that he shall give them through the mouth of the prophet, and through the inspiration of his written word. I remain your brother in the bonds of the new and everlasting covenant,

HENRY CLIFFORD.

Crockery Creek, Ottawa Co., Mich., April 11th, 1849.

Dear Bro. Strang:—I will embrace this opportunity of sending you a few lines, and with it I inclose two dollars for the Herald.—Sickness and bad luck has prevented me from sending it long ago. Since I wrote to you in February my family have been very sick. At one time my wife and four of my children were sick at one time with the brain fever, and the inflammation on the lungs. The 3d of March my oldest daughter, 14 years old, died. At the time that she died two of my children were not expected to live from one day to another, but God in his mercy has spared them, and glorified himself by taking my daughter to him. I believe the time has come that those who know the will of the Lord concerning the gathering and other duties, if they do not obey they will be scourged as I have been. This is the first time that I could say that myself and family were all well since the 15th of August last. I want you should continue to send me the Herald, for that is all the instruction that I can get here, for I am alone. I will send you more money as soon as I can get it. I do not get all the numbers, and I believe that some of the post masters are fond of Mormon news. We send our love to you and all the saints, and pray for the prosperity of Zion. Yours in love, ARZA BARTHOLOMEW.

Theresa, N. Y., May 7th, 1849.

Bro. Strang,—Sir:—I take this opportunity of writing a few lines to you, although I cannot write anything very prosperous as to the cause of Christ in this part of the world. The saints are few and considerable scattered, so that we do not have any meetings at all. What there are of us left behind are mostly in low circumstances, and cannot gather to the place appointed, but we are resolved to do our best, and we think God will open the way for our escape soon. We hope to gather where we can meet with the church and hear the great truths pertaining to the kingdom of God. We want to leave the sects and all their errors, that our children and families may not become contaminated with their evil doctrines and practices, which, if they are left with them, they will drink in and roll them as a sweet morsel under their tongues, and finally share with the wicked in the destruction that awaits the ungodly.—I shall inclose one dollar in this letter, and I wish you to send me the gospel Herald from this time. I remain firm in the faith.—This from your friend and brother in the new and everlasting covenant,

LUTHER Z. COOK.

SHORT SERMON FOR PARENTS.

It is said that when the mother of Washington was asked how she had formed the character of her son, she replied that she had endeavored early to teach him three things: obedience, diligence and truth. No better advice can be given by any parent. Teach your children to obey. Let it be the first lesson. You can hardly begin too soon. It requires constant care to keep up the habit of obedience, and especially to do it in such a way as not to break down the strength of a child's character.

Teach your children to be diligent. The habit of being always employed is a great safeguard through life, as well as essential to the culture of almost every virtue. Nothing can be more foolish than an idea which parents have that it is not respectable to set their children to work. Play is a good thing, innocent recreation is an employment, and a child may learn to be diligent in that as in other things. But let them learn early to be useful. As to truth, it is the one essential thing. Let every thing else be sacrificed rather than that. Without it what dependence can you place in your child? And be sure to do nothing yourself which may countenance any species of prevarication or falsehood. Yet how many parents do teach their children the first lesson of deception.

Frankness.—Be frank with the world. Frankness is the child of honesty and courage. Say just what you mean to do on every occasion, and take it for granted you intend to do what is right. If a friend asks a favor, you should grant it if reasonable; if not, tell him plainly why you cannot. You will wrong him and wrong yourself by equivocation of any kind. Never do a wrong thing to make a friend, nor to keep one; the man who requires you to do so is dearly purchased at a sacrifice. Deal kindly but firmly with all men; you will find the policy which wears best. Above all, do not appear to others what you are not. If you have any fault to find with any one tell him, not others, of what you complain. There is no more dangerous experiment than that of undertaking to be one thing before a man's face and another behind his back. We should live, act and speak out doors, as the phrase is, and say and do what we are willing to be read by men. It is not only best as a matter of principle, but as a matter of policy.

CALAMITIES.

Chicago, Racine, Milwaukee and various other places have been visited by fires lately, rather more severely than usual. But St. Louis is nearly annihilated by a more destructive fire than has ever occurred within our recollection in any place whatever. Indeed the place is nearly annihilated. The loss of property is estimated at $6,000,000. That of life very great. New Orleans is reported destroyed by flood. Rumors speak contradictory. But certain it is that the city is entirely under water. And the probability is strong that it may be deserted by its inhabitants, in the hope of finding a

St. Louis, April 14th, 1849.

To Pres. James J. Strang,—Dear Brother of the last dispensation:—I have recently received your epistle of Feb. 15th, together with your papers, the Voree Herald, and am gratified, instructed and pleased with the intelligence which I have obtained from them. Long may it continue to go forth the herald of light and truth, the harbinger of better days to come, when man shall no more oppress his fellow man, but every one in every place shall meet a brother and a friend. And may God grant that you may continually be endowed with wisdom, knowledge and intelligence, that all honest and true hearted saints may be blessed thereby.

I had not time to close my letter on Saturday, but I will give you some additional information this morning, and then close for the present. I do not know when I may write again. I have some business at Quincy and at Nauvoo. At the latter place I will probably give you a line, if there is anything there that will interest either you or the saints at Voree. The Brighamites here have a large Baptist meeting house on Third st., near Chestnut, in which they hold their meetings. Yesterday it was filled to overflowing. Elders Orson Spencer, Phineas Young, (brother to Brigham,) and the presiding Elder, N. H. Felt, preached. Phineas Young has recently returned from Texas, from his mission to the Wild Man of the Woods. He gives but little account of his success—baptized twelve individuals. Col. Johnson, also, who has returned from Texas, stated that he almost wished God had chosen that land for the gathering of the saints, in preference to Salt Lake Valley. The climate, he says, is beautiful. Time flies, business calls me, and in conclusion I will only say, God grant the preservation of your life for the benefit of the saints of the last days, and for the good of the whole human family, that they may be blessed by the truths that he shall give them through the mouth of the prophet, and through the inspiration of his written word. I remain your brother in the bonds of the new and everlasting covenant,

HENRY CLIFFORD.

Crockery Creek, Ottawa Co., Mich., April 11th, 1849.

Dear Bro. Strang:—I will embrace this opportunity of sending you a few lines, and with it I inclose two dollars for the Herald.—Sickness and bad luck has prevented me from sending it long ago. Since I wrote to you in February my family have been very sick. At one time my wife and four of my children were sick at one time with the brain fever, and the inflammation on the lungs. The 3d of March my oldest daughter, 14 years old, died. At the time that she died two of my children were not expected to live from one day to another, but God in his mercy has spared them, and glorified himself by taking my daughter to him. I believe the time has come that those who know the will of the Lord concerning the gathering and other duties, if they do not obey they will be scourged as I have been This is the first time that I could say that myself and family were all well since the 15th of August last. I want you should continue to send me the Herald, for that is all the instruction that I can get here, for I am alone. I will send you more money as soon as I can get it. I do not get all the numbers, and I believe that some of the post masters are fond of Mormon news. We send our love to you and all the saints, and pray for the prosperity of Zion. Yours in love, ARZA BARTHOLOMEW.

Theresa, N. Y., May 7th, 1849.

Bro. Strang,—Sir:—I take this opportunity of writing a few lines to you, although I cannot write anything very prosperous as to the cause of Christ in this part of the world. The saints are few and considerable scattered, so that we do not have any meetings at all. What there are of us left behind are mostly in low circumstances, and cannot gather to the place appointed, but we are resolved to do our best and we think God will open the way for our escape soon. We hope to gather where we can meet with the church and hear the great truths pertaining to the kingdom of God. We want to leave the sects and all their errors, that our children and families may not become contaminated with their evil doctrines and practices, which, if they are left with them, they will drink in and roll them as a sweet morsel under their tongues, and finally share with the wicked in the destruction that awaits the ungodly.—I shall inclose one dollar in this letter, and I wish you to send me the gospel Herald from this time. I remain firm in the faith.—This from your friend and brother in the new and everlasting covenant.

LUTHER Z. COOK.

SHORT SERMON FOR PARENTS

It is said that when the mother of Washington was asked how she had formed the character of her son, she replied that she had endeavored early to teach him three things: obedience, diligence and truth. No better advice can be given by any parent. Teach your children to obey. Let it be the first lesson. You can hardly begin too soon. It requires constant care to keep up the habit of obedience, and especially to do it in such a way as not to break down the strength of a child's character.

Teach your children to be diligent. The habit of being always employed is a great safeguard through life, as it is essential to the culture of almost every virtue. Nothing can be more foolish than an idea which parents have that it is unnecessary to set their children to work. Play is a good thing, and recreation is an employment, and a child may learn to be diligent in that as in other things. But let them learn early to be useful. As to truth, it is the one essential thing. Let every thing else be sacrificed rather than that. Without it what dependence can you place in your child! And be sure to do nothing yourself which may countenance any species of prevarication or falsehood. Yet how many parents do teach their children the first lesson of deception.

Frankness.—Be frank with the world. Frankness is the child of honesty and courage. Say just what you mean to do on every occasion, and take it for granted you intend to do what is right. If a friend asks a favor, you should grant it if reasonable: if not, tell him plainly why you cannot. You will wrong him and wrong yourself by equivocation of any kind. Never do a wrong thing to make a friend, nor to keep one; the man who requires you to do so is dearly purchased at a sacrifice. Deal kindly but firmly with all men; you will find the policy which wears best. Above all, do not appear to others what you are not. If you have any fault to find with any one tell him, not others, of what you complain. There is no more dangerous experiment than that of undertaking to be one thing before a man's face and another behind his back. We should live, act and speak out doors, as the phrase is, and say and do what we are willing to be read by men. It is not only best as a matter of principle, but as a matter of policy.

CALAMITIES.

Chicago, Racine, Milwaukee and various other places have been visited by fires lately, rather more severely than usual. But St. Louis is nearly annihilated by a more destructive fire than has ever occurred within our recollection in any place whatever. Indeed the place is nearly annihilated. The loss of property is estimated at $6,000,000. That of life very great. New Orleans is reported destroyed by flood. Rumors speak contradictory. But certain it is that the city is entirely under water. And the probability is strong that it may be deserted by its inhabitants, in the hope of finding a more secure place for a city. If the cholera should spread among the California emigrants on the Missouri plains, it would produce another calamity in the loss of life and waste of property fully equal to either of these. And in any probable event the moral state of California will be a greater misfortune than either.

THE SALT VALLEY.

Who has any news from the Salt Valley? We are anxious to hear the state of affairs there through the winter. We certainly have no disposition to croak of the misfortunes or the faults of the people there. But we greatly fear that their fate has been a hard one. The snow has been 2½ feet deep on the Sacramento, where it seldom falls four inches. On the Missouri plains, where the buffalo usually winters on grass, they have had from four to eight feet snow. The valley lays directly between. It is surrounded by high mountains, among which the winter set in six weeks earlier than usual and with uncommon severity. The 2d of November the snow was deeper 200 miles west of Santa Fe than at Mackinac at any time during the winter.

The latitude of the Salt Valley is 41 deg., but its altitude above the sea is 4,400 feet, and as 400 feet altitude is equal in climate to 1 deg. of latitude, it follows that its climate should be that of 52 deg. of latitude, or like the southern part of Hudson's Bay and the region 350 miles north of Quebec. The Sierra Nevada mountains, 17,000 feet high, west of the valley, effectually prevent any moderation of its climate by the breezes from the Pacific, which, farther south, passing up the broad valley of the Gila, give such genial mildness to the valley of the Mississippi.

INDUSTRY.—Toil is the price of sleep and appetite, of health and enjoyment. The very necessity which overcomes our natural sloth, is a blessing. The world does not contain a briar or a thorn, that divine wisdom could have spared. We are happier with the sterility which we can overcome by industry, than we could be with the most spontaneous and unbounded profusion. The body and mind are improved by the toil that fatigues them; that toil is a thousand times rewarded by the pleasure which it bestows. Its enjoyments are peculiar; no wealth can purchase them, no insolence touch them. They only flow from the exertions which they repay.

☞ Ebenezer Page, one of the Twelve, has just returned from a mission of about one year in the State of New York, accompanied by a company of about 60 saints, who came up to the place appointed of God for their gathering. Elder Hale arrived a few days before him with a small party, who happened to be a few days ahead. These brethren intended to have stopped at Beaver Island, and would many of them have settled there, but the Capt. of the boat unjustly refused to go into the harbor there. As they are just off from a long journey, and in want of rest, they will stop here a short time, and many of them permanently.

The company arrived in health and excellent spirits, and as far as we have heard any expression, are well pleased with the place.—This company has much of the substantial sort, and will do much for the cause. Every one of the Twelve, with like faithfulness, can do as well, and we are happy to say several are now in the field doing much in the cause. The blessing of God begins to rest on that Quorum. God speed them, for now is the day and now the hour.

☞ We learn by private correspondence from St. Louis that large numbers of Brighamites are passing through that city, both to and from Council Bluffs. Also that Phineas Young, who figured in this region in persuading Oliver Cowdery off to the Bluffs, has been down to Texas on a similar errand to Lyman Wight, which appears not to have been quite so successful. It is also alledged, we know not with what truth, that David Whitmer has an invitation to join them and serve as a kind of puppet prophet for the camp. Greatly are they in need of one, but whether they can supply the want in that way, they have yet to learn.

☞ The 11th No. of the Olive Branch has come to hand, and contains an account of receipts since December, to the amount of $18,00. A former account of receipts for the previous time of publication amounts, we think, to $23,00; less than $50,00 a year as the entire annual income of a monthly publication. No. 10 promises an enlargement, as soon as the subscription list will warrant it.

THE SECRET OF JOY.—The sense of duty is as necessary a stimulant to health and enjoyment, as is salt to give flavor to our daily food. Without it the world become uninteresting and tasteless—objects there are none to arouse—purpose there is none to attain.—The person deprived of the means of happiness, or condemned to the endurance of pain, suffers, and suffers much; but Hope lingers at the bottom of the cup. Life retains its enchantments—the Hesperian gardens still glow in the west. But woe to that wretched one who, like the gorgeous Eastern king, sated with wisdom, magnificence, and pleasure, has tasted of everything that the world can give, and arrived at the dire conclusion that all is vanity.

TIME.—We all complain that our time is short, yet we know not how to employ that which we have; our lives are wasted in doing nothing at all, or in doing nothing to the purpose, or in doing nothing that we should do. We complain that our days are few, and we act as though there would be no end to them.

SELFISHNESS.—There are few, if any, in the world, who make their situation as happy as it might be. The majority of us indulge the selfish passions to excess. Unhappiness is the consequence; for none can be happy while they make others miserable.

THE MOST USEFUL PEOPLE.—Persons who are always cheerful and good hnmored, rank amongst the most useful in the world; for they maintain peace and happiness, and spread a thanklul temper amongst all who live around them.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

Stratton Rogers,	$0,50	to Vol.	IV	No. 13
Palmer H. Stevens,	1,00
Mary DeMary,	1,00	"	"	30
H. G. Hall, for C. G. Hall,	1,00	"	"	37
Joel Stratton,	2,00	"	"	26
M. M. Aldrich,	5,00	to Vol.	V	No. 10
And for brother,		to Vol.	IV	No. 39
E. J. More,	3,00	to Vol.	V	No. 10
And for Steele,		to Vol.	IV	No. 36
J. W. Halladay,	0,50	to Vol.	III	No. 26
Moses Chidister,	2,00	to Vol.	IV	No. 52
Thomas R. Hicks,	2,00	"	"	52
Samuel Babcock,	1,50	"	"	36

CONFERENCE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at Big Beaver Island, Lake Mich., July 6th, 7th & 8th.

By the Pres. GILBERT WATSON, Recorder.

more secure place for a city. If the cholera should spread among the California emigrants on the Missouri plains, it would produce another calamity in the loss of life and waste of property fully equal to either of these. And in any probable event the moral state of California will be a greater misfortune than either.

THE SALT VALLEY.

Who has any news from the Salt Valley? We are anxious to hear the state of affairs there through the winter. We certainly have no disposition to croak of the misfortunes or the faults of the people there. But we greatly fear that their fate has been a hard one. The snow has been 2½ feet deep on the Sacramento, where it seldom falls four inches. On the Missouri plains, where the buffalo usually winters on grass, they have had from four to eight feet snow. The valley lays directly between. It is surrounded by high mountains, among which the winter set in six weeks earlier than usual and with uncommon severity. The 2d of November the snow was deeper 200 miles west of Santa Fe than at Mackinac at any time during the winter.

The latitude of the Salt Valley is 41 deg., but its altitude above the sea is 4,400 feet, and as 400 feet altitude is equal in climate to 1 deg. of latitude, it follows that its climate should be that of 52 deg. of latitude, or like the southern part of Hudson's Bay and the region 350 miles north of Quebec. The Sierra Nevada mountains, 17,000 feet high, west of the valley, effectually prevent any moderation of its climate by the breezes from the Pacific, which, farther south, passing up the broad valley of the Gila, give such genial mildness to the valley of the Mississippi.

INDUSTRY.—Toil is the price of sleep and appetite, of health and enjoyment. The very necessity which overcomes our natural sloth, is a blessing. The world does not contain a briar or a thorn, that divine wisdom could have spared. We are happier with the sterility which we can overcome by industry, than we could be with the most spontaneous and unbounded profusion. The body and mind are improved by the toil that fatigues them; that toil is a thousand times rewarded by the pleasure which it bestows. Its enjoyments are peculiar; no wealth can purchase them, no insolence touch them. They only flow from the exertions which they repay.

☞ Ebenezer Page, one of the Twelve, has just returned from a mission of about one year in the State of New York, accompanied by a company of about 60 saints, who came up to the place appointed of God for their gathering. Elder Hale arrived a few days before him with a small party, who happened to be a few days ahead. These brethren intended to have stopped at Beaver Island, and would many of them have settled there, but the Capt. of the boat unjustly refused to go into the harbor there. As they are just off from a long journey, and in want of rest, they will stop here a short time, and many of them permanently.

The company arrived in health and excellent spirits, and as far as we have heard any expression, are well pleased with the place.—This company has much of the substantial sort, and will do much for the cause. Every one of the Twelve, with like faithfulness, can do as well, and we are happy to say several are now in the field doing much in the cause. The blessing of God begins to rest on that Quorum. God speed them, for now is the day and now the hour.

☞ We learn by private correspondence from St. Louis that large numbers of Brighamites are passing through that city, both to and from Council Bluffs. Also that Phineas Young, who figured in this region in persuading Oliver Cowdery off to the Bluffs, has been down to Texas on a similar errand to Lyman Wight, which appears not to have been quite so successful. It is also alledged, we know not with what truth, that David Whitmer has an invitation to join them and serve as a kind of puppet prophet for the camp. Greatly are they in need of one, but whether they can supply the want in that way, they have yet to learn.

☞ The 11th No. of the Olive Branch has come to hand, and contains an account of receipts since December, to the amount of $18,00. A former account of receipts for the previous time of publication amounts, we think, to $23,00; less than $50,00 a year as the entire annual income of a monthly publication. No. 10 promises an enlargement, as soon as the subscription list will warrant it.

THE SECRET OF JOY.—The sense of duty is as necessary a stimulant to health and enjoyment, as is salt to give flavor to our daily food. Without it the world become uninteresting and tasteless—objects there are none to arouse—purpose there is none to attain.—The person deprived of the means of happiness, or condemned to the endurance of pain, suffers, and suffers much; but Hope lingers at the bottom of the cup. Life retains its enchantments—the Hesperian gardens still glow in the west. But woe to that wretched one who, like the gorgeous Eastern king, sated with wisdom, magnificence, and pleasure, has tasted of everything that the world can give, and arrived at the dire conclusion that all is vanity.

TIME.—We all complain that our time is short, yet we know not how to employ that which we have; our lives are wasted in doing nothing at all, or in doing nothing to the purpose, or in doing nothing that we should do. We complain that our days are few, and we act as though there would be no end to them.

SELFISHNESS.—There are few, if any, in the world, who make their situation as happy as it might be. The majority of us indulge the selfish passions to excess. Unhappiness is the consequence; for none can be happy while they make others miserable.

THE MOST USEFUL PEOPLE.—Persons who are always cheerful and good humored, rank amongst the most useful in the world; for they maintain peace and happiness, and spread a thanklul temper amongst all who live around them.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

Stratton Rogers,	$0,50	to Vol.	IV	No. 13
Palmer H. Stevens,	1,00
Mary DeMary,	1,00	"	"	30
H. G. Hall, for C. G. Hall,	1,00	"	"	37
Joel Stratton,	2,00	"	"	26
M. M. Aldrich,	5,00	to Vol.	V	No. 10
And for brother,		to Vol.	IV	No. 39
E. J. More,	3,00	to Vol.	V	No. 10
And for Steele,		to Vol.	IV	No. 36
J. W. Halladay,	0,50	to Vol.	III	No. 26
Moses Chidister,	2,00	to Vol.	IV	No. 52
Thomas R. Hicks,	2,00	"	"	52
Samuel Babcock,	1,50	"	"	36

CONFERENCE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at Big Beaver Island, Lake Mich., July 6th, 7th & 8th.

By the Pres. GILBERT WATSON, Recorder.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 13.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, JUNE 14, 1849. [WHOLE No. 129.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

OBITUARY.

Died, May 15th, at Menomonee, in the Chippeway region, above Lake Pippin, Bro. MOSES SMITH, a witness of the name of the Lord Jesus unto the nations and one of the quorum of the Twelve Apostles. Bro. Moses was born in Bennington Co., Vt., the 23d of March, 1800, and consequently was in his fiftieth year at the time of his decease. In 1819, in company with his brother Aaron, he visited all western N. Y. and northern Ohio, stopping some time in Ellicottville, on the Canadaway creek, near where Shumla now is; and penetrating the vast wilderness where there was no path but the occasional Indian trail, to and up the Sandusky river to the present location of Bucyrus, and returning eastward by a southern route. Near Bucyrus he witnessed an Indian trial and execution for murder, and was deeply impressed with the superior justice of the Indians over the whites, and still more with the patient submission of the culprit.

Many hundred miles of this journey the only guide of the two travelers was the SUN, or if that did not shine the MOSS on the trees. They depended on occasional hunting for their food, and slept on the ground without blankets. On this occasion the peculiar faculties which qualified him for a backwoodsman were well developed, and he succeeded without the least difficulty in making his way through the interminable and untrodden wilderness without ever losing the true course; made himself perfectly comfortable with neither a house, an extra garment, or an ounce of food but what he took while on his way, and entirely safe amidst savages and wild beasts.

The following year he settled in Medina Co., Ohio, where he remained till 1829, when he removed to Seneca Co. There he carried on considerable business as a merchant, held several respectable offices, both civil and military, and in 1832 he heard and embraced the gospel. In 1825 he married the daughter of a Baptist clergyman in Madison Co., N. Y., Lydia Perce, who, with two children, survive him. In 1833 he spent some time in Chaut. Co., N. Y., assisted Reynolds Cahoon in the work he accomplished there, and with Alpheus Cutler and Freeman Nickerson preached the gospel extensively in that region. The following year he spent some time on the Grand River in Upper Canada, but with what success we are unable to say. Early in 1835 he made his way to Racine, Wisconsin, scarcely behind the first pioneers, commenced making a farm, and not forgetting to preach the gospel. His family followed in a short time, accompanied by a younger brother and other friends. In the fall of that year, accompanied by his brother-in-law, Benjamin C. Perce, he explored the country on Fox River, and marked his claim where the village of Burlington now is, it being the first claim on Fox River. Two miles further west Mr. Perce marked his claim, where Voree now is. The little grove since occupied as the meeting ground of the saints at Voree, answered them instead of a house for the night. Early in 1836, with a great number of relatives and friends, he settled there and commenced extensive improvements of the country and a faithful dispensing of the word of God. By a series of misfortunes he had been reduced to poverty before removing to Wisconsin. But in the short space of three years he succeeded in making a farm, erecting valuable mills, rendering efficient assistance to numerous friends, besides contributing liberally to every public undertaking, keeping open house for the traveling saints, and supporting all the poor among them at his own expense. He was the first Post Master at Burlington, and is there remembered by every one as a man of enterprise, integrity and benevolence. While there with his brother Aaron, he preached the gospel in all the regions around, with eminent success. A branch consisting of about 100 members was built up at Burlington, and others in other places, considerable numbers of whom went to Nauvoo before that place was broken up.

While in Burlington, he with his brother Aaron, was sent as delegates of the saints in the region to attend a Conference in Kirtland. While at Kirtland, High Priests were sent to preside over the scattered churches generally throughout the land. But when the question arose on ordaining one for Wisconsin, each of the two brothers, with characteristic modesty and confidence, insisted that the other was called and best qualified to fill the station. The Conference were embarrassed by the earnestness with which each insisted that his brother was wiser and more worthy than himself. The end was that the old Patriarch, Joseph Smith, testified that they were both called of God to the high priesthood, and they were ordained by the unanimous voice of the Conference, and sent home to preside over all the churches in the vast region north-west of Lake Michigan, a mission they faithfully performed.

In 1839 he left Burlington with a valuable property, the accumulation of his three years in Wisconsin, and settled in Walnut Grove, Knox Co., Ill., where many saints driven from Missouri by persecution, came for a brief season of rest. His abundant means was thrown out freely for the plundered and exiled saints. The influence of his kindness and faithfulness drew many around him until the number became so great that it was contemplated to organize a stake there, and the measures had proceeded so far that his brother Aaron, yet in Wisconsin, had been sent for to preside over it, he being designed for the Bishop. But in the midst of these preparations the commandment was sent forth for the saints to gather to, and build up Nauvoo. About this time the Prophet Joseph was hard pushed by some of his creditors, of whom he had purchased land for the benefit of the poor saints who came there robbed of every thing by the Missourians. Moses, with characteristic generosity, sold his lands for these notes to the amount of several thousand dollars. When Joseph obtained his discharge under the bankrupt law, these demands were by law cancelled.—The Prophet however did not repudiate them, but continued to make payments on them as he had the means until his death.

In 1842 he went to Nauvoo and established himself in the mercantile business, with his remaining capital, and continued in that business with lumbering in the Mississippi pineries, and making pearlash, till after the death of Joseph. On an expedition up to

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 13.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. JUNE 14, 1849. [WHOLE No. 129.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

OBITUARY.

Died, May 15th, at Menomonee, in the Chippeway region, above Lake Pippin, Bro. MOSES SMITH, a witness of the name of the Lord Jesus unto the nations and one of the quorum of the Twelve Apostles. Bro. Moses was born in Bennington Co., Vt., the 23d of March, 1800, and consequently was in his fiftieth year at the time of his decease. In 1819, in company with his brother Aaron, he visited all western N. Y. and northern Ohio, stopping some time in Ellicottville, on the Canadaway creek, near where Shumla now is; and penetrating the vast wilderness where there was no path but the occasional Indian trail, to and up the Sandusky river to the present location of Bucyrus, and returning eastward by a southern route. Near Bucyrus he witnessed an Indian trial and execution for murder, and was deeply impressed with the superior justice of the Indians over the whites, and still more with the patient submission of the culprit.

Many hundred miles of this journey the only guide of the two travelers was the SUN, or if that did not shine the MOSS on the trees. They depended on occasional hunting for their food, and slept on the ground without blankets. On this occasion the peculiar faculties which qualified him for a backwoodsman were well developed, and he succeeded without the least difficulty in making his way through the interminable and untrodden wilderness without ever losing the true course; made himself perfectly comfortable with neither a house, an extra garment, or an ounce of food but what he took while on his way, and entirely safe amidst savages and wild beasts.

The following year he settled in Medina Co., Ohio, where he remained till 1829, when he removed to Seneca Co. There he carried on considerable business as a merchant, held several respectable offices, both civil and military, and in 1832 he heard and embraced the gospel. In 1825 he married the daughter of a Baptist clergyman in Madison Co., N. Y., Lydia Perce, who, with two children, survive him. In 1833 he spent some time in Chaut. Co., N. Y., assisted Reynolds Cahoon in the work he accomplished there, and with Alpheus Cutler and Freeman Nickerson preached the gospel extensively in that region. The following year he spent some time on the Grand River in Upper Canada, but with what success we are unable to say. Early in 1835 he made his way to Racine, Wisconsin, scarcely behind the first pioneers, commenced making a farm, and not forgetting to preach the gospel. His family followed in a short time, accompanied by a younger brother and other friends. In the fall of that year, accompanied by his brother-in-law, Benjamin C. Perce, he explored the country on Fox River, and marked his claim where the village of Burlington now is, it being the first claim on Fox River. Two miles further west Mr. Perce marked his claim, where Voree now is. The little grove since occupied as the meeting ground of the saints at Voree, answered them instead of a house for the night. Early in 1836, with a great number of relatives and friends, he settled there and commenced extensive improvements of the country and a faithful dispensing of the word of God. By a series of misfortunes he had been reduced to poverty before removing to Wisconsin. But in the short space of three years he succeeded in making a farm, erecting valuable mills, rendering efficient assistance to numerous friends, besides contributing liberally to every public undertaking, keeping open house for the traveling saints, and supporting all the poor among them at his own expense. He was the first Post Master at Burlington, and is there remembered by every one as a man of enterprise, integrity and benevolence. While there with his brother Aaron, he preached the gospel in all the regions around, with eminent success. A branch consisting of about 100 members was built up at Burlington, and others in other places, considerable numbers of whom went to Nauvoo before that place was broken up.

While in Burlington, he with his brother Aaron, was sent as delegates of the saints in the region to attend a Conference in Kirtland. While at Kirtland, High Priests were sent to preside over the scattered churches generally throughout the land. But when the question arose on ordaining one for Wisconsin, each of the two brothers, with characteristic modesty and confidence, insisted that the other was called and best qualified to fill the station. The Conference were embarrassed by the earnestness with which each insisted that his brother was wiser and more worthy than himself. The end was that the old Patriarch, Joseph Smith, testified that they were both called of God to the high priesthood, and they were ordained by the unanimous voice of the Conference, and sent home to preside over all the churches in the vast region north-west of Lake Michigan, a mission they faithfully performed.

In 1839 he left Burlington with a valuable property, the accumulation of his three years in Wisconsin, and settled in Walnut Grove, Knox Co., Ill., where many saints driven from Missouri by persecution, came for a brief season of rest. His abundant means was thrown out freely for the plundered and exiled saints. The influence of his kindness and faithfulness drew many around him until the number became so great that it was contemplated to organize a stake there, and the measures had proceeded so far that his brother Aaron, yet in Wisconsin, had been sent for to preside over it, he being designed for the Bishop. But in the midst of these preparations the commandment was sent forth for the saints to gather to, and build up Nauvoo. About this time the Prophet Joseph was hard pushed by some of his creditors, of whom he had purchased land for the benefit of the poor saints who came there robbed of every thing by the Missourians. Moses, with characteristic generosity, sold his lands for these notes to the amount of several thousand dollars. When Joseph obtained his discharge under the bankrupt law, these demands were by law cancelled.—The Prophet however did not repudiate them, but continued to make payments on them as he had the means until his death.

In 1842 he went to Nauvoo and established himself in the mercantile business, with his remaining capital, and continued in that business with lumbering in the Mississippi pineries, and making pearlash, till after the death of Joseph. On an expedition up to the falls of the Black River in the fall of 1843, the company to which he belonged became bewildered, and finally entirely lost, and were several days without food. For about a week the only food of some half dozen men was one dog. On this occasion he conducted with his usual fortitude and good courage. Not being the regular guide of the party, he did not assume to direct their course. Yet with his happy faculty of keeping a correct course in any place, he modestly pointed out the correct course to the guide, every point where he deviated from it, and the result proved him in every instance right. He returned alone from there to Nauvoo in Feb., 1844, making 200 miles of the distance on snow shoes, without a path, and seldom seeing a house, arriving at Nauvoo the last Sunday in the month, the day on which prophet Strang became a member of the church, and just in season to be present at his confirmation. The day following his return to Nauvoo he, at the request of the Patriarch Hyrum, enlisted into a company of twenty-five charged with the duty of exploring the country and visiting the Indian tribes west of the Missouri, in the north-west part of Texas, through New Mexico, up the coast of Upper California, and the Columbia River, and back by the South Pass and Council Bluffs. This company were further charged with the duty of commencing a settlement in the Indian country, at a place to be selected by them for that purpose, where a part of them were to remain while the rest should return to pilot out a large company with families, stock, &c., to extend the settlements. That season a great effort was made to send out a large number of Elders, and this expedition was postponed till fall, that the company might winter in New Mexico or Sonora, and return the following summer. The postponement was fatal. It never set out.

Instead of visiting the Indian tribes, he went to Michigan to preach the gospel to the Gentiles, and was there when the Prophet was martyred. The revelation by which prophet Strang was called instead of Joseph, and Voree made a place of gathering, also contained a particular command to him to preach that place of gathering to the saints. This revelation first reached him at Florence, Mich., where a Conference had just closed its session. The Conference was called together again, 13 elders being in attendance, and the revelation laid before them, where it was received in faith by nearly all present, though against the wishes of Elders Green, Dunn, and Jacobs. A resolution was passed that the Elders who were satisfied have liberty to preach it, and that none should oppose them; and Moses Smith and Elder Jacobs were appointed to go to Nauvoo for further consulation, and to proclaim the revelation. As soon as this Conference closed, however, Green, Dunn and Jacobs got up a meeting for preaching, and, contrary to the resolution of the Conference, in which two of them had presided, and the third acted as Secretary, commenced a tirade of the most bitter abuse upon prophet Strang, which Bro. Moses tried in vain to stop. When they forbid him to speak, prophet Strang left the house, and the congregation dispersed, leaving them to vent their spleen to naked walls.

From there he returned, according to the appointment of the Conference, to Nauvoo. Several of the Twelve, who were there, met him with harshness; told him the revelation was false, and threatened him with excommunication in case he persisted in proclaiming it, and, as a last resort, reminding him of his mission among the Indians; told him the time had come when he must undertake that, or he would fall under condemnation for disobeying the martyred Prophet. They also pointed to James Emmett as the leader of the expedition, and required that all who went should take their families and all they possessed with them. He gathered up several teams by disposing of the remains of his property, and set out with his family at the beginning of winter with Emmett's unfortunate company, to cross Iowa by way of the head waters of the Des-Moine. The company were unprovided for the winter and the journey, and in a short time were compelled to sell their beds and all supplies of clothing for provisions. They were reduced to a half pint of corn a day to each adult, and gladly ate the carcasses and skins of their teams as they died of starvation. In the midst of these privations and sufferings, while on the open prairie, without a tent, and in the cold of winter, his daughter gave birth to a son. Within a half hour after she was ordered to be placed in a wagon, and the teams to proceed. He remonstrated in vain. Utterly refusing to go on, Emmett took every thing, teams, wagons, tools, food, every rag of clothing that was not on their persons, and left him with his family, consisting of wife, son, daughter, son-in-law and the infant, 150 miles from the nearest house, already nearly starved and without food enough to suffice for one meal for one of them.—He succeeded in keeping an ax only, and when thus abandoned to perish, set about preparing a camp for his family, and then went down to the settlements to obtain relief. His son obtained a very small amount of provisions by chopping for an Indian who encamped near by, and beyond this the family subsisted on the roots and bark of the baswood till he returned with a team and provisions. During his absence two men from Emmett's camp came down to rob his family of their ax and clothing, but were successfully resisted by his wife. In this expedition he lost seven horses, three wagons, and every thing else he possessed.

From this time he was nearly a year in settling his family and making some provision for their sustenance, when, in January, 1846, he went from Voree to Nauvoo to proclaim the gathering to the former place, and oppose the emigration to California, taking with him the first issue of the Voree Herald. This mission was eminently successful. The Temple was inclosed, and arrangments made for holding meetings in it. His appearance and mission produced a general excitement and great anxiety to hear from the new prophet. The first Sunday he was refused admission at the door of the Temple, and the most popular speakers of the Brighamites put forward to blacken his character and that of the prophet. But the excitement was rather increased by this means, so that when the meeting broke up he was surrounded by hundreds of people clamoring to hear from him. Taking a large stone for his stand, he and those that accompanied him in his mission addressed them with great effect some two hours. Orson Hyde sent an officer of the police to order the assembly to disperse. This order being disregarded, a mob crowded around, headed by an officer of police, armed with knives and pistols, threatening their lives and endeavoring to seize them. Suddenly they disappeared, and were seen a few minutes after at the house of a true brother, not one of the mob having the slightest idea what had become of them.

The following Sunday the excitement was so great, and the anxiety to hear of the new prophet so irresistible, that the Brighamite faction determined to give him one hearing in the Temple, thinking to browbeat him down. His natural modesty, even at the age of forty-six, bordered on bashfulness. But in this cause, nerved by the greatness of the crisis, he stood forward boldly in defence of the truth, and achieved a triumph of the truth over usurped power, from which they never recovered. All the popular speakers of the Brighamite faction were brought forward, not to answer him, but to pervert and malign his cause. No opportunity was given him to reply. But instead a vote was taken by a portion of the congregation, in the midst of clamor and screaming, to cut him off, and forbidding any one to hear him, or any one that believed in Strang, or to read the Herald.

After a successful mission, in which he saved hundreds from the delusions of Brighamism, he returned to Voree in season to attend Conference there, April 6th, 1846. At this Conference he was set the falls of the Black River in the fall of 1843, the company to which he belonged became bewildered, and finally entirely lost, and were several days without food. For about a week the only food of some half dozen men was one dog. On this occasion he conducted with his usual fortitude and good courage. Not being the regular guide of the party, he did not assume to direct their course. Yet with his happy faculty of keeping a correct course in any place, he modestly pointed out the correct course to the guide, every point where he deviated from it, and the result proved him in every instance right. He returned alone from there to Nauvoo in Feb., 1844, making 200 miles of the distance on snow shoes, without a path, and seldom seeing a house, arriving at Nauvoo the last Sunday in the month, the day on which prophet Strang became a member of the church, and just in season to be present at his confirmation. The day following his return to Nauvoo he, at the request of the Patriarch Hyrum, enlisted into a company of twenty-five charged with the duty of exploring the country and visiting the Indian tribes west of the Missouri, in the north-west part of Texas, through New Mexico, up the coast of Upper California, and the Columbia River, and back by the South Pass and Council Bluffs. This company were further charged with the duty of commencing a settlement in the Indian country, at a place to be selected by them for that purpose, where a part of them were to remain while the rest should return to pilot out a large company with families, stock, &c., to extend the settlements. That season a great effort was made to send out a large number of Elders, and this expedition was postponed till fall, that the company might winter in New Mexico or Sonora, and return the following summer. The postponement was fatal. It never set out.

Instead of visiting the Indian tribes, he went to Michigan to preach the gospel to the Gentiles, and was there when the Prophet was martyred. The revelation by which prophet Strang was called instead of Joseph, and Voree made a place of gathering, also contained a particular command to him to preach that place of gathering to the saints. This revelation first reached him at Florence, Mich., where a Conference had just closed its session. The Conference was called together again, 13 elders being in attendance, and the revelation laid before them, where it was received in faith by nearly all present, though against the wishes of Elders Green, Dunn, and Jacobs. A resolution was passed that the Elders who were satisfied have liberty to preach it, and that none should oppose them; and Moses Smith and Elder Jacobs were appointed to go to Nauvoo for further consulation, and to proclaim the revelation. As soon as this Conference closed, however, Green, Dunn and Jacobs got up a meeting for preaching, and, contrary to the resolution of the Conference, in which two of them had presided, and the third acted as Secretary, commenced a tirade of the most bitter abuse upon prophet Strang, which Bro. Moses tried in vain to stop. When they forbid him to speak, prophet Strang left the house, and the congregation dispersed, leaving them to vent their spleen to naked walls.

From there he returned, according to the appointment of the Conference, to Nauvoo. Several of the Twelve, who were there, met him with harshness; told him the revelation was false, and threatened him with excommunication in case he persisted in proclaiming it, and, as a last resort, reminding him of his mission among the Indians; told him the time had come when he must undertake that, or he would fall under condemnation for disobeying the martyred Prophet. They also pointed to James Emmett as the leader of the expedition, and required that all who went should take their families and all they possessed with them. He gathered up several teams by disposing of the remains of his property, and set out with his family at the beginning of winter with Emmett's unfortunate company, to cross Iowa by way of the head waters of the Des-Moines. The company were unprovided for the winter and the journey, and in a short time were compelled to sell their beds and all supplies of clothing for provisions. They were reduced to a half pint of corn a day to each adult, and gladly ate the carcasses and skins of their teams as they died of starvation. In the midst of these privations and sufferings, while on the open prairie, without a tent, and in the cold of winter, his daughter gave birth to a son. Within a half hour after she was ordered to be placed in a wagon, and the teams to proceed. He remonstrated in vain. Utterly refusing to go on, Emmett took every thing, teams, wagons, tools, food, every rag of clothing that was not on their persons, and left him with his family, consisting of wife, son, daughter, son-in-law and the infant, 150 miles from the nearest house, already nearly starved and without food enough to suffice for one meal for one of them.—He succeeded in keeping an ax only, and when thus abandoned to perish, set about preparing a camp for his family, and then went down to the settlements to obtain relief. His son obtained a very small amount of provisions by chopping for an Indian who encamped near by, and beyond this the family subsisted on the roots and bark of the baswood till he returned with a team and provisions. During his absence two men from Emmett's camp came down to rob his family of their ax and clothing, but were successfully resisted by his wife. In this expedition he lost seven horses, three wagons, and every thing else he possessed.

From this time he was nearly a year in settling his family and making some provision for their sustenance, when, in January, 1846, he went from Voree to Nauvoo, to proclaim the gathering to the former place, and oppose the emigration to California, taking with him the first issue of the Voree Herald. This mission was eminently successful. The Temple was inclosed, and arrangments made for holding meetings in it. His appearance and mission produced a general excitement and great anxiety to hear from the new prophet. The first Sunday he was refused admission at the door of the Temple, and the most popular speakers of the Brighamites put forward to blacken his character and that of the prophet. But the excitement was rather increased by this means, so that when the meeting broke up he was surrounded by hundreds of people clamoring to hear from him. Taking a large stone for his stand, he and those that accompanied him in his mission addressed them with great effect some two hours. Orson Hyde sent an officer of the police to order the assembly to disperse. This order being disregarded, a mob crowded around, headed by an officer of police, armed with knives and pistols, threatening their lives and endeavoring to seize them. Suddenly they disappeared, and were seen a few minutes after at the house of a true brother, not one of the mob having the slightest idea what had become of them.

The following Sunday the excitement was so great, and the anxiety to hear of the new prophet so irresistible, that the Brighamite faction determined to give him one hearing in the Temple, thinking to browbeat him down. His natural modesty, even at the age of forty-six, bordered on bashfulness. But in this cause, nerved by the greatness of the crisis, he stood forward boldly in defence of the truth, and achieved a triumph of the truth over usurped power, from which they never recovered. All the popular speakers of the Brighamite faction were brought forward, not to answer him, but to pervert and malign his cause. No opportunity was given him to reply. But instead a vote was taken by a portion of the congregation, in the midst of clamor and screaming, to cut him off, and forbidding any one to hear him, or any one that believed in Strang, or to read the Herald.

After a successful mission, in which he saved hundreds from the delusions of Brighamism, he returned to Voree in season to attend Conference there, April 6th, 1846. At this Conference he was set apart by revelation and the laying on of hands to the Apostleship, and remained a member of the Quorum of the Twelve, enjoying in the fullest degree the confidence of the church and of the prophet.—During the same year he visited most of the churches in Mich. and Ohio; called together and assisted in conducting a well attended and eminently useful Conference in Kirtland, and set in order most of the churches in that region. It was under his wise administration that the Temple passed peaceably into the hands of the true church. While he remained there all things prospered, and the number of the faithful continually increased. It is impossible that any one should appreciate the wisdom of his administration in that region who has not been on similar ground, where apostacy has succeeded apostacy, till fear and jealousy prevails universal.

At the Conference in Kirtland he was appointed, in conjunction with Lester Brooks, Martin Harris and Hazen Aldrich, to a responsible mission to Great Britain. Returning to Voree, he found his brother Aaron pursuing a dangerous opposition to the prophet, who was then about visiting the churches in the middle and eastern States. Hoping to save the church from schism, and his brother from apostacy, he lingered until the prophet's return, pursuing with wisdom and moderation measures for the enforcing of a just discipline and the healing of all wounds, and particularly to prevent radical and dangerous resolution. In this effort he was doomed to be unsuccessful. The disease lay too deep to be healed without breaking out. The means by which he should have proceeded to England was withheld from him. Hazen Aldrich abandoned the mission, and Lester Brooks and Martin Harris, going out together, the folly of the latter defeated their work.

By permission of the prophet, Moses went into the pine region on the head waters of the Mississippi, sustaining himself in the lumbering business, but entrusted with a most responsible mission, the duties of which he has preformed in a manner entirely satisfactory. He was last in Voree last July, when it was arranged that he should return from there within the year, and perform the mission formerly given him to the saints in England. Causes, not fully known here, detained him longer than was expected. The hand of death has smitten him, and he has gone to the world of spirits, with Joseph, Hyrum, and David, fellow Apostles in this dispensation, to preach the gospel of the resurrection and everlasting life to the nations of the dead.

LOST LABOR.

That labor which is spent in preaching the gospel with a pipe in the lips, or a quid of tobacco in the cheeks, is labor lost. Defending the truth of the revelations with a smoking cup of tea before you, is lost labor. The example kills the precept. All efforts to establish the truth of the dispensation, coupled with accusations of those who hold the keys, are labor lost. No man will believe your leaders are sent of God, if you do not believe them honest. No one need say one word in favor of Mormonism who has not full confidence in the administration of the government of the church. It is labor lost. It is but calling the leaders what the enemies believe them—dishonest. If you do not sustain the church entirely, YOU MAY AS WELL NOT AT ALL.

☞ We are in possession of a communication from brother Comstock, which we shall publish as soon as we can attend to the questions contained in it. We have also a long letter from George Miller, which we shall make room for soon. Money can be remitted by mail from Texas as from other places. A quarter eagle or half sovereign would be a convenient sum to remit, and should be wafered carefully to the letter which incloses it.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. BURGESS TO MR. STRANG.—No. 10.

Racine, May 16th, 1849.

MR. JAMES J. STRANG,—SIR:—I am surprised to find, in par. 235, No. 10, that you still claim to have originated the argument published as Arrington's in the Democratic Review of August and Sept., 1847, while Arrington says, par. 1, "the construction of the argument in my own mind originated in the necessity of my nature," and, par. 5, he says it occurred in May, on the banks of the Colorado in Texas while reading in Plato the sentence that "GOD GEOMETRIZES." He then threw down the book, and exclaimed, "vain revery!" It fell beside a flower, which he plucked, then counted its stamens 5, its calyx 5, and its corol 5. He then says, he calculated the chances of these three equations in one flower, and hence the argument. I state this for the benefit of those who have not seen the Review, and as one reason for my believing that Arrington's claim to originating the argument is better than yours.

206. I have read your par. 9, where you simply acknowledge having read the argument, and claim it but a repetition of the arguments used by you in PRIVATE conversations in Pittsburgh, New York and Boston two years since, and repeated in successive public lectures at Voree last winter and spring. Now mark, the public lectures would be proof against you, as Arrington published more than a year before, making it more probable that you copied from him, and private testimony carries less force of evidence than public.

207. I name this as one reason for not believing your testimony, when you say, you "have seen God in the exercise of his power."—What I say I trust you will not consider as personal pique. But simply a defense of what I believe to be true, and an attack on what appears to me false, and that it may not be truly said in time to come, as is often said of "Christ's miracles," "if they were not true, some one would have denied them," when the christians had burnt the books which were written against them. The acts of Christ and Moses were probably magnified by tradition, like the three black crows of old. It is difficult to learn the truth of an event in our own time and neighborhood; how much more difficult is it to learn the truth of an event in times long past, when the means of communication were much less perfect, the people generally much more ignorant, and the rulers, if possible, more corrupt? Only last week a man was landed in Racine from a steamer affected with cholera and died. A day or two after I was told that in Yorkville it was reported there were ten cases of cholera in Racine in one day. This in after time may pass for truth, though I believe it is our only case of cholera so far. Even Mr. Strang stated, April 14th, 1849, in his notes by the way, that the Racine pier was built without government aid, when we had $12,500 from government, I think in 1844. What then is the test of truth in the testimony of any man, but its agreements with the facts referred to? My speaking truth in one case would not prove that I spoke truth always. Yet my speaking false in one case would be good reason for doubt in others. The faith of many full grown people reminds me of that of children, who receive all kinds of absurdities from parents and priests as true and just, which they think it criminal to doubt or disbelieve. Are any men prophets in their own country, where people know them best? More converts are made to Mormonism far from Voree than near it, because it is easier to believe testimony without facts, than where facts would deny the testimony.

Things which provoke the mind's resistance,
Appear much better in the distance.

208. Now which appears most probable, that you should have seen a supernatural governor of the universe, or that you should be deceived and tell what is false? How is it possible to determine the truth?

apart by revelation and the laying on of hands to the Apostleship, and remained a member of the Quorum of the Twelve, enjoying in the fullest degree the confidence of the church and of the prophet.—During the same year he visited most of the churches in Mich. and Ohio; called together and assisted in conducting a well attended and eminently useful Conference in Kirtland, and set in order most of the churches in that region. It was under his wise administration that the Temple passed peaceably into the hands of the true church. While he remained there all things prospered, and the number of the faithful continually increased. It is impossible that any one should appreciate the wisdom of his administration in that region who has not been on similar ground, where apostacy has succeeded apostacy, till fear and jealousy prevails universal.

At the Conference in Kirtland he was appointed, in conjunction with Lester Brooks, Martin Harris and Hazen Aldrich, to a responsible mission to Great Britain. Returning to Voree, he found his brother Aaron pursuing a dangerous opposition to the prophet, who was then about visiting the churches in the middle and eastern States. Hoping to save the church from schism, and his brother from apostacy, he lingered until the prophet's return, pursuing with wisdom and moderation measures for the enforcing of a just discipline and the healing of all wounds, and particularly to prevent radical and dangerous resolution. In this effort he was doomed to be unsuccessful. The disease lay too deep to be healed without breaking out. The means by which he should have proceeded to England was withheld from him. Hazen Aldrich abandoned the mission, and Lester Brooks and Martin Harris, going out together, the folly of the latter defeated their work.

By permission of the prophet, Moses went into the pine region on the head waters of the Mississippi, sustaining himself in the lumbering business, but entrusted with a most responsible mission, the duties of which he has preformed in a manner entirely satisfactory. He was last in Voree last July, when it was arranged that he should return from there within the year, and perform the mission formerly given him to the saints in England. Causes, not fully known here, detained him longer than was expected. The hand of death has smitten him, and he has gone to the world of spirits, with Joseph, Hyrum, and David, fellow Apostles in this dispensation, to preach the gospel of the resurrection and everlasting life to the nations of the dead.

LOST LABOR.

That labor which is spent in preaching the gospel with a pipe in the lips, or a quid of tobacco in the cheeks, is labor lost. Defending the truth of the revelations with a smoking cup of tea before you, is lost labor. The example kills the precept. All efforts to establish the truth of the dispensation, coupled with accusations of those who hold the keys, are labor lost. No man will believe your leaders are sent of God, if you do not believe them honest. No one need say one word in favor of Mormonism who has not full confidence in the administration of the government of the church. It is labor lost. It is but calling the leaders what the enemies believe them—dishonest. If you do not sustain the church entirely, YOU MAY AS WELL NOT AT ALL.

☞ We are in possession of a communication from brother Comstock, which we shall publish as soon as we can attend to the questions contained in it. We have also a long letter from George Miller, which we shall make room for soon. Money can be remitted by mail from Texas as from other places. A quarter eagle or half sovereign would be a convenient sum to remit, and should be wafered carefully to the letter which incloses it.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. BURGESS TO MR. STRANG.—No. 10.

Racine, May 16th, 1849.

MR. JAMES J. STRANG,—SIR:—I am surprised to find, in par. 235, No. 10, that you still claim to have originated the argument published as Arrington's in the Democratic Review of August and Sept., 1847, while Arrington says, par. 1, "the construction of the argument in my own mind originated in the necessity of my nature," and, par. 5, he says it occurred in May, on the banks of the Colorado in Texas while reading in Plato the sentence that "GOD GEOMETRIZES." He then threw down the book, and exclaimed, "vain reverry!" It fell beside a flower, which he plucked, then counted its stamens 5, its calyx 5, and its corol 5. He then says, he calculated the chances of these three equations in one flower, and hence the argument. I state this for the benefit of those who have not seen the Review, and as one reason for my believing that Arrington's claim to originating the argument is better than yours.

206. I have read your par. 9, where you simply acknowledge having read the argument, and claim it but a repetition of the arguments used by you in PRIVATE conversations in Pittsburgh, New York and Boston two years since, and repeated in successive public lectures at Voree last winter and spring. Now mark, the public lectures would be proof against you, as Arrington published more than a year before, making it more probable that you copied from him, and private testimony carries less force of evidence than public.

207. I name this as one reason for not believing your testimony, when you say, you "have seen God in the exercise of his power."—What I say I trust you will not consider as personal pique. But simply a defense of what I believe to be true, and an attack on what appears to me false, and that it may not be truly said in time to come, as is often said of "Christ's miracles," "if they were not true, some one would have denied them," when the christians had burnt the books which were written against them. The acts of Christ and Moses were probably magnified by tradition, like the three black crows of old. It is difficult to learn the truth of an event in our own time and neighborhood; how much more difficult is it to learn the truth of an event in times long past, when the means of communication were much less perfect, the people generally much more ignorant, and the rulers, if possible, more corrupt? Only last week a man was landed in Racine from a steamer affected with cholera and died. A day or two after I was told that in Yorkville it was reported there were ten cases of cholera in Racine in one day. This in after time may pass for truth, though I believe it is our only case of cholera so far. Even Mr. Strang stated, April 11th, 1849, in his notes by the way, that the Racine pier was built without government aid, when we had $12,500 from government, I think in 1844. What then is the test of truth in the testimony of any man, but its agreements with the facts referred to? My speaking truth in one case would not prove that I spoke truth always. Yet my speaking false in one case would be good reason for doubt in others. The faith of many full grown people reminds me of that of children, who receive all kinds of absurdities from parents and priests as true and just, which they think it criminal to doubt or disbelieve. Are any men prophets in their own country, where people know them best? More converts are made to Mormonism far from Voree than near it, because it is easier to believe testimony without facts, than where facts would deny the testimony.

Things which provoke the mind's resistance,
Appear much better in the distance.

208. Now which appears most probable, that you should have seen a supernatural governor of the universe, or that you should be deceived and tell what is false? How is it possible to determine the truth?

Don't lawyers lie in their profession,
And go to court in open session
To prove that right is clearly wrong,
And wrong is right in speeches long?
Why wonder, then, when turned a priest,
By force of habit at the least,
They still lie on through thick and thin?
Do Ethiopians change their skin?
Or lawyer priests their trade of lying?
Until like saints, they're changed by dying?
Their testimony then who heeds it,
Except the dupe, who thinks he needs it?

209. To return to the Arrington article, when I showed J. E. Page and J. Ketcham what I call the original article in the Review they were surprised. I asked them if they had ever heard you use the arguments before their present publication, they said NO. They thought before my showing them the Review that the ideas and language were original with you. They were evidently surprised to find your flowery articles only a base plagiarism. That Gods, High Priest, Prophet, Seer and Revelator, the successor of Moses and Christ, should have to borrow his ideas and language from a magazine scribe, appears to me supremely ridiculous.

210. A curious coincidence occurs here. That you should write an article containing the first acknowledgment of one idea and language from Arrington (after you had copied so many) only two days prior to my showing the Review to Page and Ketcham, you have either mistaken the date or written a good deal that day, "notes by the way," "No. 10 to myself," and "an article to the printer." Pretty well, considering visiting and visitors, and the anxiety of leaving Racine. You see I was wondering if my exposure was not the cause of the "one idea acknowledgment," not that I doubt your ability to write much in little time.

211. Again, when you lectured in Racine and gave the challenge, I asked Mr. Savage and yourself what evidence there was to believe in the existence of a God. Both of you used the language argument, but neither the Arrington, then the difference of style.—That of Arrington reminds me of Hudibras, who,

"For rhetoric he could not ope
His mouth, but out there flew a trope,"

which does not correspond with your style of speaking or writing, so far as I have heard and read you.

212. Another circumstance I would name is, that you did not commence this discussion until about two months after your challenge, and not till after you had read Arrington's article, on which you mainly rely. So it appears probable to me that prior to the reading of that you did not think you had sufficient arguments to sustain your case. Coupling this with what is called the Spalding plagiarism, have not the Gentiles much reason to doubt and little to believe the claims of the saints in the relations of their interviews with the supernatural?

213. Next comes the inconsistency. First, you have said God is material, and matter is INERT, therefore God is INERT. Second, God is MIND and the cause of motion, therefore God is active and inert. Now, friend Strang, you can hang yourself on either horn of the dilemma or suspend yourself between them, as suits best your convenience. Could the two arguments possibly originate in any consistent mind?

214. I doubt much if the argument first fairly originated with either of you, for the doctrine of chances in relation to order occurs in Bachelor and Owens' discussion on the existence of God, published in London in 1840, and in America long before, which I doubt not you can read if you wish. I think I have shown good reason for believing that you have copied a great deal from Arrington without a fair acknowledgment. The inertia argument Arrington credits to Dr. Samuel Clarke.

215. I will now proceed with par. 237. After complaining that I have made no effort to answer your arguments, which I think few of our readers can believe, 1st, you claim to have demonstrated that matter is absolutely inert, that is, that it does not move, when, I presume, you only mean that it was inert till put in motion by mind.—I thought I showed, in par. 126 to 128, the inconclusiveness of your arguments, and that to prove matter was inert you must show that motion began to be, and establish the pre-existence and invariable connection of mind as its cause. 2d, that mind and matter both existed prior to motion, which will prove an (active) cause, once passive, in relation to the motion of the (material) universe. Then we may guess how long matter has been active, or, perhaps, by the momentum, how existing. You or Arrington may calculate its duration. When we take a false position, the longer we follow it the more difficulty we are involved in. With a true one, the reverse.

216. 2d, you claim that no effect can occur without motion. Here there was no issue. 3d, you claim that mind and nothing else could produce motion. Here, as I said before, you are bound to show that wind, waves, planetary motion, earthquakes, heat, light and electrical action, are caused by mind; for if I find a single exception your position will not be proved. Here, as I said before, you must show the pre-existence and invariable connection, if precedence and connection distinguish a cause. And you are likewise bound to show that motion began to be, for an eternal effect would be as ridiculous as a man eternal, and begotten. So that the conclusion you claim is not "irresistible that mind governs all;" for reasonable conclusions must be indicated by the facts referred to as proof, which in this case are found wanting.

217. You now say, par. 237, the word God admits of no better definition than the "Almighty Mind." Now all might signifies, in this sense, all force. But if God's mind contains all force, then our minds contain no force, which you would hardly admit. But if our minds contain some of the force, which makes up the all force.—Then are our minds parts of the Almighty Mind, or God, which is pure Pantheism. And as bodies and minds always go together in nature, will not the Almighty Mind require an Almighty Body, which would be all the material universe, which is also Pantheism. First, your "God was a material being, possessed of motive, intelligence and will," which would be only part of nature. Now he is the "ALMIGHTY MIND," which you "have seen in the exercise of his power;" and consequently can give us a description of his appearance. Then minds are visible after all. How strange they are not more frequently seen.

218. I think your "impregnable fortress" is your denial of my attempting to answer your arguments, the folly and falsehood of which is too evident to need a reply.

219. You say, par. 239, first, I am bound to show that matter has the power to set itself in motion. I never claimed there was a time when matter did not move, (as you do, without proving it.) I do not think I am in the habit of claiming such absurdities. And believing your mind to be as fallible as my own, I do not bow to your authority or dictation. "I only denied the existence and revelation of a supernatural being." The negative of your second also I never claimed that effects occur without motion. I doubt much if any one ever did. "Third, you say I am bound to show that something else produced the motions of the world besides mind." Have I not told you sufficiently often that I believe the different portions of nature mutually govern each other, according to astronomy, &c.; that motion is as indestructible as matter. In fact, that all the attributes of matter are as indestructible as matter itself, and consequently as eternal. If I understand the question, it is for you, who affirm, to

Don't lawyers lie in their profession,
And go to court in open session
To prove that right is clearly wrong,
And wrong is right in speeches long?
Why wonder, then, when turned a priest,
By force of habit at the least,
They still lie on through thick and thin?
Do Ethiopians change their skin?
Or lawyer priests their trade of lying?
Until like saints, they're changed by dying?
Their testimony then who heeds it,
Except the dupe, who thinks he needs it?

209. To return to the Arrington article, when I showed J. E. Page and J. Ketcham what I call the original article in the Review they were surprised. I asked them if they had ever heard you use the arguments before their present publication, they said NO. They thought before my showing them the Review that the ideas and language were original with you. They were evidently surprised to find your flowery articles only a base plagiarism. That Gods, High Priest, Prophet, Seer and Revelator, the successor of Moses and Christ, should have to borrow his ideas and language from a magazine scribe, appears to me supremely ridiculous.

210. A curious coincidence occurs here. That you should write an article containing the first acknowledgment of one idea and language from Arrington (after you had copied so many) only two days prior to my showing the Review to Page and Ketcham, you have either mistaken the date or written a good deal that day, "notes by the way," "No. 10 to myself," and "an article to the printer." Pretty well, considering visiting and visitors, and the anxiety of leaving Racine. You see I was wondering if my exposure was not the cause of the "one idea acknowledgment," not that I doubt your ability to write much in little time.

211. Again, when you lectured in Racine and gave the challenge, I asked Mr. Savage and yourself what evidence there was to believe in the existence of a God. Both of you used the language argument, but neither the Arrington, then the difference of style.—That of Arrington reminds me of Hudibras, who,

"For rhetoric he could not ope
His mouth, but out there flew a trope,"

which does not correspond with your style of speaking or writing, so far as I have heard and read you.

212. Another circumstance I would name is, that you did not commence this discussion until about two months after your challenge, and not till after you had read Arrington's article, on which you mainly rely. So it appears probable to me that prior to the reading of that you did not think you had sufficient arguments to sustain your case. Coupling this with what is called the Spalding plagiarism, have not the Gentiles much reason to doubt and little to believe the claims of the saints in the relations of their interviews with the supernatural?

213. Next comes the inconsistency. First, you have said God is material, and matter is INERT, therefore God is INERT. Second, God is MIND and the cause of motion, therefore God is active and inert. Now, friend Strang, you can hang yourself on either horn of the dilemma or suspend yourself between them, as suits best your convenience. Could the two arguments possibly originate in any consistent mind?

214. I doubt much if the argument first fairly originated with either of you, for the doctrine of chances in relation to order occurs in Bachelor and Owens' discussion on the existence of God, published in London in 1840, and in America long before, which I doubt not you can read if you wish. I think I have shown good reason for believing that you have copied a great deal from Arrington without a fair acknowledgment. The inertia argument Arrington credits to Dr. Samuel Clarke.

215. I will now proceed with par. 237. After complaining that I have made no effort to answer your arguments, which I think few of our readers can believe, 1st, you claim to have demonstrated that matter is absolutely inert, that is, that it does not move, when, I presume, you only mean that it was inert till put in motion by mind.—I thought I showed, in par. 126 to 128, the inconclusiveness of your arguments, and that to prove matter was inert you must show that motion began to be, and establish the pre-existence and invariable connection of mind as its cause. 2d, that mind and matter both existed prior to motion, which will prove an (active) cause, once passive, in relation to the motion of the (material) universe. Then we may guess how long matter has been active, or, perhaps, by the momentum, how existing. You or Arrington may calculate its duration. When we take a false position, the longer we follow it the more difficulty we are involved in. With a true one, the reverse.

216. 2d, you claim that no effect can occur without motion. Here there was no issue. 3d, you claim that mind and nothing else could produce motion. Here, as I said before, you are bound to show that wind, waves, planetary motion, earthquakes, heat, light and electrical action, are caused by mind; for if I find a single exception your position will not be proved. Here, as I said before, you must show the pre-existence and invariable connection, if precedence and connection distinguish a cause. And you are likewise bound to show that motion began to be, for an eternal effect would be as ridiculous as a man eternal, and begotten. So that the conclusion you claim is not "irresistible that mind governs all;" for reasonable conclusions must be indicated by the facts referred to as proof, which in this case are found wanting.

217. You now say, par. 237, the word God admits of no better definition than the "Almighty Mind." Now all might signifies, in this sense, all force. But if God's mind contains all force, then our minds contain no force, which you would hardly admit. But if our minds contain some of the force, which make up the all force.—Then are our minds parts of the Almighty Mind, or God, which is pure Pantheism. And as bodies and minds always go together in nature, will not the Almighty Mind require an Almighty Body, which would be all the material universe, which is also Pantheism. First, your "God was a material being, possessed of motive, intelligence and will," which would be only part of nature. Now he is the "ALMIGHTY MIND," which you "have seen in the exercise of his power;" and consequently can give us a description of his appearance. Then minds are visible after all. How strange they are not more frequently seen.

218. I think your "impregnable fortress" is your denial of my attempting to answer your arguments, the folly and falsehood of which is too evident to need a reply.

219. You say, par. 239, first, I am bound to show that matter has the power to set itself in motion. I never claimed there was a time when matter did not move, (as you do, without proving it.) I do not think I am in the habit of claiming such absurdities. And believing your mind to be as fallible as my own, I do not bow to your authority or dictation. "I only denied the existence and revelation of a supernatural being." The negative of your second also I never claimed that effects occur without motion. I doubt much if any one ever did. "Third, you say I am bound to show that something else produced the motions of the world besides mind." Have I not told you sufficiently often that I believe the different portions of nature mutually govern each other, according to astronomy, &c.; that motion is as indestructible as matter. In fact, that all the attributes of matter are as indestructible as matter itself, and consequently as eternal. If I understand the question, it is for you, who affirm, to show that something supernatural governs the universe, or causes the motions, if you will. I never supposed that mind was "SUPER," or above NATURE, though I do deny that there is evidence to show that mind is the cause of universal motion, though I do not see what this has to do with the supernatural, unless you call mind supernatural, and matter natural, which would be quite a new definition to me.

220. I thought from all I could learn from what you have said, that the difference between you and other priests was, that you believed in a "material God," who controled nature, without being subject to its influence, and that matter was eternal. Now you define God as the Almighty Mind. As the greatest difficulties generally occur for want of correct definitions, I hope you will make this subject clear if possible; for if we are arguing in a circle, it is your fault for not defining distinctly what you meant by the supernatural. I trust I have asked you often enough to leave no doubt of my desire to know, if possible.

221. Fourth, you desire me to show that some inferior mind is capable of producing the motions actually occurring in the material universe. This also I never claimed, and therefore do not feel bound to prove. You appear to me to lose sight of the fact that the burden of the proof belongs to the affirmative. For these reasons I do not feel bound, as "an honest man, seeking after truth, to yield the point in issue," as you intimate, believing that will properly belong to you. I think we waste much time in answering each other, and lose sight of the question too frequently.

222. You ask, par. 241, "how long will one part of nature press on another, without producing motion?" And you answer, "forever." Can pressure exist without effecting change? or change take place without motion? You say not, and I think change must occur with motion.

223. In reply to 243, I await the proof of mind being the cause of planetary motion, volcanoes, electricity, &c.

224. In par. 243 you evade the question, whether attraction and repulsion, which natural philosophy teaches, are two of the governing forces of the material universe, are co-existent and inseparable from matter. Remember, you appealed to works on natural philosophy, and ought to be the last to shirk the testimony when against you. I should like to see a theory of astronomy based on the premise that force was always in proportion to mind. Query. Would you not soon have to call matter mind? as the planets are said to govern each other according to their material contents, not their mental.

225. Your par. 244 I must leave as belonging to the unknown tongue you spoke of, presuming you spoke of it from better acquaintance in your extensive practice of interpretation. If you will refer to an example in nature, I will endeavor to understand it.

226. In reply to par. 245, some bodies appear to repel light much, and some but little. But does not light appear to act by a repelling force? Query. Is not more done by this resistant or repelling force than it obtains credit for? But for repulsion, would not all the material universe be one solid mass in proportion to the force of attraction?

227. In reply to par. 245, when we speak of imponderable elements we only express our incapacity to weigh them, not that they are absolutely without weight.

228. In reply to par. 247, when I spoke of a negative condition of matter, I alluded of course to the inertia, which you claim. But in the examples which you give to show that a negative can be proved, you only prove an opposite affirmative; that the whole is more than a part, and that 10 is more than 3 times 3. Query. Can we do more than prove an opposite affirmative? It takes quite a number of negatives to describe God, by a comparison with things natural. When you argue from the assumed inertia of matter that mind is the cause of all motion, you certainly argue from an assumed negative. As far as animal action is concerned, mind may be said to be its cause, excited by external influences. But where do minds move inanimate matter, but by a corresponding muscular force? And where is the mental and muscular force capable of effecting planetary motion? You say the supernatural. But his existence is the question in issue.

229. In reply to par. 248, when I spoke of the motion of the universe, I alluded to that which is common to all planetary bodies, and indeed all matter, the cause of which is said to be "attraction and repulsion." By animal motion I mean those actions which appear to be the result of desire. I might have called them voluntary, to distinguish them from the circulation, which appears to continue when the mind is passive or sleeping. I did not concede the passivity of matter, as you claim, only that in comparison with the hand. The pen was relatively passive, or less active. I do not think that which is ponderable can possibly be passive. As to my conceding the mechanical passivity of matter, who claimed that the pen was a mechanic? And as to my showing how motion exists without intellectual force, I would again remind you that the affirmative belongs to you, to prove the supernatural. I do not believe in calling whiskey physic, or mind the distinguishing attribute of animated nature supernatural. Mind, so far as my experience goes, is governed as well as governing; is born and grows, and matures, like our bodies; is made passive or destroyed by a blow on the head; becomes deranged like our bodies, by too much or too little action; and after death we have less evidence of its existence than that of the body, if indeed we have any at all. All your fossil remains prove that.

230. In reply to par. 250, I still think to move all ways at once, is to move inwards as well as outwards.

231. In reply to par. 250, I spoke of heat and cold as the expansive and contractive forces of nature, according to appearances, by which we judge. What you mean by saying that I have not told by what means the motion which produced them was produced, I must leave you to explain. You say further, if inertia be denied all motion would be of inconceivable velocity, because there would be no resistance. But if there was no resistance, how could you cause motion? Is not resistance a requisite of motion? I should like to see you throw a feather as far as a bullet. Which resists the most?

232. When I said "it has been suggested to me," I did it to credit the idea to another, thinking it wrong to put forth the thoughts and language of others as my own, and not to "throw myself behind a cover." So you can consider me responsible, and answer according.

Yours for the truth, EDWIN BURGESS.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. STRANG TO MR. BURGESS.—No. 15.

Voree, June 5th, 1849.

Mr. EDWIN BURGESS:—I have been a few days home from the Beaver Islands, and just got time last evening to look over what you had written during my absence. That the same ignorance of language and logic which has characterized all your former articles should continue in these, is no matter of surprise. I did not, however, expect that Mr. Burgess would take the occasion of my absence to send on to be published by me a mass of doggerel and billingsgate, obviously intended for mere personal abuse.

339. Certainly, when I showed Mr. Burgess the courtesy of entering on a discussion with him, published solely by myself, without any effort on his part to get it before the Atheists, whom it is my object to reach, I had reason to expect something in return other than meanness and indecorous language. Having a confidence in show that something supernatural governs the universe, or causes the motions, if you will. I never supposed that mind was "SUPER," or above NATURE, though I do deny that there is evidence to show that mind is the cause of universal motion, though I do not see what this has to do with the supernatural, unless you call mind supernatural, and matter natural, which would be quite a new definition to me.

220. I thought from all I could learn from what you have said, that the difference between you and other priests was, that you believed in a "material God," who controled nature, without being subject to its influence, and that matter was eternal. Now you define God as the Almighty Mind. As the greatest difficulties generally occur for want of correct definitions, I hope you will make this subject clear if possible; for if we are arguing in a circle, it is your fault for not defining distinctly what you meant by the supernatural. I trust I have asked you often enough to leave no doubt of my desire to know, if possible.

221. Fourth, you desire me to show that some inferior mind is capable of producing the motions actually occurring in the material universe. This also I never claimed, and therefore do not feel bound to prove. You appear to me to lose sight of the fact that the burden of the proof belongs to the affirmative. For these reasons I do not feel bound, as "an honest man, seeking after truth, to yield the point in issue," as you intimate, believing that will properly belong to you. I think we waste much time in answering each other, and lose sight of the question too frequently.

222. You ask, par. 241, "how long will one part of nature press on another, without producing motion?" And you answer, "forever." Can pressure exist without effecting change? or change take place without motion? You say not, and I think change must occur with motion.

223. In reply to 243, I await the proof of mind being the cause of planetary motion, volcanoes, electricity, &c.

224. In par. 243 you evade the question, whether attraction and repulsion, which natural philosophy teaches, are two of the governing forces of the material universe, are co-existent and inseparable from matter. Remember, you appealed to works on natural philosophy, and ought to be the last to shirk the testimony when against you. I should like to see a theory of astronomy based on the premise that force was always in proportion to mind. Query. Would you not soon have to call matter mind? as the planets are said to govern each other according to their material contents, not their mental.

225. Your par. 244 I must leave as belonging to the unknown tongue you spoke of, presuming you spoke of it from better acquaintance in your extensive practice of interpretation. If you will refer to an example in nature, I will endeavor to understand it.

226. In reply to par. 245, some bodies appear to repel light much, and some but little. But does not light appear to act by a repelling force? Query. Is not more done by this resistant or repelling force than it obtains credit for? But for repulsion, would not all the material universe be one solid mass in proportion to the force of attraction?

227. In reply to par. 245, when we speak of imponderable elements we only express our incapacity to weigh them, not that they are absolutely without weight.

228. In reply to par. 247, when I spoke of a negative condition of matter, I alluded of course to the inertia, which you claim. But in the examples which you give to show that a negative can be proved, you only prove an opposite affirmative; that the whole is more than a part, and that 10 is more than 3 times 3. Query. Can we do more than prove an opposite affirmative? It takes quite a number of negatives to describe God, by a comparison with things natural. When you argue from the assumed inertia of matter that mind is the cause of all motion, you certainly argue from an assumed negative. As far as animal action is concerned, mind may be said to be its cause, excited by external influences. But where do minds move inanimate matter, but by a corresponding muscular force? And where is the mental and muscular force capable of effecting planetary motion? You say the supernatural. But his existence is the question in issue.

229. In reply to par. 246, when I spoke of the motion of the universe, I alluded to that which is common to all planetary bodies, and indeed all matter, the cause of which is said to be "attraction and repulsion." By animal motion I mean those actions which appear to be the result of desire. I might have called them voluntary, to distinguish them from the circulation, which appears to continue when the mind is passive or sleeping. I did not concede the passivity of matter, as you claim, only that in comparison with the hand. The pen was relatively passive, or less active. I do not think that which is ponderable can possibly be passive. As to my conceding the mechanical passivity of matter, who claimed that the pen was a mechanic? And as to my showing how motion exists without intellectual force, I would again remind you that the affirmative belongs to you, to prove the supernatural. I do not believe in calling whiskey physic, or mind the distinguishing attribute of animated nature supernatural. Mind, so far as my experience goes, is governed as well as governing; is born and grows, and matures, like our bodies; is made passive or destroyed by a blow on the head; becomes deranged like our bodies, by too much or too little action; and after death we have less evidence of its existence than that of the body, if indeed we have any at all. All your fossil remains prove that.

230. In reply to par. 250, I still think to move all ways at once, is to move inwards as well as outwards.

231. In reply to par. 250, I spoke of heat and cold as the expansive and contractive forces of nature, according to appearances, by which we judge. What you mean by saying that I have not told by what means the motion which produced them was produced, I must leave you to explain. You say further, if inertia be denied all motion would be of inconceivable velocity, because there would be no resistance. But if there was no resistance, how could you cause motion? Is not resistance a requisite of motion? I should like to see you throw a feather as far as a bullet. Which resists the most?

232. When I said "it has been suggested to me," I did it to credit the idea to another, thinking it wrong to put forth the thoughts and language of others as my own, and not to "throw myself behind a cover." So you can consider me responsible, and answer according.

Yours for the truth, EDWIN BURGESS.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. STRANG TO MR. BURGESS.—No. 15.

Vorce, June 5th, 1849.

Mr. EDWIN BURGESS:—I have been a few days home from the Beaver Islands, and just got time last evening to look over what you had written during my absence. That the same ignorance of language and logic which has characterized all your former articles should continue in these, is no matter of surprise. I did not, however, expect that Mr. Burgess would take the occasion of my absence to send on to be published by me a mess of doggerel and billingsgate, obviously intended for mere personal abuse.

339. Certainly, when I showed Mr. Burgess the courtesy of entering on a discussion with him, published solely by myself, without any effort on his part to get it before the Atheists, whom it is my object to reach, I had reason to expect something in return other than meanness and indecorous language. Having a confidence in your decency and good manners, which proves totally undeserved, I instructed the printer of the Herald to insert your letters as they were received, without scrutiny, and by these means the readers of that paper have been imposed upon and abused. Had I seen Nos. 7, 9 and 10 before they were in type, they would have been returned to you less than half read.

340. I wish to be understood distinctly, that my engagement with you was for an encounter of logic, not of acrimony and meanness; and in making a paper under my control, the vehicle for the publication of my opponent's reasonings, I did not undertake also to make it the channel of indiscriminate slander and falsehood, either on others or myself. A man having no respect for the decencies of life, may choose to assert many things which a gentleman would not wish to publish. And in agreeing to enter upon a discussion with any one, I do not engage to print libels on myself, my friends, or my enemies, for which another person would be justly liable to a prosecution at law.

341. This cry of yours in your doggerel, "pay, pay, pay," is a fashionable mode of attack. And your readers are expected to infer that I preach for hire. Unless denied, doubtless all the fools, and if denied, all the knaves will believe it. Men, especially knaves, are unwilling to believe that any person is governed by better motives than themselves. So true is this, that probably Mr. Burgess really believes that I preach for hire, and preach lies for the good things that lies may bring. A man who has spent his life so much in low society as to conclude that no amount of human testimony whatever is sufficient to prove a plain fact, would very naturally get the habit of falsehood, and could hardly expect the lawyer, ordained a priest, of being a whit more true than himself.

342. I observe that, in paragraph 194, you refer to "my article on faith to J. E. Page." I never wrote an article on faith to J. E. Page. I know of no such article. And I think you are the last man who should complain of the saying that "there is no merit in the faith that believes with a reason," who hold that all faith is involuntary, and consequently without merit to the possessor. I confess that I believe there is some merit in the faith the child has in the parent, and man in God, even though it pertain to things that in some measure we understand not, but I will not consent to drag such extraneous matters into this discussion, much less to the falsehood with which you introduce it.

343. Destitute of all shadow of answer to a part of my argument, you have run off into a tirade of abuse on the question of authorship, which, if it is intended for any purpose but an exhibition of meanness, is to prove just what I told you in advance, but WHICH YOU CAREFULLY CONCEAL, that somebody else had published the same thing before. For the benefit merely of the reader who may not have followed this discussion through from the beginning, and not for you, who knew the truth when you wrote the falsehood, I refer to par. 9 in my first letter to you, in which I said, "since seeing you I have read the first argument of real force I ever had the pleasure of reading, to prove that there is a God. This is a reprint in the Wisconsin Argus, from the Democratic Review. And this is but a REPETITION, DRESSED UP IN BETTER and MORE SCIENTIFIC LANGUAGE THAN I AM ABLE TO USE, of part of the ARGUMENTS USED BY ME," on certain occasions, there named.

344. Of course I did not expect, in entering into a discussion, to preclude myself from the use of any particular argument because some other person may have used the same, much less because I had myself used it and it had got in the print. And I expressly disclaimed making any question of authorship, perfectly willing, so I had the benefit of the argument, that every man should come to his own conclusions as to where it originated. Not satisfied with this acknowledgment, you take pains, at par. 118, to say that the same argument appeared in the Democratic Review in August, 1847, adding a fact which did not appear in the Wisconsin Argus, that A. Arrington was the author. I could hardly think you guilty of the baseness of accusing me of plagiarism for repeating what I acknowledged in advance to have been published by another, after I had spoken it. But still your language had so strong a squinting that way, that at par. 235 I reminded you of my acknowledgment made in advance.

345. Not satisfied with an act of doubtful meanness, but determined that every man should perfectly understand that you intended to act the scamp, you again turn to it in par. 205, and enter into an argument, such as it is, to show that Mr. Arrington constructed the argument, and yet, at par. 214, you say that Arrington credits it to Adam Clarke. It certainly originated with two several persons before me, and therefore could not have originated with me. Very well. True, if, after Adam Clarke had originated it somewhere in the eastern world, Mr. Arrington constructed it in Texas, I cannot see why a third person could not produce it without plagiarism in Pittsburgh. But in the publication of it I have expressly acknowledged a previous publication. True, I did not name Arrington as the author, for the very good reason that I never saw it except in the Wisconsin Argus, where it was re-published without naming the author, last August and September.

346. Your assertion at par. 209, so far as regards J. E. Page, is a simple falsehood. J. E. Page was nearly as familiar with the business of the Herald office as myself, when what I have copied from the Wisconsin Argus was placed on the cases in the Argus print, and not copied, as you seem to suppose. Moreover, Bro. Page and I read over the article in the Argus together, from which I first extracted, immediately on its coming to hand, and talked of the coincidence in agreement with my own, in my lectures the winter previous.

347. As far as Bro. Ketcham is concerned, if he indeed said what you attribute to him, then you have found one man on the whole earth who never heard me use a certain argument till after Mr. Arrington did use it, ergo I am a plagiarist. But then I acknowledged the use of Arrington's idea, as well as language, after having quoted from him. Certainly. Having only an anonymous copy, I credited it to the paper instead of the man. Learning the name of the author afterwards from you, I then credited to the man. And when I took up the first new idea from him, gave him the credit for that also.

348. As for the insinuations contained in par. 210, I am very willing you or any other ass should think I can only write three brief articles in a day, and infer that therefore I have misdated a letter because I could not write so much. So this is the Atheist's evidence that there is no God. Again, you say, I did not use the inertia argument in conversation with you. Certainly not. I tried two or three times to state it, but before I could state the positions you broke in. After three or four unsuccessful efforts to make an uninterrupted statement of the argument, I was content to drop the matter till I could write or speak to one who did not interrupt. I think Savage had much the same success with the language argument.

349. Again, you seem to think that something or other in the argument, for I do not understand what, originated with Barheldn or Owen. Possibly they have had some similar idea. I never had the pleasure of reading their work. As Plato, who wrote about 2,000 years since, asserted that "God geometrizes," doubtless he would come in with still the best claim to the origin of the argument, and God's prophet has borrowed from a PAGAN instead of a magazine writer. Be it so. And the strength of the Atheist's cause rests not in any answer to the argument, but in the simple your decency and good manners, which proves totally undeserved, I instructed the printer of the Herald to insert your letters as they were received, without scrutiny, and by these means the readers of that paper have been imposed upon and abused. Had I seen Nos. 7, 9 and 10 before they were in type, they would have been returned to you less than half read.

340. I wish to be understood distinctly, that my engagement with you was for an encounter of logic, not of acrimony and meanness; and in making a paper under my control, the vehicle for the publication of my opponent's reasonings, I did not undertake also to make it the channel of indiscriminate slander and falsehood, either on others or myself. A man having no respect for the decencies of life, may choose to assert many things which a gentleman would not wish to publish. And in agreeing to enter upon a discussion with any one, I do not engage to print libels on myself, my friends, or my enemies, for which another person would be justly liable to a prosecution at law.

341. This cry of yours in your doggerel, "pay, pay, pay," is a fashionable mode of attack. And your readers are expected to infer that I preach for hire. Unless denied, doubtless all the fools, and if denied, all the knaves will believe it. Men, especially knaves, are unwilling to believe that any person is governed by better motives than themselves. So true is this, that probably Mr. Burgess really believes that I preach for hire, and preach lies for the good things that lies may bring. A man who has spent his life so much in low society as to conclude that no amount of human testimony whatever is sufficient to prove a plain fact, would very naturally get the habit of falsehood, and could hardly expect the lawyer, ordained a priest, of being a whit more true than himself.

342. I observe that, in paragraph 194, you refer to "my article on faith to J. E. Page." I never wrote an article on faith to J. E. Page. I know of no such article. And I think you are the last man who should complain of the saying that "there is no merit in the faith that believes with a reason," who hold that all faith is involuntary, and consequently without merit to the possessor. I confess that I believe there is some merit in the faith the child has in the parent, and man in God, even though it pertain to things that in some measure we understand not, but I will not consent to drag such extraneous matters into this discussion, much less to the falsehood with which you introduce it.

343. Destitute of all shadow of answer to a part of my argument, you have run off into a tirade of abuse on the question of authorship, which, if it is intended for any purpose but an exhibition of meanness, is to prove just what I told you in advance, but WHICH YOU CAREFULLY CONCEAL, that somebody else had published the same thing before. For the benefit merely of the reader who may not have followed this discussion through from the beginning, and not for you, who knew the truth when you wrote the falsehood, I refer to par. 9 in my first letter to you, in which I said, "since seeing you I have read the first argument of real force I ever had the pleasure of reading, to prove that there is a God. This is a reprint in the Wisconsin Argus, from the Democratic Review. And this is but a REPETITION, DRESSED UP IN BETTER and MORE SCIENTIFIC LANGUAGE THAN I AM ABLE TO USE, of part of the ARGUMENTS USED BY ME," on certain occasions, there named.

344. Of course I did not expect, in entering into a discussion, to preclude myself from the use of any particular argument because some other person may have used the same, much less because I had myself used it and it had got in the print. And I expressly disclaimed making any question of authorship, perfectly willing, so I had the benefit of the argument, that every man should come to his own conclusions as to where it originated. Not satisfied with this acknowledgment, you take pains, at par. 118, to say that the same argument appeared in the Democratic Review in August, 1847, adding a fact which did not appear in the Wisconsin Argus, that A. Arrington was the author. I could hardly think you guilty of the baseness of accusing me of plagiarism for repeating what I acknowledged in advance to have been published by another, after I had spoken it. But still your language had so strong a squinting that way, that at par. 235 I reminded you of my acknowledgment made in advance.

345. Not satisfied with an act of doubtful meanness, but determined that every man should perfectly understand that you intended to act the scamp, you again turn to it in par. 205, and enter into an argument, such as it is, to show that Mr. Arrington constructed the argument, and yet, at par. 214, you say that Arrington credits it to Adam Clarke. It certainly originated with two several persons before me, and therefore could not have originated with me. Very well. True, if, after Adam Clarke had originated it somewhere in the eastern world, Mr. Arrington constructed it in Texas, I cannot see why a third person could not produce it without plagiarism in Pittsburgh. But in the publication of it I have expressly acknowledged a previous publication. True, I did not name Arrington as the author, for the very good reason that I never saw it except in the Wisconsin Argus, where it was re-published without naming the author, last August and September.

346. Your assertion at par. 209, so far as regards J. E. Page, is a simple falsehood. J. E. Page was nearly as familiar with the business of the Herald office as myself, when what I have copied from the Wisconsin Argus was placed on the cases in the Argus print, and not copied, as you seem to suppose. Moreover, Bro. Page and I read over the article in the Argus together, from which I first extracted, immediately on its coming to hand, and talked of the coincidence in agreement with my own, in my lectures the winter previous.

347. As far as Bro. Ketcham is concerned, if he indeed said what you attribute to him, then you have found one man on the whole earth who never heard me use a certain argument till after Mr. Arrington did use it, ergo I am a plagiarist. But then I acknowledged the use of Arrington's idea, as well as language, after having quoted from him. Certainly. Having only an anonymous copy, I credited it to the paper instead of the man. Learning the name of the author afterwards from you, I then credited to the man. And when I took up the first new idea from him, gave him the credit for that also.

348. As for the insinuations contained in par. 210, I am very willing you or any other ass should think I can only write three brief articles in a day, and infer that therefore I have misdated a letter because I could not write so much. So this is the Atheist's evidence that there is no God. Again, you say, I did not use the inertia argument in conversation with you. Certainly not. I tried two or three times to state it, but before I could state the positions you broke in. After three or four unsuccessful efforts to make an uninterrupted statement of the argument, I was content to drop the matter till I could write or speak to one who did not interrupt. I think Savage had much the same success with the language argument.

349. Again, you seem to think that something or other in the argument, for I do not understand what, originated with Barheldn or Owen. Possibly they have had some similar idea. I never had the pleasure of reading their work. As Plato, who wrote about 2,000 years since, asserted that "God geometrizes," doubtless he would come in with still the best claim to the origin of the argument, and God's prophet has borrowed from a PAGAN instead of a magazine writer. Be it so. And the strength of the Atheist's cause rests not in any answer to the argument, but in the simple fact that it has been used before. The logic is not new. It was used some thousand years since and remains unanswered, ergo it is unsound.

350. Who Mr. Arrington is, or whether such an individual really exists, I know not. I do not question the possibility that the same set of ideas may have grown up in different minds on this subject, as well as on ten thousand others. But I have not the slightest doubt that the writer of those articles, whoever he may be, derived his ideas from another. Though richly illustrated, they carry with them the full evidence of a want of originality in the construction of the argument. In the calculation of chances, not a single problem is accurately solved. One uniform error runs through the whole, showing that it originated, not in a defect of mathematical understanding, but in a want of understanding of the subject. One who constructed the argument could not have committed the error, but one whose language was rich could dress up the subject, as it is there, in all the grandeur of expression which I addeemed with pretending to equal. (See par. 9.)

351. Moreover, the author of that work has a radical error running through the entire work, and quite inconsistent with what is contained in it, (though it in no sense invalidates the reasoning,) which shows that the writer of the article was not the originater of the ideas. The man who originated the argument of the inertia of matter, and that all causation resides in mind, must also perceive that "abstract truth" is self-existent and eternal, and that it is also destitute of the power of causation, and consequently must acknowledge a trinity of eternal, uncreated existences—MATTER, TRUTH and INTELLIGENCE, of which INTELLIGENCE alone has the power of causation. This fact alone I look upon as conclusive. But, however it may be, I do not deem it necessary to pursue the matter further, as I disclaimed in the outset, (par. 9,) making any question as to the origin of the argument holding them as now, that the only question was as to the validity of it.

352. It is an old saying, and a true one, when you hear one shout earlier and louder than any other, stop thief, look about him for stolen property. While Mr. Burgess was crying out "plagiarist," probably he did not know that he was constantly making evidence of his own plagiarism. Had Mr. Burgess chosen to get some one to write his articles for him, and sent them thus, or had he found a printed article more or less which satisfactorily expressed his ideas, and attached it to the manuscript in its proper place, as I did, no one could reasonably find fault. Your letters all come in your own hand writing from beginning to end. Beyond all question you constructed the argument, for there is not a touch of any pen but yours.

353. Occasionally, however, we have an excuse for your delay on the score of weak eyes. This weakness of eyes seems to regularly come on about the time when lawyers are very busy preparing causes and attending court. It may be merely because you are a little more employed in mending their coats. And then it may be because one of them has no time just then to prepare articles for you to copy. It is apparent too that your manuscript is copied from a manuscript which you are scarcely able to read, for I find, in looking over your manuscript, that you are not unfrequently entirely unable to read a line, and therefore leave a blank space in the copy, in which the illegible line is written afterwards, probably under the direction of the author. Par. 207 contains several examples of this, in some of which the illegible line proved too long for the space left for it, and had to be over written, and in others too short, and left a long blank in the line. Worse than this, it appears that you do not understand your own borrowed arguments and assertions, and occasionally spoil the sense of the original. For instance, your author has somewhere written that the burden of proof was on me. Doubtless the manuscript was in the usual "lawyers hand," and not understanding the idea, in trying to make a literal or fac simile copy you have written it "barder of proof." No matter. You doubtless would have written it right if you had understood. Taking the will for the deed, the proof reader has put it as it should be. Truly this does not weaken your argument, for if good, they are good, no matter who orriginated them. Logic is the question between us, not authorship. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES J. STRANG.

SELF-RIGHTEOUS MEN.

There is a class of men who are so troubled because the saints are not more righteous, that they themselves refuse to obey God at all, lest they should be contaminated by our unrighteousness.—Many a man has come to Voree, where, in a large majority of the families, prayers are wont to be made every day, and been highly scandalized because we did not pray more. Not one in ten of these pray daily. Several have taken umbrage because no greater progress has been made on the Temple. Not one of them has paid a cent towards it. Those who have paid do not grumble. Complaints are made that the Tower is not further advanced, and that the Order of Enoch have no more and no better houses. And those who make the complaints withhold the means of doing the work.—Not content with this, these persons try to discourage others from rendering efficient assistance. Like the dog in the manger, they will neither do or suffer any one else to do.

☞ Mr. Strang returns his personal thanks to the Hon. Senator Pierce for a valuable map of Texas and California, and to several members of both Houses of Congress for various similar favors.

☞ We continue to hear painful rumors from New Orleans.—At the latest dates a large portion of the city was inundated, and the crevesse constantly widening, and the river rising. When it is stated that the ground on which the city is built, is several feet lower than the river at high water, the danger from a breach in the levee, will be more apparent. Great damage has already been caused by the waters.—Ex. paper.

GREAT FIRE IN WATERTOWN, N. Y.—A terrible fire broke out in Watertown, N. Y., on the 13th inst., which destroyed all the business portion of the place, including three banks, the post office, three printing offices, surrogates office, two hotels, thirty stores, and a large number of dwellings. Loss $200,000. Total insurance, $126,000. One life lost.—Argus.

☞ The amount of work performed by the perfect machinery of the present age, when directed by skill and industry, is truly wondeful. Ten or twenty years ago a female would toil from morning till night in weaving five or six yards of cotton cloth, commonly called homespun. Now the same female, by the aid of the power loom, will weave 107½ yards in a day.—Ex. paper.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD LAST WEEK.

Samuel P. Bacon,	$2,00	to Vol. IV	No. 19
Samuel Snider,	2,50	" "	13
Edward Chidister,	2,00	to Vol. V	No. 12
John Muckle,	2,00	to Vol. IV	No. 38
Chester Spencer,	3,00	to Vol. V	No. 11
D. B. Day, for Mrs. Ghoes,	2,00	to Vol. IV	No. 41
Joseph George,	2,00	" "	52
Richard Anderson,	3,00	" "	40
Benjamin Parcell,	3,00	" "	45

fact that it has been used before. The logic is not new. It was used some thousand years since and remains unanswered, ergo it is unsound.

350. Who Mr. Arrington is, or whether such an individual really exists, I know not. I do not question the possibility that the same set of ideas may have grown up in different minds on this subject, as well as on ten thousand others. But I have not the slightest doubt that the writer of those articles, whoever he may be, derived his ideas from another. Though richly illustrated, they carry with them the full evidence of a want of originality in the construction of the argument. In the calculation of chances, not a single problem is accurately solved. One uniform error runs through the whole, showing that it originated, not in a defect of mathematical understanding, but in a want of understanding of the subject. One who constructed the argument could not have committed the error, but one whose language was rich could dress up the subject, as it is there, in all the grandeur of expression which I addeemed with pretending to equal. (See par. 9.)

351. Moreover, the author of that work has a radical error running through the entire work, and quite inconsistent with what is contained in it, (though it in no sense invalidates the reasoning,) which shows that the writer of the article was not the originater of the ideas. The man who originated the argument of the inertia of matter, and that all causation resides in mind, must also perceive that "abstract truth" is self-existent and eternal, and that it is also destitute of the power of causation, and consequently must acknowledge a trinity of eternal, uncreated existences—MATTER, TRUTH and INTELLIGENCE, of which INTELLIGENCE alone has the power of causation. This fact alone I look upon as conclusive. But, however it may be, I do not deem it necessary to pursue the matter further, as I disclaimed in the outset, (par. 9,) making any question as to the origin of the argument holding them as now, that the only question was as to the validity of it.

352. It is an old saying, and a true one, when you hear one shout earlier and louder than any other, stop thief, look about him for stolen property. While Mr. Burgess was crying out "plagiarist," probably he did not know that he was constantly making evidence of his own plagiarism. Had Mr. Burgess chosen to get some one to write his articles for him, and sent them thus, or had he found a printed article more or less which satisfactorily expressed his ideas, and attached it to the manuscript in its proper place, as I did, no one could reasonably find fault. Your letters all come in your own hand writing from beginning to end. Beyond all question you constructed the argument, for there is not a touch of any pen but yours.

353. Occasionally, however, we have an excuse for your delay on the score of weak eyes. This weakness of eyes seems to regularly come on about the time when lawyers are very busy preparing causes and attending court. It may be merely because you are a little more employed in mending their coats. And then it may be because one of them has no time just then to prepare articles for you to copy. It is apparent too that your manuscript is copied from a manuscript which you are scarcely able to read, for I find, in looking over your manuscript, that you are not unfrequently entirely unable to read a line, and therefore leave a blank space in the copy, in which the illegible line is written afterwards, probably under the direction of the author. Par. 207 contains several examples of this, in some of which the illegible line proved too long for the space left for it, and had to be over written, and in others too short, and left a long blank in the line. Worse than this, it appears that you do not understand your own borrowed arguments and assertions, and occasionally spoil the sense of the original. For instance, your author has somewhere written that the burden of proof was on me. Doubtless the manuscript was in the usual "lawyers hand," and not understanding the idea, in trying to make a literal or fac simile copy you have written it "barder of proof." No matter. You doubtless would have written it right if you had understood. Taking the will for the deed, the proof reader has put it as it should be. Truly this does not weaken your argument, for if good, they are good, no matter who orriginated them. Logic is the question between us, not authorship. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES J. STRANG.

SELF-RIGHTEOUS MEN.

There is a class of men who are so troubled because the saints are not more righteous, that they themselves refuse to obey God at all, lest they should be contaminated by our unrighteousness.—Many a man has come to Voree, where, in a large majority of the families, prayers are wont to be made every day, and been highly scandalized because we did not pray more. Not one in ten of these pray daily. Several have taken umbrage because no greater progress has been made on the Temple. Not one of them has paid a cent towards it. Those who have paid do not grumble. Complaints are made that the Tower is not further advanced, and that the Order of Enoch have no more and no better houses. And those who make the complaints withhold the means of doing the work.—Not content with this, these persons try to discourage others from rendering efficient assistance. Like the dog in the manger, they will neither do or suffer any one else to do.

☞ Mr. Strang returns his personal thanks to the Hon. Senator Pierce for a valuable map of Texas and California, and to several members of both Houses of Congress for various similar favors.

☞ We continue to hear painful rumors from New Orleans.—At the latest dates a large portion of the city was inundated, and the crevesse constantly widening, and the river rising. When it is stated that the ground on which the city is built, is several feet lower than the river at high water, the danger from a breach in the levee, will be more apparent. Great damage has already been caused by the waters.—Ex. paper.

GREAT FIRE IN WATERTOWN, N. Y.—A terrible fire broke out in Watertown, N. Y., on the 13th inst., which destroyed all the business portion of the place, including three banks, the post office, three printing offices, surrogates office, two hotels, thirty stores, and a large number of dwellings. Loss $200,000. Total insurance, $126,000. One life lost.—Argus.

☞ The amount of work performed by the perfect machinery of the present age, when directed by skill and industry, is truly wondeful. Ten or twenty years ago a female would toil from morning till night in weaving five or six yards of cotton cloth, commonly called homespun. Now the same female, by the aid of the power loom, will weave 107½ yards in a day.—Ex. paper.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD LAST WEEK.

Samuel P. Bacon,	$2,00	to Vol.	IV	No. 19
Samuel Snider,	2,50	"	"	13
Edward Chidister,	2,00	to Vol.	V	No. 12
John Muckle,	2,00	to Vol.	IV	No. 28
Chester Spencer,	3,00	to Vol.	V	No. 11
D. B. Day, for Mrs. Ghoes,	2,00	to Vol.	IV	No. 41
Joseph George,	2,00	"	"	52
Richard Anderson,	3,00	"	"	40
Benjamin Parcell,	3,00	"	"	45

☞ We see it stated in many of the papers that a colony of Icarians have purchased the arsenal at Nauvoo and eleven acres of land, for the sum of $3,000, and got the walls of the Temple and the Temple square thrown in as an inducement to the bargain.—Doubtless the arsenal is worth the purchase. But we warn them not to think of plundering us of the little that is left us of the Temple. The Temple lot at Nauvoo was deeded to Joseph Smith, Jr., President of the Church, and to his successors in the First Presidency, Trustees, to the use and for the benefit of the Church.

Joseph Smith has no successor in the First Presidency but Pres. Strang. Consequently no other successor in the trusteeship of the Temple. We are aware that an attempt was made to appoint Bishops Whitney and Miller, Trustees in his place. But nothing is clearer than that they could become successors to him as Trustees, only by becoming First Presidents also, for the trusteeship is a mere contingent of the Presidency. The same reasons also show that every other person who has offered to sell the Temple, is equally destitute of all power to convey a title. We shall not yield our right there as long as a court can be found in the land.

Ithaca, Ohio, May 22d, 1849.

Dear Frank:—I am now at Ithaca, seven miles north of Lewisburg, and all well. I left Beaver Island on the 11th inst., in company with Elders James Smith, James M. Greig and John Prince, all in first rate health and spirits. We left the brethren and sisters all well on the Island, and in good spirits, so far as I know. I preached at Lewisburg last Sunday to an attentive people, and gave another appointment for next Thursday evening at that place. Last evening I preached here to a full house, who listened with profound attention. To-night I preach again here, and to-morrow night too. I have seen several of the brethren here and at Lewisburg, and they are very glad to have the privilege of hearing the word of life. I shall call them together soon, and endeavor to show them the necessity of gathering to the places appointed for safety immediately. I shall visit Dayton in a few days, and try to stir up the saints in that place also. Elder Scofield, the presiding Elder in this branch, will go with me to Dayton. Tell all the brethren and sisters to keep a stiff upper lip and go ahead, not looking back on any account whatever.

JAMES BLAKESLEE.

A bill to charter a Catholic College was recently voted down in the Massachusetts legislature—117 to 80. The opposition to the bill was solely on the ground that it was a Catholic institution! The self-righteous and persecuting bigots of that State cannot endure the idea of religous toleration, even at this period in the nineteenth century. The old leaven, even of Quaker-hanging, banishing, blue-law making still prevails, notwithstanding the general high reputation of the people for education and intelligence. The ruins of the Ursuline convent still exist to attest the kind of toleration Catholics are to expect, and this refusal of a charter, granted without question to other denominations, is another case in point, showing that it is not from lack of disposition that persecution does not show itself openly in fines, imprisonments, and burnings, as of yore.—Wisconsin Argus.

☞ Truly spoken. Two years ago the Legislature of WISCONSIN refused to consider a petiton for a Charter to a literary institution, the trustees of which were Mormons. A good endowment subscribed on condition of obtaining a charter was lost by this bigotry. We do not recollect that the Argus then had one word of rebuke to administer.

Antique.—A stone image has been found about thirteen miles from Tuscaloosa, Alabama. It is about ten inches long, and in due proportion, of a human being; the eyes, ears, nose, mouth, cheeks, forehead, and arms, are distinctly carved. The top of the head is flat, and has on one side four or five cuts or gashes. The image was first exposed to view by the tearing up of the earth, by a large blown down tree. Near the spot was found a complete set of elegant weights, of fine black polished stone, from a pound to an ounce, corresponding, very nearly, with the standard weights now in use.

ANGRY WORDS.

BY JAMES MIDDLETON.

Angry words are lightly spoken
In a rash and thoughtless hour,
Brightest links of life are broken
By their deep insidious power;
Hearts inspired by warmest feeling,
Ne'er before by anger stirred,
Oft are rent past human healing
By a single angry word.

Poison-drops of care and sorrow,
Bitter poison-drops are they,
Weaving for the coming morrow
Saddest memories of to-day.
Angry words, O, let them never
From the tongue unbridled slip:
May the heart's best impulse ever
Check them, ere they soil the lip.

Love is much too pure and holy,
Friendship is too sacred far,
For a moment's reckless folly
Thus to desolate and mar.
Angry words are lightly spoken,
Bitterest thoughts are rashly stirred;
Brighest links of life are broken
By a single angry word.

Defence of Romps.—Never find fault with girls—young girls, in particular, if they are decided romps—but be thankful that they have the health and spirits necessary for romping. Better a romp than have a narrow chest and a hectic flush on the cheek. Better wild as a hawk than tame as a dove. Better pay the butcher and the shomaker than the physician and the undertaker.

Newspaper Postage.—Mr. Collamer, the new Postmaster General, has decided that transient newspapers, that is, papers not sent from the office of publication, will hereafter be subjected to newspaper postage only; that is, one cent for any distance in the same State, one and half for any distance exceeding one hundred miles, where the newspaper is sent from one State into another. But postage on such newspapers is in all cases to be prepaid, as heretofore.

Be Careful What You Say.—A word is a little thing, we know, but it has stirred up a world of strife. Suppressing a word has saved many a character—many a life. Who can tell the good and bad effects of a single word? Be careful what you say. Think before you speak, and you will never have cause for regret.

CONFERENCE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at Big Beaver Island, Lake Mich., July 6th, 7th & 8th.

By the Pres.

GILBERT WATSON, Recorder.

☞ We see it stated in many of the papers that a colony of Icarians have purchased the arsenal at Nauvoo and eleven acres of land, for the sum of $3,000, and got the walls of the Temple and the Temple square thrown in as an inducement to the bargain.—Doubtless the arsenal is worth the purchase. But we warn them not to think of plundering us of the little that is left us of the Temple. The Temple lot at Nauvoo was deeded to Joseph Smith, Jr., President of the Church, and to his successors in the First Presidency, Trustees, to the use and for the benefit of the Church.

Joseph Smith has no successor in the First Presidency but Pres. Strang. Consequently no other successor in the trusteeship of the Temple. We are aware that an attempt was made to appoint Bishops Whitney and Miller, Trustees in his place. But nothing is clearer than that they could become successors to him as Trustees, only by becoming First Presidents also, for the trusteeship is a mere contingent of the Presidency. The same reasons also show that every other person who has offered to sell the Temple, is equally destitute of all power to convey a title. We shall not yield our right there as long as a court can be found in the land.

Ithaca, Ohio, May 22d, 1849.

Dear Frank:—I am now at Ithaca, seven miles north of Lewisburg, and all well. I left Beaver Island on the 11th inst., in company with Elders James Smith, James M. Greig and John Prince, all in first rate health and spirits. We left the brethren and sisters all well on the Island, and in good spirits, so far as I know. I preached at Lewisburg last Sunday to an attentive people, and gave another appointment for next Thursday evening at that place. Last evening I preached here to a full house, who listened with profound attention. To-night I preach again here, and to-morrow night too. I have seen several of the brethren here and at Lewisburg, and they are very glad to have the privilege of hearing the word of life. I shall call them together soon, and endeavor to show them the necessity of gathering to the places appointed for safety immediately. I shall visit Dayton in a few days, and try to stir up the saints in that place also. Elder Scofield, the presiding Elder in this branch, will go with me to Dayton. Tell all the brethren and sisters to keep a stiff upper lip and go ahead, not looking back on any account whatever.

JAMES BLAKESLEE.

A bill to charter a Catholic College was recently voted down in the Massachusetts legislature—117 to 80. The opposition to the bill was solely on the ground that it was a Catholic institution! The self-righteous and persecuting bigots of that State cannot endure the idea of religous toleration, even at this period in the nineteenth century. The old leaven, even of Quaker-hanging, banishing, blue-law making still prevails, notwithstanding the general high reputation of the people for education and intelligence. The ruins of the Ursuline convent still exist to attest the kind of toleration Catholics are to expect, and this refusal of a charter, granted without question to other denominations, is another case in point, showing that it is not from lack of disposition that persecution does not show itself openly in fines, imprisonments, and burnings, as of yore.—Wisconsin Argus.

☞ Truly spoken. Two years ago the Legislature of WISCONSIN refused to consider a petiton for a Charter to a literary institution, the trustees of which were Mormons. A good endowment subscribed on condition of obtaining a charter was lost by this bigotry. We do not recollect that the Argus then had one word of rebuke to administer.

Antique.—A stone image has been found about thirteen miles from Tuscaloosa, Alabama. It is about ten inches long, and in due proportion, of a human being; the eyes, ears, nose, mouth, cheeks, forehead, and arms, are distinctly carved. The top of the head is flat, and has on one side four or five cuts or gashes. The image was first exposed to view by the tearing up of the earth, by a large blown down tree. Near the spot was found a complete set of elegant weights, of fine black polished stone, from a pound to an ounce, corresponding, very nearly, with the standard weights now in use.

ANGRY WORDS.

BY JAMES MIDDLETON.

Angry words are lightly spoken
In a rash and thoughtless hour,
Brightest links of life are broken
By their deep insidious power;
Hearts inspired by warmest feeling,
Ne'er before by anger stirred,
Oft are rent past human healing
By a single angry word.

Poison-drops of care and sorrow,
Bitter poison-drops are they,
Weaving for the coming morrow
Saddest memories of to-day.
Angry words, O, let them never
From the tongue unbridled slip:
May the heart's best impulse ever
Check them, ere they soil the lip.

Love is much too pure and holy,
Friendship is too sacred far,
For a moment's reckless folly
Thus to desolate and mar.
Angry words are lightly spoken,
Bitterest thoughts are rashly stirred;
Brighest links of life are broken
By a single angry word.

Defence of Romps.—Never find fault with girls—young girls. in particular, if they are decided romps—but be thankful that they have the health and spirits necessary for romping. Better a romp than have a narrow chest and a hectic flush on the cheek. Better wild as a hawk than tame as a dove. Better pay the butcher and the shomaker than the physician and the undertaker.

Newspaper Postage.—Mr. Collamer, the new Postmaster General, has decided that transient newspapers, that is, papers not sent from the office of publication, will hereafter be subjected to newspaper postage only; that is, one cent for any distance in the same State, one and half for any distance exceeding one hundred miles, where the newspaper is sent from one State into another. But postage on such newspapers is in all cases to be prepaid, as heretofore.

Be Careful What You Say.—A word is a little thing, we know, but it has stirred up a world of strife. Suppressing a word has saved many a character—many a life. Who can tell the good and bad effects of a single word? Be careful what you say. Think before you speak, and you will never have cause for regret.

CONFERENCE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at Big Beaver Island, Lake Mich., July 6th, 7th & 8th.

By the Pres. GILBERT WATSON, Recorder.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 14.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, JUNE 21, 1849. [WHOLE No. 130.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. BURGESS TO MR. STRANG.—No. 11.

Racine, May 29th, 1849.

MR. JAMES J. STRANG,—SIR:—In reply to No. 11, I would ask, what are all those wondrous equations of which you speak, but the general law of organic order, pervading all nature, as far as our knowledge extends? When you can show that this order began to be, I shall be happy to learn it. But I cannot go on to argue as though order had a beginning, without good proof of the fact, as I should have to admit assumed premises, which is more promotive of falsehood than truth. I have no idea whatever of principles or laws of nature beginning to be, nor can I see what the supposition of "chances" has to do with proving the existence of a supernatural being.

231. You ask, par. 273, what reason can the Atheist give for the resemblance of human beings to each other? I confess my ignorance of the cause. I only see that like proceeding from like is the order in which we observe them as they are generated in nature.—If Mr. Strang will show me more, I shall be happy to learn it.

235. You ask, par. 277, "can order constitute itself?" But where is the evidence that order was constituted, or that it began to be? You continue, "can there be order without intellect?" I know not. But I know there is frequently disorder with it. Again, you ask, "is that wonderful order, that mysterious law, self-conscious?" I am neither order, nor law, to say what is the order of nature, but the acting condition of its parts. Whether every part of nature knows what it does, I know not. I have no reason to believe they do, and cannot prove they do not.

236. You ask, par. 278, if blind force can produce heavenly harmony. Query. Does it pervade all nature? What about cholera, earthquakes, shipwrecks, small pox, &c., but with respect to organic order, whether it is the result of intelligent design? This is the Paley argument, which Arrington condemns, par. 2, where he says, "it is based on the assumed postulate of an actual creation, and as such a postulate is anything but self-evident, it needs to be demonstrated.

237. Is the production of a child the consequence of a desire to produce a child? If we nor any other animal can make any animal inferior to ourselves, by what rule shall we judge that some superior organic being, which you call God, can make all animals but himself? Children are often produced in opposition to the desire of the parents to produce them, who fear lest their offspring should have to share the sufferings which they endure.

238. Again, like produces like, in vegetables and animals, neither of which produce a being different in kind to themselves.—While, on your supposition of God, the superior produces the inferior, the greatest produces the least, God produces monads, trilobites, men, and lice, which is quite a degenerate theory, totally opposed to the order we witness in nature. And even admitting, for the sake of argument, that a God did cause order, whatever Mr. Arrington and you may say to the contrary, the difficulty still remains; for by the same rule of reasoning we would have to account for the greater difficulty of the existence of God; for if we say that order must have had a cause, or parent, because it is, so God must had a cause or parent, because he is, and so on without limit. How can we distinguish an effect from a cause, but by the invariable precedent? How know the precedent, but by observation?

239. You say, par 280, the reason why we set about accounting for the present order and harmony of nature is, that we see with our own eyes its finite evolutions passing immediately before us. I think these finite evolutions of finite objects is positive evidence of their existence. Had we as good evidence of the existence of God, we should as necessarily be convinced. Perhaps Mr. Strang can explain how the finite can comprehend or distinguish the infinite. I cannot imagine numbers, height, depth, breadth, thickness, or size, to which imagination cannot add more. I cannot imagine a circle so large that a larger might not contain it. What idea then has Mr. Strang of the infinite? Is it indicated by the finite? How? Your finite example of stars beginning and ending, are but examples of the constructive and destructive order in nature. And when you can see the beginning and end of order, you will have as good reason to call order an effect, and suppose a cause, but not till then.—Nor till then can you claim the existence of God, without begging the question in issue.

240. You say, par. 281, "show me the slightest proof that God began to be." Before that it will be necessary for you to show that God is.

241. I believe in the eternity of nature, indicated by the indestructibility of every element and property which composes it, and the invariable constructive and destructive order to which all organizations are subject, which come within the scope of man's observation, which is all we know of to guide us in our conjectures on the unknown. And could you make visible an organic God, as old as the oldest planet, I should still believe him subject to the same law of disorganization and re-organization, he being composed of elements like ourselves.

242. Did the generative (not creative or mechanic) force of nature, which produces or re-produces all animal and vegetable existence, begin to be? Where is the evidence? And in the absence of evidence, can I intelligently believe a cause, or God? Would a belief "because of a mandate" please any but a tyrant, (were it even possible,) or exist in any but a slave or a fool? I could as soon think myself inspired by nature to expose the folly and falsehood of your religion, as to suppose you were inspired or commissioned by the supernatural, for its propagation. To know what is right, and do it, is the holiest aspiration of man, and is better learnt from our experience than from all the revelations of priests, which have so often bathed the earth in the blood of their victims.

243. I too have reasoned on the origin of man, but not till my fevered brain imagined flames around it, and felt its own burning, as you say you have, in par. 290, or I should suspect my own sanity. But when facts, reason and experience guide me no further, I am

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 14.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, JUNE 21, 1849. [WHOLE No. 130.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

EXISTENCE OF GOD.

MR. BURGESS TO MR. STRANG.—No. 11.

Racine, May 29th, 1849.

MR. JAMES J. STRANG.—SIR:—In reply to No. 11, I would ask, what are all those wonderful equations of which you speak, but the general law of organic order, pervading all nature, as far as our knowledge extends? When you can show that this order began to be, I will be happy to learn it. But I cannot go on to argue as though order had a beginning, without good proof of the fact, as I should have to admit a second premises, which is more promotive of falsehood than truth. I have no idea whatever of principles or laws of nature beginning to be, nor can I see what the supposition of "chance" has to do with proving the existence of a supernatural being.

231. You ask, par. 278, what reason can the Atheist give for the resemblance of human beings to each other? I confess my ignorance of the cause. I only see that like proceeding from like is the order in which we observe them and they are generated in nature.—If Mr. Strang will show me more, I shall be happy to learn it.

235. You ask, par. 277, "can order constitute itself?" But where is the evidence that order was constituted, or that it began to be? You enhance, "can there be order without intellect?" I know not. But I know where is frequently disorder with it. Again, you ask, "is that wonderful order, that mysterious law, self-conscious?" I know of order, not laws, to say what is the order of nature, for the acting condition of its parts. Whether every part of nature knows what it does, I know not. I have no reason to believe they do, and cannot prove they do not.

236. You ask, par. 279, if blind force can produce heavenly harmony. Query. Does it pervade all nature? What about cholera, pestilence, whirlwinds, tornadoes, &c., but with respect to organic forms, whether it is the result of intelligent design? This is the Paley argument, which Arrington condemns, par. 2, where he says, "it is based on the assumed postulate of an actual creation, and as such the whole is begging that self-evident, it needs to be demonstrated."

237. Is the propagation of a child the consequence of a desire to produce a child? If we nor any other animal can make any animal but for ourselves, by what rule shall we judge that some great intelligence being, which you call God, can make all animals and all? Children are often produced in opposition to the desire of the parents to produce them, who fear lest their offspring should inherit the sufferings which they endure.

238. Again, blind force produces lice, in vegetables and animals, neither of which produce a being different in kind to themselves.—Which, on your supposition of God, the superior produces the inferior, the greatest produces the least, God produces monads, trilobites, man, and lice, which is quite a degenerate theory, totally opposed to the order we witness in nature. And even admitting, for the sake of argument, that a God did cause order, whatever Mr. Arrington and you may say to the contrary, the difficulty still remains; for by the same rule of reasoning we would have to account for the greater difficulty of the existence of God; for if we say that order must have had a cause, or parent, because it is, so God must have had a cause or parent, because, he is, and so on without limit. How can we distinguish an effect from a cause, but by the invariable precedent? How know the precedent, but by observation?

239. You say, par 280, the reason why we set about accounting for the present order and harmony of nature is, that we see with our own eyes its finite evolutions passing immediately before us. I think these finite evolutions of finite objects is positive evidence of their existence. Had we as good evidence of the existence of God, we should as necessarily be convinced. Perhaps Mr. Strang can explain how the finite can comprehend or distinguish the infinite. I cannot imagine numbers, height, depth, breath, thickness, or size, to which imagination cannot add more. I cannot imagine a circle so large that a larger might not contain it. What idea then has Mr. Strang of the infinite? Is it inherited by the finite? How? Your finite example of stars beginning and ending are but examples of the constructive and destructive order in nature. And when you can see the beginning and end of order, you will have as good reason to call order an effect, and suppose a cause, but not till then.—Nor till then can you claim the existence of God, without begging the question in issue.

240. You say, par. 281, "show me the slightest proof that God began to be." Before that it will be necessary for you to show that God is.

241. I believe in the eternity of nature, inferred by the indestructibility of every element and property which composes it, and the invariable constructive and destructive order to which all organizations are subject, which come within the scope of man's observation, which is all we know of to guide us in our conjectures on the unknown. And could you make visible an organic God, as old as the oldest planet, I should still believe him subject to the same law of disorganization and re-organization, he being composed of elements like ourselves.

242. Did the generative (not creative or mechanic) force of nature, which produces or re-produces all animal and vegetable existence, begin to be? Where is the evidence? And in the absence of evidence, can I intelligently believe a cause, or God? Would a belief "because of a mandate" please any but a tyrant, (were it even possible,) or exist in any but a slave or a fool? I could as soon think myself inspired by nature to expose the folly and falsehood of your religion, as to suppose you were inspired or commissioned by the supernatural, for its propagation. To know what it is right, and do it, is the holiest aspiration of man, and is better learnt from our experience than from all the revelations of priest, which have so often bathed the earth in the blood of their victims.

243. I too have reasoned on the origin of man, but not till my fevered brain imagined flames around it, and felt its own burnings, as you say you have, in par. 290, or I should suspect my own sanity. But when facts, reason and experience guide me no further, I am content honestly to confess my ignorance. I have often been asked if nature once produced mankind in this world, why does she not continue to produce them? I might, with as good reason, ask, if a woman once bore children, why can she not always bear them?—The production of new families is to me a mystery, and were I to say that God did it, the mystery, how? would be as great as ever, while I should have another and more difficult inquiry to answer—the existence of the Deity himself.

244. Would not our time be better employed in attaining a knowledge of ourselves and the world in which we live, which is so essential to our happiness, than in diverting our attention from nature to the supposition of the supernatural, like the "dog and the bacon," leaving the substance for the shadow, and losing both? The doing well here, is surely the best preparation for being well hereafter, even on the supposition that a just God does govern the universe.

245. Let the slave to fear, and error, who cannot, or dare not inquire, worship the Almighty Tyrant, which their depraved imaginations have engendered, but let my reverence for truth and nature prevent my robbing nature, and making myself an idol out of the spoil, and then falsely ascribing to it those attributes which belong to nature alone. As Christ said, render unto Ceasar that which is Ceasar's, so would I say, render unto nature that which is hers.—Yours for the truth, EDWIN BURGESS.

Beaver Island, April 19th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I left Voree last Wednesday for Beaver, in company with Bro. Nathan Foster. Thursday, at 10½ o'clock, A. M., I went aboard the propeller Delaware, leaving Bro. Foster at Racine. At dark the first night out we were making our way into Sheboyagan against a heavy head wind when a gale struck up, and at 12 o'clock at night we were driven back, and anchored at Milwaukee. The wind continued contrary until sun set on Friday evening, when we sailed again for a short time and lay by. Almost all on board were sick. Saturday and Sabbath we were crossing the bay towards the South Manitou. It was a rough and cold time, and some on board at this time began to express some fear for the safety of the boat. There were some very religious people on board. One aged Roman Catholic on Sabbath morning came to me as I lay in my berth, too sea sick to be good natured. The old man expressed true sincerity. His prayer book in his hand, with tears in his eyes, said to me, sir, are you not afraid of going to the bottom? I answered him, rather indifferently, no, sir; I have paid my fare to Beaver. He stared at me in surprise, and said, that will make no difference. I fear we shall sink, as the planking on the sides of the boat have already begun to give way. No, sir, said I, the bark that carries me must ride until I finish my mission. This led to much conversation in respect to the nature of my mission. I, of course, preached the gospel as it is.

It was a cold rough voyage all the way. Monday morning, at 3 o'clock, A. M., I arrived at Beaver for the first time to set my foot upon that choice land, given to us for an inheritance by the God of heaven, for which let his name be praised. I went to Bro. M. M. Aldrich's just as the gray eyed morning began to curdle the eastern horizon, and found them all well and in very good spirits. But I felt the effects of my voyage. I did but little all day. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday I visited some of the brethren, and conversed with some of those brethren who had been deceived by Shaw's revelation; found them mostly willing to give it up, and anxious to be restored to the bosom of the church. Wednesday evening had a meeting at Esq. More's; much good feeling expressed, and gratitude to God from every heart that the season had again come when they might correspond with their brethren on main land. Thursday and Friday rather bad wet weather. I explored the Island but little the first week.

On Saturday about noon our hearts were made glad at the arrival of the Sciota, bearing our dear brethren and much beloved prophet.—Sabbath we had a meeting at 10 o'clock. Bro. James J. Strang preached, showing the necessity of being in the church of the living God, which is the pillar and ground of the truth, the nature and effects of apostacies, and following or giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of Devils. Sabbath afternoon Bro. Blakeslee preached. The Sabbath passed well, good weather, and the hearts of the true saints of God felt to rejoice at the prospects before us, and each countenance seemed to strive to imitate the smiles of nature. All wore a cheerful countenance, save those who had deceived and been deceived.

Monday morning, cold and raining, ten of us in company start to explore the Island. We traveled all day and we saw a variety of objects to attract the attention. I for one was much pleased with the Island. Perhaps more so than those who were more tired than myself. The Island has been truly represented before, and as to its good qualities, I think they are all there, as well as some very bad things that I saw there, the worst of which were the men who sell spirits to the Indians, who have been corrupted by the whites, who pretend friendship towards them, while they are destroying their lives, degrading their moral bearing and preparing them for wretchedness here and hereafter. May the just judgments of God follow all those who, for the sake of gain, sell death and damnation to that poor, degraded but once noble race of beings. Oh! how much misery follows the drunkards of Ephraim.

I stayed on the Island nearly two weeks, and enjoyed myself well, and hope is large that I shall yet enjoy many more happy days there. On Saturday evening I went on board of the Republic, leaving those behind who had promised to go with me. Soon after I got on board I was introduced to one Mr. Baker, I think was the gents name, of the faith of the Adventists. He was free for conversation. We spent the evening in conversation about the Island. Sabbath morning the old gentleman sat down after breakfast to disabuse my mind of the erroneous doctrine of Mormonism, and it was rather an interesting time for me, as well as some others on board. We spent the day in arguing the merits of Mormonism, and all that I learned of the old man that I had not before learned of sectarians was, that it was predicted by the prophets that the spiritual gifts promised by the Lord Jesus, forever to distinguish his church from all other churches on earth, were to cease from among men at the expiration of Daniel's prophetic week, which was the first seven years of the Apostolic ministry after the endowment on the day of Pentecost.—This was an interesting fact, not found in the book of God. However, I was invited to preach in the cabin on Sunday evening. The invitation was accepted, and I preached the first principles of the gospel to as attentive a congregation as I ever before met with.—May God bless them. More anon. S. GRAHAM.

Baltimore, Md., June 1st, 1849.

PRES. STRANG,—MY DEAR BROTHER:—Since my return to Baltimore, which has been about four weeks, the great work of God has gradually and firmly been gaining strength. Our meetings are overrun with anxious hearers, who are investigating our principles. Some more have already been baptized, and many more will go forward soon. On my return here I found the brethren and sisters all firm in the faith; rooted and grounded and settled in the most holy faith of the "dispensation of the fulness of times," every one standing as immovable as the everlasting hills. Bro. Appleton had faithfully taken charge of them in my absence, and fulfilled his trust in every particular as a man of God. This brother has made great sacrifice for the truth. His former friends and relatives have forsacontent honestly to confess my ignorance. I have often been asked if nature once produced mankind in this world, why does she not continue to produce them? I might, with as good reason, ask, if a woman once bore children, why can she not always bear them?—The production of new families is to me a mystery, and were I to say that God did it, the mystery, how? would be as great as ever, while I should have another and more difficult inquiry to answer—the existence of the Deity himself.

241. Would not our time be better employed in attaining a knowledge of ourselves and the world in which we live, which is so essential to our happiness, than in diverting our attention from nature to the supposition of the supernatural, like the "dog and the bacon," leaving the substance for the shadow, and losing both? The doing well here, is surely the best preparation for being well hereafter, even on the supposition that a just God does govern the universe.

245. Let the slave to fear, and error, who cannot, or dare not inquire, worship the Almighty Tyrant, which their depraved imaginations have engendered, but let my reverence for truth and nature prevent my robbing nature, and making myself an idol out of the spoil, and then falsely ascribing to it those attributes which belong to nature alone. As Christ said, render unto Ceasar that which is Ceasar's, so would I say, render unto nature that which is hers.—Yours for the truth,

EDWIN BURGESS.

Beaver Island, April 19th, 1849.

Dear Frank:—I left Voree last Wednesday for Beaver, in company with Bro. Nathan Foster. Thursday, at 10½ o'clock, A. M., I went aboard the propeller Delaware, leaving Bro. Foster at Racine. At dark the first night out we were making our way into Sheboyagan against a heavy head wind when a gale struck up, and at 12 o'clock at night we were driven back, and anchored at Milwaukee. The wind continued contrary until sun set on Friday evening, when we sailed again for a short time and lay by. Almost all on board were sick. Saturday and Sabbath we were crossing the bay towards the South Manitou. It was a rough and cold time, and some on board at this time began to express some fear for the safety of the boat. There were some very religious people on board. One aged Roman Catholic on Sabbath morning came to me as I lay in my berth, too sea sick to be good natured. The old man expressed true sincerity. His prayer book in his hand, with tears in his eyes, said to me, sir, are you not afraid of going to the bottom? I answered him, rather indifferently, no, sir; I have paid my fare to Beaver. He stared at me in surprise, and said, that will make no difference. I fear we shall sink, as the planking on the sides of the boat have already begun to give way. No, sir, said I, the bark that carries me must ride until I finish my mission. This led to much conversation in respect to the nature of my mission. I, of course, preached the gospel as it is.

It was a cold rough voyage all the way. Monday morning, at 3 o'clock, A. M., I arrived at Beaver for the first time to set my foot upon that choice land, given to us for an inheritance by the God of heaven, for which let his name be praised. I went to Bro. M. M. Aldrich's just as the gray eyed morning began to curdle the eastern horizon, and found them all well and in very good spirits. But I felt the effects of my voyage. I did but little all day. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday I visited some of the brethren, and conversed with some of those brethren who had been deceived by Shaw's revelation; found them mostly willing to give it up, and anxious to be restored to the bosom of the church. Wednesday evening had a meeting at Esq. More's; much good feeling expressed, and gratitude to God from every heart that the season had again come when they might correspond with their brethren on main land. Thursday and Friday rather bad wet weather. I explored the Island but little the first week.

On Saturday about noon our hearts were made glad at the arrival of the Sciota, bearing our dear brethren and much beloved prophet. Sabbath we had a meeting at 10 o'clock. Bro. James J. Strang preached, showing the necessity of being in the church of the living God, which is the pillar and ground of the truth, the nature and effects of apostacies, and following or giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of Devils. Sabbath afternoon Bro. Blakeslee preached. The Sabbath passed with good weather, and the hearts of the true saints of God felt to rejoice at the prospects before us, and each countenance seemed to strive to partake the smiles of nature. All wore a cheerful countenance, save those who had deceived and been deceived.

Monday morning, cold and raining, ten of us in company start to explore the Island. We traveled all day and we saw a variety of objects to attract the attention. I for one was much pleased with the Island. Perhaps more so than those who were more tired than myself. The Island has been truly represented before, and as to its good qualities, I think they are all there, as well as some very bad things that I saw there, the worst of which were the men who sell spirits to the Indians, who have been corrupted by the whites, who pretend friendship towards them, while they are destroying their lives, degrading their moral bearing and preparing them for wretchedness here and hereafter. May the just judgments of God follow all those who, for the sake of gain, sell death and damnation to that poor, degraded but once noble race of beings. Oh! how much misery follows the drunkards of Ephraim.

I stayed on the Island nearly two weeks, and enjoyed myself well, and hope is large that I shall yet enjoy many more happy days there. On Saturday evening I went on board of the Republic, leaving those behind who had promised to go with me. Soon after I got on board I was introduced to one Mr. Baker, I think was the gents name, of the faith of the Adventists. He was free for conversation. We spent the evening in conversation about the Island. Sabbath morning the old gentleman sat down after breakfast to disabuse my mind of the erroneous doctrine of Mormonism, and it was rather an interesting time for me, as well as some others on board. We spent the day in arguing the merits of Mormonism, and all that I learned of the old man that I had not before learned of sectarians was, that it was predicted by the prophets that the spiritual gifts promised by the Lord Jesus, forever to distinguish his church from all other churches on earth, were to cease from among men at the expiration of Daniel's prophetic week, which was the first seven years of the Apostolic ministry after the endowment on the day of Pentecost.—This was an interesting fact, not found in the book of God. However, I was invited to preach in the cabin on Sunday evening. The invitation was accepted, and I preached the first principles of the gospel to as attentive a congregation as I ever before met with.—May God bless them. More anon.

S. GRAHAM.

Baltimore, Md., June 1st, 1849.

Pres. Strang.—My Dear Brother:—Since my return to Baltimore, which has been about four weeks, the great work of God has gradually and firmly been gaining strength. Our meetings are overrun with anxious hearers, who are investigating our principles. Some more have already been baptized, and many more will go forward soon. On my return here I found the brethren and sisters all firm in the faith; rooted and grounded and settled in the most holy faith of the "dispensation of the fulness of times," every one standing as immovable as the everlasting hills. Bro. Appleton had faithfully taken charge of them in my absence, and fulfilled his trust in every particular as a man of God. This brother has made great sacrifice for the truth. His former friends and relatives have forsaken him and persecute him, but none of these things move him, nor does he count his life dear unto himself so that he may win souls for Christ.

After my return here I deemed it wisdom to send him to Philadelphia for a short time, where he has been laboring with great success. A number have been baptized, and the church there confirmed and strengthened, and hundreds inquiring after truth. He withstood William Smith and Jacob Syphret face to face, and put them down, confounded them, and put them to shame; also a man named Logan, a Rigdonite, "twice dead and plucked up by the roots," who is constantly withstanding every man of God that goes to Philadelphia, he had his mouth perfectly closed up by Bro. Appleton. Our Conference here takes place on next Saturday and Sunday. We shall hold a large meeting in a grove, about three miles from Baltimore, on Saturday and Sunday, the 9th and 10th of June, and from there I shall, with God's blessing, proceed immediately to Beaver Island Conference, where I expect to meet many of my dear brethren, and hold sweet council with them. God bless and sustain you, even so. Amen. As ever, yours truly,

GEORGE J. ADAMS.

A RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE BETWEEN A SECTARIAN DIVINE AND JOHN E. PAGE, A MORMON ELDER.

Sectarian. Elder Page, will you tell me why you denominate all religious denominations but yourselves sectarians?

Page. Sir, the term sectarian is derived from the term sect, and sect signifies to divide or dissent from the true standard order of religion, as established by Jesus Christ and his agents, the Apostles.

Sec. How, then, do you make it appear that all the religious denominations of the age are sectarians, except the Latter Day Saints or Mormons?

Page. We show, first, by contrasting the religious faith of every denomination with the New Testament standard, it being the standard set up by Jesus Christ and his called servants, the Apostles.—John, 2d Epistle, 9th verse, says:—"Whoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son."

Sec. We attach the same importance to that text that you probably do.

Page. It may be so, but that will be better determined in the sequel.

Sec. Well, give me some of the most prominent features of what we both consider the true standard of religion, (the New Testament.)

Page. I am at your service, sir, if you will lend me your patience. The first prominent feature that presents itself for sober consideration is this: When Christ gave commission to his Apostles to preach the gospel to all nations, he restricted their prerogatives of going to preach in all the world, by saying, "but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high."—This power spoken of you will admit is significant of the right to act officially in the "name" of God, and that name signifies "authority." Thus, you see, if that power, name or authority had never been granted to the Apostles, they would have tarried at Jerusalem till they closed their mortal existence, and would not have preached one word to the nations of the world, and the religion of Jesus Christ would have died a natural death, without help, in Jerusalem. By reading the second chapt. of Acts we have the account of the said enduement. The Holy Ghost, like tongues of fire, rested upon each of them, according to the promise of Jesus previously given; in which he said, "these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." For a full development of the nature and succession of the power, name or authority given to the Apostles, read this tract, (presenting the "Gospel Tract, No. 3.") The Divine reads the tract through. Then he rises suddenly from his chair, turns on his heel as quick as wink, bites his lips, ahems and spits, and walks the room backwards and forwards, as though assisted by some magic power, for some minutes, his countenance changing its hue as often as a roasting spareribs changes sides, hung before a hot fire. At last silence is broken by the Divine thus:—

Sec. Why, sir, (in a stentorian voice,) according to the doctrine of this "tract," the terms name, power and authority, which you please to say are synonymous with PRIESTHOOD, and priesthood is the right to act in the stead of God, that is, to do what God would do in person if he had not appointed men as his commissioned agents to act in his stead, and that when the calling of men by special revelation ceased, then the christian priesthood ceased, and then, and there, the christian church terminated. Do I understand you right?

Page. Most assuredly you do.

Sec. Astonishing! Sir, when did the principle of revelation cease in the christian church?

Page. Sir, your question is an important one. True, in a historical point of light. No odds when it ceased, as far as present sectarianism is concerned. Our question is, who are and who are not sectarians at the present time; for you must clearly see that if the popular ministers of the age deny the gift of present direct revelation from God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, and the medium of the Holy Ghost was not employed in calling them to the ministry of the word and ordinances of the gospel, that they all stand as sectarians to God and the world, dissenting from the standard established by Christ and his Apostles. Now, sir, if you can show one word in the Old or New Testament to the contrary in its proper connection, I promise an immediate reform on my part. If you cannot, I shall expect on your part the same.

Sec. Well—ahem.

(Silence occurs again for some minutes.)

Page. Sir, I am waiting patiently for your showing.

Sec. Sir, suppose I admit that your position is true, how does that help your case? I mean, sir, by what scripture warrant do you claim that the Mormons are not equally sectarian, even as others?

Page. True, many or few wrongs never make one right. Our warrant is founded on the literal fulfillment of the following scripture:—"And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters." Rev. xiv. 6, 7. The gospel of Christ being an eternal, unchangeable and immutable principle, that whatever was necessary to constitute it "the power of God unto salvation" in one age of the world is necessary in another. Paul expresses the impossibility for any man to preach the true gospel, except he is sent of God, in these words: "How shall he preach, except he be sent?" Supposing a man of his own will should preach the word and administer the ordinances of the gospel, in point of form exactly as Peter or Paul did, still it would not be the gospel or the power of God unto salvation. Why? Because he was not sent of God to do so. But this is supposing more than is possible. The experience of more than the term of "time times and a half time," or one thousand two hundred and three score years, has tested the truth of my position; that since the departure of the ancient christian church from the principle of revelation, hundreds and thousands have in vain attempted to preach what ken him and persecute him, but none of these things move him, nor does he count his life dear unto himself so that he may win souls for Christ.

After my return here I deemed it wisdom to send him to Philadelphia for a short time, where he has been laboring with great success. A number have been baptized, and the church there confirmed and strengthened, and hundreds inquiring after truth. He withstood William Smith and Jacob Syphret face to face, and put them down, confounded them, and put them to shame; also a man named Logan, a Rigdonite, "twice dead and plucked up by the roots," who is constantly withstanding every man of God that goes to Philadelphia, he had his mouth perfectly closed up by Bro. Appleton. Our Conference here takes place on next Saturday and Sunday. We shall hold a large meeting in a grove, about three miles from Baltimore, on Saturday and Sunday, the 9th and 10th of June, and from there I shall, with God's blessing, proceed immediately to Beaver Island Conference, where I expect to meet many of my dear brethren, and hold sweet council with them. God bless and sustain you, even so. Amen. As ever, yours truly,

GEORGE J. ADAMS.

A RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE BETWEEN A SECTARIAN DIVINE AND JOHN E. PAGE, A MORMON ELDER.

Sectarian. Elder Page, will you tell me why you denominate all religious denominations but yourselves sectarians?

Page. Sir, the term sectarian is derived from the term sect, and sect signifies to divide or dissent from the true standard order of religion, as established by Jesus Christ and his agents, the Apostles.

Sec. How, then, do you make it appear that all the religious denominations of the age are sectarians, except the Latter Day Saints or Mormons?

Page. We show, first, by contrasting the religious faith of every denomination with the New Testament standard, it being the standard set up by Jesus Christ and his called servants, the Apostles.—John, 2d Epistle, 9th verse, says:—"Whoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son."

Sec. We attach the same importance to that text that you probably do.

Page. It may be so, but that will be better determined in the sequel.

Sec. Well, give me some of the most prominent features of what we both consider the true standard of religion, (the New Testament.)

Page. I am at your service, sir, if you will lend me your patience. The first prominent feature that presents itself for sober consideration is this: When Christ gave commission to his Apostles to preach the gospel to all nations, he restricted their prerogatives of going to preach in all the world, by saying, "but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high."—This power spoken of you will admit is significant of the right to act officially in the "name" of God, and that name signifies "authority." Thus, you see, if that power, name or authority had never been granted to the Apostles, they would have tarried at Jerusalem till they closed their mortal existence, and would not have preached one word to the nations of the world, and the religion of Jesus Christ would have died a natural death, without help, in Jerusalem. By reading the second chapt. of Acts we have the account of the said enduement. The Holy Ghost, like tongues of fire, rested upon each of them, according to the promise of Jesus previously given; in which he said, "these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." For a full development of the nature and succession of the power, name or authority given to the Apostles, read this tract, (presenting the "Gospel Tract, No. 3.") The Divine reads the tract through. Then he rises suddenly from his chair, turns on his heel as quick as wink, bites his lips, ahems and spits, and walks the room backwards and forwards, as though assisted by some magic power, for some minutes, his countenance changing its hue as often as a roasting spareribs changes sides, hung before a hot fire. At last silence is broken by the Divine thus:—

Sec. Why, sir, (in a stentorian voice,) according to the doctrine of this "tract," the terms name, power and authority, which you please to say are synonymous with PRIESTHOOD, and priesthood is the right to act in the stead of God, that is, to do what God would do in person if he had not appointed men as his commissioned agents to act in his stead, and that when the calling of men by special revelation ceased, then the christian priesthood ceased, and then, and there, the christian church terminated. Do I understand you right?

Page. Most assuredly you do.

Sec. Astonishing! Sir, when did the principle of revelation cease in the christian church?

Page. Sir, your question is an important one. True, in a historical point of light. No odds when it ceased, as far as present sectarianism is concerned. Our question is, who are and who are not sectarians at the present time; for you must clearly see that if the popular ministers of the age deny the gift of present direct revelation from God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, and the medium of the Holy Ghost was not employed in calling them to the ministry of the word and ordinances of the gospel, that they all stand as sectarians to God and the world, dissenting from the standard established by Christ and his Apostles. Now, sir, if you can show one word in the Old or New Testament to the contrary in its proper connection, I promise an immediate reform on my part. If you cannot, I shall expect on your part the same.

Sec. Well—ahem.

(Silence occurs again for some minutes.)

Page. Sir, I am waiting patiently for your showing.

Sec. Sir, suppose I admit that your position is true, how does that help your case? I mean, sir, by what scripture warrant do you claim that the Mormons are not equally sectarian, even as others?

Page. True, many or few wrongs never make one right. Our warrant is founded on the literal fulfillment of the following scripture:—"And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters." Rev. xiv. 6, 7. The gospel of Christ being an eternal, unchangeable and immutable principle, that whatever was necessary to constitute it "the power of God unto salvation" in one age of the world is necessary in another. Paul expresses the impossibility for any man to preach the true gospel, except he is sent of God, in these words: "How shall he preach, except he be sent?" Supposing a man of his own will should preach the word and administer the ordinances of the gospel, in point of form exactly as Peter or Paul did, still it would not be the gospel or the power of God unto salvation. Why? Because he was not sent of God to do so. But this is supposing more than is possible. The experience of more than the term of "time times and a half time," or one thousand two hundred and three score years, has tested the truth of my position; that since the departure of the ancient christian church from the principle of revelation, hundreds and thousands have in vain attempted to preach what they called the gospel of Christ in its ancient form and simplicity, but none have succeeded. Some have missed in one point, and some in another. Like so many men attempting to shoot at a mark for a premium to him that "drives the centre," but all fail. Why? Because God never sent them to shoot, comparatively speaking.—Thus, sir, you can but readily see that God has fixed the gospel under an eternal decreed fate, that none can be the instruments of God unto the salvation of men but those whom he sends by direct revelation. The propriety on the part of God in fixing the precepts and ordinances of the gospel by an unalterable decree that no aspirant could possibly preach the gospel in point of form in its fulness, is apparent to all logical minds, so that none can see the true light only in God's light, that none can see the beauty of the fulness of truth only in God's truth, so that the lover of truth may know truth or good when God sends it, and not before. Thus, sir, I present this idea as an indisputable self-evident fact, that the Latter Day Saints, or Mormons, are sent of God to preach the gospel of Christ and build his church, because they (the Mormons) preach the gospel word for word, ordinance for ordinance, as Christ and the Apostles did; which none can possibly do, except they are sent of God, as the Apostles were. Paul says, that if "any man or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel than that which he preached, let him be accursed." Thus you see that the Latter Day Saints, as a church, are the embodiment of Christ's everlasting gospel truths. Consequently in no sense whatever are they sectarians, dissenters, or schismatics.

Sec. Does not that idea rather savor of the want of charity? presupposing that all other professed christians are not honest, consequently not sincere.

Page. No, sir. "Charity rejoices in the truth, and not in error." Honesty and sincerity being only prerequisites in the man, and not a fundamental principle belonging to gospel saints only for the reason that, in fact, the abject heathen who worship the Juggernaut are as honest and sincere as the best of christians.

Sec. Surely, sir, you have presented the gospel in a more brilliant light than I ever saw it before. I shall be happy to see you again on some other topics of your faith.

Page. Sir, I shall be happy to serve you at any time in a proper place, and as all truth exists in a scientific arrangment, I shall be very happy to instruct you in the rudiments of the gospel science. But there is one thing I wish you to bear in mind, and that is this: Where the christian priesthood is, there the christian church is; and where the christian priesthood is not, there the christian church is not. Consequently they are sectarians.

☞ The following picture of a christian country, under a christian government, is from the Dublin Freeman. The state of affairs therein described is the direct result of government measures, and not of any unforeseen accident:—

IRELAND.

Death! Death!! Death!!! Is this to be forever and forever the cry—death! death!! death!!! We came to our office yesterday, hoping that we would not have to peruse the usual amount of awful heart rending death lists, but need we say that our heart sank within us, and that our blood ran cold as we read letter after letter, and found the burden of each to be the same appalling cry—death, death, death. The humane Protestant rector of Ballingrobe addresses Lord John Russell to-day through our columns, and every line of his eloquent, expressive, philanthropic letter is as a voice from the dead—a voice telling of one hundred and thirty-six registered deaths occurring in one week in the poor house of Ballingrobe!!—a voice telling of the increase of the people's wretchedness and misery—a voice telling of the poor house being shunned as a pestilential snare through the vain hope of the victims, that death may not all at once overtake them elswhere—a voice telling of the deplorable fact, that the people have had neither food nor raiment in any way commensurate with their wants, or even the necessities of nature, and that the painful consequence is, they are dropping into their grave in multitudes. Rev. Mr. Conway, the active, zealous, and humane Catholic curate of the same place, writes to us:—

We have dead bodies everywhere. I am obliged to handle them, coffin them, and put them in the earth. We cannot procure a sufficiency of men to bury the dead, or of coffins to contain them. Every village has dead bodies lying unburied for many days: almost every hovel in the suburbs of the town has its corpse. We cannot, I repeat, get coffins, boards, or men, for the necessity of the moment. May God forgive our rulers for their cruel conduct towards God's creatures here!

Again and again, we ask in anguish of spirit, will men be apathetic while such is the fate of brother men? Will creatures endowed with souls—with human hearts—be silent while the very stones, had they voices, would cry to heaven against such appalling horrors?

Doom of the Mere Irish.—We feel it is not necessary to utter one syllable of comment when introducing the following letter to our readers. It has been communicated to a highly intelligent gentleman, who would be incapable of exaggeration, and the fruits of whose talent and learning have frequently delighted and instructed our readers.

There are some facts simply stated in this letter that are terribly suggestive of the state to which our peasantry are reduced—our once happy, light hearted peasantry. The children fighting for the nettles is one of these. Childhood—struggling with childhood for such means to exist a little longer in living death! The well grown girls cowering before the writer is another, the agony of their shame—God help them!—surpassing the agony of their hunger. And what, in all the records of this unrelieved famine that is slaying our unhappy people, can be more demonstrative of the desert through which our correspondent passed, than the driver's significant words, you won't hear the cry of a child from this to Limerick? Not a child's cry in a district once fruitful and beautiful—once peopled with life and happiness—once filled at this season with the bustle of harvest preparation—once musical with the glad mirth of young voices! Good God! could volumes suggest a more appalling change than the simple words, you won't hear the cry of a child from this to Limerick?

The following is the letter:—

To the Editor of the Evening Packet.—Dear Sir:—I have been for the last ten days through the counties of Limerick, Galway, Clare, and across thence to the King's County. All attempts to depict the existing state of the misery of the masses beyond the Shannon must come utterly short of the truth. All that tract of country from Killalee to Portumna, on the Galway side of Shannon, is lying waste and uncultivated. About three out of four of the miserable huts are unroofed. Some of the former inmates are dead, some in the union, and some few huddled together in one or two of the huts still existing. The men generally have perished.

The correspondent of the Packet, having described scenes of human misery on which a demon could scarcely look without emotion, concludes thus:—

With large tracts of land lying uncultivated, a few miserable men are employed on the roads—at what wages, think you? One pound of yellow meal—i. e., less than 1d. per diem! Great God! how is this to cure famine?

If this process of depopulation goes on a few months more, you may seek an able bodied man in vain for twenty or thirty miles of country.

Such is the testimony of an intelligent Conservative witness, after having visited four counties.

In the name of our common humanity and our common faith, we call upon the public, one and all, to arouse themselves to rescue their brother-men, their brother-subjects, and brother-christians, who now stand on the brink of destruction, from this devouring sea of misery, whose deluge engulfs its thousands and its tens of thousands by the week.

☞ On the 13th inst. a company of 19 persons left this place for Beaver Island.

DIED,

In Burlington, on the 30th of April, Sarah Sophrona, daughter of John C. and Harriet Hill, aged 7 years, 10 months and 5 days.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD LAST WEEK.

Henry Reynolds,	$3,64 to Vol. IV No. 13
Mr. —— Selva,	2,00 to Vol. V No. 12

they called the gospel of Christ in its ancient form and simplicity, but none have succeeded. Some have missed in one point, and some in another. Like so many men attempting to shoot at a mark for a premium to him that "drives the centre," but all fail. Why? Because God never sent them to shoot, comparatively speaking.—Thus, sir, you can but readily see that God has fixed the gospel under an eternal decreed fate, that none can be the instruments of God unto the salvation of men but those whom he sends by direct revelation. The propriety on the part of God in fixing the precepts and ordinances of the gospel by an unalterable decree that no aspirant could possibly preach the gospel in point of form in its fulness, is apparent to all logical minds, so that none can see the true light only in God's light, that none can see the beauty of the fulness of truth only in God's truth, so that the lover of truth may know truth or good when God sends it, and not before. Thus, sir, I present this idea as an indisputable self-evident fact, that the Latter Day Saints, or Mormons, are sent of God to preach the gospel of Christ and build his church, because they (the Mormons) preach the gospel word for word, ordinance for ordinance, as Christ and the Apostles did; which none can possibly do, except they are sent of God, as the Apostles were. Paul says, that if "any man or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel than that which he preached, let him be accursed." Thus you see that the Latter Day Saints, as a church, are the embodiment of Christ's everlasting gospel truths. Consequently in no sense whatever are they sectarians, dissenters, or schismatics.

Sec. Does not that idea rather savor of the want of charity? presupposing that all other professed christians are not honest, consequently not sincere.

Page. No, sir. "Charity rejoices in the truth, and not in error." Honesty and sincerity being only prerequisites in the man, and not a fundamental principle belonging to gospel saints only for the reason that, in fact, the abject heathen who worship the Juggernaut are as honest and sincere as the best of christians.

Sec. Surely, sir, you have presented the gospel in a more brilliant light than I ever saw it before. I shall be happy to see you again on some other topics of your faith.

Page. Sir, I shall be happy to serve you at any time in a proper place, and as all truth exists in a scientific arrangment, I shall be very happy to instruct you in the rudiments of the gospel science. But there is one thing I wish you to bear in mind, and that is this: Where the christian priesthood is, there the christian church is: and where the christian priesthood is not, there the christian church is not. Consequently they are sectarians.

☞ The following picture of a christian country, under a christian government, is from the Dublin Freeman. The state of affairs therein described is the direct result of government measures, and not of any unforeseen accident:—

IRELAND.

Death! Death!! Death!!! Is this to be forever and forever the cry—death! death!! death!!! We came to our office yesterday, hoping that we would not have to peruse the usual amount of awful heart rending death lists, but need we say that our heart sank within us, and that our blood ran cold as we read letter after letter, and found the burden of each to be the same appalling cry—death, death, death. The humane Protestant rector of Ballingrobe addresses Lord John Russell to-day through our columns, and every line of his eloquent, expressive, philanthropic letter is as a voice from the dead—a voice telling of one hundred and thirty-six registered deaths occurring in one week in the poor house of Ballingrobe!!—a voice telling of the increase of the people's wretchedness and misery—a voice telling of the poor house being shunned as a pestilential snare through the vain hope of the victims, that death may not all at once overtake them elsewhere—a voice telling of the deplorable fact, that the people have had neither food nor raiment in any way commensurate with their wants, or even the necessities of nature, and that the painful consequence is, they are dropping into their grave in multitudes. Rev. Mr. Conway, the active, zealous, and humane Catholic curate of the same place, writes to us:—

We have dead bodies everywhere. I am obliged to handle them, coffin them, and put them in the earth. We cannot procure a sufficiency of men to bury the dead, or of coffins to contain them. Every village has dead bodies lying unburied for many days: almost every hovel in the suburbs of the town has its corpse. We cannot, I repeat, get coffins, boards, or men, for the necessity of the moment. May God forgive our rulers for their cruel conduct towards God's creatures here!

Again and again, we ask in anguish of spirit, will men be apathetic while such is the fate of brother men? Will creatures endowed with souls—with human hearts—be silent while the very stones, had they voices, would cry to heaven against such appalling horrors?

Doom of the Mere Irish.—We feel it is not necessary to utter one syllable of comment when introducing the following letter to our readers. It has been communicated to a highly intelligent gentleman, who would be incapable of exaggeration, and the fruits of whose talent and learning have frequently delighted and instructed our readers.

There are some facts simply stated in this letter that are terribly suggestive of the state to which our peasantry are reduced—our once happy, light hearted peasantry. The children fighting for the nettles is one of these. Childhood—struggling with childhood for such means to exist a little longer in living death! The well grown girls cowering before the writer is another, the agony of their shame—God help them!—surpassing the agony of their hunger. And what, in all the records of this unrelieved famine that is slaying our unhappy people, can be more demonstrative of the despair through which our correspondent passed, than the driver's significant words, you won't hear the cry of a child from this to Limerick? Not a child's cry in a district once fruitful and beautiful—once peopled with life and happiness—once filled at this season with the bustle of harvest preparation—once musical with the glad mirth of young voices! Good God! could volumes suggest a more appalling change than the simple words, you won't hear the cry of a child from this to Limerick!

The following is the letter:—

To the Editor of the Evening Packet.—Dear Sir:—I have been for the last ten days through the counties of Limerick, Galway Clare, and across thence to the King's County. All attempts to depict the existing state of the misery of the masses beyond the Shannon must come utterly short of the truth. All that tract of country from Killaloe to Portumna, on the Galway side of Shannon is lying waste and uncultivated. About three out of four of the miserable huts are untenanted. Some of the families are dead some in the union, and some few had fled to their friends, one or two of the huts still existing. The men generally have perished.

The correspondent of the Packet, having described scenes of human misery on which a demon could scarcely look without emotion, concludes thus:—

With large tracts of land lying uncultivated, how miserable men are employed on the roads—at what wages, think you? One pound of yellow meal—i. e., less than a 1d. per head! Great God! how is this to cure famine?

If this process of depopulation goes on a few months more, you may seek an able bodied man in vain for twenty or thirty miles of country.

Such is the testimony of an intelligent Conservative witness, after having visited four counties.

In the name of our common humanity and our common faith we call upon the public, one and all, to arouse themselves to rescue their brother-men, their brother-subjects, and both christians, who now stand on the brink of destruction, from this devouring sea of misery, whose deluge engulfs its thousands and its tens of thousands by the week.

☞ On the 13th inst. a company of 19 persons left this place for Beaver Island.

DIED,

In Burlington, on the 30th of April, Sarah Sophrona, daughter of John C. and Harriet Hul, aged 7 years, 10 months and 5 days.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD LAST WEEK.

Henry Reynolds,	$3,64 to Vol. IV No. 13
Mr. —— Selva,	2,00 to Vol. V No. 12

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 15.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, JUNE 28, 1849. [WHOLE No. 131.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

EFFECTS OF UNBELIEF, REBELLION AND APOSTACY.

When we take a retrospective view of the Church in this dispensation, we discover that many have begun in this work and have run well for a season and then turned back to the beggarly elements of the world. Sometimes we have thought more have done so in this dispensation than in any other. Upon reflection, however, we have come to the conclusion that it was the same in all former dispensations. We recollect reading somewhere that Noah was a preacher of righteousness a hundred and twenty years. It is exceedingly improbable that he preached all this time without making some converts. The probability is that numbers believed, but like many in our day turned back because the Lord did not hasten his work, that they might see it. Noah believed God, and endured unto the end in keeping his commandments, and by so doing saved himself and his household, but the fearful and unbelieving were destroyed by the flood.

In the Mosaic dispensation we have many examples of unbelief and rebellion and their consequences, one or two of which we will call to the reader's remembrance. When Moses, the man of God, went up into the mount to receive the two tables of stone, on which were commandments written by the finger of God, the people, in sight of the smoking of Sina by the glory of the Lord, turned back in their hearts into Egypt, and said unto Aaron, "make us gods to go before us; for as for this Moses, the man which brought us out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him." Aaron made them a calf, and they worshiped it, and said, "these be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt." For this act of idolatry the Lord said unto Moses, "I have seen this people and behold it is a stiff-necked people: now, therefore, let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them; and I will make of thee a great nation." But by the supplication of Moses the Lord repented him of the evil he thought to do unto his people, nevertheless they did not go unpunished; for by the command of Moses the children of Levi slew of the people about three thousand men, and "the Lord plagued the people because they worshiped the calf which Aaron made."

On another occasion, when the spies which had been sent to spy out the land by the command of God returned, and reported, saying, "the land through which we have gone to search, is a land that eateth up the inhabitants thereof; and all the people that we saw in it are of a great stature. And there we saw the giants, the sons of Anak, which come of the giants, and we were in our own sight as grasshoppers and so were we in their sight." They murmured against Moses and Aaron, and said, "Would God that we had died in the land of Egypt! or, would God we had died in this wilderness! And wherefore hath the Lord brought us unto this land, to fall by the sword, that our wives and our children should be a prey? were it not better for us to return into Egypt? And they said one to another, let us make a captain, and let us return into Egypt." Num. xiv. 2 to 4.

The Lord was wroth with them, and said, "I will smite them with the pestilence and disinherit them, and will make of thee (Moses) a greater nation and mightier than they." But Moses importuned the Lord to spare them, and he done so. Yet he suffered them not to go unpunished; for he said unto them, by the mouth of his servant Moses, "As truly as I live, saith the Lord, as ye have spoken in mine ears, so will I do to you: your carcases shall fall in this wilderness; and all that were numbered of you, according to your whole number, from twenty years old and upwards, which have murmured against me, doubtless ye shall not come into the land, concerning which I sware to make you dwell therein, save Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun. But your little ones, which ye said should be a prey, them will I bring in, and they shall know the land which ye have despised. But as for you, your carcases, they shall fall in this wilderness. And your children shall wander in the wilderness forty years, and bear your whoredoms, until your carcases be wasted in the wilderness. After the number of the days in which ye searched the land, even forty days, each day for a year, shall ye bear your iniquities, even forty years, and ye shall know my breach of promise. I the Lord have said, I will surely do it unto all this evil congregation, that are gathered together against me, in this wilderness they shall be consumed, and there they shall die. Num. xiv. 28 to 35."

What a lesson to us to be faithful in keeping the commandments of God in all things! They might, if it had not been for this act of rebellion, gone into the immediate possession of the land of Canaan. And had it not been for this and several other acts of rebellion, they would have been established and governed by a celestial law, and made a nation of kings and priests. But instead of this they were established and governed under a law of curse, and only one tribe chosen for priests, to offer gifts and sacrifices for sins for all the others. We might well say, with Paul, "Let us, therefore, fear, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it. For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it."—Heb. iv. 1, 2.

About fifteen centuries afterwards, when Pontius Pilate was governor of Judea, and Herod was tetrarch of Galilee, "came John the Baptist preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and saying, Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand;" testifying also of one who should come after him, mightier than he, whose shoes he was not worthy to bear. Afterwards came Jesus, who was called the Christ, or, in other words, the anointed, of whom the angel Gabriel said, "he shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end," preaching the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. Luke viii. 1.

He chose twelve Apostles, "and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And he sent them to preach

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 15.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, JUNE 28, 1849. [WHOLE No. 131.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

EFFECTS OF UNBELIEF, REBELLION AND APOSTACY.

When we take a retrospective view of the Church in this dispensation, we discover that many have begun in this work and have run well for a season and then turned back to the beggarly elements of the world. Sometimes we have thought more have done so in this dispensation than in any other. Upon reflection, however, we have come to the conclusion that it was the same in all former dispensations. We recollect reading somewhere that Noah was a preacher of righteousness a hundred and twenty years. It is exceedingly improbable that he preached all this time without making some converts. The probability is that numbers believed, but like many in our day turned back because the Lord did not hasten his work, that they might see it. Noah believed God, and endured unto the end in keeping his commandments, and by so doing saved himself and his household, but the fearful and unbelieving were destroyed by the flood.

In the Mosaic dispensation we have many examples of unbelief and rebellion and their consequences, one or two of which we will call to the reader's remembrance. When Moses, the man of God, went up into the mount to receive the two tables of stone, on which were commandments written by the finger of God, the people, in sight of the smoking of Sina by the glory of the Lord, turned back in their hearts into Egypt, and said unto Aaron, "make us gods to go before us; for as for this Moses, the man which brought us out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him." Aaron made them a calf, and they worshiped it, and said, "these be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt." For this act of idolatry the Lord said unto Moses, "I have seen this people and behold it is a stiff-necked people: now, therefore, let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them; and I will make of thee a great nation." But by the supplication of Moses the Lord repented him of the evil he thought to do unto his people, nevertheless they did not go unpunished; for by the command of Moses the children of Levi slew of the people about three thousand men, and "the Lord plagued the people because they worshiped the calf which Aaron made."

On another occasion, when the spies which had been sent to spy out the land by the command of God returned, and reported, saying, "the land through which we have gone to search, is a land that eateth up the inhabitants thereof; and all the people that we saw in it are of a great stature. And there we saw the giants, the sons of Anak, which come of the giants, and we were in our own sight as grasshoppers and so were we in their sight." They murmured against Moses and Aaron, and said, "Would God that we had died in the land of Egypt! or, would God we had died in this wilderness! And wherefore hath the Lord brought us unto this land, to fall by the sword, that our wives and our children should be a prey? were it not better for us to return into Egypt? And they said one to another, let us make a captain, and let us return into Egypt." Num. xiv. 2 to 4.

The Lord was wroth with them, and said, "I will smite them with the pestilence and disinherit them, and will make of thee (Moses) a greater nation and mighter than they." But Moses importuned the Lord to spare them, and he done so. Yet he suffered them not to go unpunished; for he said unto them, by the mouth of his servant Moses, "As truly as I live, saith the Lord, as ye have spoken in mine ears, so will I do to you: your carcases shall fall in this wilderness; and all that were numbered of you, according to your whole number, from twenty years old and upwards, which have murmured against me, doubtless ye shall not come into the land, concerning which I sware to make you dwell therein, save Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun. But your little ones, which ye said should be a prey, them will I bring in, and they shall know the land which ye have despised. But as for you, your carcases, they shall fall in this wilderness. And your children shall wander in the wilderness forty years, and bear your whoredoms, until your carcases be wasted in the wilderness. After the number of the days in which ye searched the land, even forty days, each day for a year, shall ye bear your iniquities, even forty years, and ye shall know my breach of promise. I the Lord have said, I will surely do it unto all this evil congregation, that are gathered together against me, in this wilderness they shall be consumed, and there they shall die. Num. xiv. 28 to 35."

What a lesson to us to be faithful in keeping the commandments of God in all things! They might, if it had not been for this act of rebellion, gone into the immediate possession of the land of Canaan. And had it not been for this and several other acts of rebellion, they would have been established and governed by a celestial law, and made a nation of kings and priests. But instead of this they were established and governed under a law of curse, and only one tribe chosen for priests, to offer gifts and sacrifices for sins for all the others. We might well say, with Paul, "Let us, therefore, fear, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it. For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it."—Heb. iv. 1, 2.

About fifteen centuries afterwards, when Pontius Pilate was governor of Judea, and Herod was tetrarch of Galilee, "came John the Baptist preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and saying, Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand;" testifying also of one who should come after him, mightier than he, whose shoes he was not worthy to bear. Afterwards came Jesus, who was called the Christ, or, in other words, the anointed, of whom the angel Gabriel said, "he shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end," preaching the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. Luke viii. 1.

He chose twelve Apostles, "and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And he sent them to preach.

the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick." He appointed seventy also, and sent them two by two before his face, into every city and place whither he himself would come, and commanded them to say unto the people, "The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.—But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say, "Even the very dust of your city which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you: notwithstanding, BE YE SURE OF THIS, THAT THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS COME NIGH UNTO YOU. But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom than for that city." Luke x. 9, 10, 11, 12. By the foregoing we discover that the main object of Christ, the lawful heir to the throne of David, was to prepare the people for the reception of the kingdom of God, and it was for this purpose that he sent his disciples to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

When he was asked of the Pharisees when the kingdom of God should come, the conclusion of his answer was "Behold the kingdom of God is within you," or, according to the marginal reading, behold the kingdom of God is among you. That is, that the king and all the prerogatives and blessings pertaining to the kingdom was in their midst. There was nothing lacking, only for the people to receive it. But because he did not come with that pomp and splendor which they expected, they rejected him. Nevertheless, it appears from the history, that he made considerable stir amongst the people, for we find the chief priests and Pharisees saying, "if we let him alone all men will believe on him, and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation."

How blinding is the spirit of apostacy. They were willing to barter away the kingdom of God for the protection of a Gentile power. Jesus, at times, had large numbers of followers, but when he said anything they could not exactly understand, they would turn back and go no more with him, as will appear by the following instance: "Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Many therefore of his disciples, when they had heard this, said, This is a hard saying; who can hear it? From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him." John vi. 53, 60, 66.

Notwithstanding Christ and his Apostles labored faithfully to establish the kingdom of God, they failed because of the unbelief of the people. It was said unto them that "the kingdom of God shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." And Christ, in the agony of his soul, said: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.—For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Matt. xxiii. 37, 38, 39. They rejected their king, the Lord of glory, and brought him before Pilate, the governor, and accused him, saying, "We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Ceasar, saying that he himself is Christ, a king." But failing to sustain a charge against him, Pilate was minded to set him at liberty. But the people cried out, "crucify him, crucify him."—Pilate remostrated. But the chief priests and people were instant with loud voices requiring that he might be crucified, and they prevailed. Pilate, to satisfy the public clamor, gave sentence as they required, washing his hands as a testimony that he was "innocent of the blood of this just person." "Then all the people answered and said, his blood be upon us and our children." The Lord took them at their word.

They were given over to destruction. The temple was to be thrown down till there was not one stone left upon another. All the righteous blood shed upon the earth from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, son of Barachias, whom they slew between the temple and the altar, was to come upon them.—They were to be destroyed by the pestilence, the famine and the sword, and those left of the sword, the famine and the pestilence, were to be taken captives among all nations. And Jerusalem was to be trodden down till the times of the Gentiles were fulfilled. That all these things came upon them will clearly appear from the following extracts from the writings of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish historian, concerning the besieging and taking of Jerusalem by Titus Vespasian:—

"So now Titus' banks were advanced a great way, notwithstanding his soldiers had been very much distressed from the wall. He then sent a party of horsemen, and ordered they should lay ambushes for those that went out into the valleys to gather food. Some of these were, indeed, fighting men, who were not contented with what they got by rapine; but the greater part of them were poor people, who were deterred from deserting by the concern they were under for their own relations; for they could not hope to escape away, together with their wives and children, without the knowledge of the seditious; nor could they think of leaving these relations to be slain by the robbers on their account; nay, the severity of the famine made them bold in thus going out: so nothing remained but that when they were concealed from the robbers, they should be taken by the enemy; and when they were going to be taken, they were forced to defend themselves for fear of being punished; as after they had fought, they thought it too late to make any supplications for mercy: so they were first whipped, and then tormented with all sorts of tortures, before they died, and were then crucified before the wall of the city. So the soldiers, out of the wrath and hatred they bore the Jews, nailed those they caught, one after one way and another after another, to the crosses, by way of jest, when their multitude was so great, that room was wanting for the crosses, and crosses wanting for the bodies." Book v. chap. xi. sec. 1.

"And, indeed, why do I relate these particular calamities? while Manneus, the son of Lazarus, came running to Titus at this very time, and told him that there had been carried out through that one gate, which was intrusted to his care, no fewer than a hundred and fifteen thousand eight hundred and eighty dead bodies, in the interval between the fourteenth day of the month Xanthicus [Nisan,] when the Romans pitched their camp by the city, and the first day of the month Panemus [Tamuz.] This was itself a prodigious multitude: and though this man was not himself set as a governor at that gate, yet was he appointed to pay the public stipend for carrying these bodies out, and so was obliged of necessity to number them, while the rest were buried with relations; though all their burial was but this, to bring them away, and cast them out of the city. After this man there ran away to Titus many of the eminent citizens, and told him the entire number of the poor that were dead, and that no fewer than six hundred thousand were thrown out at the gates; though still the number of the rest could not be discovered: and they told him farther, that, when they were no longer able to carry out the dead bodies of the poor, they laid their corpses on heaps in very large houses, and shut them up therein; as also that a medimnus of wheat was sold for a talent, and that when a while afterward, it was not possible to gather herbs, by reason the city was all walled about, some persons were driven to that terrible distress as to search the common shores and old dunghills of cattle, and to eat the dung which they got there; and what they of old could not endure so much as to see, they now used for food. When the Romans barely heard all this, they commiserated

the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick." He appointed seventy also, and sent them two by two before his face, into every city and place whither he himself would come, and commanded them to say unto the people, "The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.—But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say, "Even the very dust of your city which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you: notwithstanding, BE YE SURE OF THIS, THAT THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS COME NIGH UNTO YOU. But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom than for that city." Luke x. 9, 10, 11, 12. By the foregoing we discover that the main object of Christ, the lawful heir to the throne of David, was to prepare the people for the reception of the kingdom of God, and it was for this purpose that he sent his disciples to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

When he was asked of the Pharisees when the kingdom of God should come, the conclusion of his answer was "Behold the king-of God is within you," or, according to the marginal reading, behold the kingdom of God is among you. That is, that the king and all the prerogatives and blessings pertaining to the kingdom was in their midst. There was nothing lacking, only for the people to receive it. But because he did not come with that pomp and splendor which they expected, they rejected him. Nevertheless, it appears from the history, that he made considerable stir amongst the people, for we find the chief priests and Pharisees saying, "if we let him alone all men will believe on him, and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation."

How blinding is the spirit of apostacy. They were willing to barter away the kingdom of God for the protection of a Gentile power. Jesus, at times, had large numbers of followers, but when he said anything they could not exactly understand, they would turn back and go no more with him, as will appear by the following instance: "Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Many therefore of his disciples, when they had heard this, said, This is a hard saying; who can hear it? From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him." John vi. 53, 60, 66.

Notwithstanding Christ and his Apostles labored faithfully to establish the kingdom of God, they failed because of the unbelief of the people. It was said unto them that "the kingdom of God shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." And Christ, in the agony of his soul, said: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.—For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Matt. xxiii. 37, 38, 39. They rejected their king, the Lord of glory, and brought him before Pilate, the governor, and accused him, saying, "We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Ceasar, saying that he himself is Christ, a king." But failing to sustain a charge against him, Pilate was minded to set him at liberty. But the people cried out, "crucify him, crucify him."—Pilate remostrated. But the chief priests and people were instant with loud voices requiring that he might be crucified, and they prevailed. Pilate, to satisfy the public clamor, gave sentence as they required, washing his hands as a testimony that he was "innocent of the blood of this just person." "Then all the people answered and said, his blood be upon us and our children." The Lord took them at their word.

They were given over to destruction. The temple was to be thrown down till there was not one stone left upon another. All the righteous blood shed upon the earth from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, son of Barachias, whom they slew between the temple and the altar, was to come upon them.—They were to be destroyed by the pestilence, the famine and the sword, and those left of the sword, the famine and the pestilence, were to be taken captives among all nations. And Jerusalem was to be trodden down till the times of the Gentiles were fulfilled. That all these things came upon them will clearly appear from the following extracts from the writings of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish historian, concerning the besieging and taking of Jerusalem by Titus Vespasian:—

"So now Titus' banks were advanced a great way, notwithstanding his soldiers had been very much distressed from the wall. He then sent a party of horsemen, and ordered they should lay ambushes for those that went out into the valleys to gather food. Some of these were, indeed, fighting men, who were not contented with what they got by rapine; but the greater part of them were poor people, who were deterred from deserting by the concern they were under for their own relations; for they could not hope to escape away, together with their wives and children, without the knowledge of the seditious; nor could they think of leaving these relations to be slain by the robbers on their account; nay, the severity of the famine made them bold in thus going out: so nothing remained but that when they were concealed from the robbers, they should be taken by the enemy; and when they were going to be taken, they were forced to defend themselves for fear of being punished; as after they had fought, they thought it too late to make any supplications for mercy: so they were first whipped, and then tormented with all sorts of tortures, before they died, and were then crucified before the wall of the city. So the soldiers, out of the wrath and hatred they bore the Jews, nailed those they caught, one after one way and another after another, to the crosses, by way of jest, when their multitude was so great, that room was wanting for the crosses, and crosses wanting for the bodies." Book v. chap. xi. sec. 1.

"And, indeed, why do I relate these particular calamities? while Manneus, the son of Lazarus, came running to Titus at this very time, and told him that there had been carried out through that one gate, which was intrusted to his care, no fewer than a hundred and fifteen thousand eight hundred and eighty dead bodies, in the interval between the fourteenth day of the month Xanthicus [Nisan,] when the Romans pitched their camp by the city, and the first day of the month Panemus [Tamuz.] This was itself a prodigious multitude: and though this man was not himself set as a governor at that gate, yet was he appointed to pay the public stipend for carrying these bodies out, and so was obliged of necessity to number them, while the rest were buried with relations; though all their burial was but this, to bring them away, and cast them out of the city. After this man there ran away to Titus many of the eminent citizens, and told him the entire number of the poor that were dead, and that no fewer than six hundred thousand were thrown out at the gates; though still the number of the rest could not be discovered: and they told him farther, that, when they were no longer able to carry out the dead bodies of the poor, they laid their corpses on heaps in very large houses, and shut them up therein; as also that a medimnus of wheat was sold for a talent, and that when a while afterward, it was not possible to gather herbs, by reason the city was all walled about, some persons were driven to that terrible distress as to search the common shores and old dunghills of cattle, and to eat the dung which they got there; and what they of old could not endure so much as to see, they now used for food. When the Romans barely heard all this, they commiserated their case; while the seditious, who saw it also, did not repent, but suffered the same distress to come upon themselves; for they were blinded by that fate which was already coming upon the city, and upon themselves also." Book v. chap. xiii. sec. 7.

"Now of those that perished by famine in the city the number was prodigious, and the miseries they underwent were unspeakable; for if so much as the shadow of any kind of food did any where appear, a war was commenced presently, and the dearest friends fell a fighting one with another about it, snatching from each other the most miserable supports of life. Nor would men believe that those who were dying had no food, but the robbers would search them when they were expiring, lest any one should have concealed food in their bosoms, and counterfeited dying; nay, these robbers gaped for want, and ran about stumbling and staggering along like mad dogs, and reeling against the doors of the houses like drunken men; they would also, in the great distress they were in, rush into the very same houses two or three times in one and the same day.—Moreover, their hunger was intolerable, that it obliged them to chew every thing, while they gathered such things as the most sordid animals would not touch, and endured to eat them; nor did they, at length, abstain from girdles and shoes, and the very leather which belonged to their shields they pulled off and gnawed: the very wisps of old hay became food to some, and some gathered up fibres, and sold a very small weight of them for four Attic [drachmæ.] But why do I describe the shameless impudence that the famine brought on men in their eating inanimate things? while I am going to relate a matter of fact, the like to which no history relates, either among the Greeks or barbarians. It is horrible to speak of it, and incredible when heard. I had, indeed, willingly omitted this calamity of ours, that I might not seem to deliver what is so portentous to posterity, but that I have innumerable witnesses to it in my own age; and, besides, my country would have had little reason to thank me for suppressing the miseries that she underwent at this time." Book vi. chap. iii. sec. 3.

"There was a certain woman that dwelt beyond Jordan; her name was Mary; her father was Eleazar, of the village Bethezub, which signifies the House of Hyssop. She was eminent for her family and her wealth, and had fled away to Jerusalem, with the rest of the multitude, and was with them besieged therein at this time. The other effects of this woman had been already seized upon, such I mean as she had brought with her out of Perea, and removed to the city. What she had treasured up besides, as also what food she had contrived to save, had been also carried off by the rapacious guards, who came every day running into her house for that purpose. This put the poor woman into a very great passion; and by the frequent reproaches and imprecations she cast at these rapacious villains, she had provoked them to anger against her; but none of them, either out of the indignation she had raised against herself, or out of commiseration of her case, would take away her life; and if she found any food, she perceived her labors were for others, and not for herself; and it was now become impossible for her any way to find any more food, while the famine pierced through her very bowels and marrow, when also her passion fired to a degree beyond the famine itself; nor did she consult with any thing but with her passion and the necessity she was in. She then attempted a most unnatural thing, and snatching up her son, who was a child sucking at her breast, she said, 'O thou miserable infant! for whom shall I preserve thee in this war, this famine, and this sedition?—As to the war with the Romans, if they preserve our lives, we must be slaves. This famine also will destroy us even before that slavery comes upon us. Yet are the seditious rogues more terrible than both the other. Come on; be thou my food, and be thou a fury to these seditious varlets, and a byword to the world, which is all that is now wanting to complete the calamities of us Jews.' As soon as she had said this, she slew her son, and then roasted him, and ate the one-half of him, and kept the other half by her, concealed. Upon this the seditious came in presently, and smelling the horrid scent of this food, they threatened her, that they would cut her throat immediately, if she did not show them what food she had gotten ready. She replied, that 'she had saved a very fine portion of it for them;' and withal uncovered what was left of her son.—Hereupon they were seized with a horror and amazement of mind and stood astonished at the sight, when she said to them, 'This is mine own son, and what hath been done was mine own doing.—Come, eat of this food, for I have eaten of it myself. Do not you pretend to be either more tender than a woman, or more compassionate than a mother: but if you be so scrupulous, and do abominate this my sacrifice, as I have eaten the one-half, let the rest be reserved for me also.'" Book vi. chap. iii. sec. 4.

"So Titus retired into the tower of Antonia, and resolved to storm the temple the next day, early in the morning, with his whole army, and to encamp round about the holy house. But as for that house, God had for certain long ago doomed it to the fire; and now that fatal day was come, according to the revolution of ages; it was the tenth day of the month Lous [Ab,] upon which it was formerly burnt by the king of Babylon: although these flames took their rise from the Jews themselves, and were occasioned by them: for upon Titus' retiring, the seditious lay still for a little while, and then attacked the Romans again, when those that guarded the holy house fought with those that quenched the fire that was burning in the inner [court of the] temple; but these Romans put the Jews to flight, and proceeded as far a the holy house itself. At which time one of the soldiers, without staying for any orders, and without any concern or dread upon him at so great an undertaking, and being hurried only by a certain divine fury, snatched somewhat out of the materials that were on fire, and being lifted up by another soldier, he set fire to a golden window, through which there was a passage to the rooms that were round about the holy house, on the north side of it. As the flames went upward, the Jews made a great clamor, such as so mighty an affliction required, and ran together to prevent it: and now they spared not their lives any longer, nor suffered any thing to restrain their force, since that holy house was perishing, for whose sake it was that they kept such a guard about it." Book vi. chap. iv. sec. v.

"Now, the number of those that were carried captive during this whole war, was collected to be ninety-seven thousand; as was the number of those that perished during the whole siege eleven hundred thousand, the greater part of whom were, indeed, of the same nation [with the citizens of Jerusalem,] but not belonging to the city itself; for they were come up from all the country to the feast of unleavened bread, and were on a sudden shut up by an army, which at the very first occasioned so great a straitness among them, that there came a pestilential destruction upon them, and soon afterward such a famine, as destroyed them more suddenly." Book vi. chap. ix. sec. 3.

We have often heard people say, "if we had lived in the days of Christ and his Apostles, we would not have done as those wicked Jews." But the Lord is proving them liars. He is sending forth his prophets and Apostles unto the Gentiles in this generation, as he sent them to the Jews in that generation, preaching the fulness of the everlasting gospel, calling upon them to repent, for the hour of God's judgment is come, they at the same time proving the divinity of their missions by testimony that is incontrovertable, yet few will believe, and those few are very unfaithful. Now what will be the consequences if they will not repent? Will God be more merciful to them than he was to his own covenant people? Nay, verily. Hear it, O ye Gentiles, if ye will not repent and obey the gospel of the Son of God, all these calamaties which have come upon the Jews will come upon you, and God will put all the curses upon you which he has put upon them for rejecting his servants, and ye will perish by famine, by pestilence, and by the sword, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. "And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a lion among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver. Thy hand shall be lifted up upon thine adversaries, and all thine enemies shall be cut off." Micah v. 8, 9.

G. W.

their case; while the seditious, who saw it also, did not repent, but suffered the same distress to come upon themselves; for they were blinded by that fate which was already coming upon the city, and upon themselves also." Book v. chap. xiii. sec. 7.

"Now of those that perished by famine in the city the number was prodigious, and the miseries they underwent were unspeakable; for if so much as the shadow of any kind of food did any where appear, a war was commenced presently, and the dearest friends fell a fighting one with another about it, snatching from each other the most miserable supports of life. Nor would men believe that those who were dying had no food, but the robbers would search them when they were expiring, lest any one should have concealed food in their bosoms, and counterfeited dying; nay, these robbers gaped for want, and ran about stumbling and staggering along like mad dogs, and reeling against the doors of the houses like drunken men; they would also, in the great distress they were in, rush into the very same houses two or three times in one and the same day.—Moreover, their hunger was intolerable, that it obliged them to chew every thing, while they gathered such things as the most sordid animals would not touch, and endured to eat them; nor did they, at length, abstain from girdles and shoes, and the very leather which belonged to their shields they pulled off and gnawed: the very wisps of old hay became food to some, and some gathered up fibres, and sold a very small weight of them for four Attic [drachmæ.] But why do I describe the shameless impudence that the famine brought on men in their eating inanimate things? while I am going to relate a matter of fact, the like to which no history relates, either among the Greeks or barbarians. It is horrible to speak of it, and incredible when heard. I had, indeed, willingly omitted this calamity of ours, that I might not seem to deliver what is so portentous to posterity, but that I have innumerable witnesses to it in my own age; and, besides, my country would have had little reason to thank me for suppressing the miseries that she underwent at this time." Book vi. chap. iii. sec. 3.

"There was a certain woman that dwelt beyond Jordan; her name was Mary: her father was Eleazar, of the village Bethezub, which signifies the House of Hyssop. She was eminent for her family and her wealth, and had fled away to Jerusalem, with the rest of the multitude, and was with them besieged therein at this time. The other effects of this woman had been already seized upon, such I mean as she had brought with her out of Perea, and removed to the city. What she had treasured up besides, as also what food she had contrived to save, had been also carried off by the rapacious guards, who came every day running into her house for that purpose. This put the poor woman into a very great passion; and by the frequent reproaches and imprecations she cast at these rapacious villains, she had provoked them to anger against her; but none of them, either out of the indignation she had raised against herself, or out of commiseration of her case, would take away her life; and if she found any food, she perceived her labors were for others, and not for herself; and it was now become impossible for her any way to find any more food, while the famine pierced through her very bowels and marrow, when also her passion fired to a degree beyond the famine itself; nor did she consult with any thing but with her passion and the necessity she was in. She then attempted a most unnatural thing, and snatching up her son, who was a child sucking at her breast, she said, 'O thou miserable infant! for whom shall I preserve thee in this war, this famine, and this sedition?—As to the war with the Romans, if they preserve our lives, we must be slaves. This famine also will destroy us even before that slavery comes upon us. Yet are the seditious rogues more terrible than both the other. Come on; be thou my food, and be thou a fury to these seditious varlets, and a byword to the world, which is all that is now wanting to complete the calamities of us Jews.' As soon as she had said this, she slew her son, and then roasted him, and ate the one-half of him, and kept the other half by her, concealed. Upon this the seditious came in presently, and smelling the horrid scent of this food, they threatened her, that they would cut her throat immediately, if she did not show them what food she had gotten ready. She replied, that 'she had saved a very fine portion of it for them;' and withal uncovered what was left of her son.—Hereupon they were seized with a horror and amazement of mind and stood astonished at the sight, when she said to them, 'This is mine own son, and what hath been done was mine own doing.—Come, eat of this food, for I have eaten of it myself. Do not you pretend to be either more tender than a woman, or more compassionate than a mother: but if you be so scrupulous, and do abominate this my sacrifice, as I have eaten the one-half, let the rest be reserved for me also.'" Book vi. chap. iii. sec. 4.

"So Titus retired into the tower of Antonia, and resolved to storm the temple the next day, early in the morning, with his whole army, and to encamp round about the holy house. But as for that house, God had for certain long ago doomed it to the fire; and now that fatal day was come, according to the revolution of ages; it was the tenth day of the month Lous [Ab,] upon which it was formerly burnt by the king of Babylon: although these flames took their rise from the Jews themselves, and were occasioned by them: for upon Titus' retiring, the seditious lay still for a little while, and then attacked the Romans again, when those that guarded the holy house fought with those that quenched the fire that was burning in the inner [court of the] temple: but these Romans put the Jews to flight, and proceeded as far a the holy house itself. At which time one of the soldiers, without staying for any orders, and without any concern or dread upon him at so great an undertaking, and being hurried only by a certain divine fury, snatched somewhat out of the materials that were on fire, and being lifted up by another soldier, he set fire to a golden window, through which there was a passage to the rooms that were round about the holy house, on the north side of it. As the flames went upward, the Jews made a great clamor, such as so mighty an affliction required, and ran together to prevent it: and now they spared not their lives any longer, nor suffered any thing to restrain their force, since that holy house was perishing, for whose sake it was that they kept such a guard about it." Book vi. chap. iv. sec. v.

"Now, the number of those that were carried captive during this whole war, was collected to be ninety-seven thousand; as was the number of those that perished during the whole siege eleven hundred thousand, the greater part of whom were, indeed, of the same nation [with the citizens of Jerusalem,] but not belonging to the city itself; for they were come up from all the country to the feast of unleavened bread, and were on a sudden shut up by an army, which at the very first occasioned so great a straitness among them, that there came a pestilential destruction upon them, and soon afterward such a famine, as destroyed them more suddenly." Book vi. chap. ix. sec. 3.

We have often heard people say, "if we had lived in the days of Christ and his Apostles, we would not have done as those wicked Jews." But the Lord is proving them liars. He is sending forth his prophets and Apostles unto the Gentiles in this generation, as he sent them to the Jews in that generation, preaching the fulness of the everlasting gospel, calling upon them to repent, for the hour of God's judgment is come, they at the same time proving the divinity of their missions by testimony that is incontrovertable, yet few will believe, and those few are very unfaithful. Now what will be the consequences if they will not repent? Will God be more merciful to them than he was to his own covenant people? Nay, verily. Hear it, O ye Gentiles, if ye will not repent and obey the gospel of the Son of God, all these calamaties which have come upon the Jews will come upon you, and God will put all the curses upon you which he has put upon them for rejecting his servants, and ye will perish by famine, by pestilence, and by the sword, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. "And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a lion among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver. Thy hand shall be lifted up upon thine adversaries, and all thine enemies shall be cut off." Micah v. 8, 9.

G. W.

Voree, June 1st, 1849.

Beloved Brother Strang,—Dear Sir:—I improve this moment to write to you and the readers of the Herald, to inform you that I have just returned from a mission, being gone from home one year, one month and 17 days. I left Voree on the 11th of April, 1848, and returned on the 28th of May, 1849. When I left I took the directions in writing from you where to go, and I kept the course as near as I possibly could, going from here to Chicago, then to Indiana to Bro. Carpenter's, then to Michigan at Kalamazoo, where I took the cars to Jacksonville, the capitol of Michigan. I visited the State prison, where the criminals were in safe keeping, busily at work. I called upon Bro. S. Graham at the Central College, and preached ten or eleven discourses in the city of Jacksonville. This is a very wicked place. I shook the dust off my feet as a testimony against them, and went on to the Maumee, (accompanied by Bro. Comstock,) to the city of Perrysburg. We bore our testimony in the Universalist chapel. I also cleansed the dust off from my feet against all in that place, except two families, that is, the Universalist priest and James Twombley, the families who entertained us while we were there.

Bro. Comstock gave me two dollars, and left me to go by a steamer. The two dollars took me to Cleveland, Ohio, where I held three meetings, and was well received by all that heard. I then went to Lorain Co., thirty-seven miles west of Cleveland, in Henrietta and Brownhelm. I held several meetings, and met with good reception. I had no occasion to shake the dust off my feet against them, except one man, who defied all the power there was in the Mormon church. He was meaning the Latter Day Saints, &c., and their authorities. I then returned to Cleveland and took a steamer to Buffalo, where I found Bro. Stilwill, who was a whole hearted man, although a Brighamite. I soon converted him to Strangism, for which reason he now calls me father, and is now rejoicing with the saints in Voree. I saw Elder Brooks, sister Jones and sister Ellsworth in Buffalo. I was there but one night and part of two days. I then went to Alexander, where I met with Bro. Hale at Bro. Nichols'. I found sister Demary quite unwell with the erysipelas. I was there but a few minutes. I administered the ordinance of laying on hands and anointing with oil. She is here in Voree with the saints.

Bro. Hale and I then went by the canal to Ilion, and there we found a noble brother, George England, lying with a high fever, and his wife also. We laid hands on them, the fever was rebuked, and the next morning we went on our way to Cooperstown. Bro. England hired a carriage for $5,00, and we all went together. We met the saints with great joy, and had a good time while there. The saints in Otsego furnished Bro. Hale and myself with a horse and carriage to take a trip to the north 100 miles. We visited some saints in Jefferson Co., and also St. Lawrence Co., and preached a few times and returned to Otsego Co. Then we set out to do our utmost to make up a company to go west in the spring. Sometimes we were together, and sometimes we were not within 40 or 50 miles of each other, visiting the scattered saints in different parts of the country.

In the fall Elder Hale went to Boston and Lowell, and there wintered. I remained in Otsego Co., taking sometimes one brother and sometimes another, and took short trips out in different directions, where we could get a hearing. All things passed off well till one T. W. Nixon came along and made some disturbance. I will relate a view I had of him before any one had the least suspicion of his intrigue. He came to Bro. Lyman Hewitt's, where I lodged that night. In the morning before day he and I awoke and said something about getting up, when he soon got up, dressed and went down stairs. I remained still in bed, whether asleep or awake, I had this view, as follows: I imagined myself in a newly finished room, and stood before a door, which was shut. Over the centre of the door I saw an apple, a beautiful one too; a string was tied to its stem, and it hung on a nail. To the right of it about ten inches I saw a man's heart hanging on another nail. On the left of the apple I also saw a figure 3, ten inches from it. While I was wondering what all this could mean, something whispered to me that that was Nixon's heart. I still gazed on the scene. The heart fell down, turned black, and rotted to a jelly. Then something said to me, the apple is like Nixon's heart. I stepped up and took down the apple and broke it. The inside was totally rotten.

Again something whispered me that the figure 3 was a token that in three weeks we would know that the apple was not fit to eat; that T. W. Nixon's heart was false and rotten. I awoke out of my view or vision. I jumped up, dressed, and went down and told Bro. Lyman Hewitt and his wife and no one else in that place. I told them to mark the time, and see what three weeks would bring to pass. The next day I went ten miles to see Bro. Samuel Bacon.—I told him the vision, and gave the watchword to see what three weeks would reveal. And in three weeks to a day the paper came from Voree unfolding the whole mystery about T. W. Nixon.—The saints had some confidence in the view I had; for I had a view of last fall's Conference a month before it came on, and I told the brethren that they would find that Samuel Graham would be ordained one of the Twelve. When the minutes of the Conference came to hand it was as I had told them it would be.

By our exertions the saints all sold out who wanted to sell and got their pay. We expected about thirty more who would accompany us, but being in debt they could not come, but they intend to be here this season. At our February Conference arrangments were made to obtain a water craft, and to go on board of her at Fort Plain. I went and made a contract to start on the 15th of May. The boat failed in coming, so the brethren engaged another and came on to Ilion, where Bro. England and I were ready to go on board with the rest. It being the 16th of May, we were soon on the move. I then went round to shake hands with the saints that I had been absent from for some time. I then was called upon to lay hands on mother Durham, who had a fever. It was rebuked the same hour. We left Ilion on the 16th, at 12 o'clock, in good faith that God would be with us if we kept our eye single to his glory.

We got to Utica at 5 o'clock, and stopped there about half an hour to do a little trading, and then passed on. Night came on, being chilly and frosty. Our cabin was more than comfortably full where we lodged in the bow cabin, besides some in the midship and in the stern cabin. On the 17th we got to Higginsville, where we took on Bro. I. Hayden. The day was fair and beautiful. We enjoyed ourselves well. Near sunset Bro. Hayden informed me that his wife was very sick. We soon administered to her. In the morning she was quite well. The 18th being a fine day Elder Lyman Hewitt took the lead of singing, while we had a meeting on the deck of the boat in the open air. I preached a sermon, when the choir closed by singing a hymn. We soon arrived at Livingston, then to Lockville, then to Newark, where Elder Hewitt and the choir sung a hymn in a lively tune. We soon met a packet boat well thronged with passengers, who gazed on us with earnest admiration.

At 2 o'clock we passed Palmyra. At 4 o'clock, six miles west of Palmyra at a lock, the whole company of men, women and children got on the tow path and walked to the next lock, near a mile in distance. The train filled the path promiscuously for sixty or eighty rods, which gave rise to many expressions from our own company as well as from the passer by. Then we all went on board of the boat. I then observed to the saints that what took place twenty

Voree, June 1st, 1849.

Beloved Brother Strang,—Dear Sir:—I improve this moment to write to you and the readers of the Herald, to inform you that I have just returned from a mission, being gone from home one year, one month and 17 days. I left Voree on the 11th of April, 1848, and returned on the 28th of May, 1849. When I left I took the directions in writing from you where to go, and I kept the course as near as I possibly could, going from here to Chicago, then to Indiana to Bro. Carpenter's, then to Michigan at Kalamazoo, where I took the cars to Jacksonville, the capitol of Michigan. I visited the State prison, where the criminals were in safe keeping, busily at work. I called upon Bro. S. Graham at the Central College, and preached ten or eleven discourses in the city of Jacksonville. This is a very wicked place. I shook the dust off my feet as a testimony against them, and went on to the Maumee, (accompanied by Bro. Comstock,) to the city of Perrysburg. We bore our testimony in the Universalist chapel. I also cleansed the dust off from my feet against all in that place, except two families, that is, the Universalist priest and James Twombley, the families who entertained us while we were there.

Bro. Comstock gave me two dollars, and left me to go by a steamer. The two dollars took me to Cleveland, Ohio, where I held three meetings, and was well received by all that heard. I then went to Lorain Co., thirty-seven miles west of Cleveland, in Henrietta and Brownhelm. I held several meetings, and met with good reception. I had no occasion to shake the dust off my feet against them, except one man, who defied all the power there was in the Mormon church. He was meaning the Latter Day Saints, &c., and their authorities. I then returned to Cleveland and took a steamer to Buffalo, where I found Bro. Stilwill, who was a whole hearted man, although a Brighamite. I soon converted him to Strangism, for which reason he now calls me father, and is now rejoicing with the saints in Voree. I saw Elder Brooks, sister Jones and sister Ellsworth in Buffalo. I was there but one night and part of two days. I then went to Alexander, where I met with Bro. Hale at Bro. Nichols'. I found sister Demary quite unwell with the erysipelas. I was there but a few minutes. I administered the ordinance of laying on hands and anointing with oil. She is here in Voree with the saints.

Bro. Hale and I then went by the canal to Ilion, and there we found a noble brother, George England, lying with a high fever, and his wife also. We laid hands on them, the fever was rebuked; and the next morning we went on our way to Cooperstown. Bro. England hired a carriage for $5,60, and we all went together. We met the saints with great joy, and had a good time while there. The saints in Otsego furnished Bro. Hale and myself with a horse and carriage to take a trip to the north 100 miles. We visited some saints in Jefferson Co., and also St. Lawrence Co., and preached a few times and returned to Otsego Co. Then we set out to do our utmost to make up a company to go west in the spring. Sometimes we were together, and sometimes we were not within 40 or 50 miles of each other, visiting the scattered saints in different parts of the country.

In the fall Elder Hale went to Boston and Lowell, and there wintered. I remained in Otsego Co., taking sometimes one brother and sometimes another, and took short trips out in different directions, where we could get a hearing. All things passed off well till one T. W. Nixon came along and made some disturbance. I will relate a view I had of him before any one had the least suspicion of his intrigue. He came to Bro. Lyman Hewitt's, where I lodged that night. In the morning before day he and I awoke and said something about getting up, when he soon got up, dressed and went down stairs. I remained still in bed, whether asleep or awake, I had this view, as follows: I imagined myself in a newly finished room, and stood before a door, which was shut. Over the centre of the door I saw an apple, a beautiful one too; a string was tied to its stem, and it hung on a nail. To the right of it about ten inches I saw a man's heart hanging on another nail. On the left of the apple I also saw a figure 3, ten inches from it. While I was wondering what all this could mean, something whispered to me that that was Nixon's heart. I still gazed on the scene. The heart fell down, turned black, and rotted to a jelly. Then something said to me, the apple is like Nixon's heart. I stepped up and took down the apple and broke it. The inside was totally rotten.

Again something whispered me that the figure 3 was a token that in three weeks we would know that the apple was not fit to eat; that T. W. Nixon's heart was false and rotten. I awoke out of my view or vision. I jumped up, dressed, and went down and told Bro. Lyman Hewitt and his wife and no one else in that place. I told them to mark the time, and see what three weeks would bring to pass. The next day I went ten miles to see Bro. Samuel Bacon.—I told him the vision, and gave the watchword to see what three weeks would reveal. And in three weeks to a day the paper came from Voree unfolding the whole mystery about T. W. Nixon.—The saints had some confidence in the view I had; for I had a view of last fall's Conference a month before it came on, and I told the brethren that they would find that Samuel Graham would be ordained one of the Twelve. When the minutes of the Conference came to hand it was as I had told them it would be.

By our exertions the saints all sold out who wanted to sell and got their pay. We expected about thirty more who would accompany us, but being in debt they could not come, but they intend to be here this season. At our February Conference arrangments were made to obtain a water craft, and to go on board of her at Fort Plain. I went and made a contract to start on the 15th of May. The boat failed in coming, so the brethren engaged another and came on to Ilion, where Bro. England and I were ready to go on board with the rest. It being the 16th of May, we were soon on the move. I then went round to shake hands with the saints that I had been absent from for some time. I then was called upon to lay hands on mother Durham, who had a fever. It was rebuked the same hour. We left Ilion on the 16th, at 12 o'clock, in good faith that God would be with us if we kept our eye single to his glory.

We got to Utica at 5 o'clock, and stopped there about half an hour to do a little trading, and then passed on. Night came on, being chilly and frosty. Our cabin was more than comfortably full where we lodged in the bow cabin, besides some in the midship and in the stern cabin. On the 17th we got to Higginsville, where we took on Bro. I. Hayden. The day was fair and beautiful. We enjoyed ourselves well. Near sunset Bro. Hayden informed me that his wife was very sick. We soon administered to her. In the morning she was quite well. The 18th being a fine day Elder Lyman Hewitt took the lead of singing, while we had a meeting on the deck of the boat in the open air. I preached a sermon, when the choir closed by singing a hymn. We soon arrived at Livingston, then to Lockville, then to Newark, where Elder Hewitt and the choir sung a hymn in a lively tune. We soon met a packet boat well thronged with passengers, who gazed on us with earnest admiration.

At 2 o'clock we passed Palmyra. At 1 o'clock, six miles west of Palmyra at a lock, the whole company of men, women and children got on the tow path and walked to the next lock, near a mile in distance. The train filled the path promiscuously for sixty or eighty rods, which gave rise to many expressions from our own company as well as from the passer by. Then we all went on board of the boat. I then observed to the saints that what took place twenty years ago in the village we had passed that day was the sole cause of all of our company being there that day. The bowsman thought I would have to prove that before I could be believed. The saints understood, but the boat crew did not until I told them that twenty years ago the Book of Mormon was printed in Palmyra, and that was the cause of our company being there that day. The choir then sung a hymn. Elder England, with his violin, and Elder Hewitt's thrilling voice, caused the windows to raise in every house on both sides of the canal, and the peoples' heads stuck out to hear the melody that we were accompanied with.

We then called to order, attended prayers, and went to rest. The evening was cool and weather fair. At 5 o'clock in the morning of the 20th nearly all the saints were on deck to view the city of Rochester, for we were hard by. The morning was fair and pleasant. A majority of the saints made a visit to the falls of that city, our captain having said he should stop two hours. Every thing appeared mild and quiet, it being Sabbath. As we were leaving the place Babylon's bells began to toll, to call their subjects together for worship. The day passed off well. At 11 o'clock we had singing, and I preached on the subject of the gathering.—The captain and crew listened with attention. At 9 we had singing and prayers, and went to rest. The 21st we passed Medina.—At 10 the wind was high, blowing hard from the west; consequently we had to omit singing. Soon we were informed that Bro. Edward Chidister was sick with the cholera morbus. We laid hands on him—saw no alternation for four hours. I felt much alarmed about him. His eyes sunk in his head. He looked very bad.—We called a meeting to be agreed as touching his case. So we all agreed, and prayers were offered up by five of us, four men and one sister, and all the rest said amen. In token of the same we anointed him with oil and laid hands on him, but seemingly to no avail. I grew much alarmed. It seemed as if God was determined to try and see how faithful we would be. Near sunset he looked as if the cholera was determined to diminish one from our social number.

We came to a piece of woods, and I got off from the boat on the tow path, my heart full of grief to the overflowing. I bowed in secret before my Father to spare unto us our much beloved Bro. Edward Chidister. Being begotten in the faith by me, therefore, O God, spare him as a new born son. I got the whispering of the still small voice, be it according to thy faith. It thrilled through me like electricity. I went and called the saints together. Quite a number of prayers were offered up by the brethren and sisters.—We laid hands on him and anointed him again, determined to not let him go. So we called five or six meetings in like manner, and, thank God, we have our brother with us yet, and is now nearly well as usual. All the saints seemed to feel for each others interest. Bro. Samuel Snider having some sugar of his own make, he gave each a lump, and we had a real feast on sugar. As night approached we had singing and prayers and went to bed, having the pleasure that afternoon to view the artificial works of man at Lockport. On the 22d in the morning we passed Black Rock, and at 10 o'clock we were in Buffalo. There we met with Elder Bacon and Stevens.

We all went on board the steamer Empire State. We got all things on board of her, and on the 23d at night we got under way. On the 24th we had singing by Elder Lyman Hewitt and his choir. I preached to 300 persons the next day. Elder Bacon, after singing, preached a good discourse on the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. It caused much excitement among the passengers, who numbered more than 1,000. The saints were somewhat disappointed in not having a view of Detroit, it being dark when we arrived there. And on the 26th of May, early in the morning, we arrived at Mackinac, and stopped about one hour. At 9 o'clock we passed the Big Beaver Island. Some of the saints in our company expected to call there, but the captain very abruptly disappointed us all.

On the 27th about 8 o'clock we arrived at Racine, our destined port, where we all went on shore, and safely landed all our freight, and hired it stored. We all went to the Exchange hotel. We then thought it not proper to stop over night with our whole company on expense. So we hired four carriages to convey us, and were soon under way to Voree. None but two or three of the company ever saw a prairie before, and the beautiful farms and excellent crops and the black and rich looking soil called out many strange expressions. We were in a few hours in the city of Voree, twenty-six miles from Racine, (by the stage route.) Some of the saints are quite fatigued by their journey, but all express their joy in the beautiful location of Voree for a city. But the rough situation of the unfinished houses disappointed some. Will such use their influence and means to help finish and refine the place, so that the buildings may correspond with the location of the beautiful city of Voree, that others who emigrate may know that such have been as faithful in finishing as others in building?

Let it suffice to say that the Lord has heard prayer in blessing us with the best of blessings while journeying. No material accident happened all the way. I did not know of a word of discord among the saints in our journey. All peace and union. The fact is, they were all of the best class, and of good report where they left. I now improve this opportunity to render my sincere thanks for their kind treatment and my sustenance for the past year. So I pray the God of Israel to bless them a hundred fold in this world, and in the world to come everlasting life. This from your brother in the new covenant,

EBENEZER PAGE.

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD AT BALTIMORE, MD., JUNE SECOND, THIRD AND SIXTH, 1849.

Conference met according to previous notice. The meeting was opened by singing, prayer, and reading a portion of the word of God. After which Elder G. J. Adams arose and said, that Bro. Appleton would preside at the Conference by virtue of previous appointment, having been ordained a High Priest for that purpose at the last Conference, but that all things might be done in order, according to the law of God, he would take a vote. The question was then put, and the Conference unanimously confirmed the previous appointment, and Dr. Charles W. Appleton took the chair as President of the Conference. Elder Albert N. Hosmer was then unanimously elected Clerk. Present, two High Priests, six Elders, one Priest, one Teacher, and a number of brethren and sisters. Pres. Appleton made some very beautiful remarks on matters and things connected with the work of God in the last days, showing his goodness and mercy manifested to us since the last Conference, that were listened to with profound attention.

Bro. G. J. Adams then arose and gave some general instructions on Conference business, ordinations, priesthood and other interesting matters. Elder J. O. Battee was then proposed by Bro. G. J. Adams to be ordained a High Priest, to be sent as a missionary to California, in connection with Bro. John L. Speights, High Priest. The proposition was received by the Conference without a dissenting vote. Bro. Adams then asked Elder David R. Whipple if he was willing to give up his business and go and preach the gospel. Elder Whipple replied, that he had made an everlasting covenant years ago in the village we had passed that day was the sole cause of all of our company being there that day. The bowsman thought I would have to prove that before I could be believed. The saints understood, but the boat crew did not until I told them that twenty years ago the Book of Mormon was printed in Palmyra, and that was the cause of our company being there that day. The choir then sung a hymn. Elder England, with his violin, and Elder Hewitt's thrilling voice, caused the windows to raise in every house on both sides of the canal, and the peoples' heads stuck out to hear the melody that we were accompanied with.

We then called to order, attended prayers, and went to rest. The evening was cool and weather fair. At 5 o'clock in the morning of the 20th nearly all the saints were on deck to view the city of Rochester, for we were hard by. The morning was fair and pleasant. A majority of the saints made a visit to the falls of that city, our captain having said he should stop two hours. Everything appeared mild and quiet, it being Sabbath. As we were leaving the place Babylon's bells began to toll, to call their subjects together for worship. The day passed off well. At 11 o'clock we had singing, and I preached on the subject of the gathering.—The captain and crew listened with attention. At 9 we had singing and prayers, and went to rest. The 21st we passed Medina.—At 10 the wind was high, blowing hard from the west; consequently we had to omit singing. Soon we were informed that Bro. Edward Chidister was sick with the cholera morbus. We laid hands on him—saw no alternation for four hours. I felt much alarmed about him. His eyes sunk in his head. He looked very bad.—We called a meeting to be agreed as touching his case. So we all agreed, and prayers were offered up by five of us, four men and one sister, and all the rest said amen. In token of the same we anointed him with oil and laid hands on him, but seemingly to no avail. I grew much alarmed. It seemed as if God was determined to try and see how faithful we would be. Near sunset he looked as if the cholera was determined to diminish one from our social number.

We came to a piece of woods, and I got off from the boat on the tow path, my heart full of grief to the overflowing. I bowed in secret before my Father to spare unto us our much beloved Bro. Edward Chidister. Being begotten in the faith by me, therefore, O God, spare him as a new born son. I got the whispering of the still small voice, be it according to thy faith. It thrilled through me like electricity. I went and called the saints together. Quite a number of prayers were offered up by the brethren and sisters.—We laid hands on him and anointed him again, determined to not let him go. So we called five or six meetings in like manner, and, thank God, we have our brother with us yet, and is now nearly well as usual. All the saints seemed to feel for each others interest. Bro. Samuel Snider having some sugar of his own make, he gave each a lump, and we had a real feast on sugar. As night approached we had singing and prayers and went to bed, having the pleasure that afternoon to view the artificial works of man at Lockport. On the 22d in the morning we passed Black Rock, and at 10 o'clock we were in Buffalo. There we met with Elder Bacon and Stevens.

We all went on board the steamer Empire State. We got all things on board of her, and on the 23d at night we got under way. On the 24th we had singing by Elder Lyman Hewitt and his choir. I preached to 300 persons the next day. Elder Bacon, after singing, preached a good discourse on the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. It caused much excitement among the passengers, who numbered more than 1,000. The saints were somewhat disappointed in not having a view of Detroit, it being dark when we arrived there. And on the 26th of May, early in the morning, we arrived at Mackinac, and stopped about one hour. At 9 o'clock we passed the Big Beaver Island. Some of the saints in our company expected to call there, but the captain very abruptly disappointed us all.

On the 27th about 8 o'clock we arrived at Racine, our destined port, where we all went on shore, and safely landed all our freight, and hired it stored. We all went to the Exchange hotel. We then thought it not proper to stop over night with our whole company on expense. So we hired four carriages to convey us, and were soon under way to Voree. None but two or three of the company ever saw a prairie before, and the beautiful farms and excellent crops and the black and rich looking soil called out many strange expressions. We were in a few hours in the city of Voree, twenty-six miles from Racine, (by the stage route.) Some of the saints are quite fatigued by their journey, but all express their joy in the beautiful location of Voree for a city. But the rough situation of the unfinished houses disappointed some. Will such use their influence and means to help finish and refine the place, so that the buildings may correspond with the location of the beautiful city of Voree, that others who emigrate may know that such have been as faithful in finishing as others in building?

Let it suffice to say that the Lord has heard prayer in blessing us with the best of blessings while journeying. No material accident happened all the way. I did not know of a word of discord among the saints in our journey. All peace and union. The fact is, they were all of the best class, and of good report where they left. I now improve this opportunity to render my sincere thanks for their kind treatment and my sustenance for the past year. So I pray the God of Israel to bless them a hundred fold in this world, and in the world to come everlasting life. This from your brother in the new covenant,

EBENEZER PAGE.

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD AT BALTIMORE, MD., JUNE SECOND, THIRD AND SIXTH 1849.

Conference met according to previous notice. The meeting was opened by singing, prayer, and reading a portion of the word of God. After which Elder G. J. Adams arose and said, that Bro. Appleton would preside at the Conference by virtue of previous appointment, having been ordained a High Priest for that purpose at the last Conference, but that all things might be done in order, according to the law of God, he would take a vote. The question was then put, and the Conference unanimously confirmed the previous appointment, and Dr. Charles W. Appleton took the chair as President of the Conference. Elder Albert N. Hosmer was then unanimously elected Clerk. Present, two High Priests, six Elders, one Priest, one Teacher, and a number of brethren and sisters. Pres. Appleton made some very beautiful remarks on matters and things connected with the work of God in the last days, showing his goodness and mercy manifested to us since the last Conference, that were listened to with profound attention.

Bro. G. J. Adams then arose and gave some general instructions on Conference business, ordinations, priesthood and other interesting matters. Elder J. O. Battee was then proposed by Bro. G. J. Adams to be ordained a High Priest, to be sent as a missionary to California, in connection with Bro. John L. Speights, High Priest. The proposition was received by the Conference without a dissenting vote. Bro. Adams then asked Elder David R. Whipple if he was willing to give up his business and go and preach the gospel. Elder Whipple replied, that he had made an everlasting covenant with God to do his will, and he was ready. After some appropriate remarks by Pres. Appleton, the Conference voted, without a dissenting voice, that Elder Whipple go into the field and labor to build up the kingdom of God. Bro. Robert Marchant was then chosen an Elder. The Conference then adjourned until Sunday morning, 10 o'clock. Benediction by G. J. Adams.

Sunday morning, June 3d, 10 o'clock.—Conference was opened by singing, reading the word of God, and prayer by Pres. Appleton and G. J. Adams. Present, in addition to those that were present yesterday, Elders Peter Hess and Adam Long, of Philadelphia, also Elder George Pope, Bro. Heath, Priest, Bro. Allen, Teacher, Bro. Parkinson, and a large congregation of believers and unbelievers. Pres. Appleton having declared the Conference open for business, Bro. G. J. Adams then arose and addressed the Conference, showing that the "dispensation of the fulness of times" had been committed and carried on by revelation, by the voice of God, by the ministry of angels, and gave a glowing description of the hopes, fears, expectations and final triumph of the saints. Pres. Appleton then arose and preached a most thrilling and soul-stirring discourse on the gospel, the resurrection of the dead, the nigh approach of the coming and kingdom of Jesus Christ, urging the large and attentive congregation present, in a most eloquent and impressive manner, to obey the gospel and be prepared for that great day. Adjourned to 3 o'clock, P. M.

3 o'clock, P. M.—Conference met, and opened by singing by Bro. Hess, reading the word of God and prayer by Pres. Appleton. Bro. W. Jones was then chosen Deacon. Elder J. O. Battee was then ordained High Priest, Robert Marchant Elder, and W. Jones Deacon, under the hands of G. J. Adams and C. W. Appleton.—The bread and wine were then administered in commemoration of the death and sufferings of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, to show forth his death until he come. Bro. G. J. Adams gave an interesting account of his embracing this work, and many scenes that he had passed through in proclaiming the fulness of the gospel since that time. Adjourned until 8 o'clock, P. M.

8 o'clock, P. M.—A large congregation assembled. Singing by Bro. Hess. Reading scripture and prayer by Pres. Appleton.—Then, by universal consent and desire of the Conference, Bro. G. J. Adams read the 85th Psalm, and delivered an unanswerable discourse on the Book of Mormon, showing it to be of divine origin.—The congregation listened with unwavering attention until the close, when Pres. Appleton arose and gave an overwhelming and indisputable testimony of the whole work—of the call and priesthood of Pres. Strang—of the positive evidence God had given to him by direct revelation in confirmation of these things—his unalterable purpose to go on to the end, and closed by a powerful appeal to all present to come forward and yield obedience to the gospel. Conference adjourned until Wednesday night, June 6th, at 8 o'clock.

Wednesday evening, 8 o'clock, June 6th, 1849.—The Conference met pursuant to adjournment. Opened by singing, and prayer by G. J. Adams. Present, three High Priests, six Elders, two Priests, two Teachers, one Deacon, the brethren from Philadelphia, and a number of the brethren and sisters of this branch. The brethren arose and gave strong testimony of the work of God in the last days. Elders George Pope, Robert Marchant and A. N. Hosmer were authorized and instructed by the Conference to go into the regions around about Baltimore to proclaim the fulness of the gospel. Bro. G. J. Adams then nominated Elder Joseph Canox to the office of High Priest, which was unanimously approved by the Conference, and he was then ordained under the hands of G. J. Adams and Pres. Appleton. The following resolution was offered by A. N. Hosmer, and unanimously adopted without a dissenting voice:—

Resolved, That we hail with joy the progress of the work of God under the Presidency of James J. Strang, unanimously receive him as an Apostle, Prophet, Seer, Revelator, Translator and President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, standing in the stead of our lamented and martyred Pres. Joseph Smith, and he shall have our entire confidence, sympathy and prayers, that he may be sustained until the work God has given him to do shall be borne off in triumph.

On motion, the Conference adjourned subject to the call of the proper authorities. Closing benediction by G. J. Adams.

C. W. APPLETON, President.

ALBERT N. HOSMER, Clerk.

THE BEST WAY TO REFUTE THE MORMONS.

"He that cannot reason is a fool,
He that dare not is a slave,
And he that will not is a knave."

All denominations calling themselves christians profess to take the Bible (meaning the Old and New Testaments) for the standard of religious faith. And so do the Mormons. The difference that distinguishes the Latter Day Saints or Mormons from all other denominations is simply this: the Mormons read and study the Bible to reduce it as a great whole to one exact scientific system of doctrinal, practical and experimental religion, believing that one part parcel or portion of the word of God is as important in its place as another; believing also that the Bible is in itself a standard of proofs for only one system of religion, and that the Bible is not in itself a standard of proofs to all and every system of religious faith that appeals to it for proof. For when the idea is once admitted that even two or more contradictory systems of faith can be successfully sustained by the Bible, that moment we disrobe it of all its claims to divinity. And thus it becomes proof for nothing, it being a contradictory libel instead of a "holy Bible."

The force and truth of the above statement must be realized by all reasonable, logical and philosophical minds, be they many or few. Ever since the system of Mormonism has been preached to the world, the strongest and most successful argument that has as yet been wielded against them by their opposers, is the cry of "delusion! delusion!!" "false prophets!" and "impostors!" &c., &c. Messrs. Howe of Painsville, Ohio, Ridder of N. Y., Turner of Ill., and numerous others too tedious to mention, have published books against the Book of Mormon and the Mormons. But when their books are compared with the books published by Messrs. Thomas Paine, Voltair, Hume, R. Taylor and numerous others against the Bible and its believers, they sink into oblivion, as wanting in logic, reason, philosophy and common sense. And no reasonable person pays the least regard to either class of the above named writers when the true merits of the Book of Mormon and the Bible are laid fairly before them, and facts as they are in their native simplicity are exhibited.

Truths perverted are the greatest lies in the world, and the most demoralizing to mankind. There are no circumstances either of a civil or religious nature but what have their light and dark sides.—Therefore by exhibiting one side only of any subject of interest to the public, is only abusing the public mind. And no person is prepared to judge a righteous judgment concerning it. So with the Mormons and the religious world. The Mormons are continually presenting both sides of every religious topic, and employing the whole Bible, applying each part and parcel of it in such a manner that, as a whole, in all its parts, it harmonizes with itself as a whole. We acknowledge that there are some leading or cardinal topics in the scriptures which serve to lead off in the application of all the other topics.

with God to do his will, and he was ready. After some appropriate remarks by Pres. Appleton, the Conference voted, without a dissenting voice, that Elder Whipple go into the field and labor to build up the kingdom of God. Bro. Robert Marchant was then chosen an Elder. The Conference then adjourned until Sunday morning, 10 o'clock. Benediction by G. J. Adams.

Sunday morning, June 3d, 10 o'clock.—Conference was opened by singing, reading the word of God, and prayer by Pres. Appleton and G. J. Adams. Present, in addition to those that were present yesterday, Elders Peter Hess and Adam Long, of Philadelphia, also Elder George Pope, Bro. Heath, Priest, Bro. Allen, Teacher, Bro. Parkinson, and a large congregation of believers and unbelievers. Pres. Appleton having declared the Conference open for business, Bro. G. J. Adams then arose and addressed the Conference, showing that the "dispensation of the fulness of times" had been committed and carried on by revelation, by the voice of God, by the ministry of angels, and gave a glowing description of the hopes, fears, expectations and final triumph of the saints. Pres. Appleton then arose and preached a most thrilling and soul-stirring discourse on the gospel, the resurrection of the dead, the nigh approach of the coming and kingdom of Jesus Christ, urging the large and attentive congregation present, in a most eloquent and impressive manner, to obey the gospel and be prepared for that great day. Adjourned to 3 o'clock, P. M.

3 o'clock, P. M.—Conference met, and opened by singing by Bro. Hess, reading the word of God and prayer by Pres. Appleton. Bro. W. Jones was then chosen Deacon. Elder J. O. Battee was then ordained High Priest, Robert Marchant Elder, and W. Jones Deacon, under the hands of G. J. Adams and C. W. Appleton.—The bread and wine were then administered in commemoration of the death and sufferings of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, to show forth his death until he come. Bro. G. J. Adams gave an interesting account of his embracing this work, and many scenes that he had passed through in proclaiming the fulness of the gospel since that time. Adjourned until 8 o'clock, P. M.

8 o'clock, P. M.—A large congregation assembled. Singing by Bro. Hess. Reading scripture and prayer by Pres. Appleton.—Then, by universal consent and desire of the Conference, Bro. G. J. Adams read the 85th Psalm, and delivered an unanswerable discourse on the Book of Mormon, showing it to be of divine origin.—The congregation listened with unwavering attention until the close, when Pres. Appleton arose and gave an overwhelming and indisputable testimony of the whole work—of the call and priesthood of Pres. Strang—of the positive evidence God had given to him by direct revelation in confirmation of these things—his unalterable purpose to go on to the end, and closed by a powerful appeal to all present to come forward and yield obedience to the gospel. Conference adjourned until Wednesday night, June 6th, at 8 o'clock.

Wednesday evening, 8 o'clock, June 6th, 1849.—The Conference met pursuant to adjournment. Opened by singing, and prayer by G. J. Adams. Present, three High Priests, six Elders, two Priests, two Teachers, one Deacon, the brethren from Philadelphia, and a number of the brethren and sisters of this branch. The brethren arose and gave strong testimony of the work of God in the last days. Elders George Pope, Robert Marchant and A. N. Hosmer were authorized and instructed by the Conference to go into the regions around about Baltimore to proclaim the fulness of the gospel. Bro. G. J. Adams then nominated Elder Joseph Canox to the office of High Priest, which was unanimously approved by the Conference, and he was then ordained under the hands of G. J. Adams and Pres. Appleton. The following resolution was offered by A. N. Hosmer, and unanimously adopted without a dissenting voice:—

Resolved, That we hail with joy the progress of the work of God under the Presidency of James J. Strang, unanimously receive him as an Apostle, Prophet, Seer, Revelator, Translator and President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, standing in the stead of our lamented and martyred Pres. Joseph Smith, and he shall have our entire confidence, sympathy and prayers, that he may be sustained until the work God has given him to do shall be borne off in triumph.

On motion, the Conference adjourned subject to the call of the proper authorities. Closing benediction by G. J. Adams.

C. W. APPLETON, President.

ALBERT N. HOSMER, Clerk.

THE BEST WAY TO REFUTE THE MORMONS.

"He that cannot reason is a fool,
He that dare not is a slave,
And he that will not is a knave."

All denominations calling themselves christians profess to take the Bible (meaning the Old and New Testaments) for the standard of religious faith. And so do the Mormons. The difference that distinguishes the Latter Day Saints or Mormons from all other denominations is simply this: the Mormons read and study the Bible to reduce it as a great whole to one exact scientific system of doctrinal, practical and experimental religion, believing that one part parcel or portion of the word of God is as important in its place as another; believing also that the Bible is in itself a standard of proofs for only one system of religion, and that the Bible is not in itself a standard of proofs to all and every system of religious faith that appeals to it for proof. For when the idea is once admitted that even two or more contradictory systems of faith can be successfully sustained by the Bible, that moment we disrobe it of all its claims to divinity. And thus it becomes proof for nothing. it being a contradictory libel instead of a "holy Bible."

The force and truth of the above statement must be realized by all reasonable, logical and philosophical minds, be they many or few. Ever since the system of Mormonism has been preached to the world, the strongest and most successful argument that has as yet been wielded against them by their opposers, is the cry of "delusion! delusion!!" "false prophets!" and "impostors!" &c., &c. Messrs. Howe of Painsville, Ohio, Ridder of N. Y., Turner of Ill., and numerous others too tedious to mention, have published books against the Book of Mormon and the Mormons. But when their books are compared with the books published by Messrs. Thomas Paine, Voltair, Hume, R. Taylor and numerous others against the Bible and its believers, they sink into oblivion, as wanting in logic, reason, philosophy and common sense. And no reasonable person pays the least regard to either class of the above named writers when the true merits of the Book of Mormon and the Bible are laid fairly before them, and facts as they are in their native simplicity are exhibited.

Truths perverted are the greatest lies in the world, and the most demoralizing to mankind. There are no circumstances either of a civil or religious nature but what have their light and dark sides.—Therefore by exhibiting one side only of any subject of interest to the public, is only abusing the public mind. And no person is prepared to judge a righteous judgment concerning it. So with the Mormons and the religious world. The Mormons are continually presenting both sides of every religious topic, and employing the whole Bible, applying each part and parcel of it in such a manner that, as a whole, in all its parts, it harmonizes with itself as a whole. We acknowledge that there are some leading or cardinal topics in the scriptures which serve to lead off in the application of all the other topics.

Therefore the best way to refute the Mormons is to take them up first on their cardinal points of doctrine, and follow them step by step into the Bible, and if they can be refuted at all it will be by showing that they falsely apply the scriptures to sustain their leading or cardinal points of doctrine. For an example I will present one.—We believe the prophecies of the Old Testament are to be understood and applied in a literal sense, consequently we believe the doctrine that the "Jews," now in the "four corners of the earth," and the "ten tribes," called "Israel," in the "north country," are yet to return to Palestine and build Jerusalem, never more to be thrown down; and that when this is done, that all the Gentile nations of the earth are to be uprooted and totally overthrown. Another cardinal point in the faith of the Mormons is, that the great city "Mount Zion," so much spoken of in the scriptures, is to be built in a literal sense, in North America, not by the Jews, but by the saints from among the Gentile nations.

Another cardinal point is, that the Indians of the American continent are not the "house of Judah" or "Israel" proper, but are the "house of Joseph," the "multitude of nations of Ephraim," a "remnant of Israel," and are to be restored to the favor of God through the medium of the Bible and the Book of Mormon, (the records of their fathers,) and the gospel which those books contain. Another cardinal point is, that the gospel of Jesus Christ is an eternal and unchangeable principle, and that nothing more or less is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, than was necessary 1800 years ago; that what constituted the church of Christ then constitutes it now, and nothing else does.

The above named topics are of such vast importance with the Mormons that, when proved true, it puts them on an eternal basis, and totally overthrows the theory of every opposing faith; and if they fail in these, they fail in all, and forever. Now who among all the learned and wise of the nineteenth century will or dare accept a courteous invitation to pick up our glove, and bring the matter to a successful test and find in the sequel who are wrong? and leave off that old foolish, whimsical, silly cry of "delusion, delusion," &c., which none but some druling lickspittle regards for a moment.

JOHN E. PAGE.

For the Gospel Herald.

Pres. Strang,—Sir:—Having just returned from a mission in Canada West, I write a few lines which may be inserted in the paper, if you think it worthy. The embarrassments under which I labored were very great in some places, caused by the false teaching of apostates. Nevertheless I succeeded in subduing prejudice to a great extent, and baptized eight new members, and wakened up some old ones. I found a few with their lamps trimmed and burning. They will be here next fall, if nothing happens. The way is open for a great work in Canada. The time has come for the work of God to roll forth with two fold rapidity. The brethren in Canada were unwilling to have me come home until I promised to go there again if possible, or Bro. Strang send an Elder. Truly the harvest is great, but the faithful laborers few. May God send faithful laborers into the vineyard in this, the eleventh hour, to cause the kingdoms of this world to become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ, as spoken of by the Apostle John. See Rev. xi. 15. Dan. ii. 44. vii. 14. There was a great talk of war in Canada just before I left. A petition was got up to have the governor called home. The reformers went against it, and prevented him from being called home. The war is still brewing. The time has come which was spoken of by Jesus Christ, in Luke xxi. 9 to 32.

Yours in the gospel,

JOHN SHIPPY.

THE FIRST WEDDING.

Major Noah thus pleasantly and philosophically discourses on the first wedding. He says:—

We like short courtships, and in his, Adam acted like a sensible man—he fell asleep a bachelor and woke to find himself a married man. He appears to have popped the question immediately after meeting Miss Eve, and she without flirtation or shyness gave him a kiss and herself. Of that first kiss in the world we have had our thoughts, however, and sometimes, in a poetical mood, wished we were the man that done it. But the deed is done—the chance was Adam's, and he improved it. We like the notion of getting married in a garden. Adam's was private. No envious aunts and grunting grandmothers. The birds of heaven were his minstrels, and the glad sky flung its light upon the scene. One thing about the first wedding brings queer things to us in spite of its scriptural truth. Adam and his wife were rather young to marry; some two or three days old, according to the sagest elder; without experience, without a house a pot or kettle; nothing but love and Eden.

Curious Discovery.—A few days since, some men who were working upon our streets, broke a stone in two, in which was found a beautiful purple flower, with some green leaves as fresh in appearance, and as soft to the touch as though it had been grown in a green house. How it came there is a mystery to us. The stone had been in our streets for twelve years. But the flower was evidently in the stone when quarried. Perhaps it had been there from "time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary," ay, for aught we know, it is an antediluvian flower. Mr. S. S. Young says, "the flower resembles the Hibiscus species; but the leaf is more nearly the rose, but is not exactly like any flower now a native of this country; nor indeed like any exotic cultivated here." He adds, "it most probably grew in the hole of the rock, where it now is; but the rock must have been earth when it grew.—Eaton (Ohio) Register.

☛ The race of mankind would perish did they cease to aid each other. From the time that the mother binds the child's head till the moment that some kind assistant wipes the death damp from the brow of the dying, we cannot exist without mutual help. All, therefore, that need aid, have a right to ask it from their fellow mortals; no one who holds the power of granting can refuse it without guilt.—Ex. paper.

☛ Dow, Jr., in one of his patent sermons, discourses as follows:—

"Never run to catch a falling star in your hat, nor attempt to reseat a king upon his throne, whom his subjects have tumbled to the bottom; it were useless. Never give a boy a shilling to hold your shadow while you climb a tree to look into the middle of next week; it is money thrown away."

Argument and Assertion.—Assertion is like an arrow shot from a long bow; the force with which it strikes depends on the strength of the arm that draws it. But argument is like an arrow from a cross bow, which has equal force whether shot by a boy or giant.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD LAST WEEK.

James Pierce,	$1,00	to Vol.	IV	No. 38
John F. Forbes	1,00	"	"	38
Daniel Adams,	3,00	"	"	26
J. W. Halladay,	1,68	"	"	16

Therefore the best way to refute the Mormons is to take them up first on their cardinal points of doctrine, and follow them step by step into the Bible, and if they can be refuted at all it will be by showing that they falsely apply the scriptures to sustain their leading or cardinal points of doctrine. For an example I will present one.—We believe the prophecies of the Old Testament are to be understood and applied in a literal sense, consequently we believe the doctrine that the "Jews," now in the "four corners of the earth," and the "ten tribes," called "Israel," in the "north country," are yet to return to Palestine and build Jerusalem, never more to be thrown down; and that when this is done, that all the Gentile nations of the earth are to be uprooted and totally overthrown. Another cardinal point in the faith of the Mormons is, that the great city "Mount Zion," so much spoken of in the scriptures, is to be built in a literal sense, in North America, not by the Jews, but by the saints from among the Gentile nations.

Another cardinal point is, that the Indians of the American continent are not the "house of Judah" or "Israel" proper, but are the "house of Joseph," the "multitude of nations of Ephraim," a "remnant of Israel," and are to be restored to the favor of God through the medium of the Bible and the Book of Mormon, (the records of their fathers,) and the gospel which those books contain. Another cardinal point is, that the gospel of Jesus Christ is an eternal and unchangeable principle, and that nothing more or less is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, than was necessary 1800 years ago; that what constituted the church of Christ then constitutes it now, and nothing else does.

The above named topics are of such vast importance with the Mormons that, when proved true, it puts them on an eternal basis, and totally overthrows the theory of every opposing faith; and if they fail in these, they fail in all, and forever. Now who among all the learned and wise of the nineteenth century will or dare accept a courteous invitation to pick up our glove, and bring the matter to a successful test and find in the sequel who are wrong? and leave off that old foolish, whimsical, silly cry of "delusion, delusion," &c., which none but some druling lickspittle regards for a moment.

JOHN E. PAGE.

For the Gospel Herald.

Pres. Strang,—Sir:—Having just returned from a mission in Canada West, I write a few lines which may be inserted in the paper, if you think it worthy. The embarrassments under which I labored were very great in some places, caused by the false teaching of apostates. Nevertheless I succeeded in subduing prejudice to a great extent, and baptized eight new members, and wakened up some old ones. I found a few with their lamps trimmed and burning. They will be here next fall, if nothing happens. The way is open for a great work in Canada. The time has come for the work of God to roll forth with two fold rapidity. The brethren in Canada were unwilling to have me come home until I promised to go there again if possible, or Bro. Strang send an Elder. Truly the harvest is great, but the faithful laborers few. May God send faithful laborers into the vineyard in this, the eleventh hour, to cause the kingdoms of this world to become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ, as spoken of by the Apostle John. See Rev. xi. 15. Dan. ii. 44. vii. 14. There was a great talk of war in Canada just before I left. A petition was got up to have the governor called home. The reformers went against it, and prevented him from being called home. The war is still brewing. The time has come which was spoken of by Jesus Christ, in Luke xxi. 9 to 32.

Yours in the gospel,

JOHN SHIPPY.

THE FIRST WEDDING.

Major Noah thus pleasantly and philosophically discourses on the first wedding. He says:—

We like short courtships, and in his, Adam acted like a sensible man—he fell asleep a bachelor and woke to find himself a married man. He appears to have popped the question immediately after meeting Miss Eve, and she without flirtation or shyness gave him a kiss and herself. Of that first kiss in the world we have had our thoughts, however, and sometimes, in a poetical mood, wished we were the man that done it. But the deed is done—the chance was Adam's, and he improved it. We like the notion of getting married in a garden. Adam's was private. No envious aunts and grunting grandmothers. The birds of heaven were his minstrels, and the glad sky flung its light upon the scene. One thing about the first wedding brings queer things to us in spite of its scriptural truth. Adam and his wife were rather young to marry; some two or three days old, according to the sagest elder; without experience, without a house a pot or kettle; nothing but love and Eden.

Curious Discovery.—A few days since, some men who were working upon our streets, broke a stone in two, in which was found a beautiful purple flower, with some green leaves as fresh in appearance, and as soft to the touch as though it had been grown in a green house. How it came there is a mystery to us. The stone had been in our streets for twelve years. But the flower was evidently in the stone when quarried. Perhaps it had been there from "time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary," ay, for aught we know, it is an antediluvian flower. Mr. S. S. Young says, "the flower resembles the Hibiscus species; but the leaf is more nearly the rose, but is not exactly like any flower now a native of this country; nor indeed like any exotic cultivated here." He adds, "it most probably grew in the hole of the rock, where it now is; but the rock must have been earth when it grew.—Eaton (Ohio) Register.

☞ The race of mankind would perish did they cease to aid each other. From the time that the mother binds the child's head till the moment that some kind assistant wipes the death damp from the brow of the dying, we cannot exist without mutual help. All, therefore, that need aid, have a right to ask it from their fellow mortals; no one who holds the power of granting can refuse it without guilt.—Ex. paper.

☞ Dow, Jr., in one of his patent sermons, discourses as follows:—

"Never run to catch a falling star in your hat, nor attempt to reseat a king upon his throne, whom his subjects have tumbled to the bottom; it were useless. Never give a boy a shilling to hold your shadow while you climb a tree to look into the middle of next week; it is money thrown away."

Argumemt and Assertion.—Assertion is like an arrow shot from a long bow; the force with which it strikes depends on the strength of the arm that draws it. But argument is like an arrow from a cross bow, which has equal force whether shot by a boy or giant.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD LAST WEEK.

James Pierce,	$1,00	to	Vol. IV	No. 38
John F. Forbes	1,00	"	"	38
Daniel Adams,	3,00	"	"	26
J. W. Halladay,	1,68	"	"	16

SPEAK NO ILL.

Nay, speak no ill, a kindly word,
Can never leave a sting behind;
And oh! to breathe each tale we've heard
Is far beneath a noble mind.
Full oft a better seed is sown,
By choosing thus the kinder plan;
For if but little good be known,
Still let us speak the best we can.

Give me the heart that fain would hide—
Would fain another's faults efface;
How can it please human pride
To prove humanity but base?
No—let us reach a higher mood—
A nobler estimate for man!
Be earnest in the search for good,
And speak of all the best we can.

Then speak no ill—but lenient be
To others' failings as your own;
If you're the first a fault to see,
Be not the first to make it known;
For life is but a passing day,
No lip may tell how brief its span,
Then oh! the little time we stay,
Let's speak of all the best we can.

THE FASHIONABLE LADY'S PRAYER.

"Give us this day our daily bread,"
And pies and cakes besides
To load the stomach, pain the head,
And choke the vital ties.
And if too soon a friend decays,
Or dies in agony—
We'll talk of "God's mysterious ways,"
And lay it all to thee.

Give us, to please a morbid taste,
In spite of pain and death,
Consumption strings around the waist,
Almost to stop the breath:
Then, if infirmity attends
Our stinted progeny,
In visitation for our sins—
We'll lay it all to thee.

Yes, give us coffee, wine, and tea,
And hot things introduce,
The stomach's warm bath thrice a day.
To weaken and reduce:
And if, defying nature's laws,
Dyspeptic we must be—
We scorn to search for human cause,
But lay it all to thee.

WHAT IS LOST DAILY.

If we ask ourselves at the close of each day, how much we have lost since the morning dawned, the mind will go back busy in memory over many blessed moments and opportunities which can never return. The small particles of existence are constantly wasted away, as if of no importance in making up the great sum of human life. One moment after another is allowed to pass unimproved, as though mere moments were trifles to be squandered in listlessness or indifference. At times we are visited with rebukes, but we are warding off the regret which comes over the past and present, in attempts to console ourselves with the thought that the future may yet bring us hours and privileges to compensate for all that we have lost. The youth and the middle aged and the old—all live thus, but the time needed never comes, while the present is never grasped. It is in one condition of life that this liberty to neglect the present is confined. The student lets slip many an hour which might have brought the rich reward of mental application. This life need not be that of a recluse, yet aside from needed recreations and exercises, much time may pass in frivolous interviews, aimless reveries, and idle dreamings. Moments of leisure, amount to years at the end of life. Those who spend most of their days even in labor, may gain golden advantages from the improvement of brief relaxation from duty. A book seized upon but for a minute may give to the mind a thought which shall relieve toil of its task, and live for ages, expanding in life and glory. No moment is too brief to be worthless, and time holds a perpetual reckoning with all of its pensioners.

EXAMPLE.—Example is more powerful than precept. You preach up morality a life time; but if your example does not correspond to your words, you will fail to accomplish anything for God or man. A man who always acts conscientiously—who is never found among the vicious and abandoned—but who always speaks the truth in sincerity—performs humble acts of kindness, and lives void of offence before God and the world—is doing an amount of good that eternity, not time, can reveal. Preach what you can, but always let your example correspond to your words. A true Christian is always doing good—no matter where he is. His example is always salutary. There are but few profane or indelicate words uttered in his presence. There is little levity. Let such be your example, O man, and it will not be lost to the world.

LABOR.—Why, men of idleness, labor rocked you in the cradle, and has nourished your pampered life; without it, the woven silks and wool upon your back would be in the silkworm's nest, and the fleeces in the shepherd's fold. For the meanest thing that ministers to human want, save the air of heaven, man is indebted to toil; and even the air of heaven, by God's wise ordination, is breathed with labor. It is only the drones who toil not, who infest the hive of the active, like masses of corruption and decay. The lords of the earth are workingmen, who can build or cast down at their will, who retort the sneer of the "soft handed" by pointing to their trophies, wherever art, science, civilzation and humanity are known. Work on, men of toil! thy royalty is yet to be acknowledged, as labor rises onward to the highest throne of power.

☞ The industrious are seldom criminal, but the most of those who yield to guilty enticements, may trace their lapse from rectitude to habits of idleness.

☞ "Men are made in the image of God." Gentlemen are manufactured by tailors, barbers and boot blacks. "Woman is the last most perfect work of God." Ladies are the production of silk worms, milliners and dressing maids.

DIED,

In Burlington, on the 9th inst., MARYETTA, daughter of William and Lane Savage, aged 14 years, 5 months and 10 days.

SPEAK NO ILL.

Nay, speak no ill, a kindly word,
Can never leave a sting behind;
And oh! to breathe each tale we've heard
Is far beneath a noble mind.
Full oft a better seed is sown,
By choosing thus the kinder plan;
For if but little good be known,
Still let us speak the best we can.

Give me the heart that fain would hide—
Would fain another's faults efface:
How can it please human pride
To prove humanity but base?
No—let us reach a higher mood—
A nobler estimate for man:
Be earnest in the search for good,
And speak of all the best we can.

Then speak no ill—but lenient be
To others' failings as your own.
If you're the first a fault to see,
Be not the first to make it known.
For life is but a passing day,
No lip may tell how brief its span.
Then oh! the little time we stay,
Let's speak of all the best we can.

THE FASHIONABLE LADY'S PRAYER.

"Give us this day our daily bread."
And pies and cakes besides
To load the stomach, pain the head.
And choke the vital ties.
And if too soon a friend decays.
Or dies in agony—
We'll talk of "God's mysterious ways,'
And lay it all to thee.

Give us, to please a morbid taste,
In spite of pain and death,
Consumption strings around the waist,
Almost to stop the breath:
Then, if infirmity attends
Our stinted progeny,
In visitation for our sins—
We'll lay it all to thee.

Yes, give us coffee, wine, and tea,
And hot things introduce,
The stomach's warm bath thrice a day.
To weaken and reduce:
And if, defying nature's laws,
Dyspeptic we must be—
We scorn to search for human cause,
But lay it all to thee.

WHAT IS LOST DAILY.

If we ask ourselves at the close of each day, how much we have lost since the morning dawned, the mind will go back busy in memory over many blessed moments and opportunities which can never return. The small particles of existence are constantly wasted away, as if of no importance in making up the great sum of human life. One moment after another is allowed to pass unimproved, as though mere moments were trifles to be squandered in listlessness or indifference. At times we are visited with rebukes, but we are warding off the regret which comes over the past and present, in attempts to console ourselves with the thought that the future may yet bring us hours and privileges to compensate for all that we have lost. The youth and the middle aged and the old—all live thus, but the time needed never comes, while the present is never grasped. It is in one condition of life that this liberty to neglect the present is confined. The student lets slip many an hour which might have brought the rich reward of mental application. This life need not be that of a recluse, yet aside from needed recreations and exercises, much time may pass in frivolous interviews, aimless reveries, and idle dreamings. Moments of leisure, amount to years at the end of life. Those who spend most of their days even in labor, may gain golden advantages from the improvement of brief relaxation from duty. A book seized upon but for a minute may give to the mind a thought which shall relieve toil of its task, and live for ages, expanding in life and glory. No moment is too brief to be worthless, and time holds a perpetual reckoning with all of its pensioners.

EXAMPLE.—Example is more powerful than precept. You preach up morality a life time; but if your example does not correspond to your words, you will fail to accomplish anything for God or man. A man who always acts conscientiously—who is never found among the vicious and abandoned—but who always speaks the truth in sincerity—performs humble acts of kindness, and lives void of offence before God and the world—is doing an amount of good that eternity, not time, can reveal. Preach what you can, but always let your example correspond to your words. A true Christian is always doing good—no matter where he is. His example is always salutary. There are but few profane or indelicate words uttered in his presence. There is little levity. Let such be your example, O man, and it will not be lost to the world.

LABOR.—Why, men of idleness, labor rocked you in the cradle, and has nourished your pampered life; without it, the woven silks and wool upon your back would be in the silkworm's nest, and the fleeces in the shepherd's fold. For the meanest thing that ministers to human want, save the air of heaven, man is indebted to toil; and even the air of heaven, by God's wise ordination, is breathed with labor. It is only the drones who toil not, who infest the hive of the active, like masses of corruption and decay. The lords of the earth are workingmen, who can build or cast down at their will, who retort the sneer of the "soft handed" by pointing to their trophies, wherever art, science, civilzation and humanity are known. Work on, men of toil! thy royalty is yet to be acknowledged, as labor rises onward to the highest throne of power.

☞ The industrious are seldom criminal, but the most of those who yield to guilty enticements, may trace their lapse from rectitude to habits of idleness.

☞ "Men are made in the image of God." Gentlemen are manufactured by tailors, barbers and boot blacks. "Woman is the last most perfect work of God." Ladies are the production of silk worms, milliners and dressing maids.

DIED,

In Burlington, on the 9th inst., MARYETTA, daughter of William and Lane Savage, aged 14 years, 5 months and 10 days.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 16.] VOREE, WIS., THURSDAY, JULY 5, 1849. [WHOLE No. 132.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 8th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—This will inform you that I am now in the queen city, at Dr. Merryweather's office, on Vine st., above Fourth st., hearty as a buck. I arrived here last Monday evening about 11 o'clock, and put up with the Dutch—all other places being shut up. Tuesday morning after breakfast I called on Dr. Merryweather and informed him of my mission, and read the revelation of Jan. 7th, 1849, to him, and informed him of the prosperity of the church at Voree and Beaver Island, &c. He said that he had not heard anything about Voree for some time, only that the work under the Presidency of Bro. Strang was all blown up and gone to the shades.—And this, in substance, was what all the old Mormons told me that I have found in this city, and in Covington, Ky., and in several other places in this State. None of them here have taken a paper from Voree for a long time, and the saints here, as well as in Lewisburg and that region of country, have been greatly disappointed in consequence of Elder J. E. Page not coming to this State last fall to labor for the salvation of the saints. Many knew that he was expected last fall, and that he had the means given to him to bring him here. And as he did not come, nor no one else, most of the people thought they had a pretty good excuse to believe that the church at Voree and Beaver was all blown overboard.

Dr. Merryweather told me that when Reuben Miller's pamphlet came to this city, that it killed every Strangite Mormon in the place; and that himself and many others had joined the Brighamite branch. However, there is, as near as I can learn, about 100 old Mormons in this city who hold with none of the parties, but are standing still. I have visited from house to house about town, and found several of the brethren and sisters, read the revelation above mentioned to them all, and laid before them my mission. Some of them received my testimony, and are striving with all their might and means to get out of this and go to the places of gathering, Voree and Beaver Island.

If I had time to spend here I could take out a goodly number of the saints in the course of the summer and fall, but I shall leave town at 3 o'clock, P. M., on the cars for Waynesville, about forty miles from here, where I shall spend two or three days, and then return to Lewisburg, Preble Co., where I have a two days meeting one week from to-morrow and next day, and at which time I am to baptize several more persons. Last Sunday I baptized three persons at Georgetown, and between this and my next appointment at Lewisburg I have several more to immerse at that place. One of those I baptized before at Georgetown was Sarah, Bro. Isaac Pierce's sister, and his brother Jonathan's wife, and several others will go forward when I return to that place.

The cholera is increasing in this city daily since the hot weather commenced, and is quite fatal. I have no doubt but that terrible destroyer will lay a heavy claim on the inhabitants of the daughter of Babylon the present season, and he has commenced his awful mission among the emigrating Mormons from England, whose course is to the Council Bluffs and to the Salt Lake Valley. Many die of the destroyer on board the steamers on their way to the salt land. I calculate to start for Beaver from Lewisburg the 25th with a company of saints, so as to arrive at the Island in time for Conference. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES BLAKESLEE.

Baltimore, Md., June 7th, 1849.

PRES. STRANG,—MY DEAR BROTHER:—I have been here attending Conference, and have had a good time. There is a fine branch of the church here. They number from forty to fifty members, and are all of one heart and of one mind, and there are many believing. My object in writing to you at this time is, to inform you about the branch at Philadelphia. Our beloved brother Dr. C. W. Appleton, from Baltimore, paid us a visit, and spent four weeks with us. He preached the gospel in power and demonstration of the spirit of God. He was greatly beloved, and the saints greatly rejoiced. He baptized two, and would have baptized more, but he had to leave us. Our meetings were well attended, and the power of God was made manifest. God poured out his spirit upon his saints. The gifts of the gospel were in our midst. And, to tell you the truth, I never felt better. The saints in Philadelphia are all united, and feel well. The light is beginning to shine. Bro. George and Bro. Appleton, and some more, will start in a week or two for Beaver Island Conference. They will stop in Philadelphia a few days and preach, and will hold a Conference, and will then go to New York and hold a Conference in that city. That is the arrangement at present.

Bro. Appleton has done the saints much good here. He is a good man, and preaches the gospel in power. You will see him, by the blessing of God, face to face soon. Bro. George Adams is preaching the gospel in power in this city. God has blessed his labors abundantly here. There are a great many believing the work.—Truly, it rejoices my spirit. You will get the minutes of the Conference soon, and then you can see what they are doing here.—Bro. Strang, I wish you would write me soon, and if you have any good news let me know. I have had a strong desire to come to Conference, but for want of means I am obliged to stay here. It grieves me much, but so it is. I wish you would show Bro. Haven this letter, and I request of him to write to me soon. The saints in Baltimore and Philadelphia send their love to you and yours. Give my love to all the saints at Voree and Beaver Island, especially to Bros. J. E. Page and J. Blakeslee. I hope you may have a good time at your Conference. May God bless you and sustain you to carry on the great work of God in the last days. I am your brother in the new and everlasting covenant,

PETER HESS.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

Armada, June 16th, 1849, 5 o'clock, P. M.—Conference assembled pursuant to previous notice. Singing. Prayer by Elder Geo.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 16.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, JULY 5, 1849. [WHOLE No. 132.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 8th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—This will inform you that I am now in the queen city, at Dr. Merryweather's office, on Vine st., above Fourth st., hearty as a buck. I arrived here last Monday evening about 11 o'clock, and put up with the Dutch—all other places being shut up. Tuesday morning after breakfast I called on Dr. Merryweather and informed him of my mission, and read the revelation of Jan. 7th, 1849, to him, and informed him of the prosperity of the church at Voree and Beaver Island, &c. He said that he had not heard anything about Voree for some time, only that the work under the Presidency of Bro. Strang was all blown up and gone to the shades.—And this, in substance, was what all the old Mormons told me that I have found in this city, and in Covington, Ky., and in several other places in this State. None of them here have taken a paper from Voree for a long time, and the saints here, as well as in Lewisburg and that region of country, have been greatly disappointed in consequence of Elder J. E. Page not coming to this State last fall to labor for the salvation of the saints. Many knew that he was expected last fall, and that he had the means given to him to bring him here. And as he did not come, nor no one else, most of the people thought they had a pretty good excuse to believe that the church at Voree and Beaver was all blown overboard.

Dr. Merryweather told me that when Reuben Miller's pamphlet came to this city, that it killed every Strangite Mormon in the place; and that himself and many others had joined the Brighamite branch. However, there is, as near as I can learn, about 100 old Mormons in this city who hold with none of the parties, but are standing still. I have visited from house to house about town, and found several of the brethren and sisters, read the revelation above mentioned to them all, and laid before them my mission. Some of them received my testimony, and are striving with all their might and means to get out of this and go to the places of gathering, Voree and Beaver Island.

If I had time to spend here I could take out a goodly number of the saints in the course of the summer and fall, but I shall leave town at 3 o'clock, P. M., on the cars for Waynesville, about forty miles from here, where I shall spend two or three days, and then return to Lewisburg, Preble Co., where I have a two days meeting one week from to-morrow and next day, and at which time I am to baptize several more persons. Last Sunday I baptized three persons at Georgetown, and between this and my next appointment at Lewisburg I have several more to immerse at that place. One of those I baptized before at Georgetown was Sarah, Bro. Isaac Pierce's sister, and his brother Jonathan's wife, and several others will go forward when I return to that place.

The cholera is increasing in this city daily since the hot weather commenced, and is quite fatal. I have no doubt but that terrible destroyer will lay a heavy claim on the inhabitants of the daughter of Babylon the present season, and he has commenced his awful mission among the emigrating Mormons from England, whose course is to the Council Bluffs and to the Salt Lake Valley. Many die of the destroyer on board the steamers on their way to the salt land. I calculate to start for Beaver from Lewisburg the 25th with a company of saints, so as to arrive at the Island in time for Conference. Truly and sincerely, JAMES BLAKESLEE.

Baltimore, Md., June 7th, 1849.

PRES. STRANG,—MY DEAR BROTHER:—I have been here attending Conference, and have had a good time. There is a fine branch of the church here. They number from forty to fifty members, and are all of one heart and of one mind, and there are many believing. My object in writing to you at this time is, to inform you about the branch at Philadelphia. Our beloved brother Dr. C. W. Appleton, from Baltimore, paid us a visit, and spent four weeks with us. He preached the gospel in power and demonstration of the spirit of God. He was greatly beloved, and the saints greatly rejoiced. He baptized two, and would have baptized more, but he had to leave us. Our meetings were well attended, and the power of God was made manifest. God poured out his spirit upon his saints. The gifts of the gospel were in our midst. And, to tell you the truth, I never felt better. The saints in Philadelphia are all united, and feel well. The light is beginning to shine. Bro. George and Bro. Appleton, and some more, will start in a week or two for Beaver Island Conference. They will stop in Philadelphia a few days and preach, and will hold a Conference, and will then go to New York and hold a Conference in that city. That is the arrangement at present.

Bro. Appleton has done the saints much good here. He is a good man, and preaches the gospel in power. You will see him, by the blessing of God, face to face soon. Bro. George Adams is preaching the gospel in power in this city. God has blessed his labors abundantly here. There are a great many believing the work.—Truly, it rejoices my spirit. You will get the minutes of the Conference soon, and then you can see what they are doing here.—Bro. Strang, I wish you would write me soon, and if you have any good news let me know. I have had a strong desire to come to Conference, but for want of means I am obliged to stay here. It grieves me much, but so it is. I wish you would show Bro. Haven this letter, and I request of him to write to me soon. The saints in Baltimore and Philadelphia send their love to you and yours. Give my love to all the saints at Voree and Beaver Island, especially to Bros. J. E. Page and J. Blakeslee. I hope you may have a good time at your Conference. May God bless you and sustain you to carry on the great work of God in the last days. I am your brother in the new and everlasting covenant,

PETER HESS.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

Armada, June 16th, 1849, 5 o'clock, P. M.—Conference assembled pursuant to previous notice. Singing. Prayer by Elder Geo.

Brownson, P. H. P. Organized by calling to the chair Elder Samuel Graham, one of the Twelve, to preside during Conference, and Elder Geo. T. Powell, Pres. of the branch, Secretary of the Conference. The Conference being thus duly organized, Elder L. D. Hickey, one of the Twelve, arose and reported his success in the ministry since the April Conference, and also spoke of the repeated calls for preaching the gospel in different parts of the State of Michigan, in which he had traveled. Elder Samuel Graham followed with a similar report. After which Elder Geo. Brownson presented the case of Bro. Asa Curtice for examination before the Conference, regular gospel measures having been taken with him The following charges were preferred against him: 1st. For apostacy. Sustained by three witnesses, and his own confession. 2d. For speaking disrespectfully of the proper authorities of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Sustained by three witnesses, and his own confession. Before the Conference, while in session, resolved, therefore, that Bro. Asa Curtice be cut off from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints as not being worthy of a standing in the church of the saints, and we deliver him over to the buffetings of Satan for the destruction of the flesh, and we say, as it is his just due, let his wicked abominations be known to all men; let him be despised by the good, and hated of evil doers, and the just judgments of God be poured out upon him without mercy.—The whole church lifted their hands against him. Adjourned to meet for preaching to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock, A. M. Benediction by Elder Hickey.

Sabbath morning, 10 o'clock, A. M.—Conference opened by singing. Prayer by Samuel Graham. Preaching by Elder L. D. Hickey, from these words of Amos: "Surely the Lord will do nothing but he revealeth his secrets to his servants, the prophets."—He was followed by S. Graham on the same subject. Benediction by S. Graham. Dismissed to assemble for preaching at 3 o'clock, P. M. Sabbath afternoon, Conference in session. Singing. Prayer by Geo. Brownson. Preaching by S. Graham, from these words of a priest: "If thou art the Son of God, come down from the cross, and we will believe on thee." He was followed by Elder Hickey and Elder Brownson on the same subject. On motion of L. D. Hickey the Conference adjourned sine die. Benediction by S. Graham. The branch of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Armada will long have cause to mourn over the follies of apostacy. May God's blessing ever be upon his own.

GEO. T. POWELL, Sec. SAMUEL GRAHAM, Pres.

PRESIDENT J. J. STRANG,—TRULY HONORED AND RESPECTED:—The Conference requests that the following minutes thereof be published through the medium of the Gospel Herald, at Voree. The last No. of the first Vol. of the Olive Branch being in type, makes it impossible to give it a place in it immediately, nor is it certain that the next Vol. will be printed at Kirtland. You will, therefore, confer a favor on the community by giving the following an insertion in your paper, that a character so depraved as that of the following named convict may not further succeed in his deception.—Youra in sincerity and truth, A. COWLES.

Minutes of a Conference of the Church of Christ, held in Kirtland on the third day of June, 1849, specially called to take into consideration certain charges preferred against Elder Wm. E. McLellin.

Conference convened at 4 o'clock, P. M., and organized by appointing Martin Harris to preside, and Isaac N. Aldrich Secretary. Whereupon the following charges were read:—

1st. For using abusive, wicked and uncalled for language in our public meetings.

2d. For abusive language to the members, and especially to the Elders of the church.

3d. For cheating and defrauding people under pretense of publishing the Ensign of Liberty.

4th. For quarreling and fighting, and justifying himself in it.

5th. For lying in the name of the Lord at sundry times.

6th. For refusing to counsel with the Elders of the church, and meeting them with contempt.

7th. For taking illegal votes to disfellowship members of the church.

8th. For refusing to do as instructed by the First Presidency of the church.

After a careful investigation, by evidence, the above charges were sustained without a dissenting vote. Wherefore it was resolved, that we withdraw all fellowship from the aforesaid Wm. E. McLellin, both as an Elder or member of the church of Christ.

A vote was also called for an expression of the whole congregation, whether the charges had been sustained in order and a christianlike spirit. The expression was in the affirmative, not a dissenting vote. Elders present, M. C. Isham, Alfred Bonney, Jacob Bump and Leonard Rich. MARTIN HARRIS, Pres.

ISAAC N. ALDRICH, Sec.

☞ We publish the foregoing more for the gratification of the persons concerned, than for any real interest in it. The cutting off of such a man from that church is a matter of no moment in any sense whatever, except as a brief and expected chapter in history. It may strike some as a little singular that the inferior members should cut off their head. For our part we cannot see the least impropriety in it. They made him head, and the power that made can unmake. If McLellin had been appointed of God to be their leader, it would take God alone to remove him from being leader. But he that man sets up, man can put down. So let it be. McLellinism was in fact dead a long time ago. And because it was so, we have quite neglected to finish the publication of the discussion between him and prophet Strang.

THE BLACK RAIN IN CARLOW.

In a report of the proceedings of the Royal Dublin Society, in a late number of one of the Dublin papers, we find the following observations by Professor Barker on the "black rain," which fell on the evening of the 14th of last month:—"Professor Barker presented to the notice of the society a bottle containing a portion of 'black rain,' which had been transmitted to him from Carlow, with a view to satisfy the scruples of many persons who appeared to doubt that rain of this description had fallen. He had received communications on the subject from persons residing in several of the districts in which the rain had descended, and he was in a position to state, not only that such rain had actually fallen, but to mention the space of country over which it had been diffused. The specimen which he presented to the society had been sent to him from Carlow, accompanied by a letter, in which the writer mentioned that at the time of its collection it was uniformly black, and resembled ordinary writing ink; but he (doctor Barker) found that, after allowing it to stand for a short period, the black coloring matter separated from the water with which it had been mixed, rendering the color of the rain much lighter than at first. The places in which this phenomenon occurred were Abeyleix, Carlow, Kilkenny, and Athy, from which it would appear that the black shower had extended over an area of more than four hundred square miles. As far as he had been able to ascertain, it occurred about six o'clock in the evening of the 14th instant, being preceded by such extreme darkness that it was impossible to read except by candle light.—After this darkness had existed for some time, a hail storm, attend-

Brownson, P. H. P. Organized by calling to the chair Elder Samuel Graham, one of the Twelve, to preside during Conference, and Elder Geo. T. Powell, Pres. of the branch, Secretary of the Conference. The Conference being thus duly organized, Elder L. D. Hickey, one of the Twelve, arose and reported his success in the ministry since the April Conference, and also spoke of the repeated calls for preaching the gospel in different parts of the State of Michigan, in which he had traveled. Elder Samuel Graham followed with a similar report. After which Elder Geo. Brownson presented the case of Bro. Asa Curtice for examination before the Conference, regular gospel measures having been taken with him The following charges were preferred against him: 1st. For apostacy. Sustained by three witnesses, and his own confession. 2d. For speaking disrespectfully of the proper authorities of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Sustained by three witnesses, and his own confession. Before the Conference, while in session, resolved, therefore, that Bro. Asa Curtice be cut off from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints as not being worthy of a standing in the church of the saints, and we deliver him over to the buffetings of Satan for the destruction of the flesh, and we say, as it is his just due, let his wicked abominations be known to all men; let him be despised by the good, and hated of evil doers, and the just judgments of God be poured out upon him without mercy.—The whole church lifted their hands against him. Adjourned to meet for preaching to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock, A. M. Benediction by Elder Hickey.

Sabbath morning, 10 o'clock, A. M.—Conference opened by singing. Prayer by Samuel Graham. Preaching by Elder L. D. Hickey, from these words of Amos: "Surely the Lord will do nothing but he revealeth his secrets to his servants, the prophets."—He was followed by S. Graham on the same subject. Benediction by S. Graham. Dismissed to assemble for preaching at 3 o'clock, P. M. Sabbath afternoon, Conference in session. Singing. Prayer by Geo. Brownson. Preaching by S. Graham, from these words of a priest: "If thou art the Son of God, come down from the cross, and we will believe on thee." He was followed by Elder Hickey and Elder Brownson on the same subject. On motion of L. D. Hickey the Conference adjourned sine die. Benediction by S. Graham. The branch of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Armada will long have cause to mourn over the follies of apostacy. May God's blessing ever be upon his own.

Geo. T. Powell, Sec. SAMUEL GRAHAM, Pres.

President J. J. Strang,—Truly Honored and Respected:—The Conference requests that the following minutes thereof be published through the medium of the Gospel Herald, at Voree. The last No. of the first Vol. of the Olive Branch being in type, makes it impossible to give it a place in it immediately, nor is it certain that the next Vol. will be printed at Kirtland. You will, therefore, confer a favor on the community by giving the following an insertion in your paper, that a character so depraved as that of the following named convict may not further succeed in his deception.—Yours in sincerity and truth, A. COWLES.

Minutes of a Conference of the Church of Christ, held in Kirtland on the third day of June, 1849, specially called to take into consideration certain charges preferred against Elder Wm. E. McLellin.

Conference convened at 4 o'clock, P. M., and organized by appointing Martin Harris to preside, and Isaac N. Aldrich Secretary. Whereupon the following charges were read:—

1st. For using abusive, wicked and uncalled for language in our public meetings.

2d. For abusive language to the members, and especially to the Elders of the church.

3d. For cheating and defrauding people under pretense of publishing the Ensign of Liberty.

4th. For quarreling and fighting, and justifying himself in it.

5th. For lying in the name of the Lord at sundry times.

6th. For refusing to counsel with the Elders of the church, and meeting them with contempt.

7th. For taking illegal votes to disfellowship members of the church.

8th. For refusing to do as instructed by the First Presidency of the church.

After a careful investigation, by evidence, the above charges were sustained without a dissenting vote. Wherefore it was resolved, that we withdraw all fellowship from the aforesaid Wm. E. McLellin, both as an Elder or member of the church of Christ.

A vote was also called for an expression of the whole congregation, whether the charges had been sustained in order and a christianlike spirit. The expression was in the affirmative, not a dissenting vote. Elders present, M. C. Isham, Alfred Bonney, Jacob Bump and Leonard Rich. MARTIN HARRIS, Pres.

Isaac N. Aldrich, Sec.

☞ We publish the foregoing more for the gratification of the persons concerned, than for any real interest in it. The cutting off of such a man from that church is a matter of no moment in any sense whatever, except as a brief and expected chapter in history. It may strike some as a little singular that the inferior members should cut off their head. For our part we cannot see the least impropriety in it. They made him head, and the power that made can unmake. If McLellin had been appointed of God to be their leader, it would take God alone to remove him from being leader. But he that man sets up, man can put down. So let it be. McLellinism was in fact dead a long time ago. And because it was so, we have quite neglected to finish the publication of the discussion between him and prophet Strang.

THE BLACK RAIN IN CARLOW.

In a report of the proceedings of the Royal Dublin Society, in a late number of one of the Dublin papers, we find the following observations by Professor Barker on the "black rain," which fell on the evening of the 14th of last month:—"Professor Barker presented to the notice of the society a bottle containing a portion of 'black rain,' which had been transmitted to him from Carlow, with a view to satisfy the scruples of many persons who appeared to doubt that rain of this description had fallen. He had received communications on the subject from persons residing in several of the districts in which the rain had descended, and he was in a position to state, not only that such rain had actually fallen, but to mention the space of country over which it had been diffused. The specimen which he presented to the society had been sent to him from Carlow, accompanied by a letter, in which the writer mentioned that at the time of its collection it was uniformly black, and resembled ordinary writing ink; but he (doctor Barker) found that, after allowing it to stand for a short period, the black coloring matter separated from the water with which it had been mixed, rendering the color of the rain much lighter than at first. The places in which this phenomenon occurred were Abeyleix, Carlow, Kilkenny, and Athy, from which it would appear that the black shower had extended over an area of more than four hundred square miles. As far as he had been able to ascertain, it occurred about six o'clock in the evening of the 14th instant, being preceded by such extreme darkness that it was impossible to read except by candle light.—After this darkness had existed for some time, a hail storm, attended with vivid lightning, but without thunder, occurred, and when this subsided, the black rain fell. It was mentioned by his Carlow correspondent, that upon examining a quantity of this rain just after it had fallen, he found it had an extremely fœtid smell, and a very disagreeable taste; that it left a stain upon some clothes on which it had fallen, and that cattle refused to drink it. At Abeyleix and Athy, where the shower descended at the same moment, the appearance of the rain was precisely similar to that which fell at Carlow; but it was unaccompanied by the lightning which had been observed at the latter place. Dr. Barker then stated that as yet he had not been enabled to make a complete chemical analysis of the rain."

J. E. Page suspended

DISCUSSION IN THE CHURCH.

The church is no place for vain babblings and endless disputations, which tend only to division, discord, schism and heresy.—Many a well disposed but faint hearted disciple has been driven from the bosom of the church by the controversies of the old members. Nevertheless, we do not mean, and would not intimate, that truth should not be investigated, nor that its foundations should not be examined. There is a place and a manner in which the church can approach all important questions. And he that refuses to make a regular investigation of truth in the proper place, in regular order, and in the presence of his opponents, shows his distrust either of the correctness of his positions or of his ability to defend them.

It has often been alledged that the friends of the Order of Enoch are unwilling to investigate any questions as to the correctness and propriety of that Order. No assertion can possibly be farther from the truth. The Order was established after a very careful examination of all points pertaining to it which presented themselves. It was adopted in a public meeting on the motion of J. E. Page, with the sanction of Pres. Strang, and by a unanimous vote. Afterwards Elder Page took ground against it. Pres. Strang gave him the opportunity of stating all his objections, with the reasons, and then answered them. On hearing, Pres. Strang carefully and patiently answered every point and reason, and Elder Page said it was enough; that he was satisfied, and that henceforth he should sustain the Order heartily. An investigation must be very thorough indeed when one convinces his opponent.

At the last April Conference resolutions were brought forward approving of the Order of Enoch, as established at Voree. The consideration of these resolutions involved every question pertaining to the Order, and made it a fit subject for examination and discussion. The Pres. stated distinctly that the whole subject was open for discussion, and invited debate. Not one man was found to raise his voice in that assembly against the Order. No; in the presence of the friends of the Order they dare not do it. All opposition is in the secret corner and in the by ways, or in the congregation of the apostates. And they say we dare not meet them.—Shame on such dastardly falsehood! In the absence of Pres. Strang is the time to sow discord. In his presence even the wolf runs to the wilderness before he howls. Put away vain babblers. Know that his cause is not good who dare not test it in the councils of the church and by the law of God. Have nothing to do with such.

OFFICIAL.

Elder J. E. Page, Pres. of the Twelve, having violated in a most flagrant manner the solemn pledges which he made to the last April Conference, pending the question of sustaining him with the faith, prayers and confidence of the church, and when, without those pledges he could not have been sustained probably by a single vote, he has been faithfully admonished, and quite failing to make satisfaction he is suspended of all jurisdiction and authority of his priesthood until the Conference to be held July 6th, 7th and 8th, and the further action of the church thereon. Done at Voree, July 4th, 1849.

JAMES J. STRANG, Pres. of the Church.

☞ A wise man will never rust out. As long as he can move and breathe he will be doing something for himself, his neighbors or for posterity. Almost to the last year of his life, Washington was at work. So were Franklin and Young, and Howard and Newton. The vigor of their lives never decayed. Nor rust marred their spirits. It is a foolish idea to suppose we must lie down and die because we are old. Who is old? Not the man of energy; not the day laborer in science, art or benevolence, but he only who suffers his energies to waste away, and the spring of life to become motionless; on whose hands the hours drag heavily, and to whom all things wear the garb of gloom. Is he old? should not be asked; but, is he active? can he breathe freely and move with agility? There are scores of gray headed men we should prefer, in any important enterprise, to those young gentlemen who fear and tremble at approaching shadows, and turn pale at a lion in their path.

Accomplishments and ornamental learning are sometimes acquired at the expense of usefulness. The tree which grows the tallest and most thickly clothed with leaves, is not the best bearer, but rather on the contrary.

He is a great simpleton who imagines that the chief power of wealth is to supply wants. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred it creates more wants than it supplies.

It is a mark of a depraved mind, to sneer at decrepid old age, to ridicule any one who is deformed in person or understanding. There are three inquiries, the right application of which constitutes the whole duty of man; from whence came I? What is my business here?—and—whither do I tend? If you fall into any great misfortune, disengage yourself as well as you can. Creep through those bushes which have the fewest briars.

THE FEMALE TEMPER.

We like to see a woman of spirit and life; for a dull, supine, prosy woman, is a poor affair indeed. And we have no particular objection to seeing "the sparks fly" occasionally, when something real stirring occurs. We like to see her joyful and lively; and if she has a little spice of waggery, we can put up with it very well; nay, we like it all the better. But a cross, sour temper, we have no good opinion of; for a woman who can never look pleasant, but is always fretting and scolding, will make an unhappy home for all within her house. And we had as lief undertake to live in a barrel of vinegar in a thunder storm, as to live in the house with such a woman. Solomon was right when he said,—'It is better to live in the corner of a house top, than to dwell in a wide house with a brawling woman.' Let a woman wear sunshine on her countenance, and it will drive the dark clouds from her husband's face, and joy will thrill through the hearts of her children. Let a woman's words be soothing and kind, and every thing is happy around her. Her influence will be powerful. Others will catch her sweet temper, and all will strive to see who can be most like her. Sweetness of temper in a woman, is more valuable than gold, and more to be prized than beauty. But may Heaven keep us from an untamed shrew, whose looks are wormwood, and whose words are gall! We had rather take Daniel's place with the lions, than to think of living within gun-shot of such a termagant: If women knew their power, and wished to exert it, they would always show sweetness of temper, for then they are irresistable.—Boston Olive Branch.

J. E. Page suspended

ed with vivid lightning, but without thunder, occurred, and when this subsided, the black rain fell. It was mentioned by his Carlow correspondent, that upon examining a quantity of this rain just after it had fallen, he found it had an extremely fetid smell, and a very disagreeable taste; that it left a stain upon some clothes on which it had fallen, and that cattle refused to drink it. At Abeyleix and Athy, where the shower descended at the same moment, the appearance of the rain was precisely similar to that which fell at Carlow; but it was unaccompanied by the lightning which had been observed at the latter place. Dr. Barker then stated that as yet he had not been enabled to make a complete chemical analysis of the rain."

DISCUSSION IN THE CHURCH.

The church is no place for vain babblings and endless disputations, which tend only to division, discord, schism and heresy.—Many a well disposed but faint hearted disciple has been driven from the bosom of the church by the controversies of the old members. Nevertheless, we do not mean, and would not intimate, that truth should not be investigated, nor that its foundations should not be examined. There is a place and a manner in which the church can approach all important questions. And he that refuses to make a regular investigation of truth in the proper place, in regular order, and in the presence of his opponents, shows his distrust either of the correctness of his positions or of his ability to defend them.

It has often been alledged that the friends of the Order of Enoch are unwilling to investigate any questions as to the correctness and propriety of that Order. No assertion can possibly be farther from the truth. The Order was established after a very careful examination of all points pertaining to it which presented themselves. It was adopted in a public meeting on the motion of J. E. Page, with the sanction of Pres. Strang, and by a unanimous vote. Afterwards Elder Page took ground against it. Pres. Strang gave him the opportunity of stating all his objections, with the reasons, and then answered them. On hearing, Pres. Strang carefully and patiently answered every point and reason, and Elder Page said it was enough; that he was satisfied, and that henceforth he should sustain the Order heartily. An investigation must be very thorough indeed when one convinces his opponent.

At the last April Conference resolutions were brought forward approving of the Order of Enoch, as established at Voree. The consideration of these resolutions involved every question pertaining to the Order, and made it a fit subject for examination and discussion. The Pres. stated distinctly that the whole subject was open for discussion, and invited debate. Not one man was found to raise his voice in that assembly against the Order. No; in the presence of the friends of the Order they dare not do it. All opposition is in the secret corner and in the by ways, or in the congregation of the apostates. And they say we dare not meet them.—Shame on such dastardly falsehood! In the absence of Pres. Strang is the time to sow discord. In his presence even the wolf runs to the wilderness before he howls. Put away vain babblers. Know that his cause is not good who dare not test it in the councils of the church and by the law of God. Have nothing to do with such.

OFFICIAL.

Elder J. E. Page, Pres. of the Twelve, having violated in a most flagrant manner the solemn pledges which he made to the last April Conference, pending the question of sustaining him with the faith, prayers and confidence of the church, and when, without those pledges he could not have been sustained probably by a single vote, and has been faithfully admonished, and quite failing to make satisfaction he is suspended of all jurisdiction and authority of his priesthood until the Conference to be held July 6th, 7th and 8th, and the further action of the church thereon. Done at Voree, July 4th, 1849. JAMES J. STRANG, Pres. of the Church.

☞ A wise man will never rust out. As long as he can move and breathe he will be doing something for himself, his neighbors or for posterity. Almost to the last year of his life, Washington was at work. So were Franklin and Young, and Howard and Newton. The vigor of their lives never decayed. Nor rust marred their spirits. It is a foolish idea to suppose we must lie down and die because we are old. Who is old? Not the man of energy; not the day laborer in science, art or benevolence, but he only who suffers his energies to waste away, and the spring of life to become motionless; on whose hands the hours drag heavily, and to whom all things wear the garb of gloom. Is he old? should not be asked; but, is he active? can he breathe freely and move with agility? There are scores of gray headed men we should prefer, in any important enterprise, to those young gentlemen who fear and tremble at approaching shadows, and turn pale at a lion in their path.

Accomplishments and ornamental learning are sometimes acquired at the expense of usefulness. The tree which grows the tallest and most thickly clothed with leaves, is not the best bearer, but rather on the contrary.

He is a great simpleton who imagines that the chief power of wealth is to supply wants. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred it creates more wants than it supplies.

It is a mark of a depraved mind, to sneer at decrepid old age, to ridicule any one who is deformed in person or understanding. There are three inquiries, the right application of which constitutes the whole duty of man; from whence came I? What is my business here?—and—whither do I tend? If you fall into any great misfortune, disengage yourself as well as you can. Creep through those bushes which have the fewest briars.

THE FEMALE TEMPER.

We like to see a woman of spirit and life; for a dull, supine, prosy woman, is a poor affair indeed. And we have no particular objection to seeing "the sparks fly" occasionally, when something real stirring occurs. We like to see her joyful and lively; and if she has a little spice of waggery, we can put up with it very well; nay, we like it all the better. But a cross, sour temper, we have no good opinion of; for a woman who can never look pleasant, but is always fretting and scolding, will make an unhappy home for all within her house. And we had as lief undertake to live in a barrel of vinegar in a thunder storm, as to live in the house with such a woman. Solomon was right when he said,—'It is better to live in the corner of a house top, than to dwell in a wide house with a brawling woman.' Let a woman wear sunshine on her countenance, and it will drive the dark clouds from her husband's face, and joy will thrill through the hearts of her children. Let a woman's words be soothing and kind, and every thing is happy around her. Her influence will be powerful. Others will catch her sweet temper, and all will strive to see who can be most like her. Sweetness of temper in a woman, is more valuable than gold, and more to be prized than beauty. But may Heaven keep us from an untamed shrew, whose looks are wormwood, and whose words are gall! We had rather take Daniel's place with the lions, than to think of living within gun-shot of such a termagant. If women knew their power, and wished to exert it, they would always show sweetness of temper, for then they are irresistable.—Boston Olive Branch.

THE WESTBROOK PHENOMENON.

A gentleman of this town, who has visited the scene of the late sinking of land at Westbrook, gives us the following particulars in relation to it. The sinking took place between four and five o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, the 4th inst. Our informant visited it on the 9th, when it was estimated there were some four thousand persons on the spot, from the region round about. The short account we have published stated that some eight acres had sunk down and given place to a lake of water, and that the channel of the Stroundwater river had been changed in consequence. The actual quantity of land lost is estimated by good judges to be some forty acres, and the river mentioned is simply a little trout brook, across which our friend jumped without difficulty in several places.

There are missing some twenty acres of woodland, and about the same quantity of pasture land. Over this whole extent the natural soil has entirely disappeared, and in its place is a firm plastic blue clay. The woodland was covered with a heavy growth of timber, the whole of which has sunk below its original level some thirty feet, leaving perpendicular walls on three sides, and gradually sloping on the other side. The trees on a portion of the land have disappeared entirely, and on another portion they are thrown about in great disorder—some sunk half or two-thirds their length in the earth, yet remaining upright, some partly tipped over, some prostrate, and others reversed—the tops being under the surface, and the roots standing up in the air.

One large and valuable elm tree, which had been sold by contract for timber, has entirely disappeared, not a vestige of it remaining. The clay is firm and dry on some parts, but in others so moist that it yields readily to the foot, and a man standing upon it will, by the weight of his body, gradually sink into it. A ten foot pole has been run down its whole length into this clay, and it appears to be of the same consistence the whole depth. When jumped upon it has a tremulous or shaking motion, as if it rested on water or a semi-fluid mass below. The brook, or "Stroudwater River," before mentioned, formerly passed over the earth which has thus sunk, but now passes by the side which slopes into the cavity. This shows that the borders of the cavity were somewhat elevated by the sinking of the mass, and thus a new direction was given to the stream. It was altogether a remarkable circumstance, and we trust that it will be investigated by scientific men.—Worcester (Mass.) Spy, June 14.

WOMEN.

A truly superior woman is she who knows enough never to ask a ridiculous or mistimed question, and who never obstinately opposes sensible men; such a woman knows how to keep silent, especially with fools, whom she might rally, and with the ignorant whom she might humiliate. She is indulgent to absurdities, because she does not care to show her learning, and is attentive to what is good, because she seeks instruction. Her great desire is to understand, and not to teach, her great art (since it is acknowledged that there is art in interchange of words) is, not to bring two proud antagonists together, eager to display their skill and to amuse the company, each maintaining a proposition whose solution no one cares to arrive at, but to throw light on all useful discussion, by encouraging those to take part in it who have something to say worth hearing.

TRUTH.

Truth is the foundation of virtue. An habitual regard for it is absolutely necessary. He who walks by the light of it has the advantage of the mid-day sun; he who would spurn it goes forth amid clouds and darkness. There is no way in which a man strengthens his own judgment, and acquires respect in society so surely, as by a scrupulous regard to truth. The course of such an individual is right and straight on. He is no changling, saying one thing to-day and another to-morrow. Truth to him is like a mountain landmark to the pilot; he fixes his eye upon a point that does not move, and he enters the harbor in safety. On the contrary, one who despises truth and loves falsehood is like a pilot who takes a piece of drift-wood for his landmark, which changes with every changing wave. On this he fixes his attention, and, being insensibly led from his course, strikes upon some hidden reef, and sinks to rise no more. Thus truth brings success; falsehood results in ruin and contempt.—Dr. Channing.

EVEN TEMPER.

Uniform good temper is of more value than many more brilliant endowments, and it is among the first recommendations to a woman in every domestic relation, and especially in that tie which, though the nearest on earth, is not one of kindred. It is assuredly the most effectual cement of affection. It is not, indeed, so much a means of attracting love, as it is of securing it.

PUT IN BAY ISLAND.—The Detroit Free Press has the following: "This Island is located in Lake Erie, nearly opposite Sandusky. A friend of ours who happened not long since to land there, gives us some information that will be interesting to our readers. The island has now got into new hands. It contains some 1800 acres, on a strata of lime stone. There are now five farmers upon it, who are enterprising and make rapid improvements. Last season 4000 bushels of wheat was raised there, besides large quantities of vegetables, which were sold to boats and vessels that went into the bay, which is a very excellent one to shield themselves from the storms. A wharf has been built, which always has large quantities of wood upon it. Over 3000 cords were sold last season to steamers, at $1,50 to $1,75 per cord. There is an abundance of hickory timber on the island. Near 800 cords have been taken in as ballast this season by vessels going to the upper lakes, and sold above us at a profit. This seems like 'taking coal to Newcastle,'—but such is the fact. Frost is never known there, and one of the farmers is now engaged in raising peaches, to supply the lake country. One thousand trees are growing finely, and will be increased to 3000 this fall. Pears seem to do remarkably well. The stone quarry keeps several at work. A company of gentlemen from Thomaston, Me. are now erecting lime kilns. The stone of a superior quality abounds. They say they can furnish vessels another season, on the wharf, at 45 cents a barrel, which will make good ballast to the upper lakes. A ship yard will be erected the coming winter, and vessels built. Excellent timber can be had."

☞ PRES. STRANG, about midnight, July 4th, started for Beaver Island on his sixth trip, and third for this season. His labors are so onerous that he was obliged to continue his toils till the hour, and then travel twenty-seven miles to take the morning boat. Indeed, for some months he has not slept in a bed two nights in a week. Yet, except a slight attack of bronchitis, his health is excellent.

NOTICE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at Franklin, Oakland Co., Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th of August, 1849. By order of the Twelve,

SAMUEL GRAHAM.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD LAST WEEK.

John A. Williams,	$1,00 to	Vol. IV	No. 38
Zenas H. Gurley,	2,00 to	Vol. V	No. 13
Lydia Bennett,	2,00 "	"	12
Nancy Tibbitts,	1,00 to	Vol. IV	No. 39
J. Jenks,	2,00 "	"	52

THE WESTBROOK PHENOMENON.

A gentleman of this town, who has visited the scene of the late sinking of land at Westbrook, gives us the following particulars in relation to it. The sinking took place between four and five o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, the 4th inst. Our informant visited it on the 9th, when it was estimated there were some four thousand persons on the spot, from the region round about. The short account we have published stated that some eight acres had sunk down and given place to a lake of water, and that the channel of the Stroudwater river had been changed in consequence. The actual quantity of land lost is estimated by good judges to be some forty acres, and the river mentioned is simply a little trout brook, across which our friend jumped without difficulty in several places.

There are missing some twenty acres of woodland, and about the same quantity of pasture land. Over this whole extent the natural soil has entirely disappeared, and in its place is a firm plastic blue clay. The woodland was covered with a heavy growth of timber, the whole of which has sunk below its original level some thirty feet, leaving perpendicular walls on three sides, and gradually sloping on the other side. The trees on a portion of the land have disappeared entirely, and on another portion they are thrown about in great disorder—some sunk half or two-thirds their length in the earth, yet remaining upright, some partly tipped over, some prostrate, and others reversed—the tops being under the surface, and the roots standing up in the air.

One large and valuable elm tree, which had been sold by contract for timber, has entirely disappeared, not a vestige of it remaining. The clay is firm and dry on some parts, but in others so moist that it yields readily to the foot, and a man standing upon it will, by the weight of his body, gradually sink into it. A ten foot pole has been run down its whole length into this clay, and it appears to be of the same consistence the whole depth. When jumped upon it has a tremulous or shaking motion, as if it rested on water or a semi-fluid mass below. The brook, or "Stroudwater River," before mentioned, formerly passed over the earth which has thus sunk, but now passes by the side which slopes into the cavity. This shows that the borders of the cavity were somewhat elevated by the sinking of the mass, and thus a new direction was given to the stream. It was altogether a remarkable circumstance, and we trust that it will be investigated by scientific men.—Worcester (Mass.) Spy, June 14.

WOMEN.

A truly superior woman is she who knows enough never to ask a ridiculous or mistimed question, and who never obstinately opposes sensible men; such a woman knows how to keep silent, especially with fools, whom she might rally, and with the ignorant whom she might humiliate. She is indulgent to absurdities, because she does not care to show her learning, and is attentive to what is good, because she seeks instruction. Her great desire is to understand, and not to teach, her great art (since it is acknowledged that there is art in interchange of words) is, not to bring two proud antagonists together, eager to display their skill and to amuse the company, each maintaining a proposition whose solution no one cares to arrive at, but to throw light on all useful discussion, by encouraging those to take part in it who have something to say worth hearing.

TRUTH.

Truth is the foundation of virtue. An habitual regard for it is absolutely necessary. He who walks by the light of it has the advantage of the mid-day sun; he who would spurn it goes forth amid clouds and darkness. There is no way in which a man strengthens his own judgment, and acquires respect in society so surely, as by a scrupulous regard to truth. The course of such an individual is right and straight on. He is no changling, saying one thing to-day and another to-morrow. Truth to him is like a mountain landmark to the pilot; he fixes his eye upon a point that does not move, and he enters the harbor in safety. On the contrary, one who despises truth and loves falsehood is like a pilot who takes a piece of drift-wood for his landmark, which changes with every changing wave. On this he fixes his attention, and, being insensibly led from his course, strikes upon some hidden reef, and sinks to rise no more. Thus truth brings success; falsehood results in ruin and contempt.—Dr. Channing.

EVEN TEMPER.

Uniform good temper is of more value than many more brilliant endowments, and it is among the first recommendations to a woman in every domestic relation, and especially in that tie which, though the nearest on earth, is not one of kindred. It is assuredly the most effectual cement of affection. It is not, indeed, so much a means of attracting love, as it is of securing it.

PUT IN BAY ISLAND.—The Detroit Free Press has the following: "This Island is located in Lake Erie, nearly opposite Sandusky. A friend of ours who happened not long since to land there, gives us some information that will be interesting to our readers. The island has now got into new hands. It contains some 1800 acres, on a strata of lime stone. There are now five farmers upon it, who are enterprising and make rapid improvements. Last season 4000 bushels of wheat was raised there, besides large quantities of vegetables, which were sold to boats and vessels that went into the bay, which is a very excellent one to shield themselves from the storms. A wharf has been built, which always has large quantities of wood upon it, . Over 3000 cords were sold last season to steamers, at $1,50 to $1,75 per cord. There is an abundance of hickory timber on the island. Near 800 cords have been taken in as ballast this season by vessels going to the upper lakes, and sold above us at a profit. This seems like 'taking coal to Newcastle,'—but such is the fact. Frost is never known there, and one of the farmers is now engaged in raising peaches, to supply the lake country. One thousand trees are growing finely, and will be increased to 3000 this fall. Pears seem to do remarkably well. The stone quarry keeps several at work. A company of gentlemen from Thomaston, Me., are now erecting lime kilns. The stone of a superior quality abounds. They say they can furnish vessels another season, on the wharf, at 45 cents a barrel, which will make good ballast to the upper lakes. A ship yard will be erected the coming winter and vessels built. Excellent timber can be had."

☞ PRES. STRANG, about midnight, July 4th, started for Beaver Island on his sixth trip, and third for this season. His labors are so onerous that he was obliged to continue his toils till that hour, and then travel twenty-seven miles to take the morning boat. Indeed, for some months he has not slept in a bed two nights in a week. Yet, except a slight attack of bronchitis, his health is excellent.

NOTICE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at Franklin, Oakland Co., Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th of August, 1849. By order of the Twelve,

SAMUEL GRAHAM.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD LAST WEEK.

John A. Williams,	$1,00 to	Vol. IV	No. 38
Zenas H. Gurley,	2,00 to	Vol. V	No. 12
Lydia Bennett,	2,00 "	"	12
Nancy Tibbitts,	1,00 to	Vol. IV	No. 39
J. Jenks,	2,00 "	"	52

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 17.] VOREE, WIS., THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1849. [WHOLE No. 133.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

CAN UNIVERSAL HAPPINESS BE INTRODUCED BY HUMAN LEGISLATION?

A brief glance at the history of the world will convince any one of sound mind that it cannot. It will show that misery is increasing instead of happiness. And that happiness has never been enjoyed except by those who were governed by the authority of God.—We find whenever the children of Israel yielded implicit obedience to the laws of God, they enjoyed happiness and prosperity, such as were not known to the surrounding nations. But we nowhere find that implicit obedience to human laws ever produced the like results. The laws of man, like himself, are imperfect and depraved; but the laws of God, like their author, are "holy, just and good." That the reader may have an idea of the utter hopelessness of introducing universal happiness by human legislation, we will give a synopical history of Gentile domination, beginning with the

Babylonian Dynasty.—Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, was in possession of universal dominion. Dan. ii. 37, 38. In the pride of his heart, as he walks in his palace, he exclaims, "Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honor of my majesty?" The same hour he is driven to dwell seven years with the beasts. This lesson brought this haughty monarch to acknowledge the power of God, and his goodness toward him, and is restored to his kingdom. From Dan. v. 17, 31, we learn the fate of that dynasty, and the reason of its overthrow. It progressed in wealth, pride and majesty until God overturned it, and gave the diadem to

The Medo-Persian Dynasty.—Its rulers were inferior to those of Babylon, and its laws more oppressive, and its acts exceedingly cruel and blood-thirsty. Nations were conquered, despoiled and reduced to servitude. Its cup is soon full, the nation is overturned, and the diadem passes over to the

Grecian Dynasty.—Under the domination of the third Gentile family, a new era in human legislation begins to dawn—one marked by the spread of liberal principles. Literature and science are carried to a high degree of perfection. Fresh hopes spring up in all hearts, as they fondly anticipate the speedy introduction of the golden age. The laws enacted by this dynasty were unequal, being at times oppressive. The superior polish of the Grecian made every human defect the more glaring, and taught mankind one important lesson, that the world has no self-renovating power. Mark the character of those states: in youth, crafty and energetic; in manhood, rigorous and extremely selfish; in old age, superstitious, voluptuous, fickle-minded, and grossly deficient in acts of philanthropy. Without God, its downward course speedily ended in the transfer of the diadem to the Roman Dynasty.—The long history of the fourth monarchy is one of repeated experiment in legislation. Every form of government is, in turn, adopted. No civil body ever put forth more untiring efforts to establish a universal brotherhood. The nations which they conquered, merely became tributary. They used all methods to secure the affections of their prostrate enemies. They extended their citizenship to all countries. To be able to say, "I am a Roman citizen," was esteemed by all an exalted privilege. Even an apostle thought it not improper, on one occasion, to claim its privileges. In the days of Augustus and Trajan, the Roman empire was in the zenith of human grandeur. Did that government, however, advance and purify the character of our race? After a struggle of eleven centuries, what are its laws? More oppressive than at first—its subjects corrupted, and shorn of wealth and happiness.

At the age of two thousand years of toil and change, that dynasty arrives at—"midnight!" Although the gospel has elevated those obedient to its requisitions, yet unaided human legislation has for 1,000 years been moving in the downward scale of progression. We are aware that such statements will be considered by some untrue. The last half century has excited in the minds of many the hope of a glorious triumph of enlightened, liberal principles. That such hopes are delusive will appear from the following extract, from Macauley's History of England:—

"All around us the world is convulsed by the agency of nations; governments which seemed lately like to stand for ages, have been on a sudden shaken and overthrown. The proudest capitals of western Europe have streamed with civil blood. All evil passions, the thirst of gain, thirst of vengeance, the antipathy of class to class, of race to race, have broken loose from the control of divine and human laws. Fear and anxiety have clouded the face and depressed the hearts of millions. Trade has been suspended, and industry paralyzed; the rich have become poor, and the poor poorer. Doctrines hostile to all sciences, to all arts, to all industry; doctrines which, if carried into effect, would, in thirty years, undo all that thirty centuries have done for mankind—and would make the fairest provinces of France or Germany as savage as Guiana or Patagonia, have been avowed from the tribune, and defended by the sword. Europe has been threatened with subjugation by barbarians compared with whom, the barbarians who marched under Attilla or Alboin, were enlightened and humane. The truest friends of the people have, with deep sorrow, owned that interests more precious than any political privileges, were in jeopardy, and that it might be necessary to sacrifice even liberty, to save civilization."

The doctrine of the progressive improvement of mankind, through the agency of human legislation, is contrary to the plain teachings of the word of God. The Bible contains a condensed history of all the leading civil dominions, to the establishment of the everlasting kingdom of God. That history was given in symbols to Daniel and John. Their names, order and relative importance are clearly given. That order fixes the character of human progression.

THE IMAGE, Dan. ii. 31, 45.—An inspired outline of the history of Gentile domination is brought to view in the metal-clay image. It is the "Almanac of Prophecy." The nations have a human embodiment.

1. The head of gold—the most honorable member of the body—sym-

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 17.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1849. [WHOLE No. 133.

GOSPEL HERALD.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

CAN UNIVERSAL HAPPINESS BE INTRODUCED BY HUMAN LEGISLATION?

A brief glance at the history of the world will convince any one of sound mind that it cannot. It will show that misery is increasing instead of happiness. And that happiness has never been enjoyed except by those who were governed by the authority of God.—We find whenever the children of Israel yielded implicit obedience to the laws of God, they enjoyed happiness and prosperity, such as were not known to the surrounding nations. But we nowhere find that implicit obedience to human laws ever produced the like results. The laws of man, like himself, are imperfect and depraved; but the laws of God, like their author, are "holy, just and good." That the reader may have an idea of the utter hopelessness of introducing universal happiness by human legislation, we will give a synopical history of Gentile domination, beginning with the

Babylonian Dynasty.—Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, was in possession of universal dominion. Dan. ii. 37, 38. In the pride of his heart, as he walks in his palace, he exclaims, "Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honor of my majesty?" The same hour he is driven to dwell seven years with the beasts. This lesson brought this haughty monarch to acknowledge the power of God, and his goodness toward him, and is restored to his kingdom. From Dan. v. 17, 31, we learn the fate of that dynasty, and the reason of its overthrow. It progressed in wealth, pride and majesty until God overturned it, and gave the diadem to

The Medo-Persian Dynasty.—Its rulers were inferior to those of Babylon, and its laws more oppressive, and its acts exceedingly cruel and blood-thirsty. Nations were conquered, despoiled and reduced to servitude. Its cup is soon full, the nation is overturned, and the diadem passes over to the

Grecian Dynasty.—Under the domination of the third Gentile family, a new era in human legislation begins to dawn—one marked by the spread of liberal principles. Literature and science are carried to a high degree of perfection. Fresh hopes spring up in all hearts, as they fondly anticipate the speedy introduction of the golden age. The laws enacted by this dynasty were unequal, being at times oppressive. The superior polish of the Grecian made every human defect the more glaring, and taught mankind one important lesson, that the world has no self-renovating power. Mark the character of those states: in youth, crafty and energetic; in manhood, rigorous and extremely selfish; in old age, superstitious, voluptuous, fickle-minded, and grossly deficient in acts of philanthropy. Without God, its downward course speedily ended in the transfer of the diadem to the Roman Dynasty.—The long history of the fourth monarchy is one of repeated experiment in legislation. Every form of government is, in turn, adopted. No civil body ever put forth more untiring efforts to establish a universal brotherhood. The nations which they conquered, merely became tributary. They used all methods to secure the affections of their prostrate enemies. They extended their citizenship to all countries. To be able to say, "I am a Roman citizen," was esteemed by all an exalted privilege. Even an apostle thought it not improper, on one occasion, to claim its privileges. In the days of Augustus and Trajan, the Roman empire was in the zenith of human grandeur. Did that government, however, advance and purify the character of our race? After a struggle of eleven centuries, what are its laws? More oppressive than at first—its subjects corrupted, and shorn of wealth and happiness.

At the age of two thousand years of toil and change, that dynasty arrives at—"midnight." Although the gospel has elevated those obedient to its requisitions, yet unaided human legislation has for 1,000 years been moving in the downward scale of progression. We are aware that such statements will be considered by some untrue. The last half century has excited in the minds of many the hope of a glorious triumph of enlightened, liberal principles. That such hopes are delusive will appear from the following extract, from Macauley's History of England:—

"All around us the world is convulsed by the agency of nations. governments which seemed lately like to stand for ages, have been on a sudden shaken and overthrown. The proudest capitals of western Europe have streamed with civil blood. All evil passions, the thirst of gain, thirst of vengeance, the antipathy of class to class, of race to race, have broken loose from the control of divine and human laws. Fear and anxiety have clouded the face and depressed the hearts of millions. Trade has been suspended, and industry paralyzed; the rich have become poor, and the poor poorer. Doctrines hostile to all sciences, to all arts, to all industry; doctrines which, if carried into effect, would, in thirty years, undo all that thirty centuries have done for mankind—and would make the fairest provinces of France or Germany as savage as Guiana or Patagonia, have been avowed from the tribune, and defended by the sword. Europe has been threatened with subjugation by barbarians compared with whom, the barbarians who marched under Attilla or Alboin, were enlightened and humane. The truest friends of the people have, with deep sorrow, owned that interests more precious than any political privileges, were in jeopardy, and that it might be necessary to sacrifice even liberty, to save civilization."

The doctrine of the progressive improvement of mankind, through the agency of human legislation, is contrary to the plain teachings of the word of God. The Bible contains a condensed history of all the leading civil dominions, to the establishment of the everlasting kingdom of God. That history was given in symbols to Daniel and John. Their names, order and relative importance are clearly given. That order fixes the character of human progression.

THE IMAGE, Dan. ii. 31, 45.—An inspired outline of the history of Gentile domination is brought to view in the metal-clay image. It is the "Almanac of Prophecy." The nations have a human embodiment.

1. The head of gold—the most honorable member of the body—sym:

bolizes the Babylonian rulers, the first in order, honor and wealth.

2. The breasts and arms of silver denotes the second body of rulers, inferior to the former, in wealth and legislative ability.

3. The belly and sides of brass represent a third dynasty, inferior to the second, as shown from the selection of a metal of less value for its symbol.

4. The legs of iron denote strength—intimating the character of the undivided fourth monarchy.

5. The iron and clay of the feet and toes symbolize a mixed race of rulers—divided and weak.

The order of national legislative progression is gold—silver—brass—iron—clay:—from gold to clay. National progression is not therefore along the ascending scale of human perfectibility, but on the descending scale of universal corruption. The same great truth is taught by the symbols of the 7th of Daniel. The nations of the earth, being incapable of self-renovation, are broken in pieces and consumed by the kingdom of God. Dan. ii. 44. "And the saints of the most high shall take the kingdom and possess it forever, even forever and ever." May God hasten it in his time.—Amen.

For the Gospel Herald.

Georgetown, Dark Co., Ohio, June 19th, 1849.

Dear Frank:—I write at this time to let you know that I am still in this region. Last Sunday I preached twice in Lewisburg to an immense concourse of people, who listened with interest while I spoke of the signs of the times, and of the setting up of the kingdom of the last days, and of the order of the church in this, the beginning of the dispensation of the fulness of times. I baptized six persons in the presence of many witnesses, and many more were partially, yes, I may say fully, convinced, and almost persuaded to be Mormons. However there are many in this region who are beginning to manifest their faith in the work called Mormonism.—You know that in the days of Moses, God gave a law to the Israelites regulating their diet. Well, all those who believed the law, showed their faith by their works. That is, they kept the law.—Such things as the law said were good for them they eat, and such as the law said were not good they did not eat. And just so and in like manner with regard to their drink. Such drinks as were lawful they used, and such as were not lawful they abstained from.—And some of that people, even after their being driven out of the land of their inheritance, observed the law regulating their food and drink. Remember Daniel and his three brethren of the children of the captives of Judah, in Babylon, who refused to defile themselves with the king's meat and his wine, but chose to diet themselves according to the law of their God. See Daniel first chapt.

Well, you know the Lord, in this dispensation, has given his saints a law regulating their diet and drink. And many of the people in this region of country are becoming somewhat acquainted with the law on that important subject, and are beginning to live by it, and saying, if we can live in obedience to the law of eating and drinking we will then try to live by the rest of the law of the gospel. And in honor of the saints in this region, I will say, while on this subject, that, although I found none of them trying to live by this law when I came among them, many of them are now living by it, and endeavoring to live in obedience to all the commandments of the Lord. The effect produced is, they begin to have faith to have their sick healed, and also they begin to talk about paying their tithing, according to the law of tithing, and beginning to talk about making a free will offering for the Tower on the Hill of Promise. And also they are beginning to talk considerable about trying to sell out here and gather with the saints to the places where the Lord has promised the faithful peace and plenty.

Here I want to say a word in honor of the course Elder Isaac Pierce, of Voree, who moved from this place, has taken since he arrived there. It is this: he has written many good letters to his relatives and friends in this region, and they have had a good influence, yea, a powerful influence in favor of the truth of the everlasting gospel, which God has revealed to his servants by the ministry of angels and the revelations of Jesus Christ. If all the saints at the places of gathering would spend a little of their time in writing to their friends at a distance, and bearing their testimony to them and the world in writing, they would do well, and the Lord would bless them in so doing. Brethren, consider what I say, and act wisely in this thing. You have no idea how much a letter every now and then helps the Elders in the work of their ministry among your friends. They are like a shower of rain on the thirsty land, both to the Elders and to your friends. And you who have friends where the Elders are not preaching, are the more in need of your letters. Bear your testimony to your friends in writing, and such testimony as you will be willing to meet in the day of judgment, and leave the event with God. In this way the people, many of them, may be made acquainted with some of the principles of salvation, and will be prepared to hear preaching when they get an opportunity. In this way, the way is, and may be, opened before the Elders, and the gospel introduced into neighborhoods where it otherwise might not come.

I have visited some of the Brighamites of late, and I find them invariably transgressing the law of God in eating and drinking.—And for one I want to say to the saints of God, if you wish to become wise unto salvation and have the destroyer pass by you as he did the children of Israel in Egypt at the time he slew all the first born in Egypt among the Egyptians, keep the law of God in your diet and also in your drink, and remember to keep all the commandments, and the promise is yours. Dear brethren and sisters, I hope you will not be offended with me for endeavoring to stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance of the commandments and the law of God.

Lewisburg, O., Saturday, June 23d.—Since writing the above I preached twice at Ithaca, and once at Lewisburg, and I have an appointment at 10 A. M. to-morrow at Lewisburg, and at 4 P. M. at Georgetown, and Monday morning we calculate (nothing in providence forbidding) to start from Ithaca for Troy, where we shall take canal for Toledo. It is getting quite sickly in this part of the State of Ohio, such as bilious fevers, ague and fever, bilious cholic, cholera morbus and cholera. We have had two severe cases of cholera in this neighborhood the present week, but both patients lived, and are now about again. The weather has been very hot for the last week or ten days, and sickness has increased. But to-day we are having some thunder showers, and we shall have a pure atmosphere again, and the face of nature will be refreshed, and the spirits and bodies of man as well as beast will also be refreshed and invigorated. I have found some brethren since I commenced this mission, as well as in former missions, who have labored very hard to purchase land, both in town and country, for the sake of having the privilege of living in a home of their own in the midst of Babylon, and where they could make themselves just like the Babylonians, or the Gentiles; and, like the Gentiles, offer incense to Baal, and pour out and drink libations to the Devil. In making themselves like the Gentiles in their manner of living and worship, as a simple matter of course they, like the Gentiles, are lulled to sleep in the cradle of carnal security.

And if a servant of God, peradventure, comes along and jogs them a little with the word of the Lord, they are almost ready to be offended, for fear of being aroused to a sense of their dangerous sit-holizes the Babylonian rulers, the first in order, honor and wealth.

2. The breasts and arms of silver denotes the second body of rulers, inferior to the former, in wealth and legislative ability.

3. The belly and sides of brass represent a third dynasty, inferior to the second, as shown from the selection of a metal of less value for its symbol.

4. The legs of iron denote strength—intimating the character of the undivided fourth monarchy.

5. The iron and clay of the feet and toes symbolize a mixed race of rulers—divided and weak.

The order of national legislative progression is gold—silver—brass—iron—clay:—from gold to clay. National progression is not therefore along the ascending scale of human perfectibility, but on the descending scale of universal corruption. The same great truth is taught by the symbols of the 7th of Daniel. The nations of the earth, being incapable of self-renovation, are broken in pieces and consumed by the kingdom of God. Dan. ii. 44. "And the saints of the most high shall take the kingdom and possess it forever, even forever and ever." May God hasten it in his time.—Amen.

For the Gospel Herald.

Georgetown, Dark Co., Ohio, June 19th, 1849.

Dear Frank:—I write at this time to let you know that I am still in this region. Last Sunday I preached twice in Lewisburg to an immense concourse of people, who listened with interest while I spoke of the signs of the times, and of the setting up of the kingdom of the last days, and of the order of the church in this, the beginning of the dispensation of the fulness of times. I baptized six persons in the presence of many witnesses, and many more were partially, yes, I may say fully, convinced, and almost persuaded to be Mormons. However there are many in this region who are beginning to manifest their faith in the work called Mormonism.—You know that in the days of Moses, God gave a law to the Israelites regulating their diet. Well, all those who believed the law, showed their faith by their works. That is, they kept the law.—Such things as the law said were good for them they eat, and such as the law said were not good they did not eat. And just so and in like manner with regard to their drink. Such drinks as were lawful they used, and such as were not lawful they abstained from.—And some of that people, even after their being driven out of the land of their inheritance, observed the law regulating their food and drink. Remember Daniel and his three brethren of the children of the captives of Judah, in Babylon, who refused to defile themselves with the king's meat and his wine, but chose to diet themselves according to the law of their God. See Daniel first chapt.

Well, you know the Lord, in this dispensation, has given his saints a law regulating their diet and drink. And many of the people in this region of country are becoming somewhat acquainted with the law on that important subject, and are beginning to live by it, and saying, if we can live in obedience to the law of eating and drinking we will then try to live by the rest of the law of the gospel. And in honor of the saints in this region, I will say, while on this subject, that, although I found none of them trying to live by this law when I came among them, many of them are now living by it, and endeavoring to live in obedience to all the commandments of the Lord. The effect produced is, they begin to have faith to have their sick healed, and also they begin to talk about paying their tithing, according to the law of tithing, and beginning to talk about making a free will offering for the Tower on the Hill of Promise. And also they are beginning to talk considerable about trying to sell out here and gather with the saints to the places where the Lord has promised the faithful peace and plenty.

Here I want to say a word in honor of the course Elder Isaac Pierce, of Voree, who moved from this place, has taken since he arrived there. It is this: he has written many good letters to his relatives and friends in this region, and they have had a good influence, yea, a powerful influence in favor of the truth of the everlasting gospel, which God has revealed to his servants by the ministry of angels and the revelations of Jesus Christ. If all the saints at the places of gathering would spend a little of their time in writing to their friends at a distance, and bearing their testimony to them and the world in writing, they would do well, and the Lord would bless them in so doing. Brethren, consider what I say, and act wisely in this thing. You have no idea how much a letter every now and then helps the Elders in the work of their ministry among your friends. They are like a shower of rain on the thirsty land, both to the Elders and to your friends. And you who have friends where the Elders are not preaching, are the more in need of your letters. Bear your testimony to your friends in writing, and such testimony as you will be willing to meet in the day of judgment, and leave the event with God. In this way the people, many of them, may be made acquainted with some of the principles of salvation, and will be prepared to hear preaching when they get an opportunity. In this way, the way is, and may be, opened before the Elders, and the gospel introduced into neighborhoods where it otherwise might not come.

I have visited some of the Brighamites of late, and I find them invariably transgressing the law of God in eating and drinking.—And for one I want to say to the saints of God, if you wish to become wise unto salvation and have the destroyer pass by you as he did the children of Israel in Egypt at the time he slew all the first born in Egypt among the Egyptians, keep the law of God in your diet and also in your drink, and remember to keep all the commandments, and the promise is yours. Dear brethren and sisters, I hope you will not be offended with me for endeavoring to stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance of the commandments and the law of God.

Lewisburg, O., Saturday, June 23d.—Since writing the above I preached twice at Ithaca, and once at Lewisburg, and I have an appointment at 10 A. M. to-morrow at Lewisburg, and at 4 P. M. at Georgetown, and Monday morning we calculate (nothing in providence forbidding) to start from Ithaca for Troy, where we shall take canal for Toledo. It is getting quite sickly in this part of the State of Ohio, such as bilious fevers, ague and fever, bilious cholic, cholera morbus and cholera. We have had two severe cases of cholera in this neighborhood the present week, but both patients lived, and are now about again. The weather has been very hot for the last week or ten days, and sickness has increased. But today we are having some thunder showers, and we shall have a pure atmosphere again, and the face of nature will be refreshed, and the spirits and bodies of man as well as beast will also be refreshed and invigorated. I have found some brethren since I commenced this mission, as well as in former missions, who have labored very hard to purchase land, both in town and country, for the sake of having the privilege of living in a home of their own in the midst of Babylon, and where they could make themselves just like the Babylonians, or the Gentiles; and, like the Gentiles, offer incense to Baal, and pour out and drink libations to the Devil. In making themselves like the Gentiles in their manner of living and worship, as a simple matter of course they, like the Gentiles, are lulled to sleep in the cradle of carnal security.

And if a servant of God, peradventure, comes along and jogs them a little with the word of the Lord, they are almost ready to be offended, for fear of being aroused to a sense of their dangerous situation. And that is not all. But it would seem that many are so alarmed for fear they will be kept awake after they are partially waked up, that they discontinue to take the Gospel Herald. Now, my dear brethren, let me say to you in all kindness, that it is your duty to take the organ of the church. It is through that medium that the Elders of the church can speak to you in the name of their God, and teach you many and glorious principles pertaining to your salvation. And you should not only take the Gospel Herald yourselves, but you should endeavor to get as many of your neighbors to take it as you can, that they may know what the Lord is doing in this generation. Let every family of the saints take the Herald, and let them preserve them neat and clean, and get them bound for their libraries. They will be hereafter a source and a fountain of intelligence to the rising, as well as the present, generation. Brethren, let not this word to you be vain.

Ithaca, June 25th.—Yesterday I preached at Lewisburg at ten in the morning, and at 4 P. M. at Georgetown, and baptized two persons. I had a pressing invitation to-day from Eaton to go there and preach to the people of that smart little town. They offer me the Methodist meeting house to preach in. I will attend to their case when I return. I shall start now in a few moments for Troy.—Truly and sincerely, JAMES BLAKESLEE.

Sing Sing, N. Y., June 26th, 1849.

Pres. Strang,—Dear Sir:—Allow me to say it is with pleasure I address you at this time. You are aware, in all probability, that the choleratic scourge is at New York, and is felling the inhabitants in slow but sure strides. A lying spirit pervadeth the bosom of the people in trying to evade the name of the pestilence, calling it sometimes one thing and sometimes another. But, sir, it is the Asiatic cholera, and is destined to baffle the skill of the faculty in its subtil movements. I am measurably surprised to see the difference in spirit the people possess now at the approach and moving of this disease and in 1832. Their humility of heart was the result. But now levity and lightness is the motto. As a general thing it is, fly to the physician and not to God. It appears to me as though the moral restraint that once rested with the people is being removed. The spirit of philanthropy is seemingly extinct. And what can the people expect but pestilence and the sword?

Yet, sir, permit me to say, my course is fixed, and my determination is immutable. As for me, I will serve the Lord, inasmuch as I know his will. All is covered with darkness, aside from this determination, this will, I say. The God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is the God for me. And as they were instructed, so am I inclined to be. Yet all is quiet in relation to such righteousness in this section. The saints are mute. There are but some few whom I see and converse with upon this topic. Grant me to say, the emotions of my bosom say you are moving slowly but sure at Voree and Beaver Island. God grant that the little band may grow in grace and in the knowledge of the things of the most high. My heart desireth a pure people—a people who shall not aspire to eminence except through the will of heaven—a people humble, and none are except those who keep the commandments of God, as far as they know them. Bro. Strang, my prayer to God for you is, that you may escape wicked and designing men; that you may move triumphant over them. May your little family be rendered a blessing to you, and you live to see Jesus set his feet upon the Mount of Olivet, myself by your side, together with all the covenant people. Yours with due esteem, J. JENKS.

☞ Truth is a healthy child and perfectly safe out of doors, but it is seldom found in the company of apostates.

INDIAN REVOLUTION—INTERESTING SCENE.

An Albany correspondent of the Courier and Enquirer has the following:—

I was witness a few evenings since to a peculiar, and an interesting scene. The Committee on Indian Affairs, both of the Senate and the Assembly, held a joint meeting in the ante-room of the Senate Chamber to hear the contending parties on the great Indian question of the day. I have before stated the cause of the present anomalous condition of the Indians on the Cattaraugus and Allegany Reservations. Here then, in the year 1849, the question was debated with great earnestness whether the old form of government which had come down from the proud days of the Iroquois should yield to the revolutionary doctrine of an election by the nation at large of a cabinet of counselors. The old Chief party were represented by Nathaniel T. Strong, an educated and adroit Indian, who presented his arguments in a quiet manner, and with an address that savored more of the civilized manner of doing things, than of the simplicity of the woods. The revolutionary party had an eloquent and able advocate in Dr. Wilson, a Cayugan, who avowed with boldness, that there had been a revolution on the Reservation, that the people were determined to shake off the dominion of the Chiefs which had become intolerable. He urged that their new form of government was the only way in which the nation could become assimilated to the whites, and merged in their laws, their manners, their civilization. The young men, he said, were for their new government, while the old Chief did not like to give up the power which they had so long wielded, and to which they had become accustomed.

He spoke, however, kindly of Blacksnake, the patriarchal chief, of whom I have before written in your columns, and while he opposed his retention of authority, he acknowledged his grave and venerable character.

The counsel, for such they were, answered each other's arguments with a precision which would have been well received in any court. One of them alluded to the ignorance of some of those who had been engaged in the movements which had taken place, and said they were believers in the legend of "the handsome lake," a sort of paradistical fiction. This was not denied by the other, but he claimed that his party wanted to have the people educated, that they might throw off the old superstitions and customs. In alluding to an election which had taken place, one curious fact was mentioned. It was said that the Chiefs had induced the warriors, many of them, to put forward a child as the head of their families, because the warriors did not like to have their names mentioned, and thus, as these children could not vote under their laws organizing their nation, the Chiefs were thus enabled to rule out a large number of suffrages that would have been cast against them, a device worthy of Tammany Hall in its palmiest days.

The whole debate was a curious one. Here was the waning of the light of old Indian power. The disputants were Indians, able, adroit, informed, and one pleaded for the old Chiefs, the other for the young men, but it was evident that the movement in either case was the premonition of an advance, an important one toward civilization. The bright gas-lights of the Senate have seldom if ever shone over a debate between the relics of sovereignty such as this. The people who assembled here by two men, had in life time of some now living, held more of New York than did the white man. But their numbers were faint and feeble against the might that was concentrated in that one word civilization, and hence the men of the woods were driven back. Even on this, their last beautiful home, on the banks of the Allegany, their forty forest miles of land that in its richness might revive their memories of the soil that was once theirs; even in that place of happy exile, the division uation. And that is not all. But it would seem that many are so alarmed for fear they will be kept awake after they are partially waked up, that they discontinue to take the Gospel Herald. Now, my dear brethren, let me say to you in all kindness, that it is your duty to take the organ of the church. It is through that medium that the Elders of the church can speak to you in the name of their God, and teach you many and glorious principles pertaining to your salvation. And you should not only take the Gospel Herald yourselves, but you should endeavor to get as many of your neighbors to take it as you can, that they may know what the Lord is doing in this generation. Let every family of the saints take the Herald, and let them preserve them neat and clean, and get them bound for their libraries. They will be hereafter a source and a fountain of intelligence to the rising, as well as the present, generation. Brethren, let not this word to you be vain.

Ithaca, June 25th.—Yesterday I preached at Lewisburg at ten in the morning, and at 4 P. M. at Georgetown, and baptized two persons. I had a pressing invitation to-day from Eaton to go there and preach to the people of that smart little town. They offer me the Methodist meeting house to preach in. I will attend to their case when I return. I shall start now in a few moments for Troy.—Truly and sincerely, JAMES BLAKESLEE.

Sing Sing, N. Y., June 26th, 1849.

Pres. Strang,—Dear Sir:—Allow me to say it is with pleasure I address you at this time. You are aware, in all probability, that the choleratic scourge is at New York, and is felling the inhabitants in slow but sure strides. A lying spirit pervadeth the bosom of the people in trying to evade the name of the pestilence, calling it sometimes one thing and sometimes another. But, sir, it is the Asiatic cholera, and is destined to baffle the skill of the faculty in its subtil movements. I am measurably surprised to see the difference in spirit the people possess now at the approach and moving of this disease and in 1832. Their humility of heart was the result. But now levity and lightness is the motto. As a general thing it is, fly to the physician and not to God. It appears to me as though the moral restraint that once rested with the people is being removed. The spirit of philanthropy is seemingly extinct. And what can the people expect but pestilence and the sword?

Yet, sir, permit me to say, my course is fixed, and my determination is immutable. As for me, I will serve the Lord, inasmuch as I know his will. All is covered with darkness, aside from this determination, this will, I say. The God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is the God for me. And as they were instructed, so am I inclined to be. Yet all is quiet in relation to such righteousness in this section. The saints are mute. There are but some few whom I see and converse with upon this topic. Grant me to say, the emotions of my bosom say you are moving slowly but sure at Voree and Beaver Island. God grant that the little band may grow in grace and in the knowledge of the things of the most high. My heart desireth a pure people—a people who shall not aspire to eminence except through the will of heaven—a people humble, and none are except those who keep the commandments of God, as far as they know them. Bro. Strang, my prayer to God for you is, that you may escape wicked and designing men; that you may move triumphant over them. May your little family be rendered a blessing to you, and you live to see Jesus set his feet upon the Mount of Olivet, myself by your side, together with all the covenant people. Yours with due esteem, J. JENKS.

☞ Truth is a healthy child and perfectly safe out of doors, but it is seldom found in the company of apostates.

INDIAN REVOLUTION—INTERESTING SCENE.

An Albany correspondent of the Courier and Enquirer has the following:—

I was witness a few evenings since to a peculiar, and an interesting scene. The Committee on Indian Affairs, both of the Senate and the Assembly, held a joint meeting in the ante-room of the Senate Chamber to hear the contending parties on the great Indian question of the day. I have before stated the cause of the present anomalous condition of the Indians on the Cattaraugus and Allegany Reservations. Here then, in the year 1849, the question was debated with great earnestness whether the old form of government which had come down from the proud days of the Iroquois should yield to the revolutionary doctrine of an election by the nation at large of a cabinet of counselors. The old Chief party were represented by Nathaniel T. Strong, an educated and adroit Indian, who presented his arguments in a quiet manner, and with an address that savored more of the civilized manner of doing things, than of the simplicity of the woods. The revolutionary party had an eloquent and able advocate in Dr. Wilson, a Cayugan, who avowed with boldness, that there had been a revolution on the Reservation, that the people were determined to shake off the dominion of the Chiefs which had become intolerable. He urged that their new form of government was the only way in which the nation could become assimilated to the whites, and merged in their laws, their manners, their civilization. The young men, he said, were for their new government, while the old Chief did not like to give up the power which they had so long wielded, and to which they had become accustomed.

He spoke, however, kindly of Blacksnake, the patriarchal chief, of whom I have before written in your columns, and while he opposed his retention of authority, he acknowledged his grave and venerable character.

The counsel, for such they were, answered each other's arguments with a precision which would have been well received in any court. One of them alluded to the ignorance of some of those who had been engaged in the movements which had taken place, and said they were believers in the legend of "the handsome lake," a sort of paradisiacal fiction. This was not denied by the other, but he claimed that his party wanted to have the people educated, that they might throw off the old superstitions and customs. In alluding to an election which had taken place, one curious fact was mentioned. It was said that the Chiefs had induced the warriors, many of them, to put forward a child as the head of their families, because the warriors did not like to have their names mentioned, and thus, as these children could not vote under their laws organizing their nation, the Chiefs were thus enabled to rule out a large number of suffrages that would have been cast against them, a device worthy of Tammany Hall in its palmiest days.

The whole debate was a curious one. Here was the waning of the light of old Indian power. The disputants were Indians, able, adroit, informed, and one pleaded for the old Chiefs, the other for the young men, but it was evident that the movement in either case was the premonition of an advance, an important one toward civilization. The bright gas-lights of the Senate have seldom if ever shone over a debate between the relics of sovereignty such as this. The people who assembled here by two men, had in life time of some now living, held more of New York than did the white man. But their numbers were faint and feeble against the might that was concentrated in that one word civilization, and hence the men of the woods were driven back. Even on this, their last beautiful home, on the banks of the Allegany, their forty forest miles of land that in its richness might revive their memories of the soil that was once theirs; even in that place of happy exile, the division among brethren is seen, and the aid of the white man is solicited to assuage their commotions.

Over the meeting Senator Johnson presided, and took notes of the arguments. The auditory were few. I saw there, a listener to the singular debate, the poet Street, to whom his strange controversy of the Cayuga and the Seneca over the dying embers of the ancient council fires, must have brought quaint imaginings, the memory of which, I doubt not, I shall yet trace in beautiful revivification in some of his delightful narratives of the red man and his destinies.

☞ We have had the pleasure of an acquaintance with these Indians, many of them from our childhood. These legends of theirs are no more fanciful or less true than the religious notions of their neighbors, the whites; and as for the change of the form of their government, we do not believe it will work any good to them. Doubtless under the powerful inducements set before them by the cupidity and vices of the whites, their old forms have failed of many of the purposes of government. And it is probably their fate to be subjected to the forms of government prevailing among their neighbors. But the result will be merely to swallow them up.

"NEVER SAY FAIL."

When the clouds hang most darkly,
And sick is the heart,
And the spirits are heavy
All desparing and dark;
When the bright sails of hope
Are no where to be seen,
Seeming all desolation
All wrecked on life's stream;
When despair comes across ye
And troubles most assail,
Rise! Man, show your nerve
And "Never say Fail."

'Tis weakness, 'tis Cowardly
To break by the blast
If it bend thee; 'tis well
It will not always last,
Bear nobly against it:
Let its strength not appall:
Straighten up, Man, and face it,
Let it ne'er make thee fall
When fear comes across ye,
And wild howls the Gale,
Spring forward and breast it,
And "Never say Fail."

Long and Short Articles.—A long newspaper article, like a "great book," is a "great evil." They are less apt to be read; and if perused at all, a great part of their effect is necessarily lost, if the beginning is lost before the end is reached. Short articles, on the contrary, as they are most easily read and remembered, are most likely to be useful. Virgil's good old maxim in agriculture, is equally applicable in writing for the public. "Admire," says he, "large farms, cultivate small ones." Many subjects cannot justly be treated with brevity. But such are not suitable to the columns of a newspaper—they should be discussed in the monthlies or quarterlies, or in books. A newspaper article or paragraph (they should be nearly synonymous) should be brief, and to the point. It is a great art to say, either verbally or in print, just what one has to say, and no more—and to stop when you have finished.

Industrious Females.—We care not what the occupations may be—folding books or setting types—making coats or trimming hats—binding shoes or weaving cloth—we respect and love industrious females. We would not give one such a young lady, for a dozen waspish, idle nonsensical women, who spend half their time in reading novels, and the other half before the glass. What are such creatures good for? To show off in the dance hall—to advertise English goods—to tickle the fancy of brainless fops and adlepated gentlemen. We never cast an eye on such women, but we are disgusted with their follies. But in the presence of a healthy working girl, we feel we are with somebody. There is substance and not shadow before us—gold and not tensel—real life and not sentimentalism. Such may not attract the attention of popinjays—but they secure the affections of real men. Look where we may, and we find the best and happiest wives among those who thought it no dishonor to work, and who looked more to the improvement of the mind, than to attractive dresses and foolish displays.

Things About Voree.—Every thing whispers peace and prosperity to the faithful, but fearfulness is surprising the hypocrites.—There is more union of feeling and concert of action among the saints than we ever saw before. The flouncings of restless and aspiring spirits do not disturb them. Notwithstanding a considerable number have emigrated to Beaver Island, the houses are nearly as crowded as ever by those coming in. The crops look well, considering the backwardness of the season.

Yet They Come.—In Voree, on the 30th ult., Pres. Strang baptized four, three of whom were new members. The other was Bro. Zenas H. Gurley, one who has baptized his hundreds into the church, and one that will, undoubtedly, yet do a great work in this dispensation.

☞ On the 4th inst., a company of sixteen saints left this place for Beaver Island, where they intend to locate permanently. Several more have gone to attend Conference, among them is Ebenezer Page, of the Twelve.

☞ "Will you give me that ring on your finger," said a village dandy to a girl, "for it resembles my love for you—it has no end." "Excuse me, sir, I choose to keep it as being emblematical of mine for you—it has no beginning."

☞ There is no destruction worse than to overpraise a man; for if his worth prove short of what report doth speak of him, his own actions are ever giving the lie to his honor.

☞ If you act with a view to praise only, you deserve none.

DIED,

In Galena, on the 21st ult., William, son of Samuel and Rebecca Wright, aged 9 years.

In Voree, on the 5th inst., Eugenia, daughter of Benjamin G. and Margaret Wright, aged 1 year, 11 months and 5 days.

NOTICE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at Franklin, Oakland Co., Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th of August, 1849. By order of the Twelve, among brethren is seen, and the aid of the white man is solicited to assuage their commotions.

SAMUEL GRAHAM.

Over the meeting Senator Johnson presided, and took notes of the arguments. The auditory were few. I saw there, a listener to the singular debate, the poet Street, to whom his strange controversy of the Cayuga and the Seneca over the dying embers of the ancient council fires, must have brought quaint imaginings, the memory of which, I doubt not, I shall yet trace in beautiful revivification in some of his delightful narratives of the red man and his destinies.

☞ We have had the pleasure of an acquaintance with these Indians, many of them from our childhood. These legends of theirs are no more fanciful or less true than the religious notions of their neighbors, the whites; and as for the change of the form of their government, we do not believe it will work any good to them. Doubtless under the powerful inducements set before them by the cupidity and vices of the whites, their old forms have failed of many of the purposes of government. And it is probably their fate to be subjected to the forms of government prevailing among their neighbors. But the result will be merely to swallow them up.

"NEVER SAY FAIL."

When the clouds hang most darkly
And sick is the heart.
And the spirits are heavy
All desparing and dark:
When the bright sails of hope
Are no where to be seen.
Seeming all desolation
All wrecked on life's stream:
When despair comes across ye
And troubles most assail.
Rise! Man, show your nerve
And "Never say Fail."

'Tis weakness, 'tis Cowardis
To break by the blast
If it bend thee; 'tis well
It will not always last.
Bear nobly against it
Let its strength not appall.
Straighten up, Man, and face it
Let it ne'er make thee fall
When fear comes across ye.
And wild howls the Gale.
Spring forward and breast it.
And "Never say Fail"

Long and Short Articles.—A long newspaper article, like a "great book," is a "great evil." They are less apt to be read; and if perused at all, a great part of their effect is necessarily lost, if the beginning is lost before the end is reached. Short articles, on the contrary, as they are most easily read and remembered, are most likely to be useful. Virgil's good old maxim in agriculture, is equally applicable in writing for the public. "Admire," says he, "large farms, cultivate small ones." Many subjects cannot justly be treated with brevity. But such are not suitable to the columns of a newspaper—they should be discussed in the monthlies or quarterlies, or in books. A newspaper article or paragraph (they should be nearly synonymous) should be brief, and to the point. It is a great art to say, either verbally or in print, just what one has to say, and no more—and to stop when you have finished.

Industrious Females.—We care not what the occupations may be—folding books or setting types—making coats or trimming hats—binding shoes or weaving cloth—we respect and love industrious females. We would not give one such a young lady, for a dozen waspish, idle nonsensical women, who spend half their time in reading novels, and the other half before the glass. What are such creatures good for? To show off in the dance hall—to advertise English goods—to tickle the fancy of brainless fops and adlepated gentlemen. We never cast an eye on such women, but we are disgusted with their follies. But in the presence of a healthy working girl, we feel we are with somebody. There is substance and not shadow before us—gold and not tensel—real life and not sentimentalism. Such may not attract the attention of popinjays—but they secure the affections of real men. Look where we may, and we find the best and happiest wives among those who thought it no dishonor to work, and who looked more to the improvement of the mind, than to attractive dresses and foolish displays.

Things About Voree.—Every thing whispers peace and prosperity to the faithful, but fearfulness is surprising the hypocrites.—There is more union of feeling and concert of action among the saints than we ever saw before. The flouncings of restless and aspiring spirits do not disturb them. Notwithstanding a considerable number have emigrated to Beaver Island, the houses are nearly as crowded as ever by those coming in. The crops look well, considering the backwardness of the season.

Yet They Come.—In Voree, on the 30th ult., Pres. Strang baptized four, three of whom were new members. The other was Bro. Zenas H. Gurley, one who has baptized his hundreds into the church, and one that will, undoubtedly, yet do a great work in this dispensation.

☞ On the 4th inst., a company of sixteen saints left this place for Beaver Island, where they intend to locate permanently. Several more have gone to attend Conference, among them is Ebenezer Page, of the Twelve.

☞ "Will you give me that ring on your finger," said a village dandy to a girl, "for it resembles my love for you—it has no end." "Excuse me, sir, I choose to keep it as being emblematical of mine for you—it has no beginning."

☞ There is no destruction worse than to overpraise a man; for if his worth prove short of what report doth speak of him, his own actions are ever giving the lie to his honor.

☞ If you act with a view to praise only, you deserve none.

DIED,

In Galena, on the 21st ult., William, son of Samuel and Rebecca Wright, aged 9 years.

In Voree, on the 5th inst., Eugenia, daughter of Benjamin G. and Margaret Wright, aged 1 year, 11 months and 5 days.

NOTICE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at Franklin, Oakland Co., Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th of August, 1849. By order of the Twelve,

SAMUEL GRAHAM.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 18.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, JULY 19, 1849. [WHOLE No. 134.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

THE AGE OF MURDER.

THE WORK OF A MONTH.—As in science, so in human affairs, every fact is carefully to be noted in order that it may be investigated, explained if possible, and knowledge and improvement deduced therefrom. As chroniclers of crime, we have a fact, a great and significant fact to lay before our readers, and it is this, that whatever else the present age may be remarkable for, it is emphatically an age of murder. We speak not now of wholesale murder by war, but of the crime known to the law as murder, and punishable with death. To say nothing of other countries, here in our own land, almost every day, so far in the year 1849, has been marked with a red line showing the traces of this most awful of human offences. From the beginning of the year up to the present time, our ears have been pained with the continual story of murder committed in every form and shape, and with every degree of horror, in which it is possible for it to be committed—by poison, by suffocation, by drowning—by every weapon, from the small penknife up to the slung-shot and the six-barreled patent revolver, which two last instruments it has been reserved expressly for this generation to invent and use with a frequency and readiness which shows their admirable adaptation for their deadly purpose.

In this murder there is also a remarkable feature to be observed. It has not been committed solely by the midnight robber, by the drunkard, the brawler, the desperate, and the abandoned. On the contrary, the man of refinement, of wealth—the man with cool blood in his veins—aye, the professed minister of God—has taken the weapon in his hands, and with it taken the life of his fellow man. Man, also, has not alone been the victim; but women—helpless and beautiful women—have had their life's blood shed by those who should have been their protectors. Whence comes all this, and what means it? Legislators! philanthropists! look at it—contemplate it! It is not, we know, a pleasant fact either for contemplation, or even a hasty glance, but it is nevertheless an imperative duty that it should be contemplated and thoroughly investigated, in order that the evil which it developes may be remedied. It is said that this age is the most enlightened and civilized—the wisest and the best the world has yet seen—and yet here is an incontrovertible fact, which would seem to give the lie to the assertion, for on the brow of this very age, the mark of Cain is stamped so broad, so deep, and black, that should what we call the dark ages rise from the tomb of the past and stand up in comparison, the former, and not the latter, would have cause to blush for the deepness and blackness of the damning spot. Is there not something in this for the wisdom of the present day to look into? To show that we are not dealing in the marvelous and horrible without reason, we here record the list of murders committed in the United States during the month of May last:—

On the 7th of May, at St. Louis, John Beard interfered between two Germans named Wm. Ryder and John Spooner, who were dissenting together. Beard was stabbed through the heart by one of them. On the same day, and in the same city, James Smith was stabbed to the heart by a German named Christian Sthall. Likewise, on the same day and in the same city, a man named Fisch was killed by another named Dochner. On the 6th of May, at Independence, Mo., a Mr. Freeman was killed by Captain Howard. At New Orleans, on the 1st of May, Joseph Leblanc, a waiter in a restaurant, was stabbed so severely by a man named Alpuente, that he died in a short time. On May 10th, a man was found murdered in the woods near Rochester, New York. On the 6th of May, at Cincinnati, John Brasher, a watchman, was shot through the heart by Jesse Jones, while in the act of arresting the said Jones for a misdemeanor. On the 7th of May, at Cincinnati, Michael Donnevan was killed by a stone thrown at him by one T. D. Huyman:—At Buffalo, N. Y., on the 3d of May, in a fight between Theodore Wichenstair and a canal hand named Haggart, Wichenstair was killed by a kick in the stomach from Haggart. On May 8th, in the night, at Wadesboro, N. C., May Buchannan was beaten to death by some villains unknown.

On May 12th, at Fairfield, N. Y., Mrs. D. S. Neiley was poisoned by R. S. Dicker; Dicker killed himself a few days afterwards. Sometime during the 1st of May, at Charlestown, Indiana, Joseph Miller was shot by Milton Jones, who afterwards cut his victim's throat. At Philadelphia, on or about the 2d of May, Catharine Bolter threw her own child into a sink. On the 18th of May, at Binghampton, N. Y., an Irishwoman poisoned her own child. On the 9th of May, in some bushes near Vincennes, Ind., a man was found murdered. At Baltimore, on the 15th or 16th of May, Daniel Cummings was killed by Luke Flynn. On May 16th, at St. Josephs, Mo., a man by the name of Decamp was killed by a constable in a street fight. At New Orleans, on May 14th, Juan Baptiste Saurer was killed by being stabbed by Joseph Romero. At Brooklin, N. Y., on May 23d, William Parker was killed by John Kennedy. On May 16th, at Macon, Geo., Mary Ellen Platt was killed by a man named Elisha Ruse. At St. Francisville, La., on May 12th, Michael Walsh was killed by Z. A. Holdridge. About the 20th of May, near Milwaukee, a Prussian was shot and stabbed by a German. On May 28th, on the tow path of the canal near Lockport, N. Y., John Ulch was killed by a woman named Connelly, who beat him with a club, and called in the aid of a ferocious dog to help her commit the deed. At Bloomingdale, Iowa, on May 22d, a man was killed by (it is supposed) a person named John Philips. At Chattanooga, Tenn., on May 30th, a man named James Allison was killed (it is supposed) by a man named Davis.

Such is the record for one month. We have no idea that we have enumerated all, but there is enough to startle the mind of any thinking man. Twenty-four murders for thirty-one days? But the month of May is not alone. No month of 1849 has yet passed but we could have produced an equally startling record as the above.—It must be remembered, also, that no account is here made of the numberless stabbings and other murderous assaults where death did

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 18.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. JULY 19, 1849. [WHOLE No. 134.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

THE AGE OF MURDER.

THE WORK OF A MONTH.—As in science, so in human affairs, every fact is carefully to be noted in order that it may be investigated, explained if possible, and knowledge and improvement deduced therefrom. As chroniclers of crime, we have a fact, a great and significant fact to lay before our readers, and it is this, that whatever else the present age may be remarkable for, it is emphatically an age of murder. We speak not now of wholesale murder by war, but of the crime known to the law as murder, and punishable with death. To say nothing of other countries, here in our own land, almost every day, so far in the year 1849, has been marked with a red line showing the traces of this most awful of human offences. From the beginning of the year up to the present time, our ears have been pained with the continual story of murder committed in every form and shape, and with every degree of horror, in which it is possible for it to be committed—by poison, by suffocation, by drowning—by every weapon, from the small penknife up to the slung-shot and the six-barreled patent revolver, which two last instruments it has been reserved expressly for this generation to invent and use with a frequency and readiness which shows their admirable adaptation for their deadly purpose.

In this murder there is also a remarkable feature to be observed. It has not been committed solely by the midnight robber, by the drunkard, the brawler, the desperate, and the abandoned. On the contrary, the man of refinement, of wealth—the man with cool blood in his veins—aye, the professed minister of God—has taken the weapon in his hands, and with it taken the life of his fellow man. Man, also, has not alone been the victim; but women—helpless and beautiful women—have had their life's blood shed by those who should have been their protectors. Whence comes all this, and what means it? Legislators! philanthropists! look at it—contemplate it! It is not, we know, a pleasant fact either for contemplation, or even a hasty glance, but it is nevertheless an imperative duty that it should be contemplated and thoroughly investigated, in order that the evil which it developes may be remedied. It is said that this age is the most enlightened and civilized—the wisest and the best the world has yet seen—and yet here is an incontrovertible fact, which would seem to give the lie to the assertion, for on the brow of this very age, the mark of Cain is stamped so broad, so deep, and black, that should what we call the dark ages rise from the tomb of the past and stand up in comparison, the former, and not the latter, would have cause to blush for the deepness and blackness of the damning spot. Is there not something in this for the wisdom of the present day to look into? To show that we are not dealing in the marvelous and horrible without reason, we here record the list of murders committed in the United States during the month of May last:—

On the 7th of May, at St. Louis, John Beard interfered between two Germans named Wm. Ryder and John Spooner, who were dissenting together. Beard was stabbed through the heart by one of them. On the same day, and in the same city, James Smith was stabbed to the heart by a German named Christian Sthall. Likewise, on the same day and in the same city, a man named Fisch was killed by another named Dochner. On the 6th of May, at Independence, Mo., a Mr. Freeman was killed by Captain Howard. At New Orleans, on the 1st of May, Joseph Leblanc, a waiter in a restaurant, was stabbed so severely by a man named Alpuente, that he died in a short time. On May 10th, a man was found murdered in the woods near Rochester, New York. On the 6th of May, at Cincinnati, John Brasher, a watchman, was shot through the heart by Jesse Jones, while in the act of arresting the said Jones for a misdemeanor. On the 7th of May, at Cincinnati, Michael Donnevan was killed by a stone thrown at him by one T. D. Huyman:—At Buffalo, N. Y., on the 3d of May, in a fight between Theodore Wichenstair and a canal hand named Haggart, Wichenstair was killed by a kick in the stomach from Haggart. On May 8th, in the night, at Wadesboro, N. C., May Buchannan was beaten to death by some villains unknown.

On May 12th, at Fairfield, N. Y., Mrs. D. S. Neiley was poisoned by R. S. Dicker; Dicker killed himself a few days afterwards. Sometime during the 1st of May, at Charlestown, Indiana, Joseph Miller was shot by Milton Jones, who afterwards cut his victim's throat. At Philadelphia, on or about the 2d of May, Catharine Bolter threw her own child into a sink. On the 18th of May, at Binghampton, N. Y., an Irishwoman poisoned her own child. On the 9th of May, in some bushes near Vincennes, Ind., a man was found murdered. At Baltimore, on the 15th or 16th of May, Daniel Cummings was killed by Luke Flynn. On May 16th, at St. Josephs, Mo., a man by the name of Decamp was killed by a constable in a street fight. At New Orleans, on May 14th, Juan Baptiste Saurer was killed by being stabbed by Joseph Romero. At Brooklin, N. Y., on May 23d, William Parker was killed by John Kennedy. On May 16th, at Macon, Geo., Mary Ellen Platt was killed by a man named Elisha Rose. At St. Francisville, La., on May 12th, Michael Walsh was killed by Z. A. Holdridge. About the 20th of May, near Milwaukee, a Prussian was shot and stabbed by a German. On May 28th, on the tow path of the canal near Lockport, N. Y., John Ulch was killed by a woman named Connelly, who beat him with a club, and called in the aid of a ferocious dog to help her commit the deed. At Bloomingdale, Iowa, on May 22d, a man was killed by (it is supposed) a person named John Philips. At Chattanooga, Tenn., on May 30th, a man named James Allison was killed (it is supposed) by a man named Davis.

Such is the record for one month. We have no idea that we have enumerated all, but there is enough to startle the mind of any thinking man. Twenty-four murders for thirty-one days? But the month of May is not alone. No month of 1849 has yet passed but we could have produced an equally startling record as the above.—It must be remembered, also, that no account is here made of the numberless stabbings and other murderous assaults where death did not ensue. They are indeed numberless, and we care not to count them. Looking, therefore, at the picture of one month which we have drawn, remembering the many criminals who have already, or are about to, ascend the scaffold to expiate their crimes, and remembering the many now awaiting their examination, truly did we say aright in the commencement of this article, that the present day was an age of murder.—Police Gazette.

For the Gospel Herald.

On board the Propeller Niagara, Lake Huron, July 2d, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I write this to mail at Mackinac, in order that you may know how I am getting along towards the City of James, the home of the saints. We left Ithaca, Dark Co., Ohio, last week, Monday morning, and at which time I mailed a letter to you at that place. Well, we that day went to Troy, (22 miles,) where we stopped all night, and the next day took the packet for Toledo, where we arrived on Thursday morning at six o'clock, (160 miles,) and there took steamer for Detroit, where we arrived the same evening at 4 o'clock, (70 miles,) all well, and in good spirits. We put up at the temperance house, kept by Barney—an excellent house—on Main st. On Friday we took passage for Beaver, on this boat. On going on board I learned by the Capt. that there were some thirty passengers expected from Mich. every moment for the Island. He said that there had been a man on board to engage passage for them, &c. I asked the Capt. if he was a Mormon who had engaged passage for the company. The Capt. replied, that he thought he was, for he looked like an honest man.

Well, after a little Elder George W. Brownson came on board, and the secret was revealed. He was the man. A part of his company had arrived and they took passage with us for Beaver, (365 miles.) On saturday morning, 8 o,clock, we left Detroit. That day and night we had a splendid run, the weather being very fine. But on Sunday morning about day light the wind sprung up from the north, and continued to increase till noon, at which time there was a heavy sea on, and the lake white enough, and most of the passengers sea, or, lake sick. I have traveled considerable on these lakes, and crossed the Atlantic ocean twice, and never did I have harder work to keep from being sick. But I walked the deck and continued to exercise until I finally worked it off. There were but two of our passengers (the Mormons) but what were sick besides myself, and they were ladies. There were several others going to the Island who were not Mormons, that shared pretty largely in the sickness, as also many others to different places. But at about 2 P. M. the sea commenced to decrease and the wind to subside a little, and by the time the sun set we had a smooth lake again, comparatively speaking, and the passengers began to look and feel better. In the night the wind came round east, and this morning we have our sails set, and they help the engine very much. The lake is very smooth this morning, and the passengers all look cheerful, and, as far as I can discover, they will all eat their breakfast with good appetites. We board ourselves on this trip, and we appreciate the benefit of the word of the Lord in regard to our diet. We can spread our cloth and place our bread, butter, cheese, dried beef, dried sasuage, crackers, &c., and take the pure cold lake water for drink, and relish it first rate. This kind of food and drink we can get at any time when we get hungry, and no boiling of tea or coffee water, for our tea and coffee is always made, and that of the best quality.

But now I must tell you about our Capt. He was an old neighbor of mine in Ellisburgh, N. Y., and was at my wedding, and danced with my lady, and has done so often, and perhaps he may again. It is not impossible, for you know what Jeremiah says about the saints dancing in the last days when they flow to Zion, in the 31st chapt. Well, Capt. H. Hagadone may flow, or float, to Zion on his splendid Propeller, and yet participate in the rejoicing from all sorrow. He is a gentleman, and so are his officers and men. His boat is a splendid sea boat, and should be patronized by the saints and others who desire to travel in a safe craft, and with a gentlemanly Capt., good officers, and an obliging set of men. I should have preached yesterday on board had it not been so rough as to have made almost all sick. But the Capt. and his lady are anxious to have preaching to-day, and we shall have a lecture after we leave Mackanac, if nothing turns up unfavorable. We found no cholera on our way since we left Ithaca. When we were in Detroit the board of health reported one case of cholera, not fatal however. We would hardly believe that there is so much difference in the atmosphere here, in about 45 degrees N., and at Lewisburgh in about 40. There the atmosphere was highly charged with a poisonous miasma, which caused much sickness. Here the atmosphere is as fair as the crystal lake water, these waters being very pure and full of health. So is the atmosphere in this latitude. God bless you and the dear saints at Voree and elswhere, who love God and are trying to live to the whole law of this dispensation of the fulness of times. Truly and sincerely, JAMES BLAKESLEE.

☞ We find the following in the Evangelical Magazine and Gospel Advocate, a paper devoted to the doctrine of free and full salvation to all mankind:—

"Have any of our 'New Lights,' that have sprung up of late, performed any miracles? such as raising the dead, restoring sight to the blind, &c., &c. I hope that our ministring brethren will take heed to the Apostolic injunction, 'Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.'"

It is a very common thing among the Protestant sects to accuse each other of being unpopular, "New Lights," &c. And each one is equally willing to caution the other to beware, generally quoting some passage of scripture at the same time, in order to put on the grace, whether it is applicable or not. Each one also thinking himself truly Apostolic, or a defender of the faith once delivered to the saints, while not one of them have an Apostle in their church—deny almost all the spiritual gifts that were in the church in the days of the ancient Apostles—claim to be the church, the body of Christ.—Whereas, St. Paul said, the body of Christ was composed of, first, "apostles; secondarily, prophets; thirdly, teachers; after that miracles; then gifts of healing, helps, governments, diversities of tongues." And yet they have none of these gifts among them.—They claim to have put on Christ. Whereas, some of them have never been baptized at all. And Paul says, "as many as have been baptized in Christ, (that is, into his church, which is composed of apostles, prophets, &c.,) have put on Christ;" and those who have been baptized, have not been baptized into a church that bears any resemblance to that one described by Paul as being the church of Christ. Therefore they are still out of Christ, and strangers and aliens to the household of faith.

But turning to the question above, "have any of our 'New Lights' performed any miracles? such as raising the dead, restoring sight to the blind," &c., &c., we take this as an open confession of the writer that the Universalists have no miraculous operations of God's power among them. And if they have not, who made them ministers of the gospel? If they preach, who (with the New Testament in his hand) will believe that they preach the gospel? For Christ said that these signs shall follow them that believe, (the gospel:) "In my name they shall cast out devils, heal the sick," &c. But if the Advocate really wishes to know whether any of the churches now in existence have the gifts of the gospel as they had in the days of Christ and the Apostles, we would say that there is not ensue. They are indeed numberless, and we care not to count them. Looking, therefore, at the picture of one month which we have drawn, remembering the many criminals who have already, or are about to, ascend the scaffold to expiate their crimes, and remembering the many now awaiting their examination, truly did we say aright in the commencement of this article, that the present day was an age of murder.—Police Gazette.

For the Gospel Herald.

On board the Propeller Niagara, Lake Huron, July 2d, 1849.

Dear Frink:—I write this to mail at Mackinac, in order that you may know how I am getting along towards the City of James, the home of the saints. We left Ithaca, Dark Co., Ohio, last week, Monday morning, and at which time I mailed a letter to you at that place. Well, we that day went to Troy, (22 miles,) where we stopped all night, and the next day took the packet for Toledo, where we arrived on Thursday morning at six o'clock, (160 miles,) and there took steamer for Detroit, where we arrived the same evening at 4 o'clock, (70 miles,) all well, and in good spirits. We put up at the temperance house, kept by Barney—an excellent house—on Main st. On Friday we took passage for Beaver, on this boat. On going on board I learned by the Capt. that there were some thirty passengers expected from Mich. every moment for the Island. He said that there had been a man on board to engage passage for them, &c. I asked the Capt. if he was a Mormon who had engaged passage for the company. The Capt. replied, that he thought he was, for he looked like an honest man.

Well, after a little Elder George W. Brownson came on board, and the secret was revealed. He was the man. A part of his company had arrived and they took passage with us for Beaver. (365 miles.) On saturday morning, 5 o'clock, we left Detroit. That day and night we had a splendid run, the weather being very fine. But on Sunday morning about day light the wind sprung up from the north, and continued to increase till noon, at which time there was a heavy sea on, and the lake white enough, and most of the passengers sea, or, lake sick. I have traveled considerable on these lakes, and crossed the Atlantic ocean twice, and never did I have harder work to keep from being sick. But I walked the deck and continued to exercise until I finally worked it off. There were but two of our passengers (the Mormons) but what were sick besides myself, and they were ladies. There were several others going to the Island who were not Mormons, that shared pretty largely in the sickness, as also many others to different places. But at about 2 P. M. the sea commenced to decrease and the wind to subside a little, and by the time the sun set we had a smooth lake again, comparatively speaking, and the passengers began to look and feel better. In the night the wind came round east, and this morning we have our sails set, and they help the engine very much. The lake is very smooth this morning, and the passengers all look cheerful, and, as far as I can discover, they will all eat their breakfast with good appetites. We board ourselves on this trip, and we appreciate the benefit of the word of the Lord in regard to our diet. We can spread our cloth and place our bread, butter, cheese, dried beef, dried sasuage, crackers, &c., and take the pure cold lake water for drink, and relish it first rate. This kind of food and drink we can get at any time when we get hungry, and no boiling of tea or coffee water, for our tea and coffee is always made, and that of the best quality.

But now I must tell you about our Capt. He was an old neighbor of mine in Ellisburgh, N. Y., and was at my wedding, and danced with my lady, and has done so often, and perhaps he may again. It is not impossible, for you know what Jeremiah says about the saints dancing in the last days when they flow to Zion, in the 31st chapt. Well, Capt. H. Hagadone may flow, or float, to Zion on his splendid Propeller, and yet participate in the rejoicing from all sorrow. He is a gentleman, and so are his officers and men. His boat is a splendid sea boat, and should be patronized by the saints and others who desire to travel in a safe craft, and with a gentlemanly Capt., good officers, and an obliging set of men. I should have preached yesterday on board had it not been so rough as to have made almost all sick. But the Capt. and his lady are anxious to have preaching to-day, and we shall have a lecture after we leave Mackanac, if nothing turns up unfavorable. We found no cholera on our way since we left Ithaca. When we were in Detroit the board of health reported one case of cholera, not fatal however. We could hardly believe that there is so much difference in the atmosphere here, in about 45 degrees N., and at Lewisburgh in about 40. There the atmosphere was highly charged with a poisonous miasma, which caused much sickness. Here the atmosphere is as fair as the crystal lake water, these waters being very pure and full of health. So is the atmosphere in this latitude. God bless you and the dear saints at Voree and elswhere, who love God and are trying to live to the whole law of this dispensation of the fulness of times. Truly and sincerely, JAMES BLAKESLEE.

☞ We find the following in the Evangelical Magazine and Gospel Advocate, a paper devoted to the doctrine of free and full salvation to all mankind:—

"Have any of our 'New Lights,' that have sprung up of late, performed any miracles? such as raising the dead, restoring sight to the blind, &c., &c. I hope that our ministring brethren will take heed to the Apostolic injunction, 'Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.'"

It is a very common thing among the Protestant sects to accuse each other of being unpopular, "New Lights," &c. And each one is equally willing to caution the other to beware, generally quoting some passage of scripture at the same time, in order to put on the grace, whether it is applicable or not. Each one also thinking himself truly Apostolic, or a defender of the faith once delivered to the saints, while not one of them have an Apostle in their church—deny almost all the spiritual gifts that were in the church in the days of the ancient Apostles—claim to be the church, the body of Christ.—Whereas, St. Paul said, the body of Christ was composed of, first, "apostles; secondarily, prophets; thirdly, teachers; after that miracles; then gifts of healing, helps, governments, diversities of tongues." And yet they have none of these gifts among them.—They claim to have put on Christ. Whereas, some of them have never been baptized at all. And Paul says, "as many as have been baptized in Christ, (that is, into his church, which is composed of apostles, prophets, &c.,) have put on Christ;" and those who have been baptized, have not been baptized into a church that bears any resemblance to that one described by Paul as being the church of Christ. Therefore they are still out of Christ, and strangers and aliens to the household of faith.

But turning to the question above, "have any of our 'New Lights' performed any miracles? such as raising the dead, restoring sight to the blind," &c., &c., we take this as an open confession of the writer that the Universalists have no miraculous operations of God's power among them. And if they have not, who made them ministers of the gospel? If they preach, who (with the New Testament in his hand) will believe that they preach the gospel? For Christ said that these signs shall follow them that believe, (the gospel:) "In my name they shall cast out devils, heal the sick," &c. But if the Advocate really wishes to know whether any of the churches now in existence have the gifts of the gospel as they had in the days of Christ and the Apostles, we would say that there is a certain people, every where spoken evil of, (called "Mormons,") that do actually have Apostles, Prophets, &c., among them. The same signs follow them that did the saints in former days, insomuch that they really flatter themselves that they are the people of God. And still further, notwithstanding they do not consider their "light" new, but eternal and everlasting, the same which all the prophets and saints walked by in ancient days, yet they consider it the only light that is; the only light that was, and the only light that ever will lead men through this world safely, and bring them into the presence of God. Therefore they would say to all, beware, lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.

S. P. BACON.

PROGRESS.

We are no enemy, as we said on a former occasion, to progressiveness in virtue, learning, justice and religion, which latter principle, in our opinion, comprises every thing else worthy of our attainment—but, cannot pretend to believe, with all the evidences before us, that mankind is growing either wiser or better. We see daily how strangely the young and inexperienced, as well as multitudes of grown up children, are flattered into a sweeping idea of their own importance, and into a practical disobedience of the laws of God and man. "I am as good, or I am better than you," is on the tongue of every lisping radical we meet on the streets, and the same sentiment is carried up from the young beligerent, and abroad among the millions, by more than half the presses in the country. To sneer at the virtuous, and to evince a hatred for those whose conduct is circumspect and genteel, is a glaring and positive vice of the times; and yet, it forms a part and a portion of that progress of which we bear so much. The little illiterate advocate for universal, unrestrained liberty doubles his tiny fists at his parents and his schoolmaster, vowing eternal opposition to the degredations of the birch, while the learned orator and declaimer is holding forth before an excited audience on the natural rights of man, condemning all obedience to civil restraints, all duty to established governments, and all respect for constitutionally enacted laws, as unworthy of the great and exalted destiny of humanity in this enlightened age of the world!

This we say is a portion of the progressive developments of the times in which we live, let the demagogues and the flatterers of the multitude say what they may. We are no politician—no, heaven forbid—but we think we can see as far through a mill stone as those who pick it. We can see enough, at least, to convince us, that those who are always picking at an imaginary form of society in this country, which they term the aristocracy, are pandering to the vilest feelings of our nature—to those of envy, hatred, malignity and absolute tyranny—and of course, instead of elevating by the nobleness and the manly disinterestedness of their sentiments, are not only degrading their adherents, but endangering those whose greatest faults are to be found in the good examples which their every day acts and courteous behavior presents to the community.

Listen to the lamenations of our pious friend of the "Methodist Protestant," an excellent religious paper published in Baltimore. He begins by saying:—

"My heart is sick with every day's report
Of wrong and outrage, with which earth is filled."

So said Cowper, of the times in which he lived. What if he had lived now, when the means for the communication of wrong and outrage are so increased? We are unwilling to believe the world is growing worse. We should like to believe it is growing better. But alas, alas, what day passes that does not furnish its materials to the history of the crime and wretchedness of the age in which we live.

We have no fellowship with misanthropy. There is much to love among men. There are men of high moral sense—of unswerving integrity all around us. But sometimes we almost forget this cheering truth in the gloom that falls upon the heart, upon a survey of the fraud and villainy and diabolical abandonment which are every day brought to light.

There is certainly a fearful responsibility resting somewhere. And our advice is to the people and to the press to look to it.—Lady's Dollar Newspaper.

ECCENTRICITY.

This word is now applied, apologetically, to the conduct of many persons who, had they lived a little earlier, would in all probability have been enumerated among the madmen, the fools, or the rogues. But modern charity, which finds so many salves for iniquity and folly, whilst it boldly condemns integrity as stubborness, and virtue as imbecility, finds it more convenient, at all events, more popular to cast the mantle of eccentricity even over premedicated crime, than to denounce the criminal in terms of just condemnation. Indeed, but few men who prove themselves equal to the perpetration of successful fraud are now considered in the light of criminals, while even those who fail of success in carrying out a complex scheme of imposition and treachery, are generally let off as men of great enterprise and singular eccentricity.

The same apology is sometimes found very convenient in behalf of a large number of our newspaper and other writers for the public. We have heard the inquiries frequently made, how was it possible that such a one could advance a proposition so absurd, or how such another one could sustain a doctrine so immoral and wicked? In many cases the reply has been, "Oh, who minds him! he is so very queer and so eccentric, nobody pays the least attention to what he says." But this is a grand mistake. Some body, and a vast number of somebodys must pay attention to what he says, and believe and pay for what he says, otherwise the queer eccentric fellow would have to starve. But such accidents seldom happen to men who wear slouched hats, ragged coats, and dirty boots, but who have broad foreheads, eratic intellects, which change with the vanes on the steeples, and who are, for the time being, and not to speak irreverently, "all things unto all men."

There are, however, not a few queer eccentric ladies, who set about managing every body else's business to the neglect and ruin of their own, whose conduct would be held equally reprehensible, did they not also find their best apology in their very queerness and eccentricity, which covers so many sins in their male rivals. They, too, are in general very slovenly dressed from bonnet to shoetie, which, however, is but another and forcible evidence of their amiable originality and oddness of character. And with this reputation, they pass, or at least attempt to pass, free into every grade of society, doing a little mischief here, and creating a little confusion and dissatisfaction there, about the rights of this class, and the injuries of that class, but without, we venture to say, ever leaving the impress of one pure, gentle, or practical thought anywhere.—Ex. paper.

FLATTERY.

The true definition of this word is false praise—and if false, of course it is to be condemned; for we should all look upon a falsehood with abhorrence, and upon the utterer of it with pity and with a desire to lead him into the ways of truth. We are too apt to encourage this fault in others, by seeming to be gratified with what they have said, and instead of letting them know that we are beings

a certain people, every where spoken evil of, (called "Mormons,") that do actually have Apostles, Prophets, &c., among them. The same signs follow them that did the saints in former days, insomuch that they really flatter themselves that they are the people of God. And still further, notwithstanding they do not consider their "light" new, but eternal and everlasting, the same which all the prophets and saints walked by in ancient days, yet they consider it the only light that is; the only light that was, and the only light that ever will lead men through this world safely, and bring them into the presence of God. Therefore they would say to all, beware, lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.

S. P. BACON.

PROGRESS.

We are no enemy, as we said on a former occasion, to progressiveness in virtue, learning, justice and religion, which latter principle, in our opinion, comprises every thing else worthy of our attainment—but, cannot pretend to believe, with all the evidences before us, that mankind is growing either wiser or better. We see daily how strangely the young and inexperienced, as well as multitudes of grown up children, are flattered into a sweeping idea of their own importance, and into a practical disobedience of the laws of God and man. "I am as good, or I am better than you," is on the tongue of every lisping radical we meet on the streets, and the same sentiment is carried up from the young beligerent, and abroad among the millions, by more than half the presses in the country. To sneer at the virtuous, and to evince a hatred for those whose conduct is circumspect and genteel, is a glaring and positive vice of the times; and yet, it forms a part and a portion of that progress of which we bear so much. The little illiterate advocate for universal, unrestrained liberty doubles his tiny fists at his parents and his schoolmaster, vowing eternal opposition to the degredations of the birch, while the learned orator and declaimer is holding forth before an excited audience on the natural rights of man, condemning all obedience to civil restraints, all duty to established governments, and all respect for constitutionally enacted laws, as unworthy of the great and exalted destiny of humanity in this enlightened age of the world!

This we say is a portion of the progressive developments of the times in which we live, let the demagogues and the flatterers of the multitude say what they may. We are no politician—no, heaven forbid—but we think we can see as far through a mill stone as those who pick it. We can see enough, at least, to convince us, that those who are always picking at an imaginary form of society in this country, which they term the aristocracy, are pandering to the vilest feelings of our nature—to those of envy, hatred, malignity and absolute tyranny—and of course, instead of elevating by the nobleness and the manly disinterestedness of their sentiments, are not only degrading their adherents, but endangering those whose greatest faults are to be found in the good examples which their every day acts and courteous behavior presents to the community.

Listen to the lamenations of our pious friend of the "Methodist Protestant," an excellent religious paper, published in Baltimore. He begins by saying:—

"My heart is sick with every day's report
Of wrong and outrage, with which earth is filled."

So said Cowper, of the times in which he lived. What if he had lived now, when the means for the communication of wrong and outrage are so increased? We are unwilling to believe the world is growing worse. We should like to believe it is growing better. But alas, alas, what day passes that does not furnish its materials to the history of the crime and wretchedness of the age in which we live.

We have no fellowship with misanthropy. There is much to love among men. There are men of high moral sense—of unswerving integrity all around us. But sometimes we almost forget this cheering truth in the gloom that falls upon the heart, upon a survey of the fraud and villainy and diabolical abandonment which are every day brought to light.

There is certainly a fearful responsibility resting somewhere. And our advice is to the people and to the press to look to it.—Lady's Dollar Newspaper.

ECCENTRICITY.

This word is now applied, apologetically, to the conduct of many persons who, had they lived a little earlier, would in all probability have been enumerated among the madmen, the fools, or the rogues. But modern charity, which finds so many salves for iniquity and folly, whilst it boldly condemns integrity as stubborness, and virtue as imbecility, finds it more convenient, at all events, more popular to cast the mantle of eccentricity even over premedicated crime, than to denounce the criminal in terms of just condemnation. Indeed, but few men who prove themselves equal to the perpetration of successful fraud are now considered in the light of criminals, while even those who fail of success in carrying out a complex scheme of imposition and treachery, are generally let off as men of great enterprise and singular eccentricity.

The same apology is sometimes found very convenient in behalf of a large number of our newspaper and other writers for the public. We have heard the inquiries frequently made, how was it possible that such a one could advance a proposition so absurd, or how such another one could sustain a doctrine so immoral and wicked? In many cases the reply has been, "Oh, who minds him! he is so very queer and so eccentric, nobody pays the least attention to what he says." But this is a great mistake. Some body, and a vast number of somebodys must pay attention to what he says, and believe and pay for what he says, otherwise the queer eccentric fellow would have to starve. But such accidents seldom happen to men who wear slouched hats, ragged coats, and dirty boots, but who have broad foreheads, erratic intellects, which change with the vanes on the steeples, and who are, for the time being, and not to speak irreverently, "all things unto all men."

There are, however, not a few queer eccentric ladies, who set about managing every body else's business to the neglect and ruin of their own, whose conduct would be held equally reprehensible, did they not also find their best apology in their very queerness and eccentricity, which covers so many sins in their male rivals. They, too, are in general very slovenly dressed from bonnet to shoetie, which, however, is but another and forcible evidence of their amiable originality and oddness of character. And with this reputation, they pass, or at least attempt to pass, free into every grade of society, doing a little mischief here, and creating a little confusion and dissatisfaction there, about the rights of this class, and the injuries of that class, but without, we venture to say, ever leaving the impress of one pure, gentle, or practical thought anywhere.—Ex. paper.

FLATTERY.

The true definition of this word is false praise—and if false, of course it is to be condemned; for we should all look upon a falsehood with abhorrence, and upon the utterer of it with pity and with a desire to lead him into the ways of truth. We are too apt to encourage this fault in others, by seeming to be gratified with what they have said, and instead of letting them know that we are beings possessed of immortal souls, and as such, superior to being treated as if we were mere toys, to be played with and praised for qualities which we do not possess, we smile and receive their adulerations as if it were our due. We may be sure that when unnatural praise is bestowed, the person who lavishes it considers us weak in intellect and deficient in discernment, therefore, we owe it to ourselves as beings seeking after knowledge and truth, to repel by our manner the false ones who would pour into our ears their heartless falsehoods.

If we receive with favor their words, they justly think that the hollowness of them has been skillfully concealed from us, by the apparent earnestness with which they were spoken. Arouse them from this false position, and prove to them that you have penetrated the veil which they had thrown over themselves, and can discern clearly and perfectly their motives. Let them know that when they have once departed from the truth, their eloquence is entirely lost upon you, and that until they correct that great fault they can never be to you as cherished friends.

The true praise of a sincere friend is ever gratifying; it encourages us to press onward in our course, and to make further improvements; but the words of the flatterer only bear us onward, perhaps to destruction. Certainly if we do not discover their falsehood we shall be seriously injured, for their hollow praises will increase our self-love and retard our advancements in the paths of knowledge and truth.

LABOR.

The most contemptible creature upon the footstool of God, is the idle young man of fashion. He is a fool—for he does nothing for himself or for society. There is no reason why any one should like him—why the world should desire his presence, or miss his absence. He is a knave—for he eats without labor, consumes without producing, lives by his own fraud, or that of some one to which he is accessory. It is the law of nature, that every man shall produce at least as much as he consumes; the fashionable exquisite produces nothing—the world is just so much the worse for every garment he wears, and every meal he eats.

A thief—for he steals himself, or is a receiver of the stolen goods of others. If born to wealth, it is a fraudulent inheritance, and every dollar has been wrenched from the sinews of some poor operative. He steals, therefore, the bread he eats. Paying for it, he pays the conventional representative of some man's labor—certainly not his own—probably not that of any one who had a right to give it. Right? There is no right in this case. What right have any set of men to say, one ounce of metal is equal to twelve hours of muscular contraction? And so heap up in vaults, or issue in pictured paper, so much value of nerve and muscle? The whole thing is absurd.

More truly honorable in the sight of heaven is the farmer's boy, who tills the fresh green earth, glowing and sweating in the sun; or the artisan, who shapes a shoe for the farmer; or the seamstress, who plies the busy needle for twelve shillings a week, than the haughtiest aristocrat in the world. What but a young bandit is he who rides about, and walks in Broadway, drawing his revenues from the toil of a score or two of mechanics? There will come a time when the drones of humanity will be driven from the hive of society. When the law, "except a man work, neither shall he eat," shall be enforced—when the idler will be every where held in contempt. The time is coming.

FIRESIDE TYRANNIES.

Nothing is more common in the circle of one's acquaintance than to find grievous suffering inflicted upon families by the unreasonableness, bad temper, and tyrannical disposition of some member of the flock, or, it may be, upon one by the same qualities in the rest. Almost all other sources of misery become insignificant in appearance when contrasted with this class of woes, for there is none from which a refuge or even temporary shelter is more difficult of attainment. It is like being chained to a stake for a continual infliction of torment. Wrong in all imaginable circumstances deserves resistance, and he who abuses a power drawn, or supposed to be drawn from nature, as truly breaks the compact with his subjects, as a king when he infringes on the constitution. Nature has put, as a morality, over all that of love. There is no trace amongst the higher chapters of her code of a sanction to the behests of tyranny, emanations of a party spirit, jealousy, and unreasonableness which so often make parlors into little representations of hell, and break generous hearts on the iron grating of the world prison by which they are environed.

Excuse for Smoking.—In the reign of James I. of tobacco hating notoriety, the boys of a school acquired the habit of smoking, and indulged it night and day, using the most ingenious expedients to conceal the vice from their master; till one luckless evening when the imps were huddled together round the fire of their dormitory, involving each other in vapors of their own creating, lo! in burst the master and stood in awful dignity before them.

'How now,' quoth the Dominie to the first lad; 'how dare you be smoking tobacco?'

'Sir,' said the boy, 'I am subject to headache, and a pipe takes off the pain.'

'And you? and you? and you?' inquired the demagogue, questioning every boy in his turn.

One had a 'raging tooth;' another cholic; the third a cough; in short, they all had something.

'Now, sirrah,' bellowed the doctor to the last boy, 'what disorder do you smoke for?'

Alas! all the excuses were exhausted; but putting down his pipe after a farewell whiff, and looking up in his master's face, in a whining hypocritical tone, 'Sir, I smoke for CORNS!'

MAXIMS.

Never decide till you have heard both sides of the question.—There are two sides to almost every thing, excepting to a pancake—that has only a top and bottom.

A man who is always sneering at woman is generally a coarse profligate, or a coarse bigot; no matter which.

The practice of the present day of tamely submitting to whatever is popular, should make humanity blush for shame.

Correction.—We made a mistake in our last in saying that Pres. Strang baptized four persons on the 30th ult. He baptized only three. Bro. Benjamin G. Wright, Jun. President of the stake, baptized Bro. Gurley.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD LAST WEEK.

John W. Scofield,	$1,00	to Vol.	IV	No. 38
John Hosbrook,	1,00	"	"	38
Isaac B. Myers,	1,00	"	"	38
Charles Greenwood,	1,00	"	"	38
Jesse Seely,	1,00	"	"	29
Chauncey Jennings,	1,00	"	"	29

NOTICE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at Franklin, Oakland Co., Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th of August, 1849. By order of the Twelve, possessed of immortal souls, and as such, superior to being treated as if we were mere toys, to be played with and praised for qualities which we do not possess, we smile and receive their adulerations as if it were our due. We may be sure that when unnatural praise is bestowed, the person who lavishes it considers us weak in intellect and deficient in discernment, therefore, we owe it to ourselves as beings seeking after knowledge and truth, to repel by our manner the false ones who would pour into our ears their heartless falsehoods.

SAMUEL GRAHAM.

If we receive with favor their words, they justly think that the hollowness of them has been skillfully concealed from us, by the apparent earnestness with which they were spoken. Arouse them from this false position, and prove to them that you have penetrated the veil which they had thrown over themselves, and can discern clearly and perfectly their motives. Let them know that when they have once departed from the truth, their eloquence is entirely lost upon you, and that until they correct that great fault they can never be to you as cherished friends.

The true praise of a sincere friend is ever gratifying; it encourages us to press onward in our course, and to make further improvements; but the words of the flatterer only bear us onward, perhaps to destruction. Certainly if we do not discover their falsehood we shall be seriously injured, for their hollow praises will increase our self-love and retard our advancements in the paths of knowledge and truth.

LABOR.

The most contemptible creature upon the footstool of God, is the idle young man of fashion. He is a fool—for he does nothing for himself or for society. There is no reason why any one should like him—why the world should desire his presence, or miss his absence. He is a knave—for he eats without labor, consumes without producing, lives by his own fraud, or that of some one to which he is accessory. It is the law of nature, that every man shall produce at least as much as he consumes; the fashionable exquisite produces nothing—the world is just so much the worse for every garment he wears, and every meal he eats.

A thief—for he steals himself, or is a receiver of the stolen goods of others. If born to wealth, it is a fraudulent inheritance, and every dollar has been wrenched from the sinews of some poor operative. He steals, therefore, the bread he eats. Paying for it, he pays the conventional representative of some man's labor—certainly not his own—probably not that of any one who had a right to give it. Right? There is no right in this case. What right have any set of men to say, one ounce of metal is equal to twelve hours of muscular contraction? And so heap up in vaults, or issue in pictured paper, so much value of nerve and muscle? The whole thing is absurd.

More truly honorable in the sight of heaven is the farmer's boy, who tills the fresh green earth, glowing and sweating in the sun; or the artisan, who shapes a shoe for the farmer; or the seamstress, who plies the busy needle for twelve shillings a week, than the haughtiest aristocrat in the world. What but a young bandit is he who rides about, and walks in Broadway, drawing his revenues from the toil of a score or two of mechanics? There will come a time when the drones of humanity will be driven from the hive of society. When the law, "except a man work, neither shall he eat," shall be enforced—when the idler will be every where held in contempt. The time is coming.

FIRESIDE TYRANNIES.

Nothing is more common in the circle of one's acquaintance than to find grievous suffering inflicted upon families by the unreasonableness, bad temper, and tyrannical disposition of some member of the flock, or, it may be, upon one by the same qualities in the rest. Almost all other sources of misery become insignificant in appearance when contrasted with this class of woes, for there is none from which a refuge or even temporary shelter is more difficult of attainment. It is like being chained to a stake for a continual infliction of torment. Wrong in all imaginable circumstances deserves resistance, and he who abuses a power drawn, or supposed to be drawn from nature, as truly breaks the compact with his subjects, as a king when he infringes on the constitution. Nature has put, as a morality, over all that of love. There is no trace amongst the higher chapters of her code of a sanction to the behests of tyranny, emanations of a party spirit, jealousy, and unreasonableness which so often make parlors into little representations of hell, and break generous hearts on the iron grating of the world prison by which they are environed.

Excuse for Smoking.—In the reign of James I. of tobacco hating notoriety, the boys of a school acquired the habit of smoking, and indulged it night and day, using the most ingenious expedients to conceal the vice from their master; till one luckless evening when the imps were huddled together round the fire of their dormitory, involving each other in vapors of their own creating, lo! in burst the master and stood in awful dignity before them.

'How now,' quoth the Dominie to the first lad; 'how dare you be smoking tobacco?'

'Sir,' said the boy, 'I am subject to headache, and a pipe takes off the pain.'

'And you? and you? and you?' inquired the demagogue, questioning every boy in his turn.

One had a 'raging tooth;' another cholic; the third a cough; in short, they all had something.

'Now, sirrah;' bellowed the doctor to the last boy, 'what disorder do you smoke for?'

Alas! all the excuses were exhausted; but putting down his pipe after a farewell whiff, and looking up in his master's face, in a whining hypocritical tone, 'Sir, I smoke for corns!'

MAXIMS.

Never decide till you have heard both sides of the question.—There are two sides to almost every thing, excepting to a pancake—that has only a top and bottom.

A man who is always sneering at woman is generally a coarse profligate, or a coarse bigot; no matter which.

The practice of the present day of tamely submitting to whatever is popular, should make humanity blush for shame.

Correction.—We made a mistake in our last in saying that Pres. Strang baptized four persons on the 30th ult. He baptized only three. Bro. Benjamin G. Wright, Jun. President of the stake, baptized Bro. Gurley.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD LAST WEEK.

John W. Scofield,	$1,00	to Vol.	IV No.	36
John Hosbrook,	1,00	"	"	38
Isaac B. Myers,	1,00	"	"	38
Charles Greenwood,	1,00	"	"	38
Jesse Seely,	1,00	"	"	29
Chauncey Jennings,	1,00	"	"	29

NOTICE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at Franklin, Oakland Co., Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th of August, 1849. By order of the Twelve,

SAMUEL GRAHAM.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 19.] VOREE, WIS., THURSDAY, JULY 26, 1849. [WHOLE No. 135.

GOSPEL HERALD,
PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.
TERMS:
TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.
All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

☞ The first edition of the following revelation being disposed of, we are induced to republish it to satisfy the numerous calls from abroad, and the earnest solicitations of many of our readers.

REVELATION, GIVEN JAN. 7th, 1849.

Hearken, O ye saints, and give ear, for the time to favor Zion is at hand, and the day of her redemption draweth near. Draw near unto me and learn, for the ways of man are foolishness before me. Behold, ye shall be one, and if ye are not one ye are none of mine. And ye shall all speak the same thing. Ye are cursed; ye are confounded, because ye have many tongues, like unto Mystery Babylon, and many are running to and fro, speaking in their own wisdom, which is folly before me. By their speech gross darkness filleth the minds of the people. Those whom I have called to preach the gospel to the nations, have left serving me to contend against mine anointed, and I have not strengthened them, neither has their work prospered. They have only accomplished to scatter, and their evil ways follow them.

But I have a few names left in Voree who have not denied my word, nor rebelled against mine authority, nor done despite to mine anointed. And they shall be mine when I come to be glorified on earth. And there are a few in the Isles of the North who have not denied my name. When dominion is given to the saints I will remember their works. Nevertheless, as a people, ye have been slack in serving me. Ye have broken my commandments, and despised mine authority, and my precepts have been to you a vain thing. Ye are a stiff necked and rebellious people, who delight in your own vanities, and prefer your lusts to the chief of the things which God giveth. But such of you as draw near unto me, I will draw near unto them, and will save them. I have given you good gifts, and you have consumed them upon your lusts; I have chastised you, and ye have taken my name in vain; I have called you together to enjoy the blessings of my people, and ye have not heeded my call; I have revealed my authority to those that gathered, and they have spurned it; I have appointed shepherds unto you, and ye have despised them, and have walked in your own ways, where they did not lead you; and because of your rebellious hearts are you blind, and deaf, that seeing you perceive not, and hearing you understand not.

Ye have robbed me in tithes and in offerings, and have been slothful in building a House unto my name, that I may dwell in it, and in building a Tower of Strength for the defence and the dwelling of Zion. Come, now, therefore, and bring in your tithes, and build a House unto me, that I may reveal most precious things unto you. And make unto me a free will offering, for a strong hold upon the Hill of Promise, according to the pattern which I have shown unto my servant James, and of which he has begun to lay the foundation, and I will show all things unto him in their time: and if ye do these things, I will give you strength that your enemies shall not prevail over you, and this shall be your possession. Moreover, I have given you the Islands in the great Lakes for a possession.—There shall you dwell apart from the Gentiles, and none shall make you afraid. For my law shall be kept there, and judgment shall be rendered against those that despise it.

If ye will therefore possess these things, remember my law, to keep it. Forget not the precepts which I have given you, but act wisely, according to the wisdom which I have revealed unto you; and despise not my word, for it is not a vain thing. I have given you wisdom, with promise. If ye will not live by it, the promise is not unto you. It is a vain thing for you to witness my word, if ye will not regard it, to live by it.

At Voree shall your possessions be purchased with money, and you shall make speed to redeem that which you have purchased.—To that end have I blessed you, and you have consumed the blessings on things which are not good for you; yea, even the Order which I have commanded you to establish according to the Order of the church of the first born, have done this. Yet because the chief among them have sought unto me, and have admonished unto faithfulness, and have kept my words, I will yet bless them, and will give them the kingdom, if they abide in well doing.

Once more I command all my saints to bring in their tithes, according to the law I have given them, and build a house unto me. Whosoever will not do it shall not enter into the house of the Lord. Let mine Apostles call on all the saints, both by word and proclamation, to do this thing. And let faithful and chosen ones be sent unto them, to receive of their tithes for this work, and let the work progress from this time forward.

And send faithful ones unto the saints, and call on them to make a free will offering for the Tower which I have commanded you to build on the Hill of Promise, and let the same be built, that it may be a habitation and a defence for the saints that shall gather together and keep the Order of Enoch, which I have revealed unto my servants, and let a subscription be circulated, that those who have not sold their possessions and cannot yet gather up their goods to the places appointed, may assist in building the Towers of Zion, and may obtain an inheritance among the faithful.

And ye shall establish this Order at the stake which I have appointed among the Lamanites, and there shall ye keep it in all your habitations. And I will multiply you, and increase you exceedingly. And those that are strong in my ways will I make patriarchs and rulers in their tribes, and princes in their houses. Their inheritances shall be appointed unto them and to their houses, and their posterity after them for a perpetual possession. Let many gather to the Islands which I have appointed for your gathering, that this Order may be kept more perfectly; for there will I give you much possession for an inheritance, if ye will go up and possess it. And such as shall be appointed of the Order of Enoch, by the voice of the Order, shall go up and possess the land, but they shall retain a strong hold at Voree, for it must needs be that they keep a possession there, and my work requires it. And if they do not redeem and preserve it, they must be afflicted with sore affliction. If they are faith-

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 19.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, JULY 26, 1849. [WHOLE No. 135.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

☞ The first edition of the following revelation being disposed of, we are induced to republish it to satisfy the numerous calls from abroad, and the earnest solicitations of many of our readers.

REVELATION, GIVEN JAN. 7th, 1849.

Hearken, O ye saints, and give ear, for the time to favor Zion is at hand, and the day of her redemption draweth near. Draw near unto me and learn, for the ways of man are foolishness before me. Behold, ye shall be one, and if ye are not one ye are none of mine. And ye shall all speak the same thing. Ye are cursed; ye are confounded, because ye have many tongues, like unto Mystery Babylon, and many are running to and fro, speaking in their own wisdom, which is folly before me. By their speech gross darkness filleth the minds of the people. Those whom I have called to preach the gospel to the nations, have left serving me to contend against mine anointed, and I have not strengthened them, neither has their work prospered. They have only accomplished to scatter, and their evil ways follow them.

But I have a few names left in Voree who have not denied my word, nor rebelled against mine authority, nor done despite to mine anointed. And they shall be mine when I come to be glorified on earth. And there are a few in the Isles of the North who have not denied my name. When dominion is given to the saints I will remember their works. Nevertheless, as a people, ye have been slack in serving me. Ye have broken my commandments, and despised mine authority, and my precepts have been to you a vain thing. Ye are a stiff necked and rebellious people, who delight in your own vanities, and prefer your lusts to the chief of the things which God giveth. But such of you as draw near unto me, I will draw near unto them, and will save them. I have given you good gifts, and you have consumed them upon your lusts; I have chastised you, and ye have taken my name in vain; I have called you together to enjoy the blessings of my people, and ye have not heeded my call; I have revealed my authority to those that gathered, and they have spurned it; I have appointed shepherds unto you, and ye have despised them, and have walked in your own ways, where they did not lead you; and because of your rebellious hearts are you blind, and deaf, that seeing you perceive not, and hearing you understand not.

Ye have robbed me in tithes and in offerings, and have been slothful in building a House unto my name, that I may dwell in it, and in building a Tower of Strength for the defence and the dwelling of Zion. Come, now, therefore, and bring in your tithes, and build a House unto me, that I may reveal most precious things unto you. And make unto me a free will offering, for a strong hold upon the Hill of Promise, according to the pattern which I have shown unto my servant James, and of which he has begun to lay the foundation, and I will show all things unto him in their time: and if ye do these things, I will give you strength that your enemies shall not prevail over you, and this shall be your possession. Moreover, I have given you the Islands in the great Lakes for a possession.—There shall you dwell apart from the Gentiles, and none shall make you afraid. For my law shall be kept there, and judgment shall be rendered against those that despise it.

If ye will therefore possess these things, remember my law, to keep it. Forget not the precepts which I have given you, but act wisely, according to the wisdom which I have revealed unto you; and despise not my word, for it is not a vain thing. I have given you wisdom, with promise. If ye will not live by it, the promise is not unto you. It is a vain thing for you to witness my word, if ye will not regard it, to live by it.

At Voree shall your possessions be purchased with money, and you shall make speed to redeem that which you have purchased.—To that end have I blessed you, and you have consumed the blessings on things which are not good for you; yea, even the Order which I have commanded you to establish according to the Order of the church of the first born, have done this. Yet because the chief among them have sought unto me, and have admonished unto faithfulness, and have kept my words, I will yet bless them, and will give them the kingdom, if they abide in well doing.

Once more I command all my saints to bring in their tithes, according to the law I have given them, and build a house unto me. Whosoever will not do it shall not enter into the house of the Lord. Let mine Apostles call on all the saints, both by word and proclamation, to do this thing. And let faithful and chosen ones be sent unto them, to receive of their tithes for this work, and let the work progress from this time forward.

And send faithful ones unto the saints, and call on them to make a free will offering for the Tower which I have commanded you to build on the Hill of Promise, and let the same be built, that it may be a habitation and a defence for the saints that shall gather together and keep the Order of Enoch, which I have revealed unto my servants, and let a subscription be circulated, that those who have not sold their possessions and cannot yet gather up their goods to the places appointed, may assist in building the Towers of Zion, and may obtain an inheritance among the faithful.

And ye shall establish this Order at the stake which I have appointed among the Lamanites, and there shall ye keep it in all your habitations. And I will multiply you, and increase you exceedingly. And those that are strong in my ways will I make patriarchs and rulers in their tribes, and princes in their houses. Their inheritances shall be appointed unto them and to their houses, and their posterity after them for a perpetual possession. Let many gather to the Islands which I have appointed for your gathering, that this Order may be kept more perfectly; for there will I give you much possession for an inheritance, if ye will go up and possess it. And such as shall be appointed of the Order of Enoch, by the voice of the Order, shall go up and possess the land, but they shall retain a strong hold at Voree, for it must needs be that they keep a possession there, and my work requires it. And if they do not redeem and preserve it, they must be afflicted with sore affliction. If they are faithful unto me, my strength shall shield them and prosper them.

And let this Order be an example unto all, both to the believing and to the unbelieving; for if they do not walk in my ways more perfectly, I will yet cast them off. For the properties of this Order are all mine. He that draws back from this Order and takes away that which he has consecrated, robbeth me, saith the Lord. Nevertheless, now, ye shall not withhold; for he shall be trodden down by whom I will, in my own time. And ye have polluted yourselves by your excess of flesh, which ye have eaten, and by the unclean things and poisonous drugs which ye have consumed upon your lusts. Behold ye say ye need these things. But I say they are not good for you. Who is man, that he should prefer himself to God? And for these are ye in debt to your enemies. Except I deliver you, they shall oppress you. But the righteous will I establish, and the wicked will I cast off.

Put away covetousness. Remember that all that ye possess is mine. Cast all idlers out of this Order. Let no man call aught his own, nor buy nor sell as though it were his. But let all be the common property of all, as I have given unto you, and let those buy and sell who are appointed by common consent. And this shall be your inheritance, and the inheritance of your children forever. He that is faithful in this little shall be made prince of a village, or ruler of a Tower; and he that is faithful therein shall be made patriarch of a tribe, or ruler of many cities in my kingdom.

And ye shall not provoke one another. But ye shall console and strengthen one another. Ye shall strengthen the weak; for with kindness and much charity will I give you to prevail, and ye shall save them. And ye shall not contend against one another.

Rebel not against my servant James; for I am with him, and I have given unto him the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven. Whosoever receiveth me receiveth him. Whosoever receiveth him, receiveth those whom I have sent. Whosoever heareth not his words, heareth not mine. Whosoever heareth not his words, hearkeneth not to the words of those whom I have sent. For I have made him the chief shepherd of the whole flock on earth. They that are of the flock hear his voice. If not, they go astray to destruction.

Behold I am his friend; for he has been faithful unto me. And the keys which I have given to him shall not be taken from him in this world, neither in the world to come. They that speak evil of him are enemies unto me, saith the Lord. They have given themselves unto lies, and their hearts to wickedness. For he is meeker than Moses, more patient than Job, and has kept himself unpolluted in the midst of the lustful and ungodly till they have departed from him.

Ye know not his patience, nor his faith, nor his trials and sufferings. How have ye cast your toil on him? Ye have required him to bring redemption to Zion, and prosperity to you when ye lifted not your hands. Because he has not done it, many have reviled him and denied my name. But to as many as are faithful, will I give power to become heirs of the kingdom of heaven. And I have a great work for him to do, and with speed shall he do it, if ye uphold him in faith and confidence and prayer. For my hidden word shall be translated, and given to those that will receive it. And I have called him to this work.

And if my servant George J. Adams will be his counsellor, let him come and dwell near unto my servant James, and assist him in presiding, and in the school of the prophets, and in carrying my word to the saints, and to the nations, and to far countries. But let his dwelling be in the inheritance of the saints. If he do this, I will sustain him and will make him a host, and the head of nations.

Behold my servant William Marks has gone far astray in departing from me, yet I give unto him a little space; for I remember his work that he has done in the time that is past. If he will return and abide faithful I will make him great, and his possessions shall be great, and he shall possess a city, and his children shall dwell therein; a nation shall call him blessed.

And my servants the Apostles have not filled their mission in preaching my gospel to the nations of the earth, but have betaken themselves to their own work. If they had obeyed me I would have given them a host as the fruit of their labor, and added to them their food, raiment and possessions also. Do I not possess all? and am I impoverished that I cannot reward the faithful? I will provide for him that obeys me, and array him that regards my words.

I have protected you from all your enemies; I have turned men's hearts that they should do good unto you, and not persecute you; I have given you a home in a bountiful land, and ye have not done good according to my abundant mercies, nor regarded me according to my loving kindness. But ye have made yourselves like the Gentiles, and have sought your own ways, and not mine. And now turn unto me all ye my people, lest the disobedient and the rebellious be cut off, and cast out of his possession, and persecution and wrath come on those who are slack in serving me. And I give you chastisement and much sorrow. For your enemies shall be upon you, and ye shall flee before them, if ye turn not to me to be faithful.

REGENERATION.

This is a subject which has called the attention of all christendom, from the first to the last of all the sects on earth. Some have supposed the "new birth" to be a change of heart. Others that it is to be converted. While others make a distinction between converson and the new birth; that to be converted or change our principles is one thing, and to be born again is another. But, first, I would, in order to understand the subject, ask, what is regeneration? What is it to be generated? To be generated is to be begotten and brought forth into the world. To be regenerated is to be begotten the second time. Hence arose the question with Nicodemus when Jesus said to him, "except a man be born again he cannot enter the kingdom of God," "how can a man be born again when he is old? Can he enter the second time into his mother's womb?" This appeared to be marvelous in the eyes of a ruler of the Jews, but Jesus solves the problem, that as man was born of woman in order to come into this world, even so man must be born of the water and the spirit in order to get into the kingdom of God. John iii. 5.

We read in the first chapt. of John, 11th, 12th and 13th verses, that as many as received Christ, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God. By this it appears that they had power to become the sons of God, by receiving Christ and being born of God; that is, of the water and the spirit, upon the same principle that one by being born of woman becomes the son of man. We find also in the 19th chapt. and 28th verse of Matt. Christ promises to his twelve Apostles that they should sit upon twelve thrones and judge the twelve tribes of Israel, because they had followed him in the regeneration. But, says one, this regeneration was the regeneration of the heart—a regeneration from sin. Then, according to this, Christ must have been a sinner, and been regenerated from sin; otherwise his disciples could not have followed him, for they could not have followed him in traveling where Christ had not been. But in the regeneration of water they could have followed, for as "he went down into the water and came up out of the water," even so they could go down into the water and come out again, and thus not only have their hearts regenerated, but also their whole bodies and spirits. But, says the objector, if Christ meant that a man should be buried in the water and come ful unto me, my strength shall shield them and prosper them.

And let this Order be an example unto all, both to the believing and to the unbelieving; for if they do not walk in my ways more perfectly, I will yet cast them off. For the properties of this Order are all mine. He that draws back from this Order and takes away that which he has consecrated, robbeth me, saith the Lord. Nevertheless, now, ye shall not withhold; for he shall be trodden down by whom I will, in my own time. And ye have polluted yourselves by your excess of flesh, which ye have eaten, and by the unclean things and poisonous drugs which ye have consumed upon your lusts. Behold ye say ye need these things. But I say they are not good for you. Who is man, that he should prefer himself to God? And for these are ye in debt to your enemies. Except I deliver you, they shall oppress you. But the righteous will I establish, and the wicked will I cast off.

Put away covetousness. Remember that all that ye possess is mine. Cast all idlers out of this Order. Let no man call aught his own, nor buy nor sell as though it were his. But let all be the common property of all, as I have given unto you, and let those buy and sell who are appointed by common consent. And this shall be your inheritance, and the inheritance of your children forever. He that is faithful in this little shall be made prince of a village, or ruler of a Tower; and he that is faithful therein shall be made patriarch of a tribe, or ruler of many cities in my kingdom.

And ye shall not provoke one another. But ye shall console and strengthen one another. Ye shall strengthen the weak; for with kindness and much charity will I give you to prevail, and ye shall save them. And ye shall not contend against one another.

Rebel not against my servant James; for I am with him, and I have given unto him the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven. Whosoever receiveth me receiveth him. Whosoever receiveth him, receiveth those whom I have sent. Whosoever heareth not his words, heareth not mine. Whosoever heareth not his words, hearkeneth not to the words of those whom I have sent. For I have made him the chief shepherd of the whole flock on earth. They that are of the flock hear his voice. If not, they go astray to destruction.

Behold I am his friend; for he has been faithful unto me. And the keys which I have given to him shall not be taken from him in this world, neither in the world to come. They that speak evil of him are enemies unto me, saith the Lord. They have given themselves unto lies, and their hearts to wickedness. For he is meeker than Moses, more patient than Job, and has kept himself unpolluted in the midst of the lustful and ungodly till they have departed from him.

Ye know not his patience, nor his faith, nor his trials and sufferings. How have ye cast your toil on him? Ye have required him to bring redemption to Zion, and prosperity to you when ye lifted not your hands. Because he has not done it, many have reviled him and denied my name. But to as many as are faithful, will I give power to become heirs of the kingdom of heaven. And I have a great work for him to do, and with speed shall he do it, if ye uphold him in faith and confidence and prayer. For my hidden word shall be translated, and given to those that will receive it. And I have called him to this work.

And if my servant George J. Adams will be his counsellor, let him come and dwell near unto my servant James, and assist him in presiding, and in the school of the prophets, and in carrying my word to the saints, and to the nations, and to far countries. But let his dwelling be in the inheritance of the saints. If he do this, I will sustain him and will make him a host, and the head of nations.

Behold my servant William Marks has gone far astray in departing from me, yet I give unto him a little space; for I remember his work that he has done in the time that is past. If he will return and abide faithful I will make him great, and his possessions shall be great, and he shall possess a city, and his children shall dwell therein; a nation shall call him blessed.

And my servants the Apostles have not filled their mission in preaching my gospel to the nations of the earth, but have betaken themselves to their own work. If they had obeyed me I would have given them a host as the fruit of their labor, and added to them their food, raiment and possessions also. Do I not possess all? and am I impoverished that I cannot reward the faithful? I will provide for him that obeys me, and array him that regards my words.

I have protected you from all your enemies; I have turned men's hearts that they should do good unto you, and not persecute you; I have given you a home in a bountiful land, and ye have not done good according to my abundant mercies, nor regarded me according to my loving kindness. But ye have made yourselves like the Gentiles, and have sought your own ways, and not mine. And now turn unto me all ye my people, lest the disobedient and the rebellious be cut off, and cast out of his possession, and persecution and wrath come on those who are slack in serving me. And I give you chastisement and much sorrow. For your enemies shall be upon you, and ye shall flee before them, if ye turn not to me to be faithful.

REGENERATION.

This is a subject which has called the attention of all christendom, from the first to the last of all the sects on earth. Some have supposed the "new birth" to be a change of heart. Others that it is to be converted. While others make a distinction between conversion and the new birth; that to be converted or change our principles is one thing, and to be born again is another. But, first, I would, in order to understand the subject, ask, what is regeneration? What is it to be generated? To be generated is to be begotten and brought forth into the world. To be regenerated is to be begotten the second time. Hence arose the question with Nicodemus when Jesus said to him, "except a man be born again he cannot enter the kingdom of God," "how can a man be born again when he is old? Can he enter the second time into his mother's womb?" This appeared to be marvelous in the eyes of a ruler of the Jews, but Jesus solves the problem, that as man was born of woman in order to come into this world, even so man must be born of the water and the spirit in order to get into the kingdom of God. John iii. 5.

We read in the first chapt. of John, 11th, 12th and 13th verses, that as many as received Christ, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God. By this it appears that they had power to become the sons of God, by receiving Christ and being born of God; that is, of the water and the spirit, upon the same principle that one by being born of woman becomes the son of man. We find also in the 19th chapt. and 28th verse of Matt. Christ promises to his twelve Apostles that they should sit upon twelve thrones and judge the twelve tribes of Israel, because they had followed him in the regeneration. But, says one, this regeneration was the regeneration of the heart—a regeneration from sin. Then, according to this, Christ must have been a sinner, and been regenerated from sin; otherwise his disciples could not have followed him, for they could not have followed him in traveling where Christ had not been. But in the regeneration of water they could have followed, for as "he went down into the water and came up out of the water," even so they could go down into the water and come out again, and thus not only have their hearts regenerated, but also their whole bodies and spirits. But, says the objector, if Christ meant that a man should be buried in the water and come forth out of it in order to be born of water, how is it that a man is born of the spirit? I answer, upon the very same principle that he is born of water, that is, to be inveloped in the spirit and come forth out of it. Christ says, "the wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the spirit."—John iii. 8. We read in the 2d chapt. of Acts 1st and 2d verses concerning the Apostles receiving the Holy Ghost, "they were all with one accord in one place, and suddenly there came a sound from heaven as the rushing of a mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting, and they were filled with the Holy Ghost," &c.

By this we learn that the Holy Ghost comes like a breeze of the wind; that as the wind comes upon us and passes off again, we cannot tell from whence it comes, neither do we know where it goes, yet we feel the refreshing. We breathe the air, which seems pure, and our bodies are enveloped in the same. And, to use the ancient mode of expression, we would say we were born of the wind. So it is with the Holy Ghost. When the Apostles received it, it not only filled them, but all the house where they were, so that not only the Apostles, but the whole number who were with them were not only filled with the Holy Ghost, but baptized with it. Hence we discover the truth and propriety of the Savior's saying, "except a man be born of water and the spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of heaven." By passing through these two elements (if we may call spirit an element) we enter the kingdom of God, (or his church,) and until we have passed through both we are not born of God. Therefore, although we might have been born of water, we are not sons of God. For, says Paul, except we have the spirit of Christ, we are none of his. Consequently it takes both the water and spirit for the door into Christ's church, and also to make a perfect baptism. Hence, says Paul, "there is one Lord, one faith, and one baptism." Eph. iv. 5. S. P. BACON.

Elizabeth, Ill., July 17th, 1849.

Dear Brother Strang:—It is with pleasure I write to you, to inform you of the work in this place. I left Voree July 3d, and on Thursday, the 5th, I reached Jo Daviess Co., Ill., where I found myself in the midst of a set of people who said they believed in Christ, but, in fact, they did not believe anything that is taught by Christ or his Apostles. This is the place where McLellin made a stop, and tried to deceive some of the brethren, and did in some measure make out so to do. But they have long since left his pernicious ways. And they seem to be like men grasping in the dark for something to keep them from falling. But, alas! it is true that the word of the Lord given to Joseph in the letter of your appointment is fulfilled in this case: "Gather to my city of Voree, for if they scatter, the ungodly of the world will swallow them up."

Nevertheless I have found some honest saints here, from the fact that they received me kindly. I commenced to preach Friday, the 6th, and again on Sunday. I then gave out an appointment for Saturday, to preach at 4 P. M. A few of the saints came to hear. I preached, and brother Gurley bore testimony in the power of the spirit, and I began to think, as the Apostle said, "it is good for us to be here." Some of the saints rejoiced in the Lord. The next morning we went to the water, and I baptized two. In the afternoon Bro. Gurley preached to a large congregation, who, it seems, had not come for any good, but, during his remarks, interrupted him several times. I tried to answer some of their questions, but all to no purpose, and the meeting broke up. I had thought to organize a branch there, but the brethren thought it not best, as they would not be able to hold meetings here, for the people would not let them last year, when a mob was raised and forbid them holding meetings. The same spirit prevails there now. So I had to leave the place. I remain a minister of the gospel in the fulness of times,

PHINEAS WRIGHT.

THE VALUE OF TIME.

Time is measured duration; the material of our being, and the index of our progression to eternity. There was, before time begun its course; there will be when time shall be no longer. Time has been a favorite theme with philosophers, moralists, and sages.—Some have extolled it much, but none ever knew its intrinsic worth. The light of eternity must reveal it, the day of doom declare it, and all eternity re-echo it. Time past, how transient; time present, how evanescent; time to come, with many, how uncertain! How different in the lessons it teaches, and the impressions it makes!—The child wastes in its play, and knoweth not its worth; the anxious youth would hasten its course, and the aged put a long drag upon its wheels. Deferred hope, and endured pain, biddeth it fly; enjoyment would arrest its flight, and the condemned malefactor is overwhelmed at its velocity.

So intrinsically excellent, it is dealt out in moments, and two cotemporary ones never existed at the same period. Its travel is regular, silent but sure. It never wearies nor halts, nor turns aside; on, on, is its motto: on, on it has sped for nearly six thousand years. A thousand years were given to the antediluvians, one hundred and twenty to the patriarchs; but thirty are the measure of modern generations of mankind. Time is the space of man's existence, the bounds of his probation, and his seed time for eternity. In possession, it may be improved and enjoyed; gone, it is irrecoverably lost. Used, it blesses; neglected, it condemns; abused, it leaves its curse behind. Time should be redeemed from vain conversation—frivolous pursuits—foolishness of life. Time should be anticipated by prudent forethought, improved by holy diligence, and laid up for serious reflection. The records of time will furnish the subject for judgment, and influence the destinies of eternity. Reader, what do you think of time? how have you spent time past, how are you using time present, and how proposing, for time to come? Know its intrinsic value, be taught its importance, and so number your days, as to apply your heart unto wisdom.

FEMALE INDUSTRY.

What a happy simplicity prevailed in ancient times, when it was the custom for ladies, though of the greatest distinction, to employ themselves in useful, and sometimes, laborious works! Every one knows what is told us in scripture to this purpose concerning Rebecca, Rachel, and several others.

We read in Homer of princesses drawing themselves water from springs, and washing with their own hands the finest of the linen of their respective families. The sisters of Alexander the Great, who were the daughters of a powerful prince, employed themselves in making clothes for their brothers. The celebrated Lucretia used to spin in the midst of her female attendants.

Augustus, who was sovereign of the world, wore, for several years together, no other clothes but what his wife and sister made him. It was a custom in the northern parts of the world, not many years ago, for the princesses, who then set upon the throne, to prepare several of the dishes at every meal.

In a word, needle work, the care of domestic affairs, and a serious and retired life, is the proper function of women, and for this they were designed by Providence. The depravity of the age has indeed affixed to the customs, which are very near as old as the creation, an idea of meanness and contempt; but then, what has it substituted in the room of them? A soft indolence, a stupid idleness, frivolous conversation, vain amusements, and a strong passion for public forth out of it in order to be born of water, how is it that a man is born of the spirit? I answer, upon the very same principle that he is born of water, that is, to be inveloped in the spirit and come forth out of it. Christ says, "the wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the spirit."—John iii. 8. We read in the 2d chapt. of Acts 1st and 2d verses concerning the Apostles receiving the Holy Ghost, "they were all with one accord in one place, and suddenly there came a sound from heaven as the rushing of a mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting, and they were filled with the Holy Ghost," &c.

By this we learn that the Holy Ghost comes like a breeze of the wind; that as the wind comes upon us and passes off again, we cannot tell from whence it comes, neither do we know where it goes, yet we feel the refreshing. We breathe the air, which seems pure, and our bodies are enveloped in the same. And, to use the ancient mode of expression, we would say we were born of the wind. So it is with the Holy Ghost. When the Apostles received it, it not only filled them, but all the house where they were, so that not only the Apostles, but the whole number who were with them were not only filled with the Holy Ghost, but baptized with it. Hence we discover the truth and propriety of the Savior's saying, "except a man be born of water and the spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of heaven." By passing through these two elements (if we may call spirit an element) we enter the kingdom of God, (or his church,) and until we have passed through both we are not born of God. Therefore, although we might have been born of water, we are not sons of God. For, says Paul, except we have the spirit of Christ, we are none of his. Consequently it takes both the water and spirit for the door into Christ's church, and also to make a perfect baptism. Hence, says Paul, "there is one Lord, one faith, and one baptism." Eph. iv. 5. S. P. BACON.

Elizabeth, Ill., July 17th, 1849.

Dear Brother Strang:—It is with pleasure I write to you, to inform you of the work in this place. I left Voree July 3d, and on Thursday, the 5th, I reached Jo Daviess Co., Ill., where I found myself in the midst of a set of people who said they believed in Christ, but, in fact, they did not believe anything that is taught by Christ or his Apostles. This is the place where McLellin made a stop, and tried to deceive some of the brethren, and did in some measure make out so to do. But they have long since left his pernicious ways. And they seem to be like men grasping in the dark for something to keep them from falling. But, alas! it is true that the word of the Lord given to Joseph in the letter of your appointment is fulfilled in this case: "Gather to my city of Voree, for if they scatter, the ungodly of the world will swallow them up."

Nevertheless I have found some honest saints here, from the fact that they received me kindly. I commenced to preach Friday, the 6th, and again on Sunday. I then gave out an appointment for Saturday, to preach at 4 P. M. A few of the saints came to hear. I preached, and brother Gurley bore testimony in the power of the spirit, and I began to think, as the Apostle said, "it is good for us to be here." Some of the saints rejoiced in the Lord. The next morning we went to the water, and I baptized two. In the afternoon Bro. Gurley preached to a large congregation, who, it seems, had not come for any good, but, during his remarks, interrupted him several times. I tried to answer some of their questions, but all to no purpose, and the meeting broke up. I had thought to organize a branch there, but the brethren thought it not best, as they would not be able to hold meetings here, for the people would not let them last year, when a mob was raised and forbid them holding meetings. The same spirit prevails there now. So I had to leave the place. I remain a minister of the gospel in the fulness of times,

PHINEAS WRIGHT.

THE VALUE OF TIME.

Time is measured duration; the material of our being, and the index of our progression to eternity. There was, before time begun its course; there will be when time shall be no longer. Time has been a favorite theme with philosophers, moralists, and sages.—Some have extolled it much, but none ever knew its intrinsic worth. The light of eternity must reveal it, the day of doom declare it, and all eternity re-echo it. Time past, how transient; time present, how evanescent; time to come, with many, how uncertain! How different in the lessons it teaches, and the impressions it makes!—The child wastes in its play, and knoweth not its worth; the anxious youth would hasten its course, and the aged put a long drag upon its wheels. Deferred hope, and endured pain, biddeth it fly; enjoyment would arrest its flight, and the condemned malefactor is overwhelmed at its velocity.

So intrinsically excellent, it is dealt out in moments, and two cotemporary ones never existed at the same period. Its travel is regular, silent but sure. It never wearies nor halts, nor turns aside; on, on, is its motto: on, on it has sped for nearly six thousand years. A thousand years were given to the antediluvians, one hundred and twenty to the patriarchs; but thirty are the measure of modern generations of mankind. Time is the space of man's existence, the bounds of his probation, and his seed time for eternity. In possession, it may be improved and enjoyed; gone, it is irrecoverably lost. Used, it blesses; neglected, it condemns; abused, it leaves its curse behind. Time should be redeemed from vain conversation—frivolous pursuits—foolishness of life. Time should be anticipated by prudent forethought, improved by holy diligence, and laid up for serious reflection. The records of time will furnish the subject for judgment, and influence the destinies of eternity. Reader, what do you think of time? how have you spent time past, how are you using time present, and how proposing, for time to come? Know its intrinsic value, be taught its importance, and so number your days, as to apply your heart unto wisdom.

FEMALE INDUSTRY.

What a happy simplicity prevailed in ancient times, when it was the custom for ladies, though of the greatest distinction, to employ themselves in useful, and sometimes, laborious works! Every one knows what is told us in scripture to this purpose concerning Rebecca, Rachel, and several others.

We read in Homer of princesses drawing themselves water from springs, and washing with their own hands the finest of the linen of their respective families. The sisters of Alexander the Great, who were the daughters of a powerful prince, employed themselves in making clothes for their brothers. The celebrated Lucretia used to spin in the midst of her female attendants.

Augustus, who was sovereign of the world, wore, for several years together, no other clothes but what his wife and sister made him. It was a custom in the northern parts of the world, not many years ago, for the princesses, who then set upon the throne, to prepare several of the dishes at every meal.

In a word, needle work, the care of domestic affairs, and a serious and retired life, is the proper function of women, and for this they were designed by Providence. The depravity of the age has indeed affixed to the customs, which are very near as old as the creation, an idea of meanness and contempt; but then, what has it substituted in the room of them? A soft indolence, a stupid idleness, frivolous conversation, vain amusements, and a strong passion for public shows.

Let us compare these two characters, and pronounce which of them may justly boast its being founded on good sense, solid judgment, and a taste for truth and nature.

THE LAMANITES.

Bro. L. D. Hickey, one of the Twelve, writes that he has been laboring some among the Lamanites in the vicinity of Lapeer, Mich., and found them very favorable, and some were inquiring what they should do to be saved. This is cheering news to the saint whose heart's desire is that they might be saved. We feel assured that the day is not far distant when the stick of Judah shall come forth in its purity, and be united with the stick of Ephraim, "unto the confounding of false doctrines, and laying down of contentions," 'and establishing peace among them, and bringing them to the knowledge of their fathers, and also to the knowledge of the covenants of the Lord.'

BEAVER ISLAND.—For some reason or other we have not as yet received the minutes of the Conference on Beaver, but we have news up to the 9th inst., the fourth day of its sitting. The Conference was large and very interesting. Arrangements were making to send out a considerable number of Elders. Emigration was rapidly increasing.

SOLITUDE.

Solitude except as an occasional exception to the common current of life, is certainly not to be recommended for either man or woman. In this state, one is almost sure to become the victim of certain fixed ideas, approaching to the character of insanity. Prejudices which if exposed to the sun of social life, would melt into air, fix themselves down as with riveted screw-bolts. Confident dogmatic conclusions which could not walk the open streets a day without being knocked down like bullies, for their insolence, are cherished and nursed, till they become the very tyrants of the mind which has engendered them. In this unnatural state, the feelings become equally vitiated. The victim is reduced to a state of nervous irritability which altogether unfits him for enduring ordinary rubs of life. The slightest real or supposed error in domestic arrangement, one wry look or word from any one, striking on the universally delicate surface, makes him sore all over. If he has not real miseries, he will make a multitude out of nothing, or next to nothing.

BEAVER ISLANDS.

The Beaver Islands—ten in number—lie in the bosom of Lake Michigan, in latitude 45 deg. 40 min., and are beginning to attract considerable attention, both on account of the healthfulness of their climate, the extent of their fisheries, and as the Zion, or land of promise, of a considerable body of Mormons, the followers of Mr. Strang. Big Beaver Island, the principal one of the group, is thirteen miles in length by seven in breadth, containing about 50,000 acres of fertile and well timbered land. Paradise Bay forms the principal harbor, and is the seat of an extensive trade in fish, wood, &c. It is easily accessible, perfectly land locked, and sufficiently capacious for all the craft on the lakes. Around this bay the Mormons are making their settlements. There are two woodyards and three stores in operation—a steam saw mill is going up, and improvements are commenced on all the lands within four miles, besides various commencements in other locations. There are now employed in the fisheries some two hundred boats and five or six hundred fishermen; but the opening of farms, the building of mills and the establishment of all the various branches of business, always found in a settlement of a free and enterprising population, will soon leave this branch of business of comparative non-importance. Good stocks of cows have been brought on by the Mormons, who are intending to devote much attention to agriculture with with every prospect of success. Notwithstanding the high latitude all the fine grains flourish, and the prospect is that the grazing will be of the first quality. In case they shall succeed they will be able to furnish supplies to the lake trade, at a point where there is no competition within two hundred miles, and where the demand must always be great.

The new and staunch propeller Troy makes regular trips to Big Beaver, always stopping on her way up and down. On her next trip up, which will be the first week in July, she will accommodate the last of numerous delegates going up to attend the Mormon Conference, to be held there the sixth of that month. The Mormons have already established a school, at which they furnish gratuitous instruction to the children of the Indians residing in the vicinity. In about six weeks they will commence the publication of a weekly paper, the press and materials for which are already purchased. Their numbers on the Island are now about three hundred; but it is expected that before the close of the season, they will be increased to one thousand in number.—Buffalo Express.

THE WORLD AS IT IS.

This world is not so bad a world,
As some would like to make it;
Though, whether good, or whether bad,
Depends on how we take it.
For if we scold and fret all day,
From dewy morn till even,
This world will ne'er afford to man
A foretaste here of heaven.

This world in truth's as good a world
As e'er was known to any
Who have not seen another yet,
(And these are very many;)
And if the men and women too
Have plenty of employment,
Those surely must be hard to please,
Who cannot find enjoyment.

This world is quite a clever world
In rain or pleasant weather,
If people would but learn to live
In harmony together;
Nor seek to burst the kindly bond
By love and peace cemented;
And learn that best of lessons yet,
To always be contented.

Then were the world a pleasant world,
And pleasant folks were in it,
The day would pass most pleasantly
To those who thus begin it;
And all the nameless grievances
Brought on by borrowed troubles,
Would prove, as certainly they are,
A mass of empty bubbles.

STUNTED MINDS.—There are scores of men who are just as ignorant at fifty years of age, as when they completed their minority. They take no pains to look into what they do not comprehend, and hold on tenaciously to their old fashioned and long exploded ideas. Such men possess, in an eminent degree, barren and stunted minds. You cannot reason with them; they are confident tha they are right; and nothing can turn them.

shows.

Let us compare these two characters, and pronounce which of them may justly boast its being founded on good sense, solid judgment, and a taste for truth and nature.

THE LAMANITES.

Bro. L. D. Hickey, one of the Twelve, writes that he has been laboring some among the Lamanites in the vicinity of Lapeer, Mich., and found them very favorable, and some were inquiring what they should do to be saved. This is cheering news to the saint whose heart's desire is that they might be saved. We feel assured that the day is not far distant when the stick of Judah shall come forth in its purity, and be united with the stick of Ephraim, "unto the confounding of false doctrines, and laying down of contentions," 'and establishing peace among them, and bringing them to the knowledge of their fathers, and also to the knowledge of the covenants of the Lord.'

Beaver Island.—For some reason or other we have not as yet received the minutes of the Conference on Beaver, but we have news up to the 9th inst., the fourth day of its sitting. The Conference was large and very interesting. Arrangements were making to send out a considerable number of Elders. Emigration was rapidly increasing.

SOLITUDE.

Solitude except as an occasional exception to the common current of life, is certainly not to be recommended for either man or woman. In this state, one is almost sure to become the victim of certain fixed ideas, approaching to the character of insanity. Prejudices which if exposed to the sun of social life, would melt into air, fix themselves down as with riveted screw-bolts. Confident dogmatic conclusions which could not walk the open streets a day without being knocked down like bullies, for their insolence, are cherished and nursed, till they become the very tyrants of the mind which has engendered them. In this unnatural state, the feelings become equally vitiated. The victim is reduced to a state of nervous irritability which altogether unfits him for enduring ordinary rubs of life. The slightest real or supposed error in domestic arrangement, one wry look or word from any one, striking on the universally delicate surface, makes him sore all over. If he has not real miseries, he will make a multitude out of nothing, or next to nothing.

BEAVER ISLANDS.

The Beaver Islands—ten in number—lie in the bosom of Lake Michigan, in latitude 45 deg. 40 min., and are beginning to attract considerable attention, both on account of the healthfulness of their climate, the extent of their fisheries, and as the Zion, or land of promise, of a considerable body of Mormons, the followers of Mr. Strang. Big Beaver Island, the principal one of the group, is thirteen miles in length by seven in breadth, containing about 50,000 acres of fertile and well timbered land. Paradise Bay forms the principal harbor, and is the seat of an extensive trade in fish, wood, &c. It is easily accessible, perfectly land locked, and sufficiently capacious for all the craft on the lakes. Around this bay the Mormons are making their settlements. There are two woodyards and three stores in operation—a steam saw mill is going up, and improvements are commenced on all the lands within four miles, besides various commencements in other locations. There are now employed in the fisheries some two hundred boats and five or six hundred fishermen; but the opening of farms, the building of mills and the establishment of all the various branches of business, always found in a settlement of a free and enterprising population, will soon leave this branch of business of comparative non-importance. Good stocks of cows have been brought on by the Mormons, who are intending to devote much attention to agriculture with with every prospect of success. Notwithstanding the high latitude all the fine grains flourish, and the prospect is that the grazing will be of the first quality. In case they shall succeed they will be able to furnish supplies to the lake trade, at a point where there is no competition within two hundred miles, and where the demand must always be great.

The new and staunch propeller Troy makes regular trips to Big Beaver, always stopping on her way up and down. On her next trip up, which will be the first week in July, she will accommodate the last of numerous delegates going up to attend the Mormon Conference, to be held there the sixth of that month. The Mormons have already established a school, at which they furnish gratuitous instruction to the children of the Indians residing in the vicinity. In about six weeks they will commence the publication of a weekly paper, the press and materials for which are already purchased. Their numbers on the Island are now about three hundred; but it is expected that before the close of the season, they will be increased to one thousand in number.—Buffalo Express.

THE WORLD AS IT IS.

This world is not so bad a world,
As some would like to make it;
Though, whether good, or whether bad,
Depends on how we take it.
For if we scold and fret all day,
From dewy morn till even,
This world will ne'er afford to man
A foretaste here of heaven.

This world in truth's as good a world
As e'er was known to any
Who have not seen another yet,
(And these are very many;)
And if the men and women too
Have plenty of employment,
Those surely must be hard to please,
Who cannot find enjoyment.

This world is quite a clever world
In rain or pleasant weather,
If people would but learn to live
In harmony together;
Nor seek to burst the kindly bond
By love and peace cemented;
And learn that best of lessons yet,
To always be contented.

Then were the world a pleasant world,
And pleasant folks were in it,
The day would pass most pleasantly
To those who thus begin it;
And all the nameless grievances
Brought on by borrowed troubles.
Would prove, as certainly they are,
A mass of empty bubbles.

Stunted Minds.—There are scores of men who are just as ignorant at fifty years of age, as when they completed their minority. They take no pains to look into what they do not comprehend, and hold on tenaciously to their old fashioned and long exploded ideas. Such men possess, in an eminent degree, barren and stunted minds. You cannot reason with them; they are confident tha they are right; and nothing can turn them.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 20.] VOREE, WIS., THURSDAY, AUG. 2, 1849. [WHOLE No. 136.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD AT THE CITY OF JAMES, BEAVER ISLAND, ON THE 6TH, 7TH AND 8TH OF JULY, 1849.

Friday morning session, 10 o'clock, A. M.—Elder Geo. J. Adams, one of the First Presidency, was appointed to preside in the absence of Pres. James J. Strang. Opened by singing. Prayer by G. J. Adams, after which Elder Adams read before the Conference the 102d Psalm. Preaching by Elder James Blakeslee, one of the Twelve, from these words, penned by John the Revelator, in his 22d chapt., at the 14th verse: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gate into the city." He was followed by G. J. Adams on the same subject. Adjourned until 3 o'clock, P. M. Benediction by Samuel Graham, one of the Twelve.

Afternoon session.—Singing. Prayer by Elder Blakeslee.—Singing. Preaching by C. W. Appleton, Elder. Bro. Appleton gave a history of his conversion and call to the ministry of the everlasting gospel. Adjourned until evening. Benediction by G. J. Adams.

Evening session.—Pres. James J. Strang presiding. Singing. Prayer by James J. Strang, prophet of the most high God and witness of the Lord Jesus Christ. Preaching by Elder Samuel Graham on the conditions of salvation to a fallen world. He was followed by J. J. Strang and Geo. J. Adams on the same subject. Adjourned until to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock, A. M. Benediction by Pres. Strang.

Saturday morning, 10 o'clock, A. M.—Met in the grove, for the want of house room. Pres. Strang read the 3d chapt. of first Timothy. Singing. Prayer by James J. Strang. On motion Bros. James M. Greig, E. J. More, C. W. Appleton and Samuel Graham acted as asssistants to the Secretary. Pres. Strang arose and represented the church at Voree as being in a prosperous condition, not, however, on account of its numbers, but the faith and integrity of the saints, stating that there was more faith and God-like confidence in fifty of the brethren at Voree than in the cowardly thousands that surrounded the prophet Joseph when he was left to die at the hands of the ungodly; portrayed in his usual manner the increasing confidence and respect that the church was every where gaining; that during the last five years of his ministry he had not seen the church in so prosperous a condition, and in possession of so much true faith as at the present time; however, with pain, he had to speak of the apostacy of our much beloved Bro. John E. Page, Pres. of the Twelve, who had been personally admonished, but refused, when means had frequently been given him to defray his expenses on different missions to which he had been appointed, to give satisfaction to the church, and had been suspended from all authority in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints until the present session of Conference should finally dispose of his case. The case of John E. Page was therefore presented as the first item of business before the Conference.

Elder Geo. J. Adams arose and spoke of his untiring love and confidence in Bro. John E. Page, and of his unwillingness to let him go. Bro. Adams expressed much feeling on the subject, and by his soul stirring appeals in behalf of his old and much loved friend and brother, deeply affected the hearts of the saints. Elder James Blakeslee arose and expressed himself in as strong terms as a brother whose very heart was bleeding within him could possibly do. He was anxious to sustain Bro. John E. Page if possible, and do honor to the church and kingdom of God.

Ebenezer Page, one of the Twelve, next arose, and with the feelings of a fond and natural brother, strenghtened by the bond of the eternal brotherhood of God Almighty, expressed his love for his brother and President of his quorum in the church of God, stating that he had talked with his brother and faithfully admonished him, but could get no assurance of him that he at this time had any confidence in the authority of James J. Strang's administration, and gave his opinion that Bro. Page could not be restored to the church at present, but must be given for a time to the buffetings of Satan that he may learn obedience, but he should hang on to John E. with a love and faith that would reach to eternity, that in the day of God Almighty his spirit might at least be saved.

Bro. James M. Greig next arose and in his usual manlike spirit expressed his love for Bro. John E. Page, and also stated that he did not know any difference between great men and small ones in the church of God, and he loved the church more than any man; and that because a man had done a great deal and suffered much, it was no assurance to him that that man was to be respected in his rights above the rights of the least saint in the kingdom of God.—He had great reason to love Bro. John E. Page, and would be the last man to receive an accusation against him merely upon rumor, but when facts presented themselves they were insurmountable, and he did heartily approve of the noble spirit and design of Bro. Ebenezer Page. Adjourned to meet at 3 o'clock, P. M. Benediction by E. Page.

Afternoon session.—Opened by singing. Prayer by James M. Greig. Elder Samuel Graham arose to speak on the question of sustaining Bro. John E. Page in his office and standing in the church, and in his quorum; said he regarded him as one of the giant minds of the age, but notwithstanding his ability in the church and kingdom of God, it is his duty to set an example worthy of his greatness; that the ablest of men, when assisted by the inspiration of God, were as the smallest mote of the dust, when opposed to God. Elder Graham also spoke of Bro. Page's pledges before the Conference at Voree last spring, and of his hopes at the time of a compliance with the same on the part of Bro. Page; also stated that so far from having anything against Bro. Page, he had always loved him, and was bound to continue to love with a love stronger than death, that should reach to eternity.

Bro. Finley Page next arose and stated that he had, in all the

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 20.] VOREE, WIS., THURSDAY, AUG. 2, 1849. [WHOLE No. 136.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD AT THE CITY OF JAMES, BEAVER ISLAND, ON THE 6TH, 7TH AND 8TH OF JULY, 1849.

Friday morning session, 10 o'clock, A. M.—Elder Geo. J. Adams, one of the First Presidency, was appointed to preside in the absence of Pres. James J. Strang. Opened by singing. Prayer by G. J. Adams, after which Elder Adams read before the Conference the 102d Psalm. Preaching by Elder James Blakeslee, one of the Twelve, from these words, penned by John the Revelator, in his 22d chapt., at the 14th verse: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gate into the city." He was followed by G. J. Adams on the same subject. Adjourned until 3 o'clock, P. M. Benediction by Samuel Graham, one of the Twelve.

Afternoon session.—Singing. Prayer by Elder Blakeslee.—Singing. Preaching by C. W. Appleton, Elder. Bro. Appleton gave a history of his conversion and call to the ministry of the everlasting gospel. Adjourned until evening. Benediction by G. J. Adams.

Evening session.—Pres. James J. Strang presiding. Singing. Prayer by James J. Strang, prophet of the most high God and witness of the Lord Jesus Christ. Preaching by Elder Samuel Graham on the conditions of salvation to a fallen world. He was followed by J. J. Strang and Geo. J. Adams on the same subject. Adjourned until to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock, A. M. Benediction by Pres. Strang.

Saturday morning, 10 o'clock, A. M.—Met in the grove, for the want of house room. Pres. Strang read the 3d chapt. of first Timothy. Singing. Prayer by James J. Strang. On motion Bros. James M. Greig, E. J. More, C. W. Appleton and Samuel Graham acted as asssistants to the Secretary. Pres. Strang arose and represented the church at Voree as being in a prosperous condition, not, however, on account of its numbers, but the faith and integrity of the saints, stating that there was more faith and God-like confidence in fifty of the brethren at Voree than in the cowardly thousands that surrounded the prophet Joseph when he was left to die at the hands of the ungodly; portrayed in his usual manner the increasing confidence and respect that the church was every where gaining; that during the last five years of his ministry he had not seen the church in so prosperous a condition, and in possession of so much true faith as at the present time; however, with pain, he had to speak of the apostacy of our much beloved Bro. John E. Page, Pres. of the Twelve, who had been personally admonished, but refused, when means had frequently been given him to defray his expenses on different missions to which he had been appointed, to give satisfaction to the church, and had been suspended from all authority in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints until the present session of Conference should finally dispose of his case. The case of John E. Page was therefore presented as the first item of business before the Conference.

Elder Geo. J. Adams arose and spoke of his untiring love and confidence in Bro. John E. Page, and of his unwillingness to let him go. Bro. Adams expressed much feeling on the subject, and by his soul stirring appeals in behalf of his old and much loved friend and brother, deeply affected the hearts of the saints. Elder James Blakeslee arose and expressed himself in as strong terms as a brother whose very heart was bleeding within him could possibly do. He was anxious to sustain Bro. John E. Page if possible, and do honor to the church and kingdom of God.

Ebenezer Page, one of the Twelve, next arose, and with the feelings of a fond and natural brother, strenghtened by the bond of the eternal brotherhood of God Almighty, expressed his love for his brother and President of his quorum in the church of God, stating that he had talked with his brother and faithfully admonished him, but could get no assurance of him that he at this time had any confidence in the authority of James J. Strang's administration, and gave his opinion that Bro. Page could not be restored to the church at present, but must be given for a time to the buffetings of Satan that he may learn obedience, but he should hang on to John E. with a love and faith that would reach to eternity, that in the day of God Almighty his spirit might at least be saved.

Bro. James M. Greig next arose and in his usual manlike spirit expressed his love for Bro. John E. Page, and also stated that he did not know any difference between great men and small ones in the church of God, and he loved the church more than any man; and that because a man had done a great deal and suffered much, it was no assurance to him that that man was to be respected in his rights above the rights of the least saint in the kingdom of God.—He had great reason to love Bro. John E. Page, and would be the last man to receive an accusation against him merely upon rumor, but when facts presented themselves they were insurmountable, and he did heartily approve of the noble spirit and design of Bro. Ebenezer Page. Adjourned to meet at 3 o'clock, P. M. Benediction by E. Page.

Afternoon session.—Opened by singing. Prayer by James M. Greig. Elder Samuel Graham arose to speak on the question of sustaining Bro. John E. Page in his office and standing in the church, and in his quorum; said he regarded him as one of the giant minds of the age, but nowithstanding his ability in the church and kingdom of God, it is his duty to set an example worthy of his greatness; that the ablest of men, when assisted by the inspiration of God, were as the smallest mote of the dust, when opposed to God. Elder Graham also spoke of Bro. Page's pledges before the Conference at Voree last spring, and of his hopes at the time of a compliance with the same on the part of Bro. Page; also stated that so far from having anything against Bro. Page, he had always loved him, and was bound to continue to love with a love stronger than death, that should reach to eternity.

Bro. Finley Page next arose and stated that he had, in all the feeling of his soul, faithfully labored with Bro. John E. Page, but could get no assurance from him that he intended to fill his calling and ministry as a witness of the Lord Jesus Christ to the nations of the earth, under the directions of the First Presidency of the church. Several other brethren spoke on the subject, all expressing a deep regret that our beloved brother should take the course that must result in his own overthrow.

John E Page expelled.

On motion of Bro. J. M. Greig, seconded by Elder James Blakeslee, the following resolution passed unanimously: Resolved by this Conference, that inasmuch as our brother John E. Page, President of the quorum of the Twelve, has without good cause refused to magnify his office as an Apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ, and a witness of his name to the nations of the earth, and has refused to sustain the church as the pillar and ground of the truth; and whereas he has violated in the most positive manner the explicit pledges which he gave to the church at the last Conference to sustain and uphold with his faith, his prayers and his confidence this church in its Presidency, its quorums, its faith and all administrations, according to the best of his ability and understanding, and also by giving his influence and his talent to build up schism and create enmity to the church, we therefore take away all authority and jurisdiction from him, withdraw all fellowship from him, and deliver him over to the buffetings of Satan until he repent.

The spirit and feeling manifested in the members of the church, from the Presidency of the church to its laity inclusive, all seemed to speak in language not to be misunderstood that good will and a desire to honor God and do his will inspired every heart.

The next item of business was to present the authorities to the church for their approval or disapproval. After the First Presidency, which received a unanimous vote of confidence, Jehiel Savage, one of the Twelve, was presented after some remarks from the brethren present, who all expressed a desire to see the entire quorum actively engaged in their calling, and inasmuch as a call had been given to the Twelve to be at this Conference and represent their labors, there seemed to be an anxiety to know what they were doing. On motion of Elder Samuel Graham, the motion to sustain with our faith, confidence and ~~prayers~~ Bro. Jehiel Savage as a member of the quorum of the Twelve was laid on the table, with a universal good feeling for Bro. Savage, and a deep anxiety to see him magnify his office.

The case of Bros. Samuel Bennett, Lester Brooks and Ira J. Patten was, for the same reasons, laid on the table. A unanimous vote of confidence was passed upon Bros. Samuel Graham, Ebenezer Page, James Blakeslee and L. D. Hickey, of the quorum of the Twelve. Motioned and seconded that this Conference receive, sustain and uphold President M. M. Aldrich, and Counselors Galen Cole and R. F. Mills as the Presidency of the stake at the city of James, Beaver Island, with our faith, confidence and prayers, passed unanimously. All the other quorums in like manner were unanimously sustained in their several stations.

Pres. James J. Strang announced, by revelation from God, the call of Bros. C. W. Appleton and Albert N. Hosmer to be Apostles and especial witnesses of the Lord Jesus Christ to the nations of the earth. On motion, duly seconded, the Conference voted unanimously to receive, sustain and uphold with our faith, confidence and prayers the above named C. W. Appleton and Albert N. Hosmer in their calling and ministry. They were accordingly ordained and set apart and consecrated to this high and holy calling under the hands of James J. Strang, prophet of the most high God, and Geo. J. Adams, his Counselor, and Jame Blakeslee, Ebenezer Page and Samuel Graham, Apostles. James J. Strang announced the call of J. M. Greig to be a Bishop in the church of God, and a defender of the rights of the poor. After a unanimous vote of confidence, our beloved brother was anointed, ordained and set apart, by revelation from God, unto this high and holy calling, under the hands of Pres. James J. Strang and Geo. J. Adams, his Counselor, to be a Bishop in the church of God at the stake of Zion, in the city of James, Beaver Island, Mich., U. S. A. After some good counsel from Bros. James J. Strang, Geo. J. Adams and C. W. Appleton and others to the church, and especially those holding the priesthood, the Conference adjourned until to-morrow morning at 8 o'clock. Benediction by Geo. J. Adams.

Written for the Gospel Herald.

A FRIEND IN NEED IS A FRIEND INDEED.

Let adverse winds around me blow
And fortunes frowns attend,
But deep despair I ne'er can know
While earth affords a friend.

Never forsake a friend. When enemies gather around—when sickness falls on the heart—when the world seems dark and cheerless—is the time to try true friendship. But how many are there who profess to be our warmest friends, who would forsake us in the hour of trouble, and thus cast a "deeper sadness over our gloom," by the thought that we were deceived, and that they at first were enemies in disguise, or friends from selfish motives? Oh, how painful is the recollection of such a friend.

They who turn from the scene of distress, prove their hypocrisy, and you may understand that self-interest only moves them. The heart that possesses any of the spirit of our divine Savior, will double its efforts when the friend is sad and in trouble. While we are in prosperity we think that we have friends without number.—But let misfortuues come, you turn to behold your former friends; where are they? Oh God, forgive them, they are gone—gone like chaff before a driving wind. You are ready to cry out, I thought I had a brother. Where has my sister gone? They have forsaken me when I needed their consolation the most. I have been ready to cry out, Oh my God, give me but one true and constant friend and I am willing to sacrifice every thing else that I hold dear on earth. Oh brother, Oh sister, if you have a friend on earth that is true, be sure to sustain them in the hour of trouble and adversity.—Let them feel that their former kindness is appreciated, and that his or her love was not thrown away. Real fidelity may be rare, but it takes up its abode in some hearts. The good and the kind, the affectionate and the virtuous, see and feel the heavenly principle. A true friend seems to me like a guardian angel, who lingers near to cheer us in the hour of trouble, sympathise in adversity, smile upon us when fortune frowns, and offer comfort and consolation in the hour of distress.

MARIETTA GRAHAM.

Little Fort, Ill., July 12th, 1849.

AMERICAN ANTIQUITIES.

Near the cove at the mouth of West river, in Vermont, are what are termed the Marked Rocks. They are so termed from being covered with curious and antique hieroglyphics.

It is stated that in an old burying ground discovered in White county, Tennessee, were found numerous skeletons, measuring from seven to nine feet in length, deposited in coffins of stone. These coffins are covered with various hieroglyphics and inscriptions, which the learned have not been able to translate.

In the same neighborhood are said to be found three other burying grounds, containing skeletons buried in the same manner, only nineteen inches long. One of them had ninety-four pearl beads around the neck. The graves are about two feet deep.

In the town of Stannardsville, Virginia, have been found the impressions of human feet in the solid rock. The rock is argillaceous, feeling of his soul, faithfully labored with Bro. John E. Page, but could get no assurance from him that he intended to fill his calling and ministry as a witness of the Lord Jesus Christ to the nations of the earth, under the directions of the First Presidency of the church. Several other brethren spoke on the subject, all expressing a deep regret that our beloved brother should take the course that must result in his own overthrow.

John E Page expelled.

On motion of Bro. J. M. Greig, seconded by Elder James Blakeslee, the following resolution passed unanimously: Resolved by this Conference, that inasmuch as our brother John E. Page, President of the quorum of the Twelve, has without good cause refused to magnify his office as an Apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ, and a witness of his name to the nations of the earth, and has refused to sustain the church as the pillar and ground of the truth; and wherefore as he has violated in the most positive manner the explicit pledges which he gave to the church at the last Conference to sustain and uphold with his faith, his prayers and his confidence this church in its Presidency, its quorums, its faith and all administrations, according to the best of his ability and understanding, and also by giving his influence and his talent to build up schism and create enmity to the church, we therefore take away all authority and jurisdiction from him, withdraw all fellowship from him, and deliver him over to the buffetings of Satan until he repent.

The spirit and feeling manifested in the members of the church from the Presidency of the church to its laity inclusive, all seemed to speak in language not to be misunderstood that good will and a desire to honor God and do his will inspired every heart.

The next item of business was to present the authorities to the church for their approval or disapproval. After the First Presidency, which received a unanimous vote of confidence, Jehiel Savage, one of the Twelve, was presented after some remarks from the brethren present, who all expressed a desire to see the entire quorum actively engaged in their calling, and inasmuch as a call had been given to the Twelve to be at this Conference and represent their labors, there seemed to be an anxiety to know what they were doing. On motion of Elder Samuel Graham, the motion to sustain with our faith, confidence and prayers Bro. Jehiel Savage as a member of the quorum of the Twelve was laid on the table, with a universal good feeling for Bro. Savage, and a deep anxiety to see him magnify his office.

The case of Bros. Samuel Bennett, Lester Brocks and Ira J. Patten was, for the same reasons, laid on the table. A unanimous vote of confidence was passed upon Bros. Samuel Graham, Ebenezer Page, James Blakeslee and L. D. Hickey, of the quorum of the Twelve. Motioned and seconded that this Conference receive, sustain and uphold President M. M. Aldrich, and Counselors Galen Cole and R. F. Mills as the Presidency of the stake at the city of James, Beaver Island, with our faith, confidence and prayers, passed unanimously. All the other quorums in like manner were unanimously sustained in their several stations.

Pres. James J. Strang announced, by revelation from God, the call of Bros. C. W. Appleton and Albert N. Hosmer to be Apostles and especial witnesses of the Lord Jesus Christ to the nations of the earth. On motion, duly seconded, the Conference voted unanimously to receive, sustain and uphold with our faith, confidence and prayers the above named C. W. Appleton and Albert N. Hosmer in their calling and ministry. They were accordingly ordained and set apart and consecrated to this high and holy calling under the hands of James J. Strang, prophet of the most high God, and Geo. J. Adams, his Counselor, and Jame Blakeslee, Ebenezer Page and Samuel Graham, Apostles. James J. Strang announced the call of J. M. Greig to be a Bishop in the church of God, and a defender of the rights of the poor. After a unanimous vote of confidence, our beloved brother was anointed, ordained and set apart, by revelation from God, unto this high and holy calling, under the hands of Pres. James J. Strang and Geo. J. Adams, his Counselor, to be a Bishop in the church of God at the stake of Zion, in the city of James, Beaver Island, Mich., U. S. A. After some good counsel from Bros. James J. Strang, Geo. J. Adams and C. W. Appleton and others to the church, and especially those holding the priesthood, the Conference adjourned until to-morrow morning at 8 o'clock. Benediction by Geo. J. Adams.

Written for the Gospel Herald.

A FRIEND IN NEED IS A FRIEND INDEED.

Let adverse winds around me blow
And fortunes frowns attend,
But deep despair I ne'er can know
While earth affords a friend.

Never forsake a friend. When enemies gather around—when sickness falls on the heart—when the world seems dark and cheerless—is the time to try true friendship. But how many are there who profess to be our warmest friends, who would forsake us in the hour of trouble, and thus cast a "deeper sadness over our gloom," by the thought that we were deceived, and that they at first were enemies in disguise, or friends from selfish motives? Oh, how painful is the recollection of such a friend.

They who turn from the scene of distress, prove their hypocrisy, and you may understand that self-interest only moves them. The heart that possesses any of the spirit of our divine Savior, will double its efforts when the friend is sad and in trouble. While we are in prosperity we think that we have friends without number.—But let misfortunes come, you turn to behold your former friends; where are they? Oh God, forgive them, they are gone—gone like chaff before a driving wind. You are ready to cry out, I thought I had a brother. Where has my sister gone? They have forsaken me when I needed their consolation the most. I have been ready to cry out, Oh my God, give me but one true and constant friend and I am willing to sacrifice every thing else that I hold dear on earth. Oh brother, Oh sister, if you have a friend on earth that is true, be sure to sustain them in the hour of trouble and adversity.—Let them feel that their former kindness is appreciated, and that his or her love was not thrown away. Real fidelity may be rare, but it takes up its abode in some hearts. The good and the kind, the affectionate and the virtuous, see and feel the heavenly principle. A true friend seems to me like a guardian angel, who lingers near to cheer us in the hour of trouble, sympathise in adversity, smile upon us when fortune frowns, and offer comfort and consolation in the hour of distress.

MARIETTA GRAHAM.

Little Fort, Ill., July 12th, 1849.

AMERICAN ANTIQUITIES.

Near the cove at the mouth of West river, in Vermont, are what are termed the Marked Rocks. They are so termed from being covered with curious and antique hieroglyphics.

It is stated that in an old burying ground discovered in White county, Tennessee, were found numerous skeletons, measuring from seven to nine feet in length, deposited in coffins of stone. These coffins are covered with various hieroglyphics and inscriptions, which the learned have not been able to translate.

In the same neighborhood are said to be found three other burying grounds, containing skeletons buried in the same manner, only nineteen inches long. One of them had ninety-four pearl beads around the neck. The graves are about two feet deep.

In the town of Stannardsville, Virginia, have been found the impressions of human feet in the solid rock. The rock is argillaceous.

and is found on the north branch of the Rivanna river, forming the embankment of the stream at that point, and that portion of it which contains the impressions projects into the stream, and is covered in high water. The impressions are those of a child's feet, and are seven in number. They have the positions relative to each other which they would naturally occupy in walking. The most skillful sculptor could not have cut anything more true to nature than are these feet.

In Schoolcraft's travels there is a plate representing impressions of the two feet of a man, found on a compact, calcareous rock, near St. Louis, Missouri. Every appearance warrants the conclusion that these impressions were made at a time when the rock was soft enough to receive them by pressure, and that the marks of the feet are natural and genuine.

Several tracks of human feet are also said to exist between Esopus landing and Kingston on the Hudson river.

There is one impression on a detached block of granite, near the former residence of Com. Rodgers in Washington. The existence of a similar impression is spoken of in Orange county.

"Perpetual Motion—Will it ever be discovered?" This question has occupied the world for at least five hundred years. Here is a legend which may throw some light upon the subject:—

About fifty years ago, an announcement was made in a town of Germany that an obscure mechanic had discovered the secret of "perpetual motion." In a little time his room was crowded with professors of science, rich burghers, and curious people, of all sorts and classes, from a circle of one hundred miles. On a table, in the centre of the room, appeared the "perpetual motion," in the shape of a wheel, which, without visible agency, went round and round all day long. Everybody was astonished; the professors put on their spectacles; the burghers looked about them with eyes like saucers, and the curious folks swore incessantly in high German, that the like of this had never been heard of before—no, never!—Not even from the time of Apollonius of Tyrana down to Cornelius Agrippa. But all the while the wheel stood on the table—stood alone—and continued to go around in spite of professors' spectacles and burghers' oaths. The great secret was discovered. The world had advanced at least a hundred years. The self-moving power which propelled the solitary wheel could be applied to all forms of machinery. Hereafter, paper mills, saw mills, (not mentioning cotton mills,) would go, not by water, or by steam, but by perpetual motion. Such at least was the impression of the crowd, until a little incident put an entire new face on the matter.

One of the burghers, a little more curious than the rest, noticed a square pillar which stood about four feet from the table. He tapped it with his stick; it returned a hollow sound. He tore one of its boards away, and discovered that these boards concealed a rope, which passed under the floor, and up one of the legs of the table, into the machinery of the wheel. The rope turned the wheel.—That was certain. But what was at the other end of the rope?—This soon became a question. While the inventor manifested the greatest agitation, a search was made, the rope was followed to its "'tother end." And that end was discovered in an obscure garret, where, amid rags and straw, was stretched an emaciated form, whose skeleton hands were occupied in turning a crank, which set the rope in motion, and with the rope the wheel. This living skeleton was the brother of the inventor. He had been, in fact, buried alive, in order that his brother might reap the reward of his great discovery, from his very misery.

Of course "perpetual motion" was at once explained, and the inventor was sent to prison, while his sick brother was put to bed and fed on nutritious food.

Such is the story. Let us take a peep at its moral. How many "perpetual motions" in this world depend upon the bony hands of some living skeleton, who turns the crank in an obscure garret, while the successful speculator reaps his money and his honors in proud day!

Perpetual motion! You will find it everywhere. It builds houses, charters banks, rears churches, grades railroads, makes shirts, boots and shoes, plants cities, tills farms, prints books, overspreads the desert with the living harvest, and from the dark caverns of the mine brings coal, which lights the fires of a million homes. Yes, you will find it everywhere, this "perpetual motion." But who turns the crank? It is the capitalist's "sick brother," confined in the caverns of society, and working away in darkness with bony hands, while his "rich brother" reaps the fruit of his labor, above the ground, and in the sunny air!

Here is a rich publisher. How well he dresses, how glibly his carriage wheels go round, how copiously the dollars twinkle in his well-filled till! But who turns the crank? Oh, there is yonder, in some obscure garret, an author, working away with tremulous hands, and eyes fired with fever. He turns the crank. He writes books at midnight, which the publisher turns into gold by day.—Gold for the publisher's pocket, of course.

Here is a window along Chesnut-street adorned with the most exquisite needle-work. Vests, cravats, shirts, shirt-bosoms, and collars—all elegantly done, and worth a store of dollars to the storekeeper. But who turns the crank? Some poor woman, in a basement story—away out in the suburbs—who works for 1-2 1-2 cents per day, in order that her employer may "realize" 100 per cent. on her labor. She turns the crank. This time it is not the capitalist's "sick brother"—only his "sick sister."

☞ By a late arrival of the steamer Canada we have received the following foreign news:—

A motion in the British Parliament, advising the Crown to refuse its sanction to the Canada indemnity bill, was negatived by a vote of 291 to 150. In the House of Lords the bill was opposed by Lord Brougham and Lord Lyndhurst, and a similar motion was negatived by a vote of 99 to 96.

In Ireland and Scotland the Cholera is less severe than it has been. In Paris the daily number of deaths by this disease has decreased from 650 to 150.

France.—Paris is quiet. The principal participators in the late demonstration of the Red Republicans, with the exception of Ledru Rollin and Boichot, are in custody, and will be tried at Versailles in August. They are charged with a design of overthrowing the government and establishing a new system, social and political. At Lyons, in consequence of forged news that Louis Bonaparte and his government had been overthrown and Ledru Rollin made dictator of Paris, the people collected on the 15th, took some of the military points, and a general battle ensued, in which the loss of life was severe, and the people fought against the government troops with desperate valor.

Hungary.—The Austrians and Russians are said to have been completely defeated, and to have left on the field 23,000 killed in a battle fought on the 13th, 14th, and 15th, on the large plain between Raab and Weiselburg. The fight lasted 63 hours, and the loss of the Magyars is stated at 8000.

Italy.—On the 11th, the French made a breach in the walls, and a portion of their troops entered the city of Rome. On the 12th, Gen. Oudinot again appealed to the Triumvirs to surrender, and also issued a proclamation to the people, to seduce them from their support of the republic. The reply of the Triumvirs would not have dishonored Rome in their best days: "In execution of the

and is found on the north branch of the Rivanna river, forming the embankment of the stream at that point, and that portion of it which contains the impressions projects into the stream, and is covered in high water. The impressions are those of a child's feet, and are seven in number. They have the positions relative to each other which they would naturally occupy in walking. The most skillful sculptor could not have cut anything more true to nature than are these feet.

In Schoolcraft's travels there is a plate representing impressions of the two feet of a man, found on a compact, calcareous rock, near St. Louis, Missouri. Every appearance warrants the conclusion that these impressions were made at a time when the rock was soft enough to receive them by pressure, and that the marks of the feet are natural and genuine.

Several tracks of human feet are also said to exist between Esopus landing and Kingston on the Hudson river.

There is one impression on a detached block of granite, near the former residence of Com. Rodgers in Washington. The existence of a similar impression is spoken of in Orange county.

"Perpetual Motion—Will it ever be discovered?" This question has occupied the world for at least five hundred years. Here is a legend which may throw some light upon the subject:—

About fifty years ago, an announcement was made in a town of Germany that an obscure mechanic had discovered the secret of "perpetual motion." In a little time his room was crowded with professors of science, rich burghers, and curious people, of all sorts and classes, from a circle of one hundred miles. On a table, in the centre of the room, appeared the "perpetual motion," in the shape of a wheel, which, without visible agency, went round and round all day long. Everybody was astonished; the professors put on their spectacles; the burghers looked about them with eyes like saucers, and the curious folks swore incessantly in high German, that the like of this had never been heard of before—no, never!—Not even from the time of Apollonius of Tyrana down to Cornelius Agrippa. But all the while the wheel stood on the table—stood alone—and continued to go around in spite of professors' spectacles and burghers' oaths. The great secret was discovered. The world had advanced at least a hundred years. The self-moving power which propelled the solitary wheel could be applied to all forms of machinery. Hereafter, paper mills, saw mills, (not mentioning cotton mills,) would go, not by water, or by steam, but by perpetual motion. Such at least was the impression of the crowd, until a little incident put an entire new face on the matter.

One of the burghers, a little more curious than the rest, noticed a square pillar which stood about four feet from the table. He tapped it with his stick; it returned a hollow sound. He tore one of its boards away, and discovered that these boards concealed a rope, which passed under the floor, and up one of the legs of the table, into the machinery of the wheel. The rope turned the wheel.—That was certain. But what was at the other end of the rope?—This soon became a question. While the inventor manifested the greatest agitation, a search was made, the rope was followed to its "'tother end." And that end was discovered in an obscure garret, where, amid rags and straw, was stretched an emaciated form, whose skeleton hands were occupied in turning a crank, which set the rope in motion, and with the rope the wheel. This living skeleton was the brother of the inventor. He had been, in fact, buried alive, in order that his brother might reap the reward of his great discovery, from his very misery.

Of course "perpetual motion" was at once explained, and the inventor was sent to prison, while his sick brother was put to bed and fed on nutritious food.

Such is the story. Let us take a peep at its moral. How many "perpetual motions" in this world depend upon the bony hands of some living skeleton, who turns the crank in an obscure garret, while the successful speculator reaps his money and his honors in proud day!

Perpetual motion! You will find it everywhere. It builds houses, charters banks, rears churches, grades railroads, makes shirts, boots and shoes, plants cities, tills farms, prints books, overspreads the desert with the living harvest, and from the dark caverns of the mine brings coal, which lights the fires of a million homes. Yes, you will find it everywhere, this "perpetual motion." But who turns the crank! It is the capitalist's "sick brother," confined in the caverns of society, and working away in darkness with bony hands, while his "rich brother" reaps the fruit of his labor, above the ground, and in the sunny air!

Here is a rich publisher. How well he dresses, how glibly his carriage wheels go round, how copiously the dollars twinkle in his well-filled till! But who turns the crank? Oh, there is yonder, in some obscure garret, an author, working away with tremulous hands, and eyes fired with fever. He turns the crank. He writes books at midnight, which the publisher turns into gold by day.—Gold for the publisher's pocket, of course.

Here is a window along Chesnut-street adorned with the most exquisite needle-work. Vests, cravats, shirts, shirt-bosoms, and collars—all elegantly done, and worth a store of dollars to the storekeeper. But who turns the crank? Some poor woman, in a basement story—away out in the suburbs—who works for 12 1-2 cents per day, in order that her employer may "realize" 100 per cent. on her labor. She turns the crank. This time it is not the capitalist's "sick brother"—only his "sick sister."

☞ By a late arrival of the steamer Canada we have received the following foreign news:—

A motion in the British Parliament, advising the Crown to refuse its sanction to the Canada indemnity bill, was negatived by a vote of 291 to 150. In the House of Lords the bill was opposed by Lord Brougham and Lord Lyndhurst, and a similar motion was negatived by a vote of 99 to 96.

In Ireland and Scotland the Cholera is less severe than it has been. In Paris the daily number of deaths by this disease has decreased from 650 to 150.

France.—Paris is quiet. The principal participators in the late demonstration of the Red Republicans, with the exception of Ledru Rollin and Boichot, are in custody, and will be tried at Versailles in August. They are charged with a design of overthrowing the government and establishing a new system, social and political. At Lyons, in consequence of forged news that Louis Bonaparte and his government had been overthrown and Ledru Rollin made dictator of Paris, the people collected on the 15th, took some of the military points, and a general battle ensued, in which the loss of life was severe, and the people fought against the government troops with desperate valor.

Hungary.—The Austrians and Russians are said to have been completely defeated, and to have left on the field 23,000 killed in a battle fought on the 13th, 14th, and 15th, on the large plain between Raab and Weiselburg. The fight lasted 63 hours, and the loss of the Magyars is stated at 8000.

Italy.—On the 11th, the French made a breach in the walls, and a portion of their troops entered the city of Rome. On the 12th, Gen. Oudinot again appealed to the Triumvirs to surrender, and also issued a proclamation to the people, to seduce them from their support of the republic. The reply of the Triumvirs would not have dishonored Rome in their best days: "In execution of the orders of the Assembly and of the Roman people, we have undertaken the engagement of defending the standard of the Roman Republic, the honor of the country, and the sanctity of the capital of the Christian world. We will do so." This probably was to be answered by a bombardment on the 15th.

LATER.

FROM CHINA.—A despatch dated at London on the 23d—the day of the Canada's sailing from Liverpool—11½ o'clock, A. M., states that the ovelrand mail from India had arrived, bringing dates from Canton to the 25th of April.

The emperor of China had refused to open the trade of Canton to the English upon the terms of the existing treaty. It was stated that the British would insist upon the rights guarantied to them by the treaty.

FROM ROME.—The London Times of Saturday morning, 23d June, has a letter from its correspondent, dated at Civita Vecchia, on the 16th, which states that on the 13th General Oudinot made still another attempt to open negotiations with the Triumvirs of Rome, but failed in the same manner and on the same grounds as before. His summons for a surrender was met by a very peremptory refusal.

On the 14th General Oudinot commenced a vigorous attack. He played upon the bastions for 14 hours incessantly; and up to the period of the latest accounts, had not succeeeded in effecting any practicable breach.

RULES FOR THE JOURNEY OF LIFE.—The following rules, from the papers of Doctor West, were, according to his memorandum, thrown together as general way marks in the journey of life:—

Never to ridicule sacred things, or what others may esteem such, however absurd they may appear to be.

Never to show levity when people are professedly engaged in worship.

Never to resent a supposed injury, till I know the views and motives of the author of it. Nor on any occasion to retaliate.

Never to judge a person's character by external appearance.

Always to take the part of an absent person who is censured in company, so far as truth and propriety will allow.

Never to think the worse of another on account of his differing from me in political or religious opinions.

Not to dispute with a man more than 70 years of age, nor a woman, nor an enthusiast.

Not to affect to be witty or jest so as to wound the feelings of another.

To say as little as possible of myself; and those who are near me.

To aim at cheerfulness without levity.

Not to obtrude my advice unasked.

Never to court the favor of the rich by flattering either their vanity or their vices.

To speak with calmness and deliberation on all occasions; especially in circumstances that tend to irritate.

Frequently to review my conduct and note my failings.

On all occasions to have in prospect the end of life and a future state.

THE PREVAILING PESTILENCE.

The Nation is in sackcloth. From all sections of our wide, extended country, the wail of sorrow and of wo comes with a thrilling pathos. The Pestilence is among us, and in its subtle march is sweeping down all ages, sexes and conditions. It has increased with frightful mortality in our large cities, and is spreading with terrible rapidity to our smaller villages and rural districts. Even in Wisconsin and the far off wilds of Minnesota we find traces of its desolation.

From reliable information we are forced to believe that the cholera is on the increase in Chicago and Milwaukee. It has also appeared at Mineral Point, and a few isolated cases are reported in the interior. We have heard of no deaths by the epidemic in this county except that of a stranger a few days since at Delavan. Our village was never more healthy, and with a firm reliance on the mercy of Heaven, we hope to be spared the awful visitation.—Wisconsin (Geneva) Standard.

Propeller St. Joseph, off Beaver, July 18th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I am just off from Beaver after the most pleasant, interesting and spirited Conference that I ever had the happiness to attend. To-morrow I shall be at Sault Ste Marie, in conference with the Indians. Bros. G. J. Adams and S. Graham go with me. There are 17 of us on board the St. Joseph, this being the second division who have left since Conference to carry the gospel to the nations. A few Elders are yet behind, but our present party are not quite all Elders.

From the Sault I shall take a rapid journey to the Central College in Mich., and home in a few days, say possibly two weeks from this day. Bro. Adams will accompany me. The same mail that takes this will take part of the Conference minutes. The rest will be forwarded as soon as they can be copied out. I hope to write to you once more before my arrival. My visit to the Sault will hinder but three days. Truly and sincerly,

JAMES J. STRANG.

THE SUNNY SIDE.

How much more pleasant it is to the pure heart to do good,—to kindle the more gentle and noble feelings of our nature, than by misrepresentations, hints, or dark inuendoes, to break in upon long established friendship, and disturb the good feelings of years of intimacy. In all our associations, commend us to him who ever presents the sunny side of life's picture to our gaze;—he who has always a "pleasant word to speak," and is ever disposed to fling the mantle of oblivion over the foibles of erring man,—such a man we could wear in our "heart's core—aye in our heart of hearts." But from the mischief maker, whose bosom is filled with a canker worm which knows no pleasure except that which torments others, "good Lord deliver us."

IRASCIBILITY OF TEMPER.—The greatest plague in life is a bad temper. It is a great waste of time to complain of other people's; the best thing is to bear what we meet in others. Irascibility is very injurious to health, and so, in fact, is every morbid indulgence of our inferior nature; low spirits, melancholy, diffidence, disinclination for ordinary duties, discontent, fretfulness, even down to mental lassitude, indolence or despair are very inimical to enjoyment in life, and every possible effort should be made to cast them all to the winds, and look unblushingly into the truth of the fact. It is astonishing what a little reflection will do; the fears are most imaginary, and with one dash of resolution may all be overcome.

COMPARATIVE MORALITY.—A little satire, we should say, in the reply of a man recently returned from the Sandwich Islands, who, when asked whether the missionaries had been successful in civilizing the natives, replied: "So much so, that I know hundreds who think no more of lying or swearing than any European whatever!"

NOTICE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at Franklin, Oakland Co., Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th of August, 1849. By order of the Twelve,

SAMUEL GRAHAM.

orders of the Assembly and of the Roman people, we have undertaken the engagement of defending the standard of the Roman Republic, the honor of the country, and the sanctity of the capital of the Christian world. We will do so." This probably was to be answered by a bombardment on the 15th.

LATER.

FROM CHINA.—A despatch dated at London on the 23d—the day of the Canada's sailing from Liverpool—11½ o'clock, A. M., states that the ovelrand mail from India had arrived, bringing dates from Canton to the 25th of April.

The emperor of China had refused to open the trade of Canton to the English upon the terms of the existing treaty. It was stated that the British would insist upon the rights guarantied to them by the treaty.

FROM ROME.—The London Times of Saturday morning, 23d June, has a letter from its correspondent, dated at Civita Vecchia, on the 16th, which states that on the 13th General Oudinot made still another attempt to open negotiations with the Triumvirs of Rome, but failed in the same manner and on the same grounds as before. His summons for a surrender was met by a very peremptory refusal.

On the 14th General Oudinot commenced a vigorous attack. He played upon the bastions for 14 hours incessantly; and up to the period of the latest accounts, had not succeeeded in effecting any practicable breach.

RULES FOR THE JOURNEY OF LIFE.—The following rules, from the papers of Doctor West, were, according to his memorandum, thrown together as general way marks in the journey of life:—

Never to ridicule sacred things, or what others may esteem such, however absurd they may appear to be.

Never to show levity when people are professedly engaged in worship.

Never to resent a supposed injury, till I know the views and motives of the author of it. Nor on any occasion to retaliate.

Never to judge a person's character by external appearance.

Always to take the part of an absent person who is censured in company, so far as truth and propriety will allow.

Never to think the worse of another on account of his differing from me in political or religious opinions.

Not to dispute with a man more than 70 years of age, nor a woman, not an enthusiast.

Not to affect to be witty or jest so as to wound the feelings of another.

To say as little as possible of myself; and those who are near me.

To aim at cheerfulness without levity.

Not to obtrude my advice unasked.

Never to court the favor of the rich by flattering either their vanity or their vices.

To speak with calmness and deliberation on all occasions; especially in circumstances that tend to irritate.

Frequently to review my conduct and note my failings.

On all occasions to have in prospect the end of life and a future state.

THE PREVAILING PESTILENCE.

The Nation is in sackcloth. From all sections of our wide, extended country, the wail of sorrow and of wo comes with a thrilling pathos. The Pestilence is among us, and in its subtle march is sweeping down all ages, sexes and conditions. It has increased with frightful mortality in our large cities, and is spreading with terrible rapidity to our smaller villages and rural districts. Even in Wisconsin and the far off wilds of Minnesota we find traces of its desolation.

From reliable information we are forced to believe that the cholera is on the increase in Chicago and Milwaukee. It has also appeared at Mineral Point, and a few isolated cases are reported in the interior. We have heard of no deaths by the epidemic in this county except that of a stranger a few days since at Delavan. Our village was never more healthy, and with a firm reliance on the mercy of Heaven, we hope to be spared the awful visitation.—Wisconsin (Geneva) Standard.

Propeller St. Joseph, off Beaver, July 18th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I am just off from Beaver after the most pleasant, interesting and spirited Conference that I ever had the happiness to attend. To-morrow I shall be at Sault Ste Marie, in conference with the Indians. Bros. G. J. Adams and S. Graham go with me. There are 17 of us on board the St. Joseph, this being the second division who have left since Conference to carry the gospel to the nations. A few Elders are yet behind, but our present party are not quite all Elders.

From the Sault I shall take a rapid journey to the Central College in Mich., and home in a few days, say possibly two weeks from this day. Bro. Adams will accompany me. The same mail that takes this will take part of the Conference minutes. The rest will be forwarded as soon as they can be copied out. I hope to write to you once more before my arrival. My visit to the Sault will hinder but three days. Truly and sincerly,

JAMES J. STRANG.

THE SUNNY SIDE.

How much more pleasant it is to the pure heart to do good,—to kindle the more gentle and noble feelings of our nature,—than by misrepresentations, hints, or dark inuendoes, to break in upon long established friendship, and disturb the good feelings of years of intimacy. In all our associations, commend us to him who ever presents the sunny side of life's picture to our gaze;—he who has always a "pleasant word to speak," and is ever disposed to fling the mantle of oblivion over the foibles of erring man,—such a man we could wear in our "heart's core—aye in our heart of hearts." But from the mischief maker, whose bosom is filled with a canker worm which knows no pleasure except that which torments others, "good Lord deliver us."

IRASCIBILITY OF TEMPER.—The greatest plague in life is a bad temper. It is a great waste of time to complain of other people's; the best thing is to bear what we meet in others. Irascibility is very injurious to health, and so, in fact, is every morbid indulgence of our inferior nature; low spirits, melancholy, diffidence, disinclination for ordinary duties, discontent, fretfulness, even down to mental lassitude, indolence or despair are very inimical to enjoyment in life, and every possible effort should be made to cast them all to the winds, and look unblushingly into the truth of the fact. It is astonishing what a little reflection will do; the fears are most imaginary, and with one dash of resolution may all be overcome.

COMPARATIVE MORALITY.—A little satire, we should say, in the reply of a man recently returned from the Sandwich Islands, who, when asked whether the missionaries had been successful in civilizing the natives, replied: "So much so, that I know hundreds who think no more of lying or swearing than any European whatever!"

NOTICE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at Franklin, Oakland Co., Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th of August, 1849. By order of the Twelve,

SAMUEL GRAHAM.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 21.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. AUG. 9, 1849. [WHOLE No. 137.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

CHURCH REFORM.

The christian world is, and has been, full of talk about reforming not only various churches, but the whole world, and thus bring in a day of universal happiness and peace. Such have been the flattering ideas of all, or nearly all, people who profess to be christians. Consequently the attention of the world has been continually called to hear the sound of reform, reform, new light, &c. Each one that has thus arose claimed to have made some new discovery, and continually harping upon that one point, have succeeded in calling a class of people after them and organizing them into bodies or societies, and have been pleased to call them churches, until the world is so full of societies called churches that the people are almost, if not quite, perfectly blind concerning what it takes to constitute the christian church. For instance, John Wesley and his followers have continually harped upon the idea of "sanctification, true holiness, that without holiness no man can see the Lord." The Baptists have also doted on the doctrine of immersion as being the only correct mode of baptism.

Thus all the sects that have dissented or sprung from the Roman church have called themselves "reformers" of the christian church. Yes, they have declared that the church established by Christ and his Apostles had become totally deformed, so much so that it had become the "mother of harlots," and the "abomination of the earth." Yet, by virtue of the baptism which they received from the apostate church, they profess to be the sons of God. And by virtue of the ordination which they also received from her they claim to have power to act as ministers of Christ, and therefore undertake to reform Christ's church, or re-establish it. Oh consistency! thou art not found in sectarian reformation! Oh sectarian! where is thy blush! for who does not know that it would take the same power and authority to re-establish the church of Christ that it first took to establish it? And in order to establish the church at first it took the authority of the Melchisedec priesthood. For, says Paul, Heb. v. 5, 6, "Christ glorified not himself to be made a high priest; but he (his Father) that said unto him, Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." And Christ says to the Apostles, "as the Father hath sent me, even so I send you." That is, he made them priests after the order of Melchisedec; that by virtue of this priesthood they had power "that whosesoever sins they remitted they were remitted, and whosesoever sins they retained they were retained, and that "whatsoever they bound on earth was bound in heaven."

This was the power that was required to establish the church. Would it take less power to re-establish it? Certainly not. Then if the church had become the "mother of harlots," the priesthood or authority of God was taken from them. And if it was taken from the church, it was taken from the world; for none others professed to have it. Therefore none held the priesthood. And although one man should call upon the people to repent, the people have the same authority to require him to repent also.

Man can make reconciliation between man and man, but not between man and God, unless he has authority so to do from God.—But true it is that men have made "merchandise of the people, and traded in slaves and souls of men." And as the prophet said concerning the house of Israel, "the people love to have it so." Oh the condition of the christian world! divided into several hundred different sects! And instead of effecting a reformation, it has become like Babylon of old, filled with confusion. Therefore John the Revelator, speaking concerning it, exclaims, "Mystery Babylon," &c., "How much she hath glorified herself and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give her: for she saith in her heart, I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow.—Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire: for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her." Rev. xviii. 7, 8.

But first, O Lord, let the gospel which is to be preached to every nation, kindred, tongue and people be proclaimed, and let the honest in heart be gathered out, but let thy judgments pass through in righteousness until the earth is cleansed from all pollution, and the kingdom be prepared for the saints of the most high, that they may hold dominion forever and ever, that men may cease to speak unto their neighbors, saying, "know ye the Lord! but that all may know him from the least to the greatest."

S. P. BACON.

Barre, Jackson Co., Mich., July 15th, 1849.

MR. JAMES J. STRANG:—At the earnest solicitation of Mr. J. S. Comstock I have consented to discuss this question with you in your paper, and perhaps some other:—"Is Mormonism true, or the true religion of the Bible?" I had expected to do it with you personally last spring, but circumstances prevented. I must soon go on a journey to Ohio, and cannot enter on the discussion until some time in October next, but am willing to attend to it as soon as is consistent with my other necessary arrangements. Yours respectfully,

FREDERIC FREEMAN.

Albion, Mich., July 26th, 1849.

MR. FREDERIC FREEMAN—SIR:—Your letter of July 15th is this moment received. I hasten to reply, that, unexpectedly till within a few days, I am now in your immediate vicinity, seeking a discussion with any man whom the Protestant sects are willing to put forward as their champion. You are aware that for more than a year I have had the assurance of meeting the champions of my opponents here, and though I have done every thing in my power to elicit a discussion, after so constant a failure, the impression has by some means gone abroad in some circles at least that I am willing to avoid the encounter. I am now here ready, and in the midst of my opponents. Four days at most will test the question whether they will dare the encounter. Now to answer you with the plainness which I ever intend to use, and hope to meet with in others, I do not think the Protestant communities in this region are willing to

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 21.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. AUG. 9, 1849. [WHOLE No. 137.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

CHURCH REFORM.

The christian world is, and has been, full of talk about reforming not only various churches, but the whole world, and thus bring in a day of universal happiness and peace. Such have been the flattering ideas of all, or nearly all, people who profess to be christians. Consequently the attention of the world has been continually called to hear the sound of reform, reform, new light, &c. Each one that has thus arose claimed to have made some new discovery, and continually harping upon that one point, have succeeded in calling a class of people after them and organizing them into bodies or societies, and have been pleased to call them churches, until the world is so full of societies called churches that the people are almost, if not quite, perfectly blind concerning what it takes to constitute the christian church. For instance, John Wesley and his followers have continually harped upon the idea of "sanctification, true holiness, that without holiness no man can see the Lord." The Baptists have also doted on the doctrine of immersion as being the only correct mode of baptism.

Thus all the sects that have dissented or sprung from the Roman church have called themselves "reformers" of the christian church. Yes. they have declared that the church established by Christ and his Apostles had become totally deformed, so much so that it had become the "mother of harlots," and the "abomination of the earth." Yet, by virtue of the baptism which they received from the apostate church, they profess to be the sons of God. And by virtue of the ordination which they also received from her they claim to have power to act as ministers of Christ, and therefore undertake to reform Christ's church, or re-establish it. Oh consistency! thou art not found in sectarian reformation! Oh sectarian! where is thy blush! for who does not know that it would take the same power and authority to re-establish the church of Christ that it first took to establish it? And in order to establish the church at first it took the authority of the Melchisedec priesthood. For, says Paul, Heb. v. 5, 6, "Christ glorified not himself to be made a high priest; but he (his Father) that said unto him, Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." And Christ says to the Apostles, "as the Father hath sent me, even so I send you." That is, he made them priests after the order of Melchisedec; that by virtue of this priesthood they had power "that whosesoever sins they remitted they were remitted, and whosesoever sins they retained they were retained, and that "whatsoever they bound on earth was bound in heaven."

This was the power that was required to establish the church. Would it take less power to re-establish it? Certainly not. Then if the church had become the "mother of harlots," the priesthood or authority of God was taken from them. And if it was taken from the church, it was taken from the world; for none others professed to have it. Therefore none held the priesthood. And although one man should call upon the people to repent, the people have the same authority to require him to repent also.

Man can make reconciliation between man and man, but not between man and God, unless he has authority so to do from God.—But true it is that men have made "merchandise of the people, and traded in slaves and souls of men." And as the prophet said concerning the house of Israel, "the people love to have it so." Oh the condition of the christian world! divided into several hundred different sects! And instead of effecting a reformation, it has become like Babylon of old, filled with confusion. Therefore John the Revelator, speaking concerning it, exclaims, "Mystery Babylon," &c., "How much she hath glorified herself and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give her; for she saith in her heart, I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow.—Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire: for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her." Rev. xviii. 7, 8.

But first, O Lord, let the gospel which is to be preached to every nation, kindred, tongue and people be proclaimed, and let the honest in heart be gathered out, but let thy judgments pass through in righteousness until the earth is cleansed from all pollution, and the kingdom be prepared for the saints of the most high, that they may hold dominion forever and ever, that men may cease to speak unto their neighbors, saying, "know ye the Lord!" but that all may know him from the least to the greatest." S. P. BACON.

Barre, Jackson Co., Mich., July 15th, 1849.

MR. JAMES J. STRANG:—At the earnest solicitation of Mr. J. S. Comstock I have consented to discuss this question with you in your paper, and perhaps some other:—"Is Mormonism true, or the true religion of the Bible?" I had expected to do it with you personally last spring, but circumstances prevented. I must soon go on a journey to Ohio, and cannot enter on the discussion until some time in October next, but am willing to attend to it as soon as is consistent with my other necessary arrangements. Yours respectfully, FREDERIC FREEMAN.

Albion, Mich., July 26th, 1849.

MR. FREDERIC FREEMAN—SIR:—Your letter of July 15th is this moment received. I hasten to reply, that, unexpectedly till within a few days, I am now in your immediate vicinity, seeking a discussion with any man whom the Protestant sects are willing to put forward as their champion. You are aware that for more than a year I have had the assurance of meeting the champions of my opponents here, and though I have done every thing in my power to elicit a discussion, after so constant a failure, the impression has by some means gone abroad in some circles at least that I am willing to avoid the encounter. I am now here ready, and in the midst of my opponents. Four days at most will test the question whether they will dare the encounter. Now to answer you with the plainness which I ever intend to use, and hope to meet with in others, I do not think the Protestant communities in this region are willing to put you forward as their champion. I cannot consent to spend the time to discuss an important question with one who is by his own friends or sect regarded as an incompetent champion.

I expect the Protestants in this region to put forward such a man that if he is defeated they will consider their cause defeated; a man with whom they are willing to stand or fall. I will not give them the opportunity to excuse bringing forward their ablest men, by saying that somebody else has debated the question, and at the same time excuse their own defeat by saying that they are not responsible for the failure of a third rate man. While here, if you are prepared to meet me at any of my congregations, you will have full liberty to debate any of my positions. I shall give you a fair field, and ample justice. But if I spend time to write out a discussion, I expect as my opponent one who is acknowledged by his brethren, at least as a fit representative of their faith and order. If the Baptists will thus put you forward, you may consider the engagement as being made on my part. I will add further, that we should be happy to receive such communications as you are prepared to write, and give them a place in the Herald, and shall give them any necessary answer. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

In the midst of revolutions, of wars, and rumors of wars, there is much speculation as to what they will result in. "The leading politicians interpret these movements as clearly indicating the speedy establishment of a universal republic. The socialist sees in them a brotherhood universal, waving its peaceful banners triumphantly over every land. The christian world reads in the revolutions of the age the early dawning of a spiritual millennial glory." Each of these interpretations we consider radically defective, because they assume that the world is in the hands of the learned as clay is in the hands of the potter. It is not in the power of mankind to renovate themselves. The history of the world for the last five thousand years shows that they have been moving rapidly along the path of retrogressive progression.

The saint puts upon the signs of the times an entirely different construction. He sees in them the fulfillment of the ancient prophecies concerning the destruction of the Gentile nations, and of "Mystery Babylon, the mother of harlots," and the hand of God in working deliverance for his covenant people. Read the following extracts from the 34th and 35th pages of the Book of Mormon:—

"And it came to pass that when the angel had spoken these words, he said unto me, rememberest thou the covenants of the Father unto the house of Israel? I said unto him, yea. And it came to pass that he said unto me, look and behold that great and abominable church, which is the mother of abominations, whose foundation is the devil. And he said unto me behold, there are, save two churches only: the one is the church of the Lamb of God, and the other is the church of the devil; wherefore, whoso belongeth not to the church of the Lamb of God, belongeth to that great church, which is the mother of abomination; and she is the whore of all the earth. And it came to pass that I looked and beheld the whore of all the earth, and she sat upon many waters; and she had dominion over all the earth, among all nations, kindreds, tongues and people."

"And it came to pass that I beheld that the wrath of God was poured out upon the great and abominable church, insomuch that there were wars and rumors of wars among all the nations and kindreds of the earth, and as there began to be wars and rumors of wars among all the nations which belonged to the mother of abominations, the angel spake unto me, saying, behold, the wrath of God is upon the mother of harlots; and behold, thou seest all these things; and when the day cometh that the wrath of God is poured out upon the mother of harlots, which is the great and abominable church of all the earth, whose foundation is the devil, then at that day, the work of the Father shall commence, in preparing the way for the fulfilling of his covenants, which he hath made to his people, who are of the house of Israel."

It is well known that when the Book of Mormon came forth it was a time of comparitave peace among tne nations of Europe, but now they are all in commotion. The revolutions of the last year have swept throughout Europe like a mighty tornado, and overturned thrones and governments which had stood unmoved for ages. Yet the troubles are but commencing.

"It is now clear that Europe, unless some extraordinary event transpires to check it, is about being involved in a general war.—Three great powers, Russia, Austria and Prussia, or their sovereigns at least, have joined hands and thrown down the gauntlet to the Republicanism of France, Germany, and Italy, and to what they call the rebellion of the Hungarians. The triple alliance of despots can probably count on sympathy and aid from Naples and Spain. They have at their command the balance of military power, and the position to give it prestige. Their plans have been long considered, and are deep laid. They have the support of the aristocracy and the priesthood—they repose upon the shadow of "divine rights," and to save regal titles, and dignities enjoyed for centuries, they will struggle with the energy of despair. Their all is cast upon the coming battle."

While the revolutions which are now racking the nations of Europe to their centre were brewing, the work of the Father commenced in preparing the way for the fulfilling of his covenants, which he hath made to his people, who are of the house of Israel, in the appointing of Big Beaver Island by the word of the Lord through the prophet James as the place from which the gospel should go to the tribes, assuring us at the same time that the sword was already bathed in blood that spared not their destroyers. Thus we see that the word of God is fulfilling. Our prayer to God is, that he will continue to overturn and overturn until he reigns whose right it is.

Albion, Mich., July 26th, 1849.

TO THE ELDERS OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS—DEAR BRETHREN:—The cause of God lays dear to your every heart, no doubt, and you are looking with fondest expectation for the announcement of the glorious and peaceful reign of the Son of God. And do you ever think of the nations of the earth, precious and immortal men, our brothers, who know not God, but have been covered for years by the rubbish of sectarian tradition? If so, remember the gift that is in you by the laying on of the hands of the servants of God, and from this hour forward stir up the glorious and heaven born principle, and let those in whose society you may be placed hear from you on all occasions when it is meet and proper for you to be heard, and preach as well by example as precept, that your labor may not be in vain in the Lord.

The time given us of God in which to do his work is short.—The Lord's anger is now being felt by the rebellious nations of the earth. His judgments are being felt by the ungodly. It is high time that the servants of God, holding the everlasting priesthood, should arise and show themselves worthy of their high and holy calling. We are now very anxious to have good men with their families gather to and settle the islands of the great lakes, as God has commanded. We are not anxious, however, that the rebellious should gather there, or any save it be peaceable and law abiding saints of God, who have faith in the dispensation of the fullness of times. It is a good place, pleasant and healthy, and a place where the true servants of God are determined to establish everlasting righteousness. Therefore, holy brethren, blend your efforts for the salvation and redemption of universal man, and may the blessing put you forward as their champion. I cannot consent to spend the time to discuss an important question with one who is by his own friends or sect regarded as an incompetent champion.

I expect the Protestants in this region to put forward such a man that if he is defeated they will consider their cause defeated; a man with whom they are willing to stand or fall. I will not give them the opportunity to excuse bringing forward their ablest men, by saying that somebody else has debated the question, and at the same time excuse their own defeat by saying that they are not responsible for the failure of a third rate man. While here, if you are prepared to meet me at any of my congregations, you will have full liberty to debate any of my positions. I shall give you a fair field, and ample justice. But if I spend time to write out a discussion, I expect as my opponent one who is acknowledged by his brethren, at least as a fit representative of their faith and order. If the Baptists will thus put you forward, you may consider the engagement as being made on my part. I will add further, that we should be happy to receive such communications as you are prepared to write, and give them a place in the Herald, and shall give them any necessary answer. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

In the midst of revolutions, of wars, and rumors of wars, there is much speculation as to what they will result in. "The leading politicians interpret these movements as clearly indicating the speedy establishment of a universal republic. The socialist sees in them a brotherhood universal, waving its peaceful banners triumphantly over every land. The christian world reads in the revolutions of the age the early dawning of a spiritual millennial glory." Each of these interpretations we consider radically defective, because they assume that the world is in the hands of the learned as clay is in the hands of the potter. It is not in the power of mankind to renovate themselves. The history of the world for the last five thousand years shows that they have been moving rapidly along the path of retrogressive progression.

The saint puts upon the signs of the times an entirely different construction. He sees in them the fulfillment of the ancient prophecies concerning the destruction of the Gentile nations, and of "Mystery Babylon, the mother of harlots," and the hand of God in working deliverance for his covenant people. Read the following extracts from the 34th and 35th pages of the Book of Mormon:—

"And it came to pass that when the angel had spoken these words, he said unto me, rememberest thou the covenants of the Father unto the house of Israel? I said unto him, yea. And it came to pass that he said unto me, look and behold that great and abominable church, which is the mother of abominations, whose foundation is the devil. And he said unto me behold, there are, save two churches only: the one is the church of the Lamb of God, and the other is the church of the devil; wherefore, whoso belongeth not to the church of the Lamb of God, belongeth to that great church, which is the mother of abomination; and she is the whore of all the earth. And it came to pass that I looked and beheld the whore of all the earth, and she sat upon many waters; and she had dominion over all the earth, among all nations, kindreds, tongues and people."

"And it came to pass that I beheld that the wrath of God was poured out upon the great and abominable church, insomuch that there were wars and rumors of wars among all the nations and kindreds of the earth, and as there began to be wars and rumors of wars among all the nations which belonged to the mother of abominations, the angel spake unto me, saying, behold, the wrath of God is upon the mother of harlots; and behold, thou seest all these things; and when the day cometh that the wrath of God is poured out upon the mother of harlots, which is the great and abominable church of all the earth, whose foundation is the devil, then at that day, the work of the Father shall commence, in preparing the way for the fulfilling of his covenants, which he hath made to his people, who are of the house of Israel."

It is well known that when the Book of Mormon came forth it was a time of comparitave peace among the nations of Europe, but now they are all in commotion. The revolutions of the last year have swept throughout Europe like a mighty tornado, and overturned thrones and governments which had stood unmoved for ages. Yet the troubles are but commencing.

"It is now clear that Europe, unless some extraordinary event transpires to check it, is about being involved in a general war.—Three great powers, Russia, Austria and Prussia, or their sovereigns at least, have joined hands and thrown down the gauntlet to the Republicanism of France, Germany, and Italy, and to what they call the rebellion of the Hungarians. The triple alliance of despots can probably count on sympathy and aid from Naples and Spain. They have at their command the balance of military power, and the position to give it prestige. Their plans have been long considered, and are deep laid. They have the support of the aristocracy and the priesthood—they repose upon the shadow of "divine rights," and to save regal titles, and dignities enjoyed for centuries, they will struggle with the energy of despair. Their all is cast upon the coming battle."

While the revolutions which are now racking the nations of Europe to their centre were brewing, the work of the Father commenced in preparing the way for the fulfilling of his covenants, which he hath made to his people, who are of the house of Israel, in the appointing of Big Beaver Island by the word of the Lord through the prophet James as the place from which the gospel should go to the tribes, assuring us at the same time that the sword was already bathed in blood that spared not their destroyers. Thus we see that the word of God is fulfilling. Our prayer to God is, that he will continue to overturn and overturn until he reigns whose right it is.

Albion, Mich., July 26th, 1849.

TO THE ELDERS OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS—DEAR BRETHREN:—The cause of God lays dear to your every heart, no doubt, and you are looking with fondest expectation for the announcement of the glorious and peaceful reign of the Son of God. And do you ever think of the nations of the earth, precious and immortal men, our brothers, who know not God, but have been covered for years by the rubbish of sectarian tradition? If so, remember the gift that is in you by the laying on of the hands of the servants of God, and from this hour forward stir up the glorious and heaven born principle, and let those in whose society you may be placed hear from you on all occasions when it is meet and proper for you to be heard, and preach as well by example as precept, that your labor may not be in vain in the Lord.

The time given us of God in which to do his work is short.—The Lord's anger is now being felt by the rebellious nations of the earth. His judgments are being felt by the ungodly. It is high time that the servants of God, holding the everlasting priesthood, should arise and show themselves worthy of their high and holy calling. We are now very anxious to have good men with their families gather to and settle the islands of the great lakes, as God has commanded. We are not anxious, however, that the rebellious should gather there, or any save it be peaceable and law abiding saints of God, who have faith in the dispensation of the fullness of times. It is a good place, pleasant and healthy, and a place where the true servants of God are determined to establish everlasting righteousness. Therefore, holy brethren, bland your efforts for the salvation and redemption of universal man, and may the blessing of God ever attend you, and inspire your hearts with the pure principles of truth. Your brother and fellow laborer in the gospel of Christ, SAMUEL GRAHAM, Pres. of the Twelve.

On board a bark canoe, Lake Superior, July 20th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I write you rather as a freak of pleasantry than otherwise, to say to you and through you to all my brethren that I have now the happiness to navigate the deep clear waters of Lake Superior in a bark canoe. True we are making a short voyage, but I hope within three years to make the circuit of the lake, and some of the great lakes further north, in the same manner, visiting all the Indian tribes on the borders. And I seriously contemplate making the tour of the United States by the same mode of conveyance.—Truly, JAMES J. STRANG.

Albion, Mich., July 26th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—We arrived in Detroit Sunday evening. Monday evening I preached at the court house at Jackson to a beggarly amount of empty seats, followed by brother Adams. Tuesday evening I was indisposed, but he spoke to as many as the house would hold, and got a very strong invitation from the preacher and the public generally to occupy the pulpit of the Universalist church all day next Sunday. The spirit of inquiry and of faith too is exceedingly strong there. All the community was in a state of strong excitement on the subject. If we could preach every evening continually, I do not believe any house in the place would accommodate the congregation.

Last evening Bro. Adams preached here to as many as a large school house would contain, and vast numbers went away for want of room. This evening I shall preach at the Rail Road Depot.—There is so much of anxiety and of the spirit of inquiry among the people, that we cannot satisfy them with conversation. We have a parlor at the best tavern, and it is so thronged by inquirers, gentlemen of rank and intelligence, with whom we are obliged to keep up conversation as we write. All the preachers we have in the field could be profitably employed within thirty miles of here. We sent out about a score from the Beaver Conference, and if they were a hundred score I could find room for more. The word is powerful. Men believe when they hear. The spirit of faith is abroad.

Now, Frank, I have a measure in view—indeed it is nearly determined on—that is, to go to Voree a short time, then to Beaver a short time, and on through the east and south all winter, and back to Beaver and Voree early in the spring. We can stir up the whole country, and gather up more by two to one than have been gathered up in the last four years. In that case we should hold the October Conference in New York, and get together the whole First Presidency, and probably as many as eight of the Twelve, besides a large concourse of Elders. I am so perfectly convinced of the importance of this matter that I can hardly think it right to let it pass unattended to. Every effort we have made for eighteen months past has been crowned with success. And notwithstanding the many dogs we have had to obstruct us, and the unrighteous opposition we have met with, every encounter has left us better off. It only wants a generous and decided effort, and the victory is ours.

Now the press is calling public attention to the subject, and the way appears to be fully open. If we do not seize the ripe fruit ready at our hands, we deserve to languish for want of it. Indeed, I must go. I can raise up more Elders between now and spring than there are at present in the church. If there are any that will fall away from the faith just for my absence that length of time, I pity them. Indeed, I think there is good sound faith there, as I know there is faithfulness. I believe I can better do my part in the cause thus than in any other way. For five years we have crept along, till we have got to walking. It is well to progress. I will at least venture to send on the notice for the October Conference at New York. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

On board the canal boat Empire, 33 miles from Toledo, Ohio, Sunday morning, July 22d, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—This is Sunday, and I am pent up in this little canal boat, and therefore shall spend the time in writing to my friends, and not expecting to have a better opportunity I will write to you concerning our Conference on Big Beaver Island, in Lake Mich. I will say that I have been a member of this church over sixteen years and never, no, never, did I attend a Conference so full of interest as our last one. In the first place, the weather was clear and the atmosphere pure and healthy, and we had assembled on a spot of earth where God has said his saints shall live apart from the Gentiles, and none shall make them afraid; for his law shall be kept there. And many of the noblest spirits that have ever graced the earth with their presence met on that ever to be remembered and most happy occasion. We had several master spirits from Baltimore, Md., and from Philadelphia, Pa., and also from Ohio, Mich., Illinois, Wisconsin and New York, all engaged in the dispensation of the fullness of times, and striving to do all in their power to impart to their fellow men that kind of intelligence which is so necessary to render them happy here and in the next state of being.

Our Conference commenced before the arrival of the prophet, on Friday, the 6th, at 10 o'clock, A. M., by placing Pres. G. J. Adams in the chair. The morning was spent mostly in hearing a lecture from one of the Twelve, from the 22d chapt. of the Revelations of St. John, and 14th verse. We were looking for the prophet every moment, and in the afternoon he arrived, bringing many good hearts with him. Doct. C. W. Appleton, from Baltimore, spoke to us in the afternoon, and gave great evidence and testimony in favor of the position occupied by Pres. Strang and his associates. In the evening we listened to a most thrilling and heart cheering discourse delivered by Samuel Graham, one of the Twelve. After this, in turn, during the session of the Conference, we listened to the teachings of Prophets, Apostles, High Priests and Elders, filled with the spirit of wisdom and knowledge, which beams forth from the presence of God and the Lamb, through the gift and power of the Holy Ghost, which God bestows on all such as love him and purify themselves before him, that they may have the privilege of knowing and understanding the things of God, and of imparting to others those truths which are calculated in their nature to lead them to glorify God and keep his commandments, that they also may obtain eternal life, if they continue faithful.

The Conference also resolved to build a Tabernacle near the harbor, in the city of James, on Beaver Island, for a place of worship for the saints and other church purposes, 50 by 80 feet, to be finished with all dispatch. We surveyed the land, four acres, on Bro. E. J. More's, the front bordering on the bay, and as pleasant a situation as can be found on the Island. The work has commenced, and the brethren on the Island have agreed to work out their tithing, and not cease till the Tabernacle is finished. And I will take this opportunity to say to the brethren abroad that it will be well for them to forward a portion of their tithing, or donations, as they choose, to the Bishop at Beaver, to assist in the building of the Tabernacle. And I trust, dear brethren, that this call to you will not be vain. Let us arise like men of God, and show ourselves approved of God in doing all things which he requires at our hands.

And now I will give you an evidence by which you may know that God requires us to build a Tabernacle on Beaver Island. All who assist in building the Tabernacle, either with their hands or their substance, shall be better off than though they did it not.—

of God ever attend you, and inspire your hearts with the pure principles of truth. Your brother and fellow laborer in the gospel of Christ, SAMUEL GRAHAM, Pres. of the Twelve.

On board a bark canoe, Lake Superior, July 20th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I write you rather as a freak of pleasantry than otherwise, to say to you and through you to all my brethren that I have now the happiness to navigate the deep clear waters of Lake Superior in a bark canoe. True we are making a short voyage, but I hope within three years to make the circuit of the lake, and some of the great lakes further north, in the same manner, visiting all the Indian tribes on the borders. And I seriously contemplate making the tour of the United States by the same mode of conveyance.—Truly, JAMES J. STRANG.

Albion, Mich., July 26th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—We arrived in Detroit Sunday evening. Monday evening I preached at the court house at Jackson to a beggarly amount of empty seats, followed by brother Adams. Tuesday evening I was indisposed, but he spoke to as many as the house would hold, and got a very strong invitation from the preacher and the public generally to occupy the pulpit of the Universalist church all day next Sunday. The spirit of inquiry and of faith too is exceedingly strong there. All the community was in a state of strong excitement on the subject. If we could preach every evening continually, I do not believe any house in the place would accommodate the congregation.

Last evening Bro. Adams preached here to as many as a large school house would contain, and vast numbers went away for want of room. This evening I shall preach at the Rail Road Depot.—There is so much of anxiety and of the spirit of inquiry among the people, that we cannot satisfy them with conversation. We have a parlor at the best tavern, and it is so thronged by inquirers, gentlemen of rank and intelligence, with whom we are obliged to keep up conversation as we write. All the preachers we have in the field could be profitably employed within thirty miles of here. We sent out about a score from the Beaver Conference, and if they were a hundred score I could find room for more. The word is powerful. Men believe when they hear. The spirit of faith is abroad.

Now, Frank, I have a measure in view—indeed it is nearly determined on—that is, to go to Voree a short time, then to Beaver a short time, and on through the east and south all winter, and back to Beaver and Voree early in the spring. We can stir up the whole country, and gather up more by two to one than have been gathered up in the last four years. In that case we should hold the October Conference in New York, and get together the whole First Presidency, and probably as many as eight of the Twelve, besides a large concourse of Elders. I am so perfectly convinced of the importance of this matter that I can hardly think it right to let it pass unattended to. Every effort we have made for eighteen months past has been crowned with success. And notwithstanding the many dogs we have had to obstruct us, and the unrighteous opposition we have met with, every encounter has left us better off. It only wants a generous and decided effort, and the victory is ours.

Now the press is calling public attention to the subject, and the way appears to be fully open. If we do not seize the ripe fruit ready at our hands, we deserve to languish for want of it. Indeed, I must go. I can raise up more Elders between now and spring than there are at present in the church. If there are any that will fall away from the faith just for my absence that length of time, I pity them. Indeed, I think there is good sound faith there, as I know there is faithfulness. I believe I can better do my part in the cause thus than in any other way. For five years we have crept along, till we have got to walking. It is well to progress. I will at least venture to send on the notice for the October Conference at New York. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

On board the canal boat Empire, 33 miles from Toledo, Ohio, Sunday morning, July 22d, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—This is Sunday, and I am pent up in this little canal boat, and therefore shall spend the time in writing to my friends, and not expecting to have a better opportunity I will write to you concerning our Conference on Big Beaver Island, in Lake Mich. I will say that I have been a member of this church over sixteen years and never, no, never, did I attend a Conference so full of interest as our last one. In the first place, the weather was clear and the atmosphere pure and healthy, and we had assembled on a spot of earth where God has said his saints shall live apart from the Gentiles, and none shall make them afraid; for his law shall be kept there. And many of the noblest spirits that have ever graced the earth with their presence met on that ever to be remembered and most happy occasion. We had several master spirits from Baltimore, Md., and from Philadelphia, Pa., and also from Ohio, Mich., Illinois, Wisconsin and New York, all engaged in the dispensation of the fullness of times, and striving to do all in their power to impart to their fellow men that kind of intelligence which is so necessary to render them happy here and in the next state of being.

Our Conference commenced before the arrival of the prophet, on Friday, the 6th, at 10 o'clock, A. M., by placing Pres. G. J. Adams in the chair. The morning was spent mostly in hearing a lecture from one of the Twelve, from the 22d chapt. of the Revelations of St. John, and 14th verse. We were looking for the prophet every moment, and in the afternoon he arrived, bringing many good hearts with him. Doct. C. W. Appleton, from Baltimore, spoke to us in the afternoon, and gave great evidence and testimony in favor of the position occupied by Pres. Strang and his associates. In the evening we listened to a most thrilling and heart cheering discourse delivered by Samuel Graham, one of the Twelve. After this, in turn, during the session of the Conference, we listened to the teachings of Prophets, Apostles, High Priests and Elders, filled with the spirit of wisdom and knowledge, which beams forth from the presence of God and the Lamb, through the gift and power of the Holy Ghost, which God bestows on all such as love him and purify themselves before him, that they may have the privilege of knowing and understanding the things of God, and of imparting to others those truths which are calculated in their nature to lead them to glorify God and keep his commandments, that they also may obtain eternal life, if they continue faithful.

The Conference also resolved to build a Tabernacle near the harbor, in the city of James, on Beaver Island, for a place of worship for the saints and other church purposes, 50 by 80 feet, to be finished with all dispatch. We surveyed the land, four acres, on Bro. E. J. More's, the front bordering on the bay, and as pleasant a situation as can be found on the Island. The work has commenced, and the brethren on the Island have agreed to work out their tithing, and not cease till the Tabernacle is finished. And I will take this opportunity to say to the brethren abroad that it will be well for them to forward a portion of their tithing, or donations, as they choose, to the Bishop at Beaver, to assist in the building of the Tabernacle. And I trust, dear brethren, that this call to you will not be vain. Let us arise like men of God, and show ourselves approved of God in doing all things which he requires at our hands.

And now I will give you an evidence by which you may know that God requires us to build a Tabernacle on Beaver Island. All who assist in building the Tabernacle, either with their hands or their substance, shall be better off than though they did it not.—

Now, brethren, for the evidence. In order to this begin now to forward your mites to James M. Greig, city of James, Beaver Island, in Lake Mich., for we want to have the Tabernacle ready to meet in the ensuing winter. And while we are doing something for the Tabernacle, let us not forget the Temple of our God at Voree. Beloved Brethren, God bless you and keep you in the way of eternal life, and open out your way that you may be gathered to the places appointed of God for safety. Come, brethren and sisters, let us gather out of Babylon without delay, lest we partake of her sins and receive of her plagues, for the hour of God's judgment has come. Remember this, and flee. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES BLAKESLEE.

LAND WATERSPOUTS.

During the late heavy weather the neighboring counties were visited by several of these phenomena, attended in some instances with serious damage to property. One which visited the city of Wells, in Somersetshire, is thus described:—

Between one and two o'clock, P. M., the people of Wells were not a little alarmed by a mass of water flowing through the streets, and insinuating itself into their dwellings. An immense body of water (fourteen and fifteen inches in depth) flowed down the lanes and avenues leading from Mendip, and all this time without apparent cause for such a flood—there had certainly been a smart shower, but not at all sufficient to produce it. After the water had somewhat subsided, another body deluged the streets, but at length it passed off, and the people began to inquire what injury had been done, and how the phenomenon was caused? On the road leading to Bristol the roadstones, sand, and rubbish were piled up knee deep: immense ruts were ploughed, and it was with difficulty that horses and vehicles could pass. In the lowlands several lambs were drowned, and at the sides of the hills whole gardens with potatoes and other vegetables, were washed away. It appears that the overflow was caused by a waterspout, which was seen by some farm laborers to descend first on Pewn hill, traverse the Mendip district for some miles. The appearance was a dense, black cloud which suddenly descended and formed a circular column, whirling round with immense rapidity. The water had a disagreeable, brackish taste. About the same time a waterspout fell on Breedon hill, (Worcestershire,) and rushed down upon Kemetron. Half the houses in the village of Kemetron were flooded, and all the stone walls in its course from the hill were carried away. By marks on the trees it appears that the torrent must have been sixteen feet deep. The railway in the neighborhood was so deeply flooded as to delay the express train, by extinguishing the fire of the engine. —Cheltenham (Eng.) Examiner.

ANOTHER REFORMER.—A Mr. West is making speeches in New York, to a new sect, a little in advance of the latest reforms. The substance of the following extract from one of his speeches, we shall expect to see inserted in one of the "platforms" to be got up at the next presidential election:—Oaken Bucket.

"I do not pay any tradesmen for anything I buy, they are all robbers. I do not pay the landlords any rent. I have lived in a hired house on Leonard street for seven months, and have paid no rent, and will pay none; no power in New York can get it out of me. (Loud cheers.) I hold that I have no more right to pay rent than for a pair of boots. If you can steal safely, you have a right to steal, is the true motto. A man has a perfect right to help himself to a loaf of bread, or a pair of unmentionables, if he needs them; for we all have a right to live in this world, and the possessor of property is a robber; his goods are stolen goods, and you ought not to buy them, but take them as you want them."

☞ Wonder what will come next in the shape of a reform!

A NEW RACE.—A hitherto unknown race of people have been discovered, it is said, in the interior of Africa. The men are tall and powerfully built, standing seven to seven and a half English feet in height, and black in color, although destitute of the usual character of negroes in features. Mehemit Ali sent an expedition up the White Nile in search of gold, and there found this race of people—fifteen hundred of whom, armed to the teeth, came down to the shore of the river where the vessel lay. The name of the kingdom is Bari, and its capital Patenja. They raise wheat, tobacco, &c., and manufacture their own weapons. They are probably the ancient Ethiopians spoken of in the scripture.

POETRY.

To thee, O my Savior, to thee will I cling;
For thou art my Lord, my Redeemer and King:
And feeling thy blessings, my spirit shall know
Thy mercy is with me, wherever I go.

Farewell to the anguish of doubt and despair,
And welcome the rapture of praise and of pray'r;
Since meekly confiding, in faith I rejoice,
To hear the sweet tones of thy comforting voice.

Around me there shineth the heavenly ray,
Which scattereth clouds and their shadows away,
And melteth my soul in devotion and glow,
For thy mercy is with me wherever I go.

Farewell to the pleasures which time can afford,
Since thou art my glory, my Savior and Lord:
Nor fear I the darkness of death and the tomb,
Since thou art my light in the midst of the gloom.

P. H. S.

STILL THEY COME.—In Burlington, during the week ending on Saturday the 28th ult., two were initiated into the Church of the living God through the ordinances of baptism and the laying on of hands; and in this place an Sunday, the 29th, eight more, five of whom came 25 miles for the express purpose. The spirit is among the people, reproving them of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment. All are anxious to hear "Mormon preaching," and the honest in heart are willing to obey the gospel. "Truly the harvest is great, but the laborers are few."

THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET AND SONS OF TEMPERANCE ORGAN.—The sixth No. of this periodical is on our table. In mechanical execution and finish it is not surpassed in the State, and the editorial department is ably conducted.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

William Tucker,	$1,00	to Vol. IV	No. 13
John Macauley,	1,00	" "	38
Samuel Blair,	1,00	" "	14
George Walters,	2,50	to Vol. V	No. 13

NOTICE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at Franklin, Oakland Co., Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th of August, 1849. By order of the Twelve.

SAMUEL GRAHAM.

Now, brethren, for the evidence. In order to this begin now to forward your mites to James M. Greig, city of James, Beaver Island, in Lake Mich., for we want to have the Tabernacle ready to meet in the ensuing winter. And while we are doing something for the Tabernacle, let us not forget the Temple of our God at Voree. Beloved Brethren, God bless you and keep you in the way of eternal life, and open out your way that you may be gathered to the places appointed of God for safety. Come, brethren and sisters, let us gather out of Babylon without delay, lest we partake of her sins and receive of her plagues, for the hour of God's judgment has come. Remember this, and flee. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES BLAKESLEE.

LAND WATERSPOUTS.

During the late heavy weather the neighboring counties were visited by several of these phenomena, attended in some instances with serious damage to property. One which visited the city of Wells, in Somersetshire, is thus described:—

Between one and two o'clock, P. M., the people of Wells were not a little alarmed by a mass of water flowing through the streets, and insinuating itself into their dwellings. An immense body of water (fourteen and fifteen inches in depth) flowed down the lanes and avenues leading from Mendip, and all this time without apparent cause for such a flood—there had certainly been a smart shower, but not at all sufficient to produce it. After the water had somewhat subsided, another body deluged the streets, but at length it passed off, and the people began to inquire what injury had been done, and how the phenomenon was caused? On the road leading to Bristol the roadstones, sand, and rubbish were piled up knee deep: immense ruts were ploughed, and it was with difficulty that horses and vehicles could pass. In the lowlands several lambs were drowned, and at the sides of the hills whole gardens with potatoes and other vegetables, were washed away. It appears that the overflow was caused by a waterspout, which was seen by some farm laborers to descend first on Pewn hill, traverse the Mendip district for some miles. The appearance was a dense, black cloud which suddenly descended and formed a circular column, whirling round with immense rapidity. The water had a disagreeable, brackish taste. About the same time a waterspout fell on Breedon hill, (Worcestershire,) and rushed down upon Kemetron. Half the houses in the village of Kemetron were flooded, and all the stone walls in its course from the hill were carried away. By marks on the trees it appears that the torrent must have been sixteen feet deep. The railway in the neighborhood was so deeply flooded as to delay the express train, by extinguishing the fire of the engine. —Cheltenham (Eng.) Examiner.

ANOTHER REFORMER.—A Mr. West is making speeches in New York, to a new sect, a little in advance of the latest reforms. The substance of the following extract from one of his speeches, we shall expect to see inserted in one of the "platforms" to be got up at the next presidential election:—Oaken Bucket.

"I do not pay any tradesmen for anything I buy, they are all robbers. I do not pay the landlords any rent. I have lived in a hired house on Leonard street for seven months, and have paid no rent, and will pay none; no power in New York can get it out of me. (Loud cheers.) I hold that I have no more right to pay rent than for a pair of boots. If you can steal safely, you have a right to steal, is the true motto. A man has a perfect right to help himself to a loaf of bread, or a pair of unmentionables, if he needs them; for we all have a right to live in this world, and the possessor of property is a robber; his goods are stolen goods, and you ought not to buy them, but take them as you want them."

☞ Wonder what will come next in the shape of a reform!

A NEW RACE.—A hitherto unknown race of people have been discovered, it is said, in the interior of Africa. The men are tall and powerfully built, standing seven to seven and a half English feet in height, and black in color, although destitute of the usual character of negroes in features. Mehemit Ali sent an expedition up the White Nile in search of gold, and there found this race of people—fifteen hundred of whom, armed to the teeth, came down to the shore of the river where the vessel lay. The name of the kingdom is Bari, and its capital Patenja. They raise wheat, tobacco, &c., and manufacture their own weapons. They are probably the ancient Ethiopians spoken of in the scripture.

POETRY.

To thee, O my Savior, to thee will I cling;
For thou art my Lord, my Redeemer and King:
And feeling thy blessings, my spirit shall know
Thy mercy is with me, wherever I go.

Farewell to the anguish of doubt and despair,
And welcome the rapture of praise and of pray'r,
Since meekly confiding, in faith I rejoice,
To hear the sweet tones of thy comforting voice.

Around me there shineth the heavenly ray,
Which scattereth clouds and their shadows away,
And melteth my soul in devotion and glow,
For thy mercy is with me wherever I go.

Farewell to the pleasures which time can afford,
Since thou art my glory, my Savior and Lord:
Nor fear I the darkness of death and the tomb,
Since thou art my light in the midst of the gloom.

P. H. S.

STILL THEY COME.—In Burlington, during the week ending on Saturday the 28th ult., two were initiated into the Church of the living God through the ordinances of baptism and the laying on of hands; and in this place an Sunday, the 29th, eight more, five of whom came 25 miles for the express purpose. The spirit is among the people, reproving them of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment. All are anxious to hear "Mormon preaching," and the honest in heart are willing to obey the gospel "Truly the harvest is great, but the laborers are few."

THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET AND SONS OF TEMPERANCE ORGAN.—The sixth No. of this periodical is on our table. In mechanical execution and finish it is not surpassed in the State, and the editorial department is ably conducted.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

William Tucker,	$1,00 to	Vol. IV	No. 13
John Macauley,	1,00 "	"	38
Samuel Blair,	1,00 "	"	14
George Walters,	2,50 to	Vol. V	No. 13

NOTICE.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at Franklin, Oakland Co., Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th of August, 1849. By order of the Twelve.

SAMUEL GRAHAM.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 22.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, AUG. 16, 1849. [WHOLE No. 138.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD AT THE CITY OF JAMES, BEAVER ISLAND, ON THE 6TH, 7TH, 8TH AND 9TH OF JULY, 1849.

Sunday morning, 8 o'clock.—Conference resumed its session.—Singing. Prayer by M. M. Aldrich, President of the stake. The blessing of children, seventeen in number, was attended to by Elders Strang, Adams, J. Blakeslee and S. Graham. G. J. Adams then arose to address the Conference, from the following words, penned by the prophet Obadiah: "For the day of the Lord is near upon all the heathen. But upon mount Zion shall be deliverance, and there shall be holiness; and the house of Jacob shall possess their possessions. And the house of Jacob shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame, and the house of Esau for stubble, and they shall kindle in them, and devour them; and there shall not be any remaining of the house of Esau; for the Lord hath spoken it. And there shall come upon mount Zion saviors of men." Bro. Adams, in his introductory remarks, commenced by referring to the various scenes through which the church of the last days had been called to pass from its rise unto the present time, showing the privations, the struggles and persecutions which the servants of God had been compelled to endure in the establishing of truth and the building up of the kingdom of God in this last dispensation, and made a brief allusion to the time when he stood as counselor and spokesman to the prophet Joseph—the various scenes through which he had passed since that time—the obstacles that had been thrown in his path, and the combination of unforeseen circumstances that had hindered for a time his progress in the work of the ministry.

He then gave a brief and glowing description of the great work that God had accomplished in the last eight months, through his labors in the southern country, which work had been established and inseparably connected with the standing of James J. Strang as the successor of Joseph Smith, as Prophet, Seer, Revelator and Translator to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with all the gifts, callings and priesthood that pertains to the same. He then solemnly declared his determination that "LIVE OR DIE, STAND OR FALL, SINK OR SWIM, SURAIVE OR PERISH," no power that sways the will of man (God being his helper) should stir him from the truth from this time forth until the kingdom is established in power and great glory. He then clearly and incontrovertibly established the following positions:—

1st. That the work of God in the last days must be, and has been, commenced by the establishing of a people and a place called Zion, for the restoring of the fulness of truth to the earth.

2d. That this Zion must be established ages after Zion at Jerusalem had been "ploughed as a field and become heaps."

3d. That this Zion must be established on a literal land, for the literal gathering of the seed of Jacob.

4th. That the seed of Jacob are the sons of Ephraim, on whose head Jacob named his name; and that this seed, in fulfillment of the predictions of the prophets, by intermarriage became mixed among the nations of the earth, and the Elders of this church are said seed, chosen of God by revelation and prophecy to "push the people together to the ends of the earth;" and that the Lamanites or Indians are of the house of Joseph, and mostly of the tribe of Manasseh, as the prophet Ezekiel has declared concerning the Book of Mormon, that it is the "stick or record of Joseph in the hand of Ephraim."

5th. That this Zion is to commence to be established on a "land shadowing with wings, (like a winged cymbal,) in the fields of the wood, on the sides of the north, in a place of broad rivers and streams;" and that this land is in Jackson, Clay and Caldwell counties, Mo.

6th. That after this Zion began to be established it was to be burned to ashes and the saints driven, and many apostatize and fall away and deny the faith, and the counselor or prophet of Zion was to perish and "another to be appointed in his stead."

7th. That many who had rebelled against God and his anointed should go into a "salt land not inhabited, and should not see, or know, when good comes, but that they shall be utterly wasted and destroyed." But those that trust in the Lord and obey the voice of his prophet "shall dwell by great waters in the north, free from scorching heat, and shall there be delivered and prepare to arise and thrash." And when they do thrash they will thrash their way to the very places from whence they have been driven; that is, when God gives commandment, when "one shall chase a thousand, two shall put ten thousand to flight."

8th. That the law of the gospel in all its fulness and power shall go forth from this land to every nation, kindred, tongue and people, to prepare them for the setting up of the kingdom of God.

9th. That one of the grand objects of this work is the salvation of the honest dead, and that it is for this purpose that the saviors are to come upon mount Zion, when the kingdom shall be the Lord's. These several positions were presented by Pres. Adams in an able, soul stirring and unanswerable chain of truth and eloquence that carried conviction to every heart, and many a son of Ephraim felt the spirit answer to his blood, and witness to the power of eternal truth. He closed by an overwhelming appeal to the saints to support the Presidency and all authorities in the church, that they might hold on to and possess the beautiful lands that God had given them for a strong hold and tower of Zion.

He then appealed to those present who had not yet embraced the truth. The appeal was not in vain, for thirteen came immediately forward and were in a most solemn manner baptized by Pres. Strang. Several others went forward during the Conference. We do not mean those that went forward were "old bunkers or stool pigeons" that were baptized a second time for effect, but that they were ladies and gentlemen that came from a distance to learn the truth, and two of them are now ordained and gone from the Conference to preach the gospel to the nations of the earth.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 22.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, AUG. 16, 1849. [WHOLE No. 138.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD AT THE CITY OF JAMES, BEAVER ISLAND, ON THE 6TH, 7TH, 8TH AND 9TH OF JULY, 1849.

Sunday morning, 8 o'clock.—Conference resumed its session.—Singing. Prayer by M. M. Aldrich, President of the stake. The blessing of children, seventeen in number, was attended to by Elders Strang, Adams, J. Blakesee and S. Graham. G. J. Adams then arose to address the Conference, from the following words, penned by the prophet Obadiah: "For the day of the Lord is near upon all the heathen. But upon mount Zion shall be deliverance, and there shall be holiness; and the house of Jacob shall possess their possessions. And the house of Jacob shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame, and the house of Esau for stubble, and they shall kindle in them, and devour them; and there shall not be any remaining of the house of Esau; for the Lord hath spoken it. And there shall come upon mount Zion saviors of men." Bro. Adams, in his introductory remarks, commenced by referring to the various scenes through which the church of the last days had been called to pass from its rise up to the present time, showing the privations, the struggles and persecutions which the servants of God had been compelled to endure in the establishing of truth and the building up of the kingdom of God in this last dispensation, and made a brief allusion to the time when he stood as counselor and spokesman to the prophet Joseph—the various scenes through which he had passed since that time—the obstacles that had been thrown in his path, and the combination of unforeseen circumstances that had hindered for a time his progress in the work of the ministry.

He then gave a brief and glowing description of the great work that God had accomplished in the last eight months, through his labors in the southern country, which work had been established and inseparably connected with the standing of James J. Strang as the successor of Joseph Smith, as Prophet, Seer, Revelator and Translator to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with all the gifts, callings and priesthood that pertains to the same. He then solemnly declared his determination that "LIVE OR DIE, STAND OR FALL, SINK OR SWIM, SURAIVE OR PERISH," no power that sways the will of man (God being his helper) should stir him from the truth from this time forth until the kingdom is established in power and great glory. He then clearly and incontrovertibly established the following positions:—

1st. That the work of God in the last days must be, and has been, commenced by the establishing of a people and a place called Zion, for the restoring of the fulness of truth to the earth.

2d. That this Zion must be established ages after Zion at Jerusalem had been "ploughed as a field and become heaps."

3d. That this Zion must be established on a literal land, for the literal gathering of the seed of Jacob.

4th. That the seed of Jacob are the sons of Ephraim, on whose head Jacob named his name; and that this seed, in fulfillment of the predictions of the prophets, by intermarriage became mixed among the nations of the earth, and the Elders of this church are said seed, chosen of God by revelation and prophecy to "push the people together to the ends of the earth;" and that the Lamanites or Indians are of the house of Joseph, and mostly of the tribe of Manasseh, as the prophet Ezekiel has declared concerning the Book of Mormon, that it is the "stick or record of Joseph in the hand of Ephraim."

5th. That this Zion is to commence to be established on a "land shadowing with wings, (like a winged cymbal,) in the fields of the wood, on the sides of the north, in a place of broad rivers and streams;" and that this land is in Jackson, Clay and Caldwell counties, Mo.

6th. That after this Zion began to be established it was to be burned to ashes and the saints driven, and many apostatize and fall away and deny the faith, and the counselor or prophet of Zion was to perish and "another to be appointed in his stead."

7th. That many who had rebelled against God and his anointed should go into a "salt land not inhabited, and should not see, or know, when good comes, but that they shall be utterly wasted and destroyed." But those that trust in the Lord and obey the voice of his prophet "shall dwell by great waters in the north, free from scorching heat, and shall there be delivered and prepare to arise and thrash." And when they do thrash they will thrash their way to the very places from whence they have been driven; that is, when God gives commandment, when "one shall chase a thousand, two shall put ten thousand to flight."

8th. That the law of the gospel in all its fulness and power shall go forth from this land to every nation, kindred, tongue and people, to prepare them for the setting up of the kingdom of God.

9th. That one of the grand objects of this work is the salvation of the honest dead, and that it is for this purpose that the saviors are to come upon mount Zion, when the kingdom shall be the Lord's. These several positions were presented by Pres. Adams in an able, soul stirring and unanswerable chain of truth and eloquence that carried conviction to every heart, and many a son of Ephraim felt the spirit answer to his blood, and witness to the power of eternal truth. He closed by an overwhelming appeal to the saints to support the Presidency and all authorities in the church, that they might hold on to and possess the beautiful lands that God had given them for a strong hold and tower of Zion.

He then appealed to those present who had not yet embraced the truth. The appeal was not in vain, for thirteen came immediately forward and were in a most solemn manner baptized by Pres. Strang. Several others went forward during the Conference. We do not mean those that went forward were "old hunkers or stool pigeons" that were baptized a second time for effect, but that they were ladies and gentlemen that came from a distance to learn the truth, and two of them are now ordained and gone from the Conference to preach the gospel to the nations of the earth.

Afternoon session.—Opened by singing. Prayer by Samuel Graham. Pres. Strang then spoke of the call of Elder G. J. Adams to be a Counselor unto the First President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Elder Adams was then ordained, consecrated and set apart by revelation and the laying on of the hands of James J. Strang, to be a prophet of God, a witness of the Lord Jesus Christ unto all nations, a Counselor to the First President, and a member of the First Presidency to hold the keys of the kingdom of God in conjunction with his brethren, the apostles and prophets, and to receive the oracles of God from the chief shepherd of the whole flock, and give them to the people of the saints of the most high. Pres. Strang then preached. Adjourned till 9 o'clock to-morrow morning for the transaction of business.

Monday morning, 9 o'clock, A. M.—Conference in session.—Singing. Prayer by C. W. Appleton. Bro. Adams arose and spoke of the propriety of building a Tabernacle for a house of worship, a hall of science, and the school of the prophets, to be 50 by 80 feet, built of square timber. After similar remarks from several brethren on the same subject, a unanimous vote of the Conference was passed to build the above named building by tithing and donations for that purpose. Bros. G. J. Adams, James M. Greig, Alonzo Cheeseman and Samuel Graham were appointed by unanimous vote to be a committee for the purpose of superintending the work of building the Tabernacle. Bro. R. F. Mills arose and spoke of the necessity of giving the Gospel Herald a better support than it has at present, and offered the following resolution:—

Resolved, That we will sustain and give a hearty and undivided support to the Gospel Herald. Carried unanimously.

(To be continued.)

Long Plain, Mass., July 29th, 1849.

Pres. Strang:—

I have neglected writing till this date, which is not exactly May 1st, without fail, but I cannot always fulfill my promises, not having the power to see the end from the beginning. I have nothing to communicate concerning church affairs—things of a religious nature are as calm and of course as stagnant as the lagoons of Florida or Louisiana. The sectarians are in a woful decline.—More people stay at home on Sunday in New England than in the middle or western States, and the masses—there is no use of denying the fact—are fast sliding, or gliding, or reasoning themselves into the fogs of skepticism, deism, atheism, &c., in fact there is just the causes at work to produce that effect. The iron bands of witch-hanging and Quaker-banishing blue-law-making Puritanism were broken by the march of mind soon after the revolutionary war, and the result was that people began to doubt the truth of such principles as were constantly doled out to them by the Scribes and Pharisees that sat in the seat that had been immortalized by a John Calvin, the roaster of a Servetius, or Cotton Mather, drowner of babies and hanger of fidgety old maids and pious nervous elderly widow ladies. People began to doubt. "Wrath hot and vengeful was poured on the heads of doubters." He that doubted in those days was damned already, and all the powers of New England's own peculiar priesthood were brought to bear upon them. This kept the cowards and those that were to poor to be aught else but hypocrites in the churches. About those days a Murray began to preach Universalism, which spread rapidly. Unitarianism soon after arose from its obscurity, for it has since come out in ministerial conventions that great numbers of the clergy had secretly been Unitarians for many years, but as they were well paid they were content to preach what they believed to be a holy lie that they might guide their congregations on the road to damnation. Well, Unitarians soon became more popular than the Universalists, so many of the pious collegians with their silk gowns and white neck cloths had joined them. In fact just now Unitarians are the sect in old Massachusetts and most parts of New England. Thus you see the convenient sliding Gunter scale to atheism. A. B. is born and raised in the orthodox faith. He never is allowed when young to hear anything else, therefore he knows only one side of the question. Grows up in that faith, after a while he hears Unitarian doctrines, likes them better than Orthodoxy, feels free to look about and examine into different faiths. Takes another step, becomes a Universalist. Feels a great deal freer. Reads Pane's, Volney's and Taylor's works for the first time. Never dared to before. He bcomes a skeptic, and sends for the Boston Investigator; that in a short time completes his conversion; that is, in brief words, the way people are going in these parts. Many churches are shut.

The majority of the pew owners being unbelievers, and being too muleish to sell out to the minority, they remain unoccupied except by the birds of air who find in them convenient nesting places.—This leaves the field clear of obstructions, and I consider New England, take the country parts, a peculiarly open field for the operation of men of great faith such as know the way of life, and have been instructed under the proper authorities. As for us poor fellows away on the borders of Zion among the Gentiles, we know nothing about such matters as we ought. Another idea occurs to me while speaking of the country parts in this section. It is this: the Elders who were sent to New England in former times almost totally neglected the country. They would hang around the cities sometimes three or four at a time, sucking the very vitals as it were out of the brethren in the branches that were never large enough to maintain more than one Elder at a time as he should be. The usual plan pursued by the greater number of the Elders would be to start from Nauvoo on a mission and take the route where the largest branches were, and perhaps travel 12 or 1500 miles at a great expense to the branches, and perhaps be gone three or four months from home without baptizing one person or reaching the ears of one person that was not already a Mormon. The tendency of such things was this, and ever will be, if the same course is pursued, the saints will be constantly divided into parties in the branches. They will be impoverished and unable to do anything towards building up the land of Zion. And more than this, many of the saints become offended and fall off on account of a continual ding donging after money by Elders that are constantly preaching against a hireling clergy. I take the liberty of speaking on this subject to you because I know your soul abhors such worse than useless work, and I am certain you saw during your journey east enough to give something of an assurance that I speak the very truth. I have hopes sometimes of being of some use in the latter day work, and if my family were well located in the land of the saints I would like no better field of labor, if God considered me worthy, than to go on a mission to the South Sea Isles of the great Pacific. Receive these scattering remarks from one of the least of your brethren in this dispensation. Respectfully,

C. A. ROGERS.

City of Austin, Travis county, Texas, June 12th, 1849.

President Jas. J. Strang:—I wrote you a letter about a month ago, asking upon what principle your claim was predicated to the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. If I had been as well informed in regard to the subject matter of your appointment and calling as I am since reading two of your tracts and several of your papers, I should not have written as I did. I requested a publication of my former letter, but from the present conviction of my mind I wrote to Elder Marks to prevent its publication: and now as I have spent a competency and my all in the church for the Afternoon session.—Opened by singing. Prayer by Samuel Graham. Pres. Strang then spoke of the call of Elder G. J. Adams to be a Counselor unto the First President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Elder Adams was then ordained, consecrated and set apart by revelation and the laying on of the hands of James J. Strang, to be a prophet of God, a witness of the Lord Jesus Christ unto all nations, a Counselor to the First President, and a member of the First Presidency to hold the keys of the kingdom of God in conjunction with his brethren, the apostles and prophets, and to receive the oracles of God from the chief shepherd of the whole flock, and give them to the people of the saints of the most high. Pres. Strang then preached. Adjourned till 9 o'clock to-morrow morning for the transaction of business.

Monday morning, 9 o'clock, A. M.—Conference in session.—Singing. Prayer by C. W. Appleton. Bro. Adams arose and spoke of the propriety of building a Tabernacle for a house of worship, a hall of science, and the school of the prophets, to be 50 by 80 feet, built of square timber. After similar remarks from several brethren on the same subject, a unanimous vote of the Conference was passed to build the above named building by tithing and donations for that purpose. Bros. G. J. Adams, James M. Greig, Alonzo Cheeseman and Samuel Graham were appointed by unanimous vote to be a committee for the purpose of superintending the work of building the Tabernacle. Bro. R. F. Mills arose and spoke of the necessity of giving the Gospel Herald a better support than it has at present, and offered the following resolution:—

Resolved, That we will sustain and give a hearty and undivided support to the Gospel Herald. Carried unanimously.

(To be continued.)

Long Plain, Mass., July 29th, 1849.

PRES. STRANG:—

I have neglected writing till this date, which is not exactly May 1st, without fail, but I cannot always fulfill my promises, not having the power to see the end from the beginning. I have nothing to communicate concerning church affairs—things of a religious nature are as calm and of course as stagnant as the lagoons of Florida or Louisiana. The sectarians are in a woful decline.—More people stay at home on Sunday in New England than in the middle or western States, and the masses—there is no use of denying the fact—are fast sliding, or gliding, or reasoning themselves into the fogs of skepticism, deism, atheism, &c., in fact there is just the causes at work to produce that effect. The iron bands of witch-hanging and Quaker-banishing blue-law-making Puritanism were broken by the march of mind soon after the revolutionary war, and the result was that people began to doubt the truth of such principles as were constantly doled out to them by the Scribes and Pharisees that sat in the seat that had been immortalized by a John Calvin, the roaster of a Servetius, or Cotton Mather, drowner of babies and hanger of fidgety old maids and pious nervous elderly widow ladies. People began to doubt. "Wrath hot and vengeful was poured on the heads of doubters." He that doubted in those days was damned already, and all the powers of New England's own peculiar priesthood were brought to bear upon them. This kept the cowards and those that were to poor to be aught else but hypocrites in the churches. About those days a Murray began to preach Universalism, which spread rapidly. Unitarianism soon after arose from its obscurity, for it has since come out in ministerial conventions that great numbers of the clergy had secretly been Unitarians for many years, but as they were well paid they were content to preach what they believed to be a holy lie that they might guide their congregations on the road to damnation. Well, Unitarians soon became more popular than the Universalists, so many of the pious collegians with their silk gowns and white neck cloths had joined them. In fact just now Unitarians are the sect in old Massachusetts and most parts of New England. Thus you see the convenient sliding Gunter scale to atheism. A. B. is born and raised in the orthodox faith. He never is allowed when young to hear anything else, therefore he knows only one side of the question. Grows up in that faith, after a while he hears Unitarian doctrines, likes them better than Orthodoxy, feels free to look about and examine into different faiths. Takes another step, becomes a Universalist. Feels a great deal freer. Reads Pane's, Volney's and Taylor's works for the first time. Never dared to before. He bcomes a skeptic, and sends for the Boston Investigator; that in a short time completes his conversion; that is, in brief words, the way people are going in these parts. Many churches are shut.

The majority of the pew owners being unbelievers, and being too muleish to sell out to the minority, they remain unoccupied except by the birds of air who find in them convenient nesting places.—This leaves the field clear of obstructions, and I consider New England, take the country parts, a peculiarly open field for the operation of men of great faith such as know the way of life, and have been instructed under the proper authorities. As for us poor fellows away on the borders of Zion among the Gentiles, we know nothing about such matters as we ought. Another idea occurs to me while speaking of the country parts in this section. It is this: the Elders who were sent to New England in former times almost totally neglected the country. They would hang around the cities sometimes three or four at a time, sucking the very vitals as it were out of the brethren in the branches that were never large enough to maintain more than one Elder at a time as he should be. The usual plan pursued by the greater number of the Elders would be to start from Nauvoo on a mission and take the route where the largest branches were, and perhaps travel 12 or 1500 miles at a great expense to the branches, and perhaps be gone three or four months from home without baptizing one person or reaching the ears of one person that was not already a Mormon. The tendency of such things was this, and ever will be, if the same course is pursued, the saints will be constantly divided into parties in the branches. They will be impoverished and unable to do anything towards building up the land of Zion. And more than this, many of the saints become offended and fall off on account of a continual ding donging after money by Elders that are constantly preaching against a hireling clergy. I take the liberty of speaking on this subject to you because I know your soul abhors such worse than useless work, and I am certain you saw during your journey east enough to give something of an assurance that I speak the very truth. I have hopes sometimes of being of some use in the latter day work, and if my family were well located in the land of the saints I would like no better field of labor, if God considered me worthy, than to go on a mission to the South Sea Isles of the great Pacific. Receive these scattering remarks from one of the least of your brethren in this dispensation. Respectfully,

C. A. ROGERS.

City of Austin, Travis county, Texas, June 12th, 1849.

PRESIDENT JAS. J. STRANG:— I wrote you a letter about a month ago, asking upon what principle your claim was predicated to the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. If I had been as well informed in regard to the subject matter of your appointment and calling as I am since reading two of your tracts and several of your papers, I should not have written as I did. I requested a publication of my former letter, but from the present conviction of my mind I wrote to Elder Marks to prevent its publication: and now as I have spent a competency and my all in the church for the benefit of the saints, I still, as ever, desire to spend the remainder of my days in the cause of Zion, when made known to me through the medium God has appointed.

I was baptized in the summer of 1839, by John Taylor, (then one of the Twelve,) and in the summer of 1840 was ordained a High Priest under the hands of Bishop Knight, Hyrum and Joseph Smith, and in January, 1841, I was called to the Bishoprick and set apart by the First Presidency, and under the hands of Elder Marks. And at the fall Conference after the death of Don Carlos Smith I was called and set apart as President of the quorum of High Priests, with my Counselors Noah Packard and Amasa Lyman. On this wise I now find myself in Texas, an isolated, frail being. In the spring of 1844 Joseph organized a council of 50. I was one of that number. The question arose in regard to settling those saints in the south that were making lumber in Wisconsin, for building the Temple and Nauvoo House. The decision of the council was had, and Lucian Woodworth, George Miller and Lyman Wight appointed to settle the company and their families, and procure a place for a stake for the gathering of the saints. Whereupon Lucian Woodworth forthwith started to Texas, and returned about the first of May. He negotiated with Sam Houston (then President of the republic of Texas) for a district of country to colonize the beforenamed saints upon, which was to have been ratified at the meeting of the Texan Congress the ensuing fall. On the part of the church we were to send commissioners or delegates to meet the Texan Congress, clothed with the authority of the church to complete the negotiations for the aforesaid purpose. Woodworth, Brown, Wight and myself were understood to be the delegates for said purpose. Immediately upon this decision, all or most of the beforementioned council were sent on missions during the Presidential canvass. I was sent to Kentucky, and Lyman Wight to Washington city. Whilst I was in the vicinity of Harrodsburgh, Ky., on the morning of the 28th of June, 1844, Joseph appeared to me in a dream and told me of the assassination of himself and Hyrum. I returned to Nauvoo. You are aware of many things that have taken place since in regard to the church. Lyman Wight took the lumbermen and others and left, and with them one of my sons. Lucian Woodworth and myself applied to Brigham Young, President of the Twelve, in his assumed standing, for the necessary outfit in papers, &c., to take with us to meet the Texan Congress. He annulled the appointment. I started with the camp, and came to Texas to look after my son. I have preached some, and a few have believed, but I have not baptized any because of the distracted state of the minds of believers in regard to the Presidency, &c. And until recently I have been disposed to get an inheritance in Missouri, and there stand still and see the salvation of God. Yours in the bonds of eternal truth,

GEORGE MILLER.

☞ The receipt of the above letter is the reason for the non-publication of the former one from Bro. Miller with a review. We are happy, and doubt not many thousands of the saints are, in welcoming him back to the labor of the true vineyard of God. Bro. Miller's history, like that of many of the faithful saints, is an eventful one. That he is now poor is in naught discouraging. His money was spent in a good cause, and like seed strown on the fallow ground, shall return with increase not many days hence. The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof, and he is abundantly willing to give good gifts to his saints, when he has tried them and found them faithful.

The transaction of Brigham in annulling the appointment of Joseph of commissioners to obtain a grant of land for the southern saints in Texas is a striking comment on the hollow pretensions of the Brighamites about carrying out the measures of Joseph. Pres. Strang is the only man who ever had the spirit, the will or the authority to carry out the true and real measures of Joseph. Accordingly God has blessed him in his administration, and given to him and to his fellow laborers a rich inheritance, an abundance of land, which all can enjoy without money and without price.

Had the various settlements been made that Joseph intended, and the law been kept, the saints would have maintained their position at Nauvoo. All their losses there are justly attributable to the folly of a few self-exalted men, whom God never made leaders. How deep is the crime of the Brighamites, who, to sport in power for a brief time, would reject a prophet, destroy a revelation placed in their hands for the information of the whole church, deny the word of God, and lead a whole people to destruction, not sparing either friends or even wives or children.

Jackson, Michigan, July 30th, 1849.

Dear Frank:—Excuse the liberty I have taken in being thus familiar, it is from hearing others constantly use the term that I have thus presumed. I thought a few lines on matters and things since our glorious Conference at Beaver would not be altogether uninteresting to the readers of the Herald. We left Beaver, some score or more in number, for various places to proclaim the "dispensation of the fulness of times." We left with hearts overflowing with gratitude to our Heavenly Father for his kindness to us in the manifestation of his holy spirit to guide us in all our councils and deliberations. On which subject I have written to you before. I am now here in Jackson with a throng inquiring after the truth. This inquiry was caused by the hearing of the truth from the prophet and myself in the court house on last Monday and Tuesday nights. Since that time we have visited Albion, and preached to overflowing congregations in the school house, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, and it may truly be said the place is turned up side down. Hundreds are inquiring to know the faith once delivered to the saints. President Strang will preach at the Michigan Central College next Sunday, and I am to preach at this place. We expect to have a great time. You shall hear soon.

Monday.—Yesterday was a great day indeed. I just learned that President Strang had crowds of people of all orders to hear him proclaim the great work of the last days, and no man said why do you so, although he had lawyers, doctors, students and priests as a part of the audience, and in this place it was truly an interesting time. I preached three times in the new Universalist Church to large, intelligent and anxious inquiring congregations. I also at the solicitation of the chaplain of the State prison, preached to the prisoners and keepers, 130 in number, who listened with profound attention to the dispensation of the fulness of times. And in conclusion let me say, although I have been many years a preacher of this last dispensation, I have never before witnessed such a universal desire to hear and obey the truth. Surely a reaction is taking place over the whole land. To God be all the glory. Amen. Yours truly,

G. J. ADAMS.

GREAT RIOT AT ST. JOHN'S, N. B.

The St. John's "Morning News," of July 13th, contains the full particulars of the late riot in that city, by which ten lives were lost, and a number of persons wounded.

The riot occurred on the 12th of July, a day commemorated by the Orangemen in memory of the landing of the Prince of Orange in England, and the battle of Boyne. A number of Orangemen came to the city, from the upper country, with banners and emblems, to march through the streets in procession.

Some of the party were armed with muskets, doubtless anticipating a disturbance. The procession started from Nethery's Hotel about 11 o'clock. Some persons of opposite feelings had erected benefit of the saints, I still, as ever, desire to spend the remainder of my days in the cause of Zion, when made known to me through the medium God has appointed.

I was baptized in the summer of 1839, by John Taylor, (then one of the Twelve,) and in the summer of 1840 was ordained a High Priest under the hands of Bishop Knight, Hyrum and Joseph Smith, and in January, 1841, I was called to the Bishoprick and set apart by the First Presidency, and under the hands of Elder Marks. And at the fall Conference after the death of Don Carlos Smith I was called and set apart as President of the quorum of High Priests, with my Counselors Noah Packard and Amasa Lyman. On this wise I now find myself in Texas, an isolated, frail being. In the spring of 1841 Joseph organized a council of 50. I was one of that number. The question arose in regard to settling those saints in the south that were making lumber in Wisconsin, for building the Temple and Nauvoo House. The decision of the council was had, and Lucian Woodworth, George Miller and Lyman Wight appointed to settle the company and their families, and procure a place for a stake for the gathering of the saints. Whereupon Lucian Woodworth forthwith started to Texas, and returned about the first of May. He negotiated with Sam Houston (then President of the republic of Texas) for a district of country to colonize the beforenamed saints upon, which was to have been ratified at the meeting of the Texan Congress the ensuing fall. On the part of the church we were to send commissioners or delegates to meet the Texan Congress, clothed with the authority of the church to complete the negotiations for the aforesaid purpose. Woodworth, Brown, Wight and myself were understood to be the delegates for said purpose. Immediately upon this decision, all or most of the beforementioned council were sent on missions during the Presidential canvass. I was sent to Kentucky, and Lyman Wight to Washington city. Whilst I was in the vicinity of Harrodsburgh, Ky., on the morning of the 28th of June, 1844, Joseph appeared to me in a dream and told me of the assassination of himself and Hyrum. I returned to Nauvoo. You are aware of many things that have taken place since in regard to the church. Lyman Wight took the lumbermen and others and left, and with them one of my sons. Lucian Woodworth and myself applied to Brigham Young, President of the Twelve, in his assumed standing, for the necessary outfit in papers, &c., to take with us to meet the Texan Congress. He annulled the appointment. I started with the camp, and came to Texas to look after my son. I have preached some, and a few have believed, but I have not baptized any because of the distracted state of the minds of believers in regard to the Presidency, &c. And until recently I have been disposed to get an inheritance in Missouri, and there stand still and see the salvation of God. Yours in the bonds of eternal truth,

GEORGE MILLER.

☞ The receipt of the above letter is the reason for the non-publication of the former one from Bro. Miller with a review. We are happy, and doubt not many thousands of the saints are, in welcoming him back to the labor of the true vineyard of God. Bro. Miller's history, like that of many of the faithful saints, is an eventful one. That he is now poor is in naught discouraging. His money was spent in a good cause, and like seed strown on the fallow ground, shall return with increase not many days hence. The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof, and he is abundantly willing to give good gifts to his saints, when he has tried them and found them faithful.

The transaction of Brigham in annulling the appointment of Joseph of commissioners to obtain a grant of land for the southern saints in Texas is a striking comment on the hollow pretensions of the Brighamites about carrying out the measures of Joseph. Pres. Strang is the only man who ever had the spirit, the will or the authority to carry out the true and real measures of Joseph. Accordingly God has blessed him in his administration, and given to him and to his fellow laborers a rich inheritance, an abundance of land, which all can enjoy without money and without price.

Had the various settlements been made that Joseph intended, and the law been kept, the saints would have maintained their position at Nauvoo. All their losses there are justly attributable to the folly of a few self-exalted men, whom God never made leaders. How deep is the crime of the Brighamites, who, to sport in power for a brief time, would reject a prophet, destroy a revelation placed in their hands for the information of the whole church, deny the word of God, and lead a whole people to destruction, not sparing either friends or even wives or children.

Jackson, Michigan, July 30th, 1849.

Dear Frank:—Excuse the liberty I have taken in being thus familiar, it is from hearing others constantly use the term that I have thus presumed. I thought a few lines on matters and things since our glorious Conference at Beaver would not be altogether uninteresting to the readers of the Herald. We left Beaver, some score or more in number, for various places to proclaim the "dispensation of the fulness of times." We left with hearts overflowing with gratitude to our Heavenly Father for his kindness to us in the manifestation of his holy spirit to guide us in all our councils and deliberations. On which subject I have written to you before. I am now here in Jackson with a throng inquiring after the truth. This inquiry was caused by the hearing of the truth from the prophet and myself in the court house on last Monday and Tuesday nights. Since that time we have visited Albion, and preached to overflowing congregations in the school house, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, and it may truly be said the place is turned up side down. Hundreds are inquiring to know the faith once delivered to the saints. President Strang will preach at the Michigan Central College next Sunday, and I am to preach at this place. We expect to have a great time. You shall hear soon.

Monday.—Yesterday was a great day indeed. I just learned that President Strang had crowds of people of all orders to hear him proclaim the great work of the last days, and no man said why do you so, although he had lawyers, doctors, students and priests as a part of the audience, and in this place it was truly an interesting time. I preached three times in the new Universalist Church to large, intelligent and anxious inquiring congregations. I also at the solicitation of the chaplain of the State prison, preached to the prisoners and keepers, 130 in number, who listened with profound attention to the dispensation of the fulness of times. And in conclusion let me say, although I have been many years a preacher of this last dispensation, I have never before witnessed such a universal desire to hear and obey the truth. Surely a reaction is taking place over the whole land. To God be all the glory. Amen. Yours truly,

G. J. ADAMS.

GREAT RIOT AT ST. JOHN'S, N. B.

The St. John's "Morning News," of July 13th, contains the full particulars of the late riot in that city, by which ten lives were lost, and a number of persons wounded.

The riot occurred on the 12th of July, a day commemorated by the Orangemen in memory of the landing of the Prince of Orange in England, and the battle of Boyne. A number of Orangemen came to the city, from the upper country, with banners and emblems, to march through the streets in procession.

Some of the party were armed with muskets, doubtless anticipating a disturbance. The procession started from Nethery's Hotel about 11 o'clock. Some persons of opposite feelings had erected a green arch across York Point, so that the Orangemen would either be obliged to pass under, or demolish the structure, which would be the signal for war. The procession passed under without disturbing the arch.

The Mayor proceeded to the place, and in attempting to have the arch removed, was struck in the back of the head, and otherwise severely handled; and he came over to the city bleeding. The procession finally passed along the point, when an excitement was created—stones and pistol shots were fired; several persons were wounded—but none mortally. With the exception of this skirmish, the procession crossed the bridge unmolested.

The authorities now interfered, and a company of about sixty men was marched up from the barracks, and stationed on the platform, where ball cartridges were served out. It does not appear, however, that the military fired a shot. The "News" continues the account as follows:—

"On the return of the procession, and when near Rankin's bakery, a number of guns were fired,—upwards of fifty shots, at least, were heard,—which resulted in some ten or a dozen persons being killed immediately, and many more wounded. The shots were fired into the Orangemen, and the Orangemen again into the crowd—but from whence came the first shot we could not learn. A scene of death ensued too horrible to seem like a reality for a civilized city like St. John's.

"It is impossible now to get a correct statement of the number of deaths. A person of veracity, however, informs us that he saw ten corpses himself. Some say there were at least twelve killed—but we put the number down at ten. The procession passed on into the market square.

"The military were still on the platform, directly opposite. An awful shout was here raised by the crowd. After some little time the procession passed up King Street, every sixth man carrying a gun."

The city continued in a disturbed state throughout the remainder of the day. A number of arrests were made in the course of the afternoon. No list of the killed or wounded is given.

A CURIOSITY.

Last Sabbath evening as we were walking out, we passed the stump of an oak tree, but lately cut upon one of the vacant lots of the town, that exhibited quite a curiosity. The stump was, by rough measurement, two feet and a few inches in diameter, and perfectly sound, with the exception of six inches in the centre, which contained the stump of a tree of that size, which was cut before the present tree grew. The axe marks on the smaller stump were as plain as when first cut, as was also the portion broken as the tree fell. We counted one hundred and fifty rings in the larger stump between the smaller one and the bark.—Oshkosh True Democrat.

☞ The minutes of the Beaver Island Conference are not yet all received. The sermon of Bro. Blakeslee is in hand, but did not arrive in time to be inserted in its proper place. It will appear hereafter.

☞ We have just completed the printing of our long delayed hymn book.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

E. Stratton,	$4,00 to Vol.	V	No.	32
James Smith, (5 copies)	10,00 "	"		3
Galen Cole,	4,00 "	"		52
D. F. Bottsford,	2,00 to Vol.	IV	No.	52
H. Jennings,	2,00 "	"		52
J. Jenninge,	2,00 "	"		37

MEDITATION.

Oft like a ship that's zephyr-borne along the deep blue sea,
The mind in silent wanderings from cares of earth set free,
Glides back upon the stream of time unto the hollow'd morn
When first from Eden's sacred shades the sound of praise was borne.

And as we glide along the path the ancient saints have trod,
We find but crimson land-marks, stains of affliction's rod;
No rest on earth the saints have found, but doomed from age to age,
Weary and worn in storm and strife they made their pilgrimage.

Yes, fortunes purpled sons have trod the saints with scoffing down;
Their doom has been in every land stripes and a thorny crown,
Till ruins gloomy seal is stamped on every earthly scene,
For o'er each land the spoilers foot with stealthy step has been.

And when affliction's woful blast or rage with fiery breath
Has flung across each sunny spot the dark halo of death,
Meekly the saints have e'er received the deathly blow,
And their expiring prayer to God was mercy for their foe.

And have the saints of latter days traced out another path
Of joy, of ease and pleasure free from the spoiler's wrath?
No—man still on fellow man the wrathful vial pours,
Tho' faintly gleams a star of Hope, still the dark tempest lowers.

How long, Oh Lord, shall scenes of blood to heaven for vengeance cry,
And hopeless wails of myriad hosts that sicken, sink and die?
How long shall hopes deferred make sad the heart of faithful saints,
And martyr'd souls beneath thy throne still utter thy complaints?

Short is the time the spirit voice now whispers in our ears,
Ere darkness and its king are bound in chains a thousand years,
And all the ancient saints will rise and chant a song of praise
Around the King Emanuel's throne with saints of latter day.

For, lo! the image seen of old in ruin crumbles down,
The feeble sceptred Kings now wear a loosely fitting crown,
The little stone at last has smote the iron and the clay,
And soon the latter rains shall wash its fragments all away.

But still above blest Zion's land the star of hope will shine
And liberty in her will find her only earthly shrine;
And angels' voices loud proclaim wide as the rolling sea,
Her "Queen of empires" glorys home, and birth-place of the free.

CHARLES A. ROGERS.

☞ Baptism for the dead will be attended to at Voree at the ensuing Conference.

CONFERENCES.

VOREE.—There will be a Conference of the Church at Voree the 25th and 26th of August.

BEAVER ISLAND.—At Beaver Island the 8th and 9th Sept. next.

FRANKLIN, MICH.—The Conference heretofore appointed to be held at Franklin, Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th August, will be held at that place the 14th, 15th and 16th Sept. next.

NEW YORK CITY.—There will be a Conference held in the city of New York the 5th, 6th and 7th of Oct. next. It is expected that a majority of both the First Presidency and the Twelve will attend these Conferences. The place of holding the Conference in the city of New York will be duly noticed in the New York Herald and New York Sun previous to the time of meeting.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE. J. ADAMS, } PRESIDENTS.

a green arch across York Point, so that the Orangemen would either be obliged to pass under, or demolish the structure, which would be the signal for war. The procession passed under without disturbing the arch.

The Mayor proceeded to the place, and in attempting to have the arch removed, was struck in the back of the head, and otherwise severely handled; and he came over to the city bleeding. The procession finally passed along the point, when an excitement was created—stones and pistol shots were fired; several persons were wounded—but none mortally. With the exception of this skirmish, the procession crossed the bridge unmolested.

The authorities now interfered, and a company of about sixty men was marched up from the barracks, and stationed on the platform, where ball cartridges were served out. It does not appear, however, that the military fired a shot. The "News" continues the account as follows:—

"On the return of the procession, and when near Rankin's bakery, a number of guns were fired,—upwards of fifty shots, at least, were heard,—which resulted in some ten or a dozen persons being killed immediately, and many more wounded. The shots were fired into the Orangemen, and the Orangemen again into the crowd—but from whence came the first shot we could not learn. A scene of death ensued too horrible to seem like a reality for a civilized city like St. John's.

"It is impossible now to get a correct statement of the number of deaths. A person of veracity, however, informs us that he saw ten corpses himself. Some say there were at least twelve killed—but we put the number down at ten. The procession passed on into the market square.

"The military were still on the platform, directly opposite. An awful shout was here raised by the crowd. After some little time the procession passed up King Street, every sixth man carrying a gun."

The city continued in a disturbed state throughout the remainder of the day. A number of arrests were made in the course of the afternoon. No list of the killed or wounded is given.

A CURIOSITY.

Last Sabbath evening as we were walking out, we passed the stump of an oak tree, but lately cut upon one of the vacant lots of the town, that exhibited quite a curiosity. The stump was, by rough measurement, two feet and a few inches in diameter, and perfectly sound, with the exception of six inches in the centre, which contained the stump of a tree of that size, which was cut before the present tree grew. The axe marks on the smaller stump were as plain as when first cut, as was also the portion broken as the tree fell. We counted one hundred and fifty rings in the larger stump between the smaller one and the bark.—Oshkosh True Democrat.

☞ The minutes of the Beaver Island Conference are not yet all received. The sermon of Bro. Blakeslee is in hand, but did not arrive in time to be inserted in its proper place. It will appear hereafter.

☞ We have just completed the printing of our long delayed hymn book.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

E. Stratton,	$4,00	to Vol.	V	No. 32
James Smith, (5 copies)	10,00	"	"	3
Galen Cole,	4,00	"	"	52
D. F. Bottsford,	2,00	to Vol.	IV	No. 52
H. Jennings,	2,00	"	"	52
J. Jennings,	2,00	"	"	37

MEDITATION.

Oft like a ship that's zephyr-borne along the deep blue sea,
The mind in silent wanderings from cares of earth set free,
Glides back upon the stream of time unto the hollow'd morn
When first from Eden's sacred shades the sound of praise was borne.

And as we glide along the path the ancient saints have trod,
We find but crimson land-marks, stains of affliction's rod;
No rest on earth the saints have found, but doomed from age to age,
Weary and worn in storm and strife they made their pilgrimage.

Yes, fortunes purpled sons have trod the saints with scoffing down:
Their doom has been in every land stripes and a thorny crown,
Till ruins gloomy seal is stamped on every earthly scene,
For o'er each land the spoilers foot with stealthy step has been.

And when affliction's woful blast or rage with fiery breath
Has flung across each sunny spot the dark halo of death,
Meekly the saints have e'er received the deathly blow,
And their expiring prayer to God was mercy for their foe.

And have the saints of latter days traced out another path
Of joy, of ease and pleasure free from the spoiler's wrath?
No—man still on fellow man the wrathful vial pours,
Tho' faintly gleams a star of Hope, still the dark tempest lowers

How long, Oh Lord, shall scenes of blood to heaven for vengeance cry,
And hopeless wails of myriad hosts that sicken, sink and die!
How long shall hopes deferred make sad the heart of faithful saints
And martyr'd souls beneath thy throne still utter thy complaints?

Short is the time the spirit voice now whispers in our ears.
Ere darkness and its king are bound in chains a thousand years.
And all the ancient saints will rise and chant a song of praise
Around the King Emanuel's throne with saints of latter day.

For, lo! the image seen of old in ruin crumbles down,
The feeble sceptred Kings now wear a loosely fitting crown,
The little stone at last has smote the iron and the clay,
And soon the latter rains shall wash its fragments all away.

But still above blest Zion's land the star of hope will shine
And liberty in her will find her only earthly shrine;
And angels' voices loud proclaim wide as the rolling sea,
Her "Queen of empires" glorys home, and birth-place of the free.

CHARLES A. ROGERS.

☞ Baptism for the dead will be attended to at Voree at the ensuing Conference.

CONFERENCES.

VOREE.—There will be a Conference of the Church at Voree the 25th and 26th of August.

BEAVER ISLAND.—At Beaver Island the 8th and 9th Sept. next.

FRANKLIN, MICH.—The Conference heretofore appointed to be held at Franklin, Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th August, will be held at that place the 14th, 15th and 16th Sept. next.

NEW YORK CITY.—There will be a Conference held in the city of New York the 5th, 6th and 7th of Oct. next. It is expected that a majority of both the First Presidency and the Twelve will attend these Conferences. The place of holding the Conference in the city of New York will be duly noticed in the New York Herald and New York Sun previous to the time of meeting.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE. J. ADAMS, } Presidents.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 23.] VOREE, WIS., THURSDAY. AUG. 23, 1849. [WHOLE No. 139.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

REVELATION ON BAPTISM FOR THE DEAD—GIVEN AUGUST 9TH, 1849.

A revelation from Jesus Christ, according to the power which God appointed unto him; and he sent Elijah the prophet unto his servant James to make it known unto him, and to command him to cause the living and the dead to hear the word; and to give him power to turn the hearts of the fathers to their children, and the hearts of the children to their fathers. Hearken unto me, all ye ends of the earth, saith the Lord God, and give ear and hear ye depths of the pit, and ye shall live; for I have committed the gospel of the resurrection and of everlasting life to my servants who hold the keys of the dispensation of the last times. Therefore, hearken unto them, and obey them, that you may obtain honor, and glory, and power, and everlasting life.

Behold, I have tried my saints with a great trial, and some have been found faithful; for they have not denied my name, but have remembered my word, and kept my commandments. And because my servants have put away contentions from among them, and have united with one heart and one mind to do the work which I have committed unto them, and with their whole hearts have drawn near unto me to serve me, therefore I appoint unto the saints that there shall be baptisms for the dead at Voree during their poverty, and until a sufficient time to build a Temple unto my name, as I have commanded them. And I sanctify White River unto them, and make it holy for this ordinance, even from the bathing pool unto the water wheel.

And I command you, ye saints, saith the Lord, that a record shall be kept among you of all baptisms for the dead, and witnesses shall record their testimonies of all your administrations therein. And the recorder shall be present, and shall be an eye witness of your baptisms; and shall hear with his ears, that he may testify of a truth; that in all your recordings, it may be recorded in heaven; that whatsoever you bind on earth may be bound in heaven; whatsoever you loose on earth may be loosed in heaven; and if more than one recorder be necessary, yet there shall be but one record, to which all the recorders shall bring their testimonies to be recorded.

And whosoever acts as recorder shall be called and ordained to that authority, that what he records may be valid, and may be recorded in the archives of heaven. And let all your records be had in order, that they may be put in the archives of my holy Temple, saith the Lord, to be had in remembrance from generation to generation. And no one shall administer baptism for the dead but he that is appointed thereunto. And all who are called shall be anointed and ordained to this calling.

And these shall be baptized for the dead: all the faithful saints who keep and abide in the Order of Enoch; all who have paid tithing, according to my law for the building of a house unto my name in Voree, and for the upbuilding of my church; all who from this time forward will and do come up and do these things, striving faithfully to redeem the time, that a house may be speedily built unto my name, wherein I may reveal mysteries and institute among the saints the ordinances for the endowment of Zion and all her municipals; and all who, standing in the priesthood, have labored faithfully in their several ministries from the time the commandment went forth to build a house unto my name in Voree.

And for these shall you be baptized: every saint according to his right, and in his order, shall be baptized for any deceased husband, wife, posterity, progenitor to the third and fourth generation; any brother or sister whom he in faith believes has received the gospel in the spirit. Every saint shall be baptized for any relative unto the third and fourth generation; for any person betrothed to him in marriage; for any foster father, mother, brother, sister or child, who shall be signified to him by tongue, or dream, or vision, or spirit ministering in fire, or angel, or voice from God. And if I will that any of my faithful servants of the Aaronic priesthood be baptized for any other, I will send my angels to signify it unto them. But unto my servants of the Melchisedec priesthood will I speak by my voice, or witness in fire.

And, behold, every Apostle shall be baptized for whomsoever shall be committed to him for redemption from death by my word, saith the Lord, as I reveal my will severally unto them, that they may be saviors of the dead, and may get honor, and glory, and majesty, and dominion unto themselves forever more; and by their voices will I appoint redemption, and honor, and glory unto whomsoever I will.

Behold, my servants Joseph, and Hyrum, and David, and Moses, and many of their fellow laborers in this dispensation, who have gone with them to the pit, to preach redemption to the prisoners, have prevailed, and waiting hosts cry unto you that live continually, saying, How long do ye forget our prison house of darkness, and regard not us who perish continually? Therefore I have remembered the little flock who have not denied my name, to make them great in my everlasting kingdom, and to give dominion over the dead unto them, saith the Lord.

And now let all who are scattered abroad, and all who have robbed me through covetousness and in tithes and offerings, and all who have neglected to administer in the gospel as I have called them, come and from this time forward assist my servants who are building a house unto my name, and who are proclaiming my word unto the nations, that they may enjoy this blessing with them: for only they that labor shall receive the reward; and those who labor to build my house, and to proclaim my word, and to establish my kingdom, will I make saviors, and upon mount Zion shall they stand with crowns on their heads.

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD IN PHILADELPHIA JUNE 21st, 1849.

The Conference opened by singing. Prayer by Elder George J. Adams, who was appointed to preside over the Conference, and Elder Thomas Braidwood was chosen Clerk. Bro. Adams proceed-

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 23.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, AUG. 23, 1849. [WHOLE No. 139.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

REVELATION ON BAPTISM FOR THE DEAD—GIVEN AUGUST 9TH, 1849.

A revelation from Jesus Christ, according to the power which God appointed unto him: and he sent Elijah the prophet unto his servant James to make it known unto him, and to command him to cause the living and the dead to hear the word; and to give him power to turn the hearts of the fathers to their children, and the hearts of the children to their fathers. Hearken unto me, all ye ends of the earth, saith the Lord God, and give ear and hear ye depths of the pit, and ye shall live; for I have committed the gospel of the resurrection and of everlasting life to my servants who hold the keys of the dispensation of the last times. Therefore, hearken unto them, and obey them, that you may obtain honor, and glory, and power, and everlasting life.

Behold, I have tried my saints with a great trial, and some have been found faithful: for they have not denied my name, but have remembered my word, and kept my commandments. And because my servants have put away contentions from among them, and have united with one heart and one mind to do the work which I have committed unto them, and with their whole hearts have drawn near unto me to serve me, therefore I appoint unto the saints that there shall be baptisms for the dead at Voree during their poverty, and until a sufficient time to build a Temple unto my name, as I have commanded them. And I sanctify White River unto them, and make it holy for this ordinance, even from the bathing pool unto the water wheel.

And I command you, ye saints, saith the Lord, that a record shall be kept among you of all baptisms for the dead, and witnesses shall record their testimonies of all your administrations therein. And the recorder shall be present, and shall be an eye witness of your baptisms; and shall hear with his ears, that he may testify of a truth; that in all your recordings, it may be recorded in heaven; that whatsoever you bind on earth may be bound in heaven; whatsoever you loose on earth may be loosed in heaven; and if more than one recorder be necessary, yet there shall be but one record, to which all the recorders shall bring their testimonies to be recorded.

And whosoever acts as recorder shall be called and ordained to that authority, that what he records may be valid, and may be recorded in the archives of heaven. And let all your records be had in order, that they may be put in the archives of my holy Temple, saith the Lord, to be had in remembrance from generation to generation. And no one shall administer baptism for the dead but he that is appointed thereunto. And all who are called shall be anointed and ordained to this calling.

And these shall be baptized for the dead: all the faithful saints who keep and abide in the Order of Enoch; all who have paid tithing, according to my law for the building of a house unto my name in Voree, and for the upbuilding of my church; all who from this time forward will and do come up and do these things, striving faithfully to redeem the time, that a house may be speedily built unto my name, wherein I may reveal mysteries and institute among the saints the ordinances for the endowment of Zion and all her municipals; and all who, standing in the priesthood, have labored faithfully in their several ministries from the time the commandment went forth to build a house unto my name in Voree.

And for these shall you be baptized: every saint according to his right, and in his order, shall be baptized for any deceased husband, wife, posterity, progenitor to the third and fourth generation; any brother or sister whom he in faith believes has received the gospel in the spirit. Every saint shall be baptized for any relative unto the third and fourth generation; for any person betrothed to him in marriage; for any foster father, mother, brother, sister or child, who shall be signified to him by tongue, or dream, or vision, or spirit ministering in fire, or angel, or voice from God. And if I will that any of my faithful servants of the Aaronic priesthood be baptized for any other, I will send my angels to signify it unto them. But unto my servants of the Melchisedec priesthood will I speak by my voice, or witness in fire.

And, behold, every Apostle shall be baptized for whomsoever shall be committed to him for redemption from death by my word, saith the Lord, as I reveal my will severally unto them, that they may be saviors of the dead, and may get honor, and glory, and majesty, and dominion unto themselves forever more; and by their voices will I appoint redemption, and honor, and glory unto whomsoever I will.

Behold, my servants Joseph, and Hyrum, and David, and Moses, and many of their fellow laborers in this dispensation, who have gone with them to the pit, to preach redemption to the prisoners, have prevailed, and waiting hosts cry unto you that live continually, saying, How long do ye forget our prison house of darkness, and regard not us who perish continually? Therefore I have remembered the little flock who have not denied my name, to make them great in my everlasting kingdom, and to give dominion over the dead unto them, saith the Lord.

And now let all who are scattered abroad, and all who have robbed me through covetousness and in tithes and offerings, and all who have neglected to administer in the gospel as I have called them, come and from this time forward assist my servants who are building a house unto my name, and who are proclaiming my word unto the nations, that they may enjoy this blessing with them: for only they that labor shall receive the reward; and those who labor to build my house, and to proclaim my word, and to establish my kingdom, will I make saviors, and upon mount Zion shall they stand with crowns on their heads.

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD IN PHILADELPHIA JUNE 21ST, 1849.

The Conference opened by singing. Prayer by Elder George J. Adams, who was appointed to preside over the Conference, and Elder Thomas Braidwood was chosen Clerk. Bro. Adams proceeded to address the Conference, and gave a most glowing and soul stirring description of the church in Baltimore, and of the extraordinary liberality of the brethren of the church in this city. The President laid it on most scorchingly upon the backbiters, faultfinders and persecutors of our Bro. Strang, and proceeded to take a standing vote of the church to ascertain who were in favor of Bro. Strang. Elder Appleton offered the following resolution, which was passed without a dissenting vote:—

Resolved, That we recognize Bro. James J. Strang as the true and lawful successor of Bro. Joseph Smith to the Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Saints of the last days, and that we will uphold and sustain him in his office as Prophet, Seer, Revelator and Translator of said church by our united prayers, faith, sympathy and practice.

Remarks by brothers Lower and Lehman upon some difficulty connected with apostates, which was finally settled satisfactorily to all. Elder Appleton made some very pertinent remarks, and concluded by nominating brother Hill for the office of Elder, which was seconded by Bro. Lower and carried unanimously. Elder Braidwood made some remarks, who was followed by Elder Appleton, who proposed that Elder Braidwood should be sustained by the faith and prayers of the brethren and sisters of this branch, and that the Conference sustain Bro. Braidwood in his efforts to preach the gospel wherever his lot may be cast, which was passed. Bro. Reed made some very good and well timed remarks in regard to upholding President Strang in the prophetic office. Bro. Hess spoke about sustaining the presiding Elder, and contributing towards the support of a hall for preaching.

Pres. Adams made some very good remarks about the God-like systems of brotherhood established by Pres. Strang by revelation at Voree. Elders Adams, Appleton and Hess proceeded to ordain Bro. Hill to the office of Elder. Thirteen Elders were present.—Bro. Adams made some good remarks, and gave some excellent advice to the church in the power and demonstration of the spirit of God. It was moved and carried that we adjourn the Conference.—Benediction by Elder Appleton. G. J. ADAMS, Pres.

Thos. Braidwood, Clerk.

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD AT THE CITY OF JAMES, BEAVER ISLAND, ON THE 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th of July, 1849.

(Concluded.)

Bros. John Ursbroeck and Hiram G. Hall were ordained into the quorum of the Seventies, and Bro. Edward Preston was ordained to the office of an Elder, by revelation of God and the laying on of hands. The following missions were then given: Bros. George Brownson and Lehman, High Priests, were sent to the mission and jurisdiction of the region of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and New Foundland, and the parts of country south of the St. Lawrence river, to preach the gospel and preside in and regulate the church until June next, and give necessary counsel and directions for the gathering of the saints.

Bros. Walter Ostrander and John S. Comstock to the State of Indiania, with authority to preach the gospel and establish churches and counsel the saints in all righteousness.

C. W. Appleton, one of the Twelve, to the north part of Ohio and Buffalo, N. Y., and with him Bros. John Ursbroeck and Daniel Adams, of the quorum of Seventies, with full power to establish the gospel in those countries according to the order of God.

Bro. James Blakeslee, one of the Twelve, to the State of Ohio, Lewisburg, Preble county, and the adjoining counties, with full power to act in his calling as an Apostle of God, and a witness of the Lord Jesus.

Ebenezer Page, one of the Twelve, and Edward Preston, Elder, to the State of Ohio, with full authority to act in their high and holy calling to preach the gospel, baptize for the remission of sins, heal the sick, cast out devils, &c. Samuel Graham and L. D. Hickey, of the Twelve, and Hiram G. Hall, Seventy, to the State of Michigan, to labor in their calling until the session of the Conference in Franklin, Oakland county, Mich.

Thus ended the peaceful session of our Conference, with more union and faith than has been witnessed at any preceding Conference. The weather was exceedingly fair, and all nature seemed to join with the children of God in celebrating his praise. May a like spirit and unity ever attend the saints of the most high God in all their solemn assemblies. Adjourned sine die. Benediction by James J. Strang. JAMES J. STRANG, GEO. J. ADAMS, } Presidents.

Samuel Graham, Secretary.

Lapeer, Mich., July 31st, 1849.

Bro. Cooper:—It is with pleasure I take my pen to drop a word to you and all the saints. I am at home enjoying health, &c., &c., which I acknowledge is a gift from God. I have often thought I would drop a line, but not being used to writing I have neglected until I saw Bro. Blakeslee's letter of June 19th, which I fully coincide with. And now I feel willing to let my folly be manifest.—I returned from the April Conference much pleased and edified, and since that time I have been traveling through the branches in this part of the State. Some of the brethren and sisters are striving to do as well as say, while others are opposing themselves, their God and good men. On the other hand the Gentiles, or world's people, are anxious to hear. There are many calls for preaching, and I hope and pray the Lord of the harvest to raise up and qualify and send forth faithful men, that the gospel soon may be preached to all nations and people.

I am sorry to say that some of our brethren who might have been patterns of piety and guides to holiness and peace, have gone after error. And it has been our duty to excommunicate them from the church. I look upon it as an awful step for them to take, and could I do anything for their good I would cheerfully step forward and do it; for I realize that it would have been better for them never to have heard the gospel preached. One brother that was cut off at the Armada Conference has often fed the saints. His doors have been open for their entrance. But now where is he, and what have I heard him say time and again? It is this: If I ever am expelled from the church I will come back, for I am satisfied there is no salvation out of it. I hope he will be as good as his word—come back, return unto God, be baptized, humble himself, sell his farm, gather with the church, locate his family comfortably, and then go out and preach peace to the righteous, and wo unto the rebellious. There are some in the Armada branch that have not bowed to McLellin, and I hope and pray God to keep them from the power of the destroyer. But my advice is, gather with the saints, for unless you do you have no promise of help or protection from judgments. And if you do not obey the warnings of God you may expect disease, judgment and affliction. And I will tell you where it will commence. It will be at the head. Now mark it.

It rejoiced my heart when I saw in your paper the name of Bro. Gurley. I have often thought of him since I left Nauvoo. I well remember our parting. My feelings were too strong to be expressed. I shall long remember the kind words he used to me. While all the rest of the Brighamites cursed and abused me, Bro. Gurley talked and acted like a christian man. And I see Bro. Gurley has subscribed for the Gospel Herald. So let me say to him through ed to address the Conference, and gave a most glowing and soul stirring description of the church in Baltimore, and of the extraordinary liberality of the brethren of the church in this city. The President laid it on most scorchingly upon the backbiters, faultfinders and persecutors of our Bro. Strang, and proceeded to take a standing vote of the church to ascertain who were in favor of Bro. Strang. Elder Appleton offered the following resolution, which was passed without a dissenting vote:—

Resolved, That we recognize Bro. James J. Strang as the true and lawful successor of Bro. Joseph Smith to the Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Saints of the last days, and that we will uphold and sustain him in his office as Prophet, Seer, Revelator and Translator of said church by our united prayers, faith, sympathy and practice.

Remarks by brothers Lower and Lehman upon some difficulty connected with apostates, which was finally settled satisfactorily to all. Elder Appleton made some very pertinent remarks, and concluded by nominating brother Hill for the office of Elder, which was seconded by Bro. Lower and carried unanimously. Elder Braidwood made some remarks, who was followed by Elder Appleton, who proposed that Elder Braidwood should be sustained by the faith and prayers of the brethren and sisters of this branch, and that the Conference sustain Bro. Braidwood in his efforts to preach the gospel wherever his lot may be cast, which was passed. Bro. Reed made some very good and well timed remarks in regard to upholding President Strang in the prophetic office. Bro. Hess spoke about sustaining the presiding Elder, and contributing towards the support of a hall for preaching.

Pres. Adams made some very good remarks about the God-like systems of brotherhood established by Pres. Strang by revelation at Voree. Elders Adams, Appleton and Hess proceeded to ordain Bro. Hill to the office of Elder. Thirteen Elders were present.—Bro. Adams made some good remarks, and gave some excellent advice to the church in the power and demonstration of the spirit of God. It was moved and carried that we adjourn the Conference.—Benediction by Elder Appleton. G. J. ADAMS, Pres.

Thos. Braidwood, Clerk.

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD AT THE CITY OF JAMES, BEAVER ISLAND, ON THE 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th of July, 1849.

(Concluded.)

Bros. John Ursbroeck and Hiram G. Hall were ordained into the quorum of the Seventies, and Bro. Edward Preston was ordained to the office of an Elder, by revelation of God and the laying on of hands. The following missions were then given: Bros. George Brownson and Lehman, High Priests, were sent to the mission and jurisdiction of the region of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and New Foundland, and the parts of country south of the St. Lawrence river, to preach the gospel and preside in and regulate the church until June next, and give necessary counsel and directions for the gathering of the saints.

Bros. Walter Ostrander and John S. Comstock to the State of Indiania, with authority to preach the gospel and establish churches and counsel the saints in all righteousness.

C. W. Appleton, one of the Twelve, to the north part of Ohio and Buffalo, N. Y., and with him Bros. John Ursbroeck and Daniel Adams, of the quorum of Seventies, with full power to establish the gospel in those countries according to the order of God.

Bro. James Blakeslee, one of the Twelve, to the State of Ohio, Lewisburg, Preble county, and the adjoining counties, with full power to act in his calling as an Apostle of God, and a witness of the Lord Jesus.

Ebenezer Page, one of the Twelve, and Edward Preston, Elder, to the State of Ohio, with full authority to act in their high and holy calling to preach the gospel, baptize for the remission of sins, heal the sick, cast out devils, &c. Samuel Graham and L. D. Hickey, of the Twelve, and Hiram G. Hall, Seventy, to the State of Michigan, to labor in their calling until the session of the Conference in Franklin, Oakland county, Mich.

Thus ended the peaceful session of our Conference, with more union and faith than has been witnessed at any preceding Conference. The weather was exceedingly fair, and all nature seemed to join with the children of God in celebrating his praise. May a like spirit and unity ever attend the saints of the most high God in all their solemn assemblies. Adjourned sine die. Benediction by James J. Strang. JAMES J. STRANG, GEO. J. ADAMS, } Presidents.

Samuel Graham, Secretary.

Lapeer, Mich., July 31st, 1849.

Bro. Cooper:—It is with pleasure I take my pen to drop a word to you and all the saints. I am at home enjoying health, &c., &c., which I acknowledge is a gift from God. I have often thought I would drop a line, but not being used to writing I have neglected until I saw Bro. Blakeslee's letter of June 19th, which I fully coincide with. And now I feel willing to let my folly be manifest.—I returned from the April Conference much pleased and edified, and since that time I have been traveling through the branches in this part of the State. Some of the brethren and sisters are striving to do as well as say, while others are opposing themselves, their God and good men. On the other hand the Gentiles, or world's people, are anxious to hear. There are many calls for preaching, and I hope and pray the Lord of the harvest to raise up and qualify and send forth faithful men, that the gospel soon may be preached to all nations and people.

I am sorry to say that some of our brethren who might have been patterns of piety and guides to holiness and peace, have gone after error. And it has been our duty to excommunicate them from the church. I look upon it as an awful step for them to take, and could I do anything for their good I would cheerfully step forward and do it; for I realize that it would have been better for them never to have heard the gospel preached. One brother that was cut off at the Armada Conference has often fed the saints. His doors have been open for their entrance. But now where is he, and what have I heard him say time and again? It is this: If I ever am expelled from the church I will come back, for I am satisfied there is no salvation out of it.—I hope he will be as good as his word—come back, return unto God, be baptized, humble himself, sell his farm, gather with the church, locate his family comfortably, and then go out and preach peace to the righteous, and wo unto the rebellious. There are some in the Armada branch that have not bowed to McLellin, and I hope and pray God to keep them from the power of the destroyer. But my advice is, gather with the saints, for unless you do you have no promise of help or protection from judgments. And if you do not obey the warnings of God you may expect disease, judgment and affliction. And I will tell you where it will commence. It will be at the head. Now mark it.

It rejoiced my heart when I saw in your paper the name of Bro. Gurley. I have often thought of him since I left Nauvoo. I well remember our parting. My feelings were too strong to be expressed. I shall long remember the kind words he used to me. While all the rest of the Brighamites cursed and abused me, Bro. Gurley talked and acted like a christian man. And I see Bro. Gurley has subscribed for the Gospel Herald. So let me say to him through your paper, Bro. Gurley, here is my heart and hand to go with you in doing good. My prayer is, God bless you, and make you mighty in pulling down error and setting up truth. Give my best respects to all the brethren. Yours in the peace and love of God,

L. D. HICKEY.

On board Propellor St. Jo., July 18th, 1849.

To the Editor of the Gospel Herald,—Dear Brother:—As hundreds, and I may say thousands, desire to know my mind in relation to the Beaver Islands, the present great gathering place and home of the Saints, and that I may answer them all at once, I have chosen the columns of your Herald for that purpose. Our Conference that has just closed has been one that for peace, union, harmony and good feeling, has never been surpassed. And I have no hesitation in saying that the Islands are by far the best places that God has ever given the saints for temporal or spiritual blessings and prosperity—the best place for location and health—the best and safest natural harbor in the world—the greatest inland fishing ground on the earth—and there is no such thing as poverty on the Islands. The most common laborer can get a dollar per day, and if he wishes, can make more than that by management. And if one thousand should land there to-morow they need not be out of employment two days.

If a man is a farmer, and wishes to take up a good farm of 40 or 80 or 160 acres of land, he can do so without money or price, and own it by gift and promise of God. And in clearing his farm he can make money all the time, as wood is worth from one dollar to one dollar and a half per cord, and a million of cords would find immediate sale. The timber for building purposes surpasses any that I have seen. A first rate saw mill will soon be in operation. The land is good for wheat, good for oats, good for buckwheat, and the best potatoe land in the world, as it produces largely, and is free from every substance that engenders or produces the rot. On Little Beaver there are about 200 farms cleared by the Indians that they do not occupy, and that they will not occupy any more, as they say the "great spirit." there plagued them with the small pox; and they hope their white brethren of "Ephriam" will come and possess their lands, as they do not want the Gentile "pale faces" to have them. In fact no man can explore these Islands and find out their great resources without seeing the goodness of God in keeping them for the saints, where they may gather until the indignation of the Lord is overpast. Eighty thousand people might gather and live while they were gathering and settling these Islands, and live with their posterity after they had settled them, and introduce the eternal brotherhood of Jesus Christ to the suffering sons and daughters of earth. Will the saints hearken to the word of the Lord through his servant James? Will they prepare for the trouble, sorrow, anguish and desolation that is coming on this nation as well as other nations? Do they want to go forth and meet the bridegroom? Do they want to gather out of Babylon? Do they want to be prepared to take the kingdom, and possess it forever and ever? Do they want to receive that wisdom, knowledge and power that will enable them to become kings and priests of God and Christ, and reign on the earth? If they do let them gather to the places God has appointed, and do his commandments. Even so. Amen. G. J. ADAMS.

Baltimore, Md., July 31st, 1849.

Bro. G. J. Adams:—I arrived here the next Saturday after I left you. I will tell you what happened on my journey on Sunday after I left Beaver Isle. I was sitting on the lower deck of the Delware reading, when Mr. Bigdon, B. Alton, or probably you will know him better by the name of the eccentric poet, came to me and began conversation about our faith. I explained it to him to his satisfaction, and God gave him to understand that what I said was true. He desired me to baptize him, which I accordingly did the same night, and Bro. Lehman and myself confirmed him on the shore. I baptized him at the place where you, Bro. Graham and myself went into the woods to pray, (Fisher's landing on Canada shore.) On monday night he had a vision confirming what I had done. His heart seems fully bent on doing the will of God, be it what it may. I think it would be advisable to ordain him an Elder. He wishes to have an only child educated right, and in all probability he will take her up to Beaver Isle and hire her boarded and sent to school there, for he is anxious to instil right principles into her young mind. I found Bro. Brooks in Buffalo. He was glad to see me. He has not lost any of the faith. When you go there you must go and see him. You will find him at the Arcole Furnace. I telegraphed to Bro. Bennett to meet me, which he did. I told him all that was done at Conference. His wife is somewhat better. The work is beginning to prosper in New York. In Philadelphia the work goes bravely on. Last Sunday night I preached from these words—"What is truth"—to a very good congregation, who listened very attentively. Among them were some of my friends of the Odd Fellows, and then they circulated the news that I had turned preacher, and then I had to stand the rubs. I owned up to the corn, and gave them a cordial invitation to come and hear me, which, of course, made them laugh hearty to think that I should think that I could preach.

I saw your family last night. They are all well. I received a letter from father Long last Friday. He was in Philadelphia. Bro. Ashbrook had returned with him. Give my love to Bro. Strang, and all the saints. Remember me to all the saints on the Island when you get there. I remain yours in the dispensation of the fulness of times, A. N. HOSMER.

THE STRANG MORMONS.

The Strang Dynasty of the Mormon Brotherhood, it is known to most of our readers, has established the head quarters of their Church at Beaver Island, in Lake Michigan. These Islands are highly spoken of by those who have visited them. Big Beaver Island, the principal one, being, according to the Buffalo Express, about thirteen miles long by seven broad, and containing 50,000 acres of good land. These Islands are deemed remarkably healthy, and are becoming quite noted among the Upper Lake travellers, in consequence of their beauty and their salubrity of climate. The number of resident Mormons there, is now estimated at about 300, and they are soon to have a weekly paper issued there. We believe the "stake" at Voree is to be pulled up, and transplanted at Paradise Bay, on one of these islands, where—we suppose—another great temple is to be built.—Warsaw Signal.

☞ It is a mistake that Voree is to be "pulled up." It is making steady improvement, and a large company of masons and assistants are at work on the Temple. We do not begin a work to look back, and are in a country where mobs are not in vogue. [Ed.

Baltimore, Md., July 10th, 1849.

My ever Dear Brother G. J. Adams:—I will now give you all the information I can concerning the branch in Baltimore. I thank God that he gave me power over a man-fearing spirit, and gave me power to open my mouth in the cause of truth, in the opening of the meetings. The first Sunday morning after you left, Bro. Whipple stood up to preach for us, and God gave him utterance. In the afternoon we had a testimony meeting, and confirmed Bro. Smith, who had been baptized in the morning. Bro. George Pope preached at night, and God stood by him. A man named McNulty your paper, Bro. Gurley, here is my heart and hand to go with you in doing good. My prayer is. God bless you, and make you mighty in pulling down error and setting up truth. Give my best respects to all the brethren. Yours in the peace and love of God,

L. D. HICKEY.

On board Propellor St. Jo., July 18th, 1849.

To the Editor of the Gospel Herald.—Dear Brother:—As hundreds, and I may say thousands, desire to know my mind in relation to the Beaver Islands, the present great gathering place and home of the Saints, and that I may answer them all at once, I have chosen the columns of your Herald for that purpose. Our Conference that has just closed has been one that for peace, union, harmony and good feeling, has never been surpassed. And I have no hesitation in saying that the Islands are by far the best places that God has ever given the saints for temporal or spiritual blessings and prosperity—the best place for location and health—the best and safest natural harbor in the world—the greatest inland fishing ground on the earth—and there is no such thing as poverty on the Islands. The most common laborer can get a dollar per day, and if he wishes, can make more than that by management. And if one thousand should land there to-morow they need not be out of employment two days.

If a man is a farmer, and wishes to take up a good farm of 40 or 80 or 160 acres of land, he can do so without money or price, and own it by gift and promise of God. And in clearing his farm he can make money all the time, as wood is worth from one dollar to one dollar and a half per cord, and a million of cords would find immediate sale. The timber for building purposes surpasses any that I have seen. A first rate saw mill will soon be in operation. The land is good for wheat, good for oats, good for buckwheat, and the best potatoe land in the world, as it produces largely, and is free from every substance that engenders or produces the rot. On Little Beaver there are about 200 farms cleared by the Indians that they do not occupy, and that they will not occupy any more, as they say the "great spirit" there plagued them with the small pox; and they hope their white brethren of "Ephriam" will come and possess their lands, as they do not want the Gentile "pale faces" to have them. In fact no man can explore these Islands and find out their great resources without seeing the goodness of God in keeping them for the saints, where they may gather until the indignation of the Lord is overpast. Eighty thousand people might gather and live while they were gathering and settling these Islands, and live with their posterity after they had settled them, and introduce the eternal brotherhood of Jesus Christ to the suffering sons and daughters of earth. Will the saints hearken to the word of the Lord through his servant James? Will they prepare for the trouble, sorrow, anguish and desolation that is coming on this nation as well as other nations? Do they want to go forth and meet the bridegroom? Do they want to gather out of Babylon? Do they want to be prepared to take the kingdom, and possess it forever and ever? Do they want to receive that wisdom, knowledge and power that will enable them to become kings and priests of God and Christ, and reign on the earth? If they do let them gather to the places God has appointed, and do his commandments. Even so. Amen. G. J. ADAMS.

Baltimore, Md., July 31st, 1849.

Bro. G. J. Adams:—I arrived here the next Saturday after I left you. I will tell you what happened on my journey on Sunday after I left Beaver Isle. I was sitting on the lower deck of the Delware reading, when Mr. Bigdon, B. Alton, or probably you will know him better by the name of the eccentric poet, came to me and began conversation about our faith. I explained it to him to his satisfaction, and God gave him to understand that what I said was true. He desired me to baptize him, which I accordingly did the same night, and Bro. Lehman and myself confirmed him on the shore. I baptized him at the place where you, Bro. Graham and myself went into the woods to pray, (Fisher's landing on Canada shore.) On monday night he had a vision confirming what I had done. His heart seems fully bent on doing the will of God, be it what it may. I think it would be advisable to ordain him an Elder. He wishes to have an only child educated right, and in all probability he will take her up to Beaver Isle and hire her boarded and sent to school there, for he is anxious to instil right principles into her young mind. I found Bro. Brooks in Buffalo. He was glad to see me. He has not lost any of the faith. When you go there you must go and see him. You will find him at the Arcole Furnace. I telegraphed to Bro. Bennett to meet me, which he did. I told him all that was done at Conference. His wife is somewhat better. The work is beginning to prosper in New York. In Philadelphia the work goes bravely on. Last Sunday night I preached from these words—"What is truth"—to a very good congregation, who listened very attentively. Among them were some of my friends of the Odd Fellows, and then they circulated the news that I had turned preacher, and then I had to stand the rubs. I owned up to the corn, and gave them a cordial invitation to come and hear me, which, of course, made them laugh hearty to think that I should think that I could preach.

I saw your family last night. They are all well. I received a letter from father Long last Friday. He was in Philadelphia. Bro. Ashbrook had returned with him. Give my love to Bro. Strang, and all the saints. Remember me to all the saints on the Island when you get there. I remain yours in the dispensation of the fulness of times, A. N. HOSMER.

THE STRANG MORMONS.

The Strang Dynasty of the Mormon Brotherhood, it is known to most of our readers, has established the head quarters of their Church at Beaver Island, in Lake Michigan. These Islands are highly spoken of by those who have visited them. Big Beaver Island, the principal one, being, according to the Buffalo Express, about thirteen miles long by seven broad, and containing 50,000 acres of good land. These Islands are deemed remarkably healthy, and are becoming quite noted among the Upper Lake travellers, in consequence of their beauty and their salubrity of climate. The number of resident Mormons there, is now estimated at about 300, and they are soon to have a weekly paper issued there. We believe the "stake" at Voree is to be pulled up, and transplanted at Paradise Bay, on one of these islands, where—we suppose—another great temple is to be built.—Warsaw Signal.

☞ It is a mistake that Voree is to be "pulled up." It is making steady improvement, and a large company of masons and assistants are at work on the Temple. We do not begin a work to look back, and are in a country where mobs are not in vogue. [Ed.

Baltimore, Md., July 10th, 1849.

My ever Dear Brother G. J. Adams:—I will now give you all the information I can concerning the branch in Baltimore. I thank God that he gave me power over a man-fearing spirit, and gave me power to open my mouth in the cause of truth, in the opening of the meetings. The first Sunday morning after you left, Bro. Whipple stood up to preach for us, and God gave him utterance. In the afternoon we had a testimony meeting, and confirmed Bro. Smith, who had been baptized in the morning. Bro. George Pope preached at night, and God stood by him. A man named McNulty was baptized on Thursday night last, and was confirmed on Sunday last.

Our Heavenly Father is leading us on step by step into all truth and salvation. We have endeavored to carry out your advice and counsel to us before you left. God is with his saints to comfort and cheer them. Brothers Whipple and Pope improve very much in preaching. We hope it will not be many weeks before we can again hear your voice among us, and that God may direct and sustain you by his Holy Spirit. May God bless and guide you all at the Conferences, that the great work of God may roll on in power and glory in these last days; and that the stone cut out of the mountain without hands may fill the earth. I rejoice when I think of the rest that remaineth for the people of God. I rejoice to think that they that do his commandments shall have a right to the tree of life, and enter through the gates into the city. Yours in love, in truth, and in the fulness of the gospel, JOSEPH CANOX,
Presiding Elder of the Church of Jesus Christ in Baltimore, Md.

DEATH IN ST. LOUIS.

The St. Louis Organ of the 26th ultimo, says :—"A few weeks since in St. Louis, the occasional sight of a hearse heading the slow procession of a funeral train, would arrest the sympathies of the passer by, and would perchance impart a wholesome admonition of a certainty to come, but day by day we have grown familiar with the sight—the burial of the dead has become a common and expected thing—the hearse no longer moves with a lingering pace nor drags its lengthened line of mourners to the tomb. No. Death, true to the progressive spirit of the age—strikes with electric power—and his agents act with electric speed ; there is no time for mourning now. The death of the late President of our Republic is announced by the daily press, and there is not time to turn the column rules in wonted token of respect. A funeral train is now a cavalcade of briskly trotting horses, hurry to the grave a few half empty vehicles—often a single coach—sometimes it is a hearse following a hearse—but yesterday the ears of our citizens were pierced with a thrill of horror by cries proceeding from a worse than a lonely hearse—a hearse in which the widow was seated, frantic and alone, beside the body of her deceased husband! The rapid wheels soon bore to a distance, but her screams still echoed to the ear.—Hurry—hurry—hurry—the worm is impatient for food, and graves are gaping to welcome the dead—the horses trot with the loaded hearse—and return in a gallop to glut it again! Ere the breath leaves the body, the shroud must be made, the coffin prepared—and the heart may still throb when the body was buried!"

Buffalo, July 29th, 1849.

Brother Strang :—I received your letter by last evening's mail. Bro. Appleton had left for Beaver Island some three hours before I got the letter. He will be at liberty to visit the places you have named. He did not commence any labors in this place on account of the cholera, which is severe in Buffalo. All minds are absorbed in this one calamity. I have one son that has had the epidemic, but is getting well again. I have a daughter, a young girl, that has had the first symptoms of the disease. I am in hopes that it will be stopped. You say to me to haste immediately to that field of labor where you now are. If my family had been well I should have started before this time, but I do not feel it duty to leave my family under present circumstances, but think I will meet Bro. Appleton or any other brother that may be sent to those places that you named. I will endeavor to meet them in a short time. Had I known of the Conference at Beaver I should have been there. Most respectfully yours, LESTER BROOKS.

A WILD BOY.

We take the following strange story of a wild boy of the woods, lately found on the island of Jamaica, from the "Journal" of the 15th ult.:—

"Early on Wednesday morning last, the 13th inst., a black boy, of an insane and wild appearance, was discoverd in one of the cane fields of Molynes' estate, St. Andrew's. He was taken to the overseer's house, where every means was used to get him to give an account of himself, but all proved fruitless, he either being dumb, or incapable of giving utterance to words. When found he was in a complete state of nudity, having every appearance of a wild boy of the woods, who had been nearly all his life vegetating on whatever first came to hand; his chest, arms, and legs being covered with a sort of white substance proceeding from the cane trash, which he must have long used for bed and secrecy.

"He ate some bread, and drank two large calabashes of water, but refused the boiled victuals given to him when he was found by the watchman on the property. The overseer sent him to Dr. Downer, who also tried every means to discover if he was dumb or insane, by showing him a piece of money, and frightening him with a whip, but these had no effect upon him. The doctor then sent him to the public hospital in this city, where, having been admitted, he was spoken to, but he seemed not to understand, and appeared incapable of replying to anything said to him. He is some ten or eleven years of age, of rather emaciated appearance, and perfectly wild."

SMOKING.

A remarkable and serious accident occurred near the Yellow Springs, in Chester County, on the 30th ult. A gentleman named William Miller, of National township, was driving a horse and vehicle, and was accompanied by two ladies, at the same time smoking a cigar. A spark from the cigar caught the dress of one of the ladies, and before it was observed, the fire had made such progress in the combustible substance, that she could not extinguish it. The vehicle was stopped, the lady leaped from the carriage, and the other, in rushing to her assistance, also had the flames communicated to her dress. Both females were now in a blaze, and being clad in their cotton apparel, had nearly their whole clothing destroyed, and their persons burned in a shocking manner. To complete the calamity, the vehicle took fire, and was burned up.—Westchester (Pa.) Rec.

☞ People who endeavor to attract that attention by dress which they cannot obtain by their intrinsic worth, resemble the soap balloons blown by children; the thinnest bubbles are invested with the brightest colors.

CONFERENCES.

Voree.—There will be a Conference of the Church at Voree the 25th and 26th of August.

Beaver Island.—At Beaver Island the 8th and 9th Sept. next.

Franklin, Mich.—The Conference heretofore appointed to be held at Franklin, Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th August, will be held at that place the 14th, 15th and 16th Sept. next.

New York City.—There will be a Conference held in the city of New York the 5th, 6th and 7th of Oct. next. It is expected that a majority of both the First Presidency and the Twelve will attend these Conferences. The place of holding the Conference in the city of New York will be duly noticed in the New York Herald and New York Sun previous to the time of meeting.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS, } Presidents.

was baptized on Thursday night last, and was confirmed on Sunday last.

Our Heavenly Father is leading us on step by step into all truth and salvation. We have endeavored to carry out your advice and counsel to us before you left. God is with his saints to comfort and cheer them. Brothers Whipple and Pope improve very much in preaching. We hope it will not be many weeks before we can again hear your voice among us, and that God may direct and sustain you by his Holy Spirit. May God bless and guide you all at the Conferences, that the great work of God may roll on in power and glory in these last days; and that the stone cut out of the mountain without hands may fill the earth. I rejoice when I think of the rest that remaineth for the people of God. I rejoice to think that they that do his commandments shall have a right to the tree of life, and enter through the gates into the city. Yours in love, in truth, and in the fulness of the gospel, JOSEPH CANON,
Presiding Elder of the Church of Jesus Christ in Baltimore, Md.

DEATH IN ST. LOUIS.

The St. Louis Organ of the 26th ultimo, says:—"A few weeks since in St. Louis, the occasional sight of a hearse heading the slow procession of a funeral train, would arrest the sympathies of the passer by, and would perchance impart a wholesome admonition of a certainty to come, but day by day we have grown familiar with the sight—the burial of the dead has become a common and expected thing—the hearse no longer moves with a lingering pace nor drags its lengthened line of mourners to the tomb. No. Death, true to the progressive spirit of the age—strikes with electric power—and his agents act with electric speed; there is no time for mourning now. The death of the late President of our Republic is announced by the daily press, and there is not time to turn the column rules in wonted token of respect. A funeral train is now a cavalcade of briskly trotting horses, hurry to the grave a few half empty vehicles—often a single coach—sometimes it is a hearse following a hearse—but yesterday the ears of our citizens were pierced with a thrill of horror by cries proceeding from a worse than a lonely hearse—a hearse in which the widow was seated, frantic and alone, beside the body of her deceased husband! The rapid wheels soon bore to a distance, but her screams still echoed to the ear.—Hurry—hurry—hurry—the worm is impatient for food, and graves are gaping to welcome the dead—the horses trot with the loaded hearse—and return in a gallop to glut it again! Ere the breath leaves the body, the shroud must be made, the coffin prepared—and the heart may still throb when the body was buried!"

Buffalo, July 29th, 1849.

BROTHER STRANG:—I received your letter by last evening's mail. Bro. Appleton had left for Beaver Island some three hours before I got the letter. He will be at liberty to visit the places you have named. He did not commence any labors in this place on account of the cholera, which is severe in Buffalo. All minds are absorbed in this one calamity. I have one son that has had the epidemic, but is getting well again. I have a daughter, a young girl, that has had the first symptoms of the disease. I am in hopes that it will be stopped. You say to me to haste immediately to that field of labor where you now are. If my family had been well I should have started before this time, but I do not feel it duty to leave my family under present circumstances, but think I will meet Bro. Appleton or any other brother that may be sent to those places that you named. I will endeavor to meet them in a short time. Had I known of the Conference at Beaver I should have been there. Most respectfully yours, LESTER BROOKS.

A WILD BOY.

We take the following strange story of a wild boy of the woods, lately found on the island of Jamaica, from the "Journal" of the 15th ult.:—

"Early on Wednesday morning last, the 13th inst., a black boy, of an insane and wild appearance, was discoverd in one of the cane fields of Molynes' estate, St. Andrew's. He was taken to the overseer's house, where every means was used to get him to give an account of himself, but all proved fruitless, he either being dumb, or incapable of giving utterance to words. When found he was in a complete state of nudity, having every appearance of a wild boy of the woods, who had been nearly all his life vegetating on whatever first came to hand; his chest, arms, and legs being covered with a sort of white substance proceeding from the cane trash, which he must have long used for bed and secrecy.

"He ate some bread, and drank two large calabashes of water, but refused the boiled victuals given to him when he was found by the watchman on the property. The overseer sent him to Dr. Downer, who also tried every means to discover if he was dumb or insane, by showing him a piece of money, and frightening him with a whip, but these had no effect upon him. The doctor then sent him to the public hospital in this city, where, having been admitted, he was spoken to, but he seemed not to understand, and appeared incapable of replying to anything said to him. He is some ten or eleven years of age, of rather emaciated appearance, and perfectly wild."

SMOKING.

A remarkable and serious accident occurred near the Yellow Springs, in Chester County, on the 30th ult. A gentleman named William Miller, of National township, was driving a horse and vehicle, and was accompanied by two ladies, at the same time smoking a cigar. A spark from the cigar caught the dress of one of the ladies, and before it was observed, the fire had made such progress in the combustible substance, that she could not extinguish it. The vehicle was stopped, the lady leaped from the carriage, and the other, in rushing to her assistance, also had the flames communicated to her dress. Both females were now in a blaze, and being clad in their cotton apparel, had nearly their whole clothing destroyed, and their persons burned in a shocking manner. To complete the calamity, the vehicle took fire, and was burned up.—Westchester (Pa.) Rec.

☞ People who endeavor to attract that attention by dress which they cannot obtain by their intrinsic worth, resemble the soap balloons blown by children; the thinnest bubbles are invested with the brightest colors.

CONFERENCES.

VOREE.—There will be a Conference of the Church at Voree the 25th and 26th of August.

BEAVER ISLAND.—At Beaver Island the 8th and 9th Sept. next.

FRANKLIN, MICH.—The Conference heretofore appointed to be held at Franklin, Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th August, will be held at that place the 14th, 15th and 16th Sept. next.

NEW YORK CITY.—There will be a Conference held in the city of New York the 5th, 6th and 7th of Oct. next. It is expected that a majority of both the First Presidency and the Twelve will attend these Conferences. The place of holding the Conference in the city of New York will be duly noticed in the New York Herald and New York Sun previous to the time of meeting.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS, } PRESIDENTS.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 24.] VOREE, WIS., THURSDAY. AUG. 30, 1849. [WHOLE No. 140.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

Niagara Falls, August 4th, 1849.

PRES. J. J. STRANG,—DEAR BROTHER:—It may be interesting to you and perhaps to the rest of the saints in those parts to hear from this part of the vineyard of God. I have done I think the best I in my limited means could do. You I presume are aware that there were a considerable many Brighamites in these parts, many of whom never heard of your claims to the Presidency of the Church until I came among them, excepting George A. Neal, the presiding Elder of the Cambria branch. This man, who is the richest man in that town, I was acquainted with when I was a member of that branch, to whom I sent the Voree Herald when it was first issued, and unto whom I wrote informing him of your appointment and ordination in the winter before the issuing of the first Herald, is the President of the Cambria branch, and has done everything he could to hinder the saints from knowing anything about the order of the church of the living God, the "pillar and the ground of the truth." He has a large and spacious house, in which the Mormons heretofore have held all of their meetings.—When I came to this place I went to see him, and inform him that if I could get a room I would like preach to the saints. He did not offer me his room, as he would a Brighamite, hoping thereby to get rid of my preaching to the saints, and teaching them the truth. I went and called on as many of the saints as I could find, and showed them the plan of salvation, and the order of God's house. The saints used me well and were surprised in a great degree that their presiding Elder had held those things from their investigation.

I however thought I would leave them for a short time when I expected Oliver Huntington, Neals' son-in-law, from the great Salt Land, and then the saints could contrast doctrines and spirits manifested. About the time I wrote you before there were two Elders from the Brighamite order announced, one of whom was Thos. McKenzie, who is out on a begging expedition for the destitute children in the salt land, and the other was S. Anderson, from England. I then notified the brethren of their approach, and of their meeting. I then took the cars and went to Lockport and got Bro. Gibbs, and on Sunday we went over to Neals'. They had been anticipating our coming, and in order to show a great amount of kindness towards me before the saints, they invited me to preach as soon as I arrived, having just walked eight miles. This they did, as I soon learned by their own mouths, that I could not go away and say that they had shut my mouth by not letting me preach. The spirit of truth said preach, and I accepted the invitation, but had they thought that I would, you had better believe they would never have asked me to preach. I asked Elder McKenzie to read Heb. v. chapt., which he did. We then sung, I prayed and God's spirit was given, (although inverse prayers were put up,) and took my text Heb. v. iv: "And no man taketh this honor unto himself but he that is called of God,as was Aaron." From this text I showed the people, both saints & sinners,that the order of God's opening any dispensation was through the ministration of angels, who held the authority of the priesthood before their ministry unto the children of men. Proved it to a demonstration to the satisfaction of saints and Gentile sinners. But the Mormon sinners were as mad as a March hare. I left no bars down—no place for them to take hold of to make remarks on what I said, except they commenced upon their own hook upon James J. Strang.

Of all human beings who were angry, these men were the most wrathy. They stooped to the old fashioned sectarian tirade of slang and slander upon all God's servants, and upon the gospel we preach. Railed out against Bros. Hess, Van Dusen and all other Elders that they knew anything about. Bore their testimony that Brigham Young was the prophet of the Lord God of Israel. The spirit of the testimony of Jesus rested upon me and I arose and bore testimony by the spirit and power of God, which sunk deeply into the hearts of the honest saints, that God through Joseph appointed J. J. Strang to be Prophet, Seer and Revelator unto the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and then challenged four or five of the Brighamite Elders to discuss the claims of Bro. James, and inasmuch as they dare not do it, I told them if I could get a house to preach in I would preach on your claims and prove it to a demonstration, fearless of successful controversy. I asked Geo. A. Neal if I could obtain his room, and he refused me, but said if I would preach on Sidney Rigdon's claims I might preach in his grove. I told him God did not send me to be dictated by him what to preach, and if God gave me grace sufficient I would preach on your claims. I went over to George Fowler's and obtained his room to preach in at five o'clock. After their afternoon meeting I appointed a meeting at five o'clock, and a goodly number of saints and Gentiles attended, while the Elders passed along by about ten rods, and commenced singing. The result was glorious. Those who before were wavering and doubtful now came out on the right side, and those who were right before grew stronger still, and a gentleman who before never heard a Mormon but myself, came out and desired baptism. He is a fine fellow. His name is Wm. W. DeLaMater. Those who before looked upon these Elders as smart men, now look upon them as deceivers and as hair brained liars. Your brother in Christ,

H. P BROWN.

☞ Communications intended for James J. Strang should hereafter be directed to New York City, until further notice.

WICKED—POSITIVELY.—The Portland Bulletin tells a story of a certain good deacon, whose hat blew off and led him a long chase after it through the street. At length the deacon became exhausted in the race, and pulled up against a post by the sidewalk. A gentleman came along, to whom the deacon addressed himself thus: "My friend, I am a deacon of the church, and it is very wrong for me to swear; you will greatly oblige me, if you will just d—n that hat for me."

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 24.] VOREE, WIS., THURSDAY. AUG. 30, 1849. [WHOLE No. 140.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

Niagara Falls, August 4th, 1849.

PRES. J. J. STRANG.—DEAR BROTHER:—It may be interesting to you and perhaps to the rest of the saints in those parts to hear from this part of the vineyard of God. I have done I think the best I in my limited means could do. You I presume are aware that there were a considerable many Brighamites in these parts, many of whom never heard of your claims to the Presidency of the Church until I came among them, excepting George A. Neal, the presiding Elder of the Cambria branch. This man, who is the richest man in that town, I was acquainted with when I was a member of that branch, to whom I sent the Voree Herald when it was first issued, and unto whom I wrote informing him of your appointment and ordination in the winter before the issuing of the first Herald, is the President of the Cambria branch, and has done everything he could to hinder the saints from knowing anything about the order of the church of the living God, the "pillar and the ground of the truth." He has a large and spacious house, in which the Mormons heretofore have held all of their meetings.—When I came to this place I went to see him, and inform him that if I could get a room I would like preach to the saints. He did not offer me his room, as he would a Brighamite, hoping thereby to get rid of my preaching to the saints, and teaching them the truth. I went and called on as many of the saints as I could find, and showed them the plan of salvation, and the order of God's house. The saints used me well and were surprised in a great degree that their presiding Elder had held those things from their investigation.

I however thought I would leave them for a short time when I expected Oliver Huntington, Neals' son-in-law, from the great Salt Land, and then the saints could contrast doctrines and spirits manifested. About the time I wrote you before there were two Elders from the Brighamite order announced, one of whom was Thos. McKenzie, who is out on a begging expedition for the destitute children in the salt land, and the other was S. Anderson, from England. I then notified the brethren of their approach, and of their meeting. I then took the cars and went to Lockport and got Bro. Gibbs, and on Sunday we went over to Neals'. They had been anticipating our coming, and in order to show a great amount of kindness towards me before the saints, they invited me to preach as soon as I arrived, having just walked eight miles. This they did, as I soon learned by their own mouths, that I could not go away and say that they had shut my mouth by not letting me preach. The spirit of truth said preach, and I accepted the invitation, but had they thought that I would, you had better believe they would never have asked me to preach. I asked Elder McKenzie to read Heb. v. chapt., which he did. We then sung, I prayed and God's spirit was given, (although inverse prayers were put up.) and took my text Heb. v. iv: "And no man taketh this honor unto himself but he that is called of God, as was Aaron." From this text I showed the people, both saints & sinners, that the order of God's opening any dispensation was through the ministration of angels, who held the authority of the priesthood before their ministry unto the children of men. Proved it to a demonstration to the satisfaction of saints and Gentile sinners. But the Mormon sinners were as mad as a March hare. I left no bars down—no place for them to take hold of to make remarks on what I said, except they commenced upon their own hook upon James J. Strang.

Of all human beings who were angry, these men were the most wrathy. They stooped to the old fashioned sectarian tirade of slang and slander upon all God's servants, and upon the gospel we preach. Railed out against Bros. Hess, Van Dusen and all other Elders that they knew anything about. Bore their testimony that Brigham Young was the prophet of the Lord God of Israel. The spirit of the testimony of Jesus rested upon me and I arose and bore testimony by the spirit and power of God, which sunk deeply into the hearts of the honest saints, that God through Joseph appointed J. J. Strang to be Prophet, Seer and Revelator unto the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and then challenged four or five of the Brighamite Elders to discuss the claims of Bro. James, and inasmuch as they dare not do it, I told them if I could get a house to preach in I would preach on your claims and prove it to a demonstration, fearless of successful controversy. I asked Geo. A. Neal if I could obtain his room, and he refused me, but said if I would preach on Sidney Rigdon's claims I might preach in his grove. I told him God did not send me to be dictated by him what to preach, and if God gave me grace sufficient I would preach on your claims. I went over to George Fowler's and obtained his room to preach in at five o'clock. After their afternoon meeting I appointed a meeting at five o'clock, and a goodly number of saints and Gentiles attended, while the Elders passed along by about ten rods, and commenced singing. The result was glorious. Those who before were wavering and doubtful now came out on the right side, and those who were right before grew stronger still, and a gentleman who before never heard a Mormon but myself, came out and desired baptism. He is a fine fellow. His name is Wm. W. DeLaMater. Those who before looked upon these Elders as smart men, now look upon them as deceivers and as hair brained liars. Your brother in Christ,

H. P BROWN.

☞ Communications intended for James J. Strang should hereafter be directed to New York City, until further notice.

WICKED—POSITIVELY.—The Portland Bulletin tells a story of a certain good deacon, whose hat blew off and led him a long chase after it through the street. At length the deacon became exhausted in the race, and pulled up against a post by the sidewalk. A gentleman came along, to whom the deacon addressed himself thus: "My friend, I am a deacon of the church, and it is very wrong for me to swear; you will greatly oblige me, if you will just d—n that hat for me."

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD IN VOREE AUGUST 25TH AND 26TH, 1849.

AUG. 25TH,—FORENOON SESSION.—Conference was opened by the reading of selections from the Psalms. Singing. Prayer and consecration of the Conference by Pres. Strang. Singing.

Pres. Strang arose and remarked that he felt like congratulating the saints upon the present prosperity of the church, and the bright prospects that lay before us; referred to the trials and afflictions the church has undergone within the last five years; said he did not in the commencement of his ministry fully realize their extent; that it was probably well that he did not, for he might have shrunk from the task; that it was a truth that the "vail which conceals the future was woven by the hand of mercy." But such trials had to be that the wicked might be separated from the righteous. The separation has taken place. A year ago the Lord began to strengthen us. Now he is giving us to prevail. He contrasted the feeling that existed abroad three years ago with the present. Then all were indifferent about hearing preaching. The saints would sometimes come out and hear, and acknowledge that what we preached was true, but said: "We have lost all confidence in man," and told us to go and build up Voree and the Temple, and thereby restore "confidence," and then we may come and assist you. Now it is entirely different; all are ready to hear preaching; the saints are taking hold of the work with renewed courage, and the honest in heart are obeying the gospel.

Pres. George J. Adams arose and remarked, that he never at any time had more peculiar feelings than he had at the present; said that he was glad he had an opportunity to bear witness of the truth; that he would not give the lie to his profession by saying he was a "seeker" for the truth; he had found it. "The church of the living God is the pillar and ground of the truth." He rejoiced that for the first time in his acquaintance with the church he saw the First Presidency all together in good faith. And showed in a soul stirring manner the wisdom of God in purifying the church from the wicked and abominable. He then gave a very interesting history of his success in the ministry in the city of Baltimore, and concluded by pressingly exhorting the saints to faithfulness and diligence in the great work of the last days. Adjourned two hours. Benediction by G. J. Adams.

AFTERNOON SESSION.—Opened by singing. Prayer by G. J. Adams. Singing.

On motion, resolved, unanimously, That we unhesitatingly recognize Bro. James J. Strang as President of this Conference, by virtue of his office as President of the church, and his Counselors, Bros. George J. Adams and Wm. Marks, as associate Presidents, and Presidents in his absence.

On motion, Bro. Gilbert Watson was appointed Clerk.

The case of Elder Daniel Carpenter was brought before the Conference for going out to preach without being sent, and preaching and proclaiming against the church and the authorities thereof. It being clearly proved that he still persisted in these transgressions after being duly admonished, therefore he was, on motion, excommunicated from the church and delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until he repent and make restitution.

Pres. Marks arose and said that he felt that he ought to make a confession to the saints for not acting in his calling, and also to ask their forgiveness. He gave a brief history of the course he pursued after the martyrdom of the prophet Joseph. Testified that he ever had the fullest confidence in the great work of the last days, and knew it was of God, and was now determined by the help of God to go forth in the discharge of his duty, and act in the place unto which he was called by revelation of God through his servant James.

Pres. Adams remarked that he rejoiced with joy unspeakable to see an old saint coming back, willing to do his duty. Spoke very highly of the former faithfulness of Bro. Marks in the cause of God; how he had kept himself uncontaminated in the midst of the lustful and ungodly, and concluded by offering the following resolution, which was sustained unanimously:—

Resolved, That we will forgive Bro. Marks, and sustain him in his calling by our faith, confidence and prayers.

Pres. Strang remarked that as Pres. Marks had been appointed by revelation of God one of the First Presidency and spiritual guardian of Joseph Smith, the son of the prophet Joseph, it was necessary that he be ordained to this high and holy calling. It was, therefore, on motion, unanimously

Resolved, That Bro. Wm. Marks be ordained to the office and calling unto which he was appointed by revelation. Adjourned till evening. Benediction by Pres. Marks.

EVENING SESSION.—Opened by the reading of the iv. and v. chapters of Micah by Pres. Strang. Singing. Prayer by Ebenezer Page, of the Twelve. Singing.

Preaching by Pres. Strang on the sonship of Christ, and the establishment of God's everlasting kingdom. He commenced by reading the following prophecy of Christ:—

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." Isa. ix. 6, 7.

He showed the only difference between this and any other child was simply that he was born heir to the throne of David, to reign over the everlasting kingdom of God; proved that if he was not of the seed of David in the male line he could not be heir to his throne, and consequently could not be the Messiah; showed that he was of the lineage of David in that line by natural begetting, by an array of incontrovertible scriptural testimony; reconciled apparent discrepancies in the genealogy of Christ as it is given by Matthew and Luke; showed that he was made a son of God by adoption, after the ordinance of baptism, when the voice from heaven said: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased;" and that he was made a High Priest, a Prince and a God by being anointed and ordained by God the Father, because he loved righteousness and hated iniquity. He also spoke of the mission of Christ, and showed that there were two sets of promises concerning him. One was that he should come in a meek and lowly condition, and be oppressed and afflicted, in his humility his judgment should be taken away—brought as a lamb to the slaughter—numbered among transgressors, and cut out of the land of the living. The other that he should come as the Redeemer of Israel, the Messiah, the Prince to reign over God's everlasting kingdom. And concluded by showing when and how this kingdom should be established Adjourned till to-morrow at 9 o'clock. Benediction by Ira J. Patten, of the Twelve.

AUG. 26TH,—MORNING SESSION.—Opened by singing. Prayer by Bro. Marks. Singing.

Pres. Strang remarked that D. F. Botsford had been charged by several brethren and sisters with giving heed to apostates, preaching and proclaiming against the gathering at Beaver Island, for which he had seen fit to suspend him. As Bro. Botsford was present he wanted to hear him speak for himself.

Bro. Botsford remarked that he had been somewhat deceived by

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD IN VOREE AUGUST 25TH AND 26TH, 1849.

AUG. 25TH,—FORENOON SESSION.—Conference was opened by the reading of selections from the Psalms. Singing. Prayer and consecration of the Conference by Pres. Strang. Singing.

Pres. Strang arose and remarked that he felt like congratulating the saints upon the present prosperity of the church, and the bright prospects that lay before us; referred to the trials and afflictions the church has undergone within the last five years; said he did not in the commencement of his ministry fully realize their extent; that it was probably well that he did not, for he might have shrunk from the task; that it was a truth that the "vail which conceals the future was woven by the hand of mercy." But such trials had to be that the wicked might be separated from the righteous. The separation has taken place. A year ago the Lord began to strengthen us. Now he is giving us to prevail. He contrasted the feeling that existed abroad three years ago with the present. Then all were indifferent about hearing preaching. The saints would sometimes come out and hear, and acknowledge that what we preached was true, but said: "We have lost all confidence in man," and told us to go and build up Voree and the Temple, and thereby restore "confidence," and then we may come and assist you. Now it is entirely different; all are ready to hear preaching; the saints are taking hold of the work with renewed courage, and the honest in heart are obeying the gospel.

Pres. George J. Adams arose and remarked, that he never at any time had more peculiar feelings than he had at the present; said that he was glad he had an opportunity to bear witness of the truth; that he would not give the lie to his profession by saying he was a "seeker" for the truth; he had found it. "The church of the living God is the pillar and ground of the truth." He rejoiced that for the first time in his acquaintance with the church he saw the First Presidency all together in good faith. And showed in a soul stirring manner the wisdom of God in purifying the church from the wicked and abominable. He then gave a very interesting history of his success in the ministry in the city of Baltimore, and concluded by pressingly exhorting the saints to faithfulness and diligence in the great work of the last days. Adjourned two hours. Benediction by G. J. Adams.

AFTERNOON SESSION.—Opened by singing. Prayer by G. J. Adams. Singing.

On motion, resolved, unanimously, That we unhesitatingly recognize Bro. James J. Strang as President of this Conference, by virtue of his office as President of the church, and his Counselors, Bros. George J. Adams and Wm. Marks, as associate Presidents, and Presidents in his absence.

On motion, Bro. Gilbert Watson was appointed Clerk.

The case of Elder Daniel Carpenter was brought before the Conference for going out to preach without being sent, and preaching and proclaiming against the church and the authorities thereof. It being clearly proved that he still persisted in these transgressions after being duly admonished, therefore he was, on motion, excommunicated from the church and delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until he repent and make restitution.

Pres. Marks arose and said that he felt that he ought to make a confession to the saints for not acting in his calling, and also to ask their forgiveness. He gave a brief history of the course he pursued after the martyrdom of the prophet Joseph. Testified that he ever had the fullest confidence in the great work of the last days, and knew it was of God, and was now determined by the help of God to go forth in the discharge of his duty, and act in the place unto which he was called by revelation of God through his servant James.

Pres. Adams remarked that he rejoiced with joy unspeakable to see an old saint coming back, willing to do his duty. Spoke very highly of the former faithfulness of Bro. Marks in the cause of God; how he had kept himself uncontaminated in the midst of the lustful and ungodly, and concluded by offering the following resolution, which was sustained unanimously:—

Resolved, That we will forgive Bro. Marks, and sustain him in his calling by our faith, confidence and prayers.

Pres. Strang remarked that as Pres. Marks had been appointed by revelation of God one of the First Presidency and spiritual guardian of Joseph Smith, the son of the prophet Joseph, it was necessary that he be ordained to this high and holy calling. It was, therefore, on motion, unanimously

Resolved, That Bro. Wm. Marks be ordained to the office and calling unto which he was appointed by revelation. Adjourned till evening. Benediction by Pres. Marks.

EVENING SESSION.—Opened by the reading of the iv. and v. chapters of Micah by Pres. Strang. Singing. Prayer by Ebenezer Page, of the Twelve. Singing.

Preaching by Pres. Strang on the sonship of Christ, and the establishment of God's everlasting kingdom. He commenced by reading the following prophecy of Christ:—

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." Isa. ix. 6, 7.

He showed the only difference between this and any other child was simply that he was born heir to the throne of David, to reign over the everlasting kingdom of God; proved that if he was not of the seed of David in the male line he could not be heir to his throne, and consequently could not be the Messiah; showed that he was of the lineage of David in that line by natural begetting, by an array of incontrovertible scriptural testimony; reconciled apparent discrepancies in the genealogy of Christ as it is given by Matthew and Luke; showed that he was made a son of God by adoption, after the ordinance of baptism, when the voice from heaven said: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased;" and that he was made a High Priest, a Prince and a God by being anointed and ordained by God the Father, because he loved righteousness and hated iniquity. He also spoke of the mission of Christ, and showed that there were two sets of promises concerning him. One was that he should come in a meek and lowly condition, and be oppressed and afflicted, in his humility his judgment should be taken away—brought as a lamb to the slaughter—numbered among transgressors, and cut out of the land of the living. The other that he should come as the Redeemer of Israel, the Messiah, the Prince to reign over God's everlasting kingdom. And concluded by showing when and how this kingdom should be established Adjourned till to-morrow at 9 o'clock. Benediction by Ira J. Patten, of the Twelve.

AUG. 26TH,—MORNING SESSION.—Opened by singing. Prayer by Bro. Marks. Singing.

Pres. Strang remarked that D. F. Botsford had been charged by several brethren and sisters with giving heed to apostates, preaching and proclaiming against the gathering at Beaver Island, for which he had seen fit to suspend him. As Bro. Botsford was present he wanted to hear him speak for himself.

Bro. Botsford remarked that he had been somewhat deceived by

Parmeter, in supposing he told the truth concerning the brethren on Beaver; that he never intentionally done anything to hinder the cause of God or the gathering there.

After remarks by Bros. Andrews, Adams, Savage and Page, Bro. Botsford was again restored to the confidence and fellowship of the saints.

Pres. Strang arose and exhorted the saints not to give heed to apostates, but to give heed to those whose duty it was to watch over the flock. After which he spoke on the order of Enoch; showed that it was no new thing. In the days of Enoch the saints kept it so perfect that God translated them. It was kept afterwards, but not so perfect, or they would have been translated also. He showed that it was in existence in the time of Christ, and so perfect did Christ keep it that God exalted him high above the kings of the earth, and gave unto him the keys of the resurrection and of everlasting life. He also spoke of the revelation and establishment of the Order in these last days, and said by it God would accomplish the great work of this dispensation, and establish his everlasting kingdom.

Pres. Adams preached a very interesting discourse on the subject of baptism for the dead. Adjourned till three o'clock. Benediction by Ebenezer Page.

Afternoon Session.—Opened by singing. Prayer by Ira J. Patten. Pres. Strang remarked that it now became necessary that some be appointed, anointed and ordained to administer baptisms for the dead, and also some to record the baptisms, that all things may be done in order. He also said that it was necessary that the Presidency of the stake should be filled, and that there were other quorums in the church not full, which would be filled as fast as God in his wisdom should direct. After which he introduced the following presentations:—

For President of the stake, Benjamin G. Wright; for assistant Presidents, Alden Hale and Roswell Packard; for to administer baptisms for the dead, George J. Adams, Wm. Marks, S. P. Bacon and Anson W. Prindle; for general Recorder, Gilbert Watson, and for assistant Recorder, Dennis Chidister.

These presentations were all sustained unanimously, the vote being called separately on each.

He also announced by revelation of God Phineas Wright for one of the twelve Apostles, which was also sustained unanimously.

Bro. Wm. Marks was then ordained, consecrated and set apart an Apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ, a Counselor to the prophet, one of the First Presidency, and a prophet of the most high God under the hands of Presidents Strang and Adams.

Pres. George J. Adams was anointed, ordained and set apart to administer baptism for the dead under the hands of Pres. Strang.

Pres. Wm. Marks was anointed, ordained and set apart to administer baptisms for the dead under the hands of Presidents Strang and Adams.

Bros. S. P. Bacon and Anson W. Prindle were also anointed, ordained, consecrated and set apart to this authority under the hands of the First Presidency.

Bro. Gilbert Watson was anointed, ordained and set apart general Recorder of baptisms for the dead, and Bro. Dennis Chidister assistant Recorder under the hands of James J. Strang, George J. Adams, Wm. Marks, S. P. Bacon and Anson W. Prindle.

Bro. Benjamin G. Wright was ordained President of the stake at Voree, and Bros. Alden Hale and Roswell Packard assistant Presidents, under the hands of the First Presidency.

Bro. Phineas Wright was ordained, consecrated and set apart an Apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ, and a special witness of his name to the nations of the earth under the hands of James J. Strang, George J. Adams and William Marks, of the First Presidency, and Ebenezer Page, Jehiel Savage and Ira J. Patten, of the Twelve.

The choir sung a hymn, after which the eucharist was administered. The Conference then adjourned twenty minutes, to meet at the water's edge for the purpose of attending to baptisms both for the living and the dead.

Conference assembled pursuant to adjournment. Eight were initiated into the church by being baptized for the remissions of their sins. After which baptism for the dead commenced as follows:—

James J. Strang claimed by revelation of God the redemption of the bodies of James Knox Polk, late President of the United States, Oliver Cromwell, formerly Lord Protector of England, and Noel Gordan Byron, Lord Byron, and also by faith Gabriel Strang, his grandfather. And by the hands of George J. Adams was baptized and confirmed for them severally, of which we are witnesses.

GILBERT WATSON,
DENNIS CHIDISTER, } Recorders.
FRANCIS COOPER,
LUTHER T. PRINDLE.

Also George J. Adams, by revelation of God, claimed redemption of the bodies of Napoleon Bonaparte, late emperor of France, Samuel Adams, John Adams, late President of the United States, John Quincy Adams, also late President of the United States, and also by faith William Adams, his father. And by the hands of James J. Strang was baptized and confirmed for them severally, of which we are witnesses.

GILBERT WATSON,
DENNIS CHIDISTER, } Recorders.
FRANCIS COOPER,
LUTHER T. PRINDLE.

There were a large number more who were baptized for and in behalf of their deceased relatives, but we omit them for want of room. Adjourned till evening.

Evening Session.—Opened by singing. Prayer by Elder S. P. Bacon. Singing. Confirmations were then attended to, after which numbers of the saints bore testimony to the truth of the great work of the last days. The spirit of God rested upon the saints to such a degree that their enemies were seized with astonishment.—Adjourned till 9 o'clock to-morrow, for the purpose of finishing up the business of the Conference.

Aug. 27th.—Met pursuant to adjournment. Pres. Strang made some general remarks about sending out Elders, and the true course to be pursued in the premises. After which Jehiel Savage and Phineas Wright, of the Twelve, were appointed to take the Apostolic charge of British America. Jason W. Briggs, H. P., was appointed on a mission to Steuben Co., N. Y., and the counties adjacent. And D. F. Botsford, H. P., to Canada, east of the Sorelle river. Adjourned sine die.

Thus ended this interesting Conference. The preaching of the word was attended with the spirit of God. Notwithstanding there was only nine days notice given of this Conference, large numbers were in attendance, and there was more faith, more unity of heart, more oneness of spirit, more confidence in the prosperity of the cause, and a better feeling than we have ever before witnessed at any Conference in Voree.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS, } Presidents.
WILLIAM MARKS,

Gilbert Watson, Clerk.

NOTICE.

Tithing intended for the Temple, and donations for the Tower, should hereafter be sent to Gilbert Watson, Voree, Wis.

JAMES J. STRANG.

Parmeter, in supposing he told the truth concerning the brethren on Beaver; that he never intentionally done anything to hinder the cause of God or the gathering there.

After remarks by Bros. Andrews, Adams, Savage and Page, Bro. Botsford was again restored to the confidence and fellowship of the saints.

Pres. Strang arose and exhorted the saints not to give heed to apostates, but to give heed to those whose duty it was to watch over the flock. After which he spoke on the order of Enoch; showed that it was no new thing. In the days of Enoch the saints kept it so perfect that God translated them. It was kept afterwards, but not so perfect, or they would have been translated also. He showed that it was in existence in the time of Christ, and so perfect did Christ keep it that God exalted him high above the kings of the earth, and gave unto him the keys of the resurrection and of everlasting life. He also spoke of the revelation and establishment of the Order in these last days, and said by it God would accomplish the great work of this dispensation, and establish his everlasting kingdom.

Pres. Adams preached a very interesting discourse on the subject of baptism for the dead. Adjourned till three o'clock. Benediction by Ebenezer Page.

Afternoon Session.—Opened by singing. Prayer by Ira J. Patten. Pres. Strang remarked that it now became necessary that some be appointed, anointed and ordained to administer baptisms for the dead, and also some to record the baptisms, that all things may be done in order. He also said that it was necessary that the Presidency of the stake should be filled, and that there were other quorums in the church not full, which would be filled as fast as God in his wisdom should direct. After which he introduced the following presentations:—

For President of the stake, Benjamin G. Wright; for assistant Presidents, Alden Hale and Roswell Packard; for to administer baptisms for the dead, George J. Adams, Wm. Marks, S. P. Bacon and Anson W. Prindle; for general Recorder, Gilbert Watson, and for assistant Recorder, Dennis Chidister.

These presentations were all sustained unanimously, the vote being called separately on each.

He also announced by revelation of God Phineas Wright for one of the twelve Apostles, which was also sustained unanimously.

Bro. Wm. Marks was then ordained, consecrated and set apart an Apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ, a Counselor to the prophet, one of the First Presidency, and a prophet of the most high God under the hands of Presidents Strang and Adams.

Pres. George J. Adams was anointed, ordained and set apart to administer baptism for the dead under the hands of Pres. Strang.

Pres. Wm. Marks was anointed, ordained and set apart to administer baptisms for the dead under the hands of Presidents Strang and Adams.

Bros. S. P. Bacon and Anson W. Prindle were also anointed, ordained, consecrated and set apart to this authority under the hands of the First Presidency.

Bro. Gilbert Watson was anointed, ordained and set apart general Recorder of baptisms for the dead, and Bro. Dennis Chidister assistant Recorder under the hands of James J. Strang, George J. Adams, Wm. Marks, S. P. Bacon and Anson W. Prindle.

Bro. Benjamin G. Wright was ordained President of the stake at Voree, and Bros. Alden Hale and Roswell Packard assistant Presidents, under the hands of the First Presidency.

Bro. Phineas Wright was ordained, consecrated and set apart an Apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ, and a special witness of his name to the nations of the earth under the hands of James J. Strang, George J. Adams and William Marks, of the First Presidency, and Ebenezer Page, Jehiel Savage and Ira J. Patten, of the Twelve.

The choir sung a hymn, after which the eucharist was administered. The Conference then adjourned twenty minutes, to meet at the water's edge for the purpose of attending to baptisms both for the living and the dead.

Conference assembled pursuant to adjournment. Eight were initiated into the church by being baptized for the remissions of their sins. After which baptism for the dead commenced as follows:—

James J. Strang claimed by revelation of God the redemption of the bodies of James Knox Polk, late President of the United States, Oliver Cromwell, formerly Lord Protector of England, and Noel Gordan Byron, Lord Byron, and also by faith Gabriel Strang, his grandfather. And by the hands of George J. Adams was baptized and confirmed for them severally, of which we are witnesses.

GILBERT WATSON,
DENNIS CHIDISTER, } Recorders.
FRANCIS COOPER,
LUTHER T. PRINDLE.

Also George J. Adams, by revelation of God, claimed redemption of the bodies of Napoleon Bonaparte, late emperor of France, Samuel Adams, John Adams, late President of the United States, John Quincy Adams, also late President of the United States, and also by faith William Adams, his father. And by the hands of James J. Strang was baptized and confirmed for them severally, of which we are witnesses.

GILBERT WATSON,
DENNIS CHIDISTER, } Recorders.
FRANCIS COOPER,
LUTHER T. PRINDLE.

There were a large number more who were baptized for and in behalf of their deceased relatives, but we omit them for want of room. Adjourned till evening.

Evening Session.—Opened by singing. Prayer by Elder S. P. Bacon. Singing. Confirmations were then attended to, after which numbers of the saints bore testimony to the truth of the great work of the last days. The spirit of God rested upon the saints to such a degree that their enemies were seized with astonishment.—Adjourned till 9 o'clock to-morrow, for the purpose of finishing up the business of the Conference.

Aug. 27th.—Met pursuant to adjournment. Pres. Strang made some general remarks about sending out Elders, and the true course to be pursued in the premises. After which Jehiel Savage and Phineas Wright, of the Twelve, were appointed to take the Apostolic charge of British America. Jason W. Briggs, H. P., was appointed on a mission to Steuben Co., N. Y., and the counties adjacent. And D. F. Botsford, H. P., to Canada, east of the Sorelle river. Adjourned sine die.

Thus ended this interesting Conference. The preaching of the word was attended with the spirit of God. Notwithstanding there was only nine days notice given of this Conference, large numbers were in attendance, and there was more faith, more unity of heart, more oneness of spirit, more confidence in the prosperity of the cause, and a better feeling than we have ever before witnessed at any Conference in Voree.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS, } Presidents.
WILLIAM MARKS,

Gilbert Watson, Clerk.

NOTICE.

Tithing intended for the Temple, and donations for the Tower, should hereafter be sent to Gilbert Watson, Voree, Wis.

JAMES J. STRANG.

SERMON DELIVERED AT BEAVER CONFERENCE BY JAMES BLAKESLEE.

Elder Blakeslee, one of the Twelve, was called upon to preach. He read the last chapter of the Revelations of St. John, and the 14th verse, which reads as follows: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." This 14th verse of this chapter I shall lay down as a starting point, from which to make a few remarks on this occasion. I have first to say to this august assembly that I have no apology to make whatever, having received a dispensation of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and having promised to be faithful, I therefore stand forth in the midst of my beloved brethren and sisters to declare those things which will make for their peace and eternal salvation. And in treating upon this subject it may be well to lay down some rule by which to understand the scriptures of the prophets and apostles, who have spoken to us as they were moved upon by the Holy Ghost.

In the first place I will say that words are signs of ideas. Well, then, we make use of words as signs to communicate our ideas to each other. We will examine the scriptures a little, and endeavor to ascertain if we can how the scripture writers used the signs to communicate their ideas. And in the first place we will say that the scriptures are written in plain positive sayings, and in comparative sayings, and in allegoric sayings, and in figurative sayings, and in parables. For an illustration, an old prophet said anciently, "and the knowledge of God shall cover the earth." Here we have a plain and positive declaration. In order that he might be perfectly understood how the knowledge of God should cover the earth, he follows up the saying with a comparison, "as the waters cover the sea."

Again, a prophet said, "and the lion shall eat straw." How? Answer, "like the ox." Well, how does the ox eat straw? Answer, with his mouth. Again, in Daniel, we have an account of a huge image, whose head was pure gold, his breast and arms of silver, his belly and thighs of brass, his legs of iron, his feet and toes part iron and part clay. Well, here is a symbol. Here we have the Babylonian kingdom in the symbol of the head of gold, and next in order we have the Medo-Persian kingdom, in the symbol of the breast and arms of silver, and the Macedonian of Alexandrian kingdom in the symbol of the belly and thighs of brass, and the Pagan Roman kingdom in the symbol of the legs of iron, and the ten divisions of Europe in the symbol of the ten toes. Well so much for symbolic sayings, and we next come to parables. The Savior said in a parable, that it would not do to put new wine into old bottles, but new wine must be put into new bottles, and both will be preserved. In those days the people put new wine into new bottles, made of green skins of beasts. And as it fermented the bottles stretched, and did not break. But if they had used the old bottles, which had lost their elasticity, of course they would not stretch, and when the wine began to ferment the bottles would break and the wine would be lost as well as the bottles.

Let us apply the parable, and in order to get to it understandingly we must say something about another parable of the Savior's, contained in the 20th chapt. of Matt., concerning the householder hiring laborers into his vineyard. You will observe that in the days of Adam it became necessary to reveal the plan of redemption and salvation, and in order to this a dispensation of the gospel was committed to Adam, and he was ordained a High Priest after the order of an endless life. During the progress of that dispensation Enoch and they that were with him built up the church of God, and prepared the saints of his day to be translated, and they were translated, city and all, and the world was left with a faithless people; for all who had not perfected themselves by obedience to the gospel, but had apostatized and become wicked, or mostly so. That being the case, those old apostates were compared to old wine bottles.

Well, now, Enoch, with the church, are gone from earth, and in order to save some more of the inhabitants of the earth, especially from a flood, God, like the husbandman in the parable, again hired servants to labor in his vineyard, and he called on Noah and placed him at the head of a dispensation, and set him to work to build an ark. Then they had some old bottles on hand, but according to the Savior's maxim it would not do to put the new wine of the dispensation of Noah into the old dried up bottles, but it must be put into new ones. And, again, when Noah's dispensation had accomplished the object for which it had been committed, and a new and clean world was presented to Noah and his family for their inheritance, and they in process of time had apostatized, or the most of them, it became necessary to commit another dispensation.

And in order to this the Lord appeared to Moses in the bush, and committed to him a dispensation of the gospel, and sent him to lead his people out of Egypt. And by this time we have another set of old dried up bottles, not fit for the new wine of the kingdom. Nevertheless the Lord wrought in power, in word and deed to save some of the old bottles, even among the children of Israel that came out of Egypt. But only two, Caleb and Joshua, out of 600,000 who were upwards of twenty years old that came out of Egypt were found capable of holding the new wine of the dispensation. The new bottles were the rising generation, and they went in and possessed the land. But it came to pass in process of time that the children of Israel apostatized, and by the time another dispensation was committed by the Son of God in person, he found many old dried up bottles among the Jews who were not fit for the new wine of his dispensation. Therefore new bottles were found among the Gentiles.

Well, the last 1800 years has furnished us with another lot of old dried up bottles, and when the Lord committed the dispensation of the fulness of times in this age of the world he made choice of a new bottle, even a young man, only in the 17th year of his age, to whom he sent his angel with the everlasting gospel, and whom he ordained by the ministry of holy angels to stand at the head of this dispensation. This is our rule by which to understand the scriptures; and as we have a plain God to deal with, we will deal in plainness with one another. Now I ask this important soul stirring question: What will give us or any others a RIGHT TO THE TREE OF LIFE? Answer. The first thing is to believe in God the eternal Father, and in his son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, which bears record of them. Secondly, to believe that God has committed the dispensation of the fulness of times in this age of the world to his servants, and raised up prophets, apostles, evangelists, pastors and teachers to perfect his church, and for the work of the ministry; and that God called his servants by revelation, and the ministry of holy angels, and the voice of God out of the heavens, and the laying on of the hands of the angels of God, ordained those men to the holy work of the ministry.

Therefore the testimony of those witnesses must be believed by all who desire a right to the tree of life. This was the case in the days of the Apostles. When they were made witnesses it was all important that the people believed the testimony of the Apostles, and when they believed their testimony the next thing was to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins. For as soon as they who inquired what to do on the day of Pentecost were told what they must do, (Acts ii.,) they obeyed; that is, they were baptized for the remission of sins, and received the gift of the Holy Ghost. The Lord requires of all who desire a right to the tree of life that they not only believe the testimony of God's servants in this dispensation, but that they repent and be baptized for the remission of

SERMON DELIVERED AT BEAVER CONFERENCE BY JAMES BLAKESLEE.

Elder Blakeslee, one of the Twelve, was called upon to preach. He read the last chapter of the Revelations of St. John, and the 14th verse, which reads as follows: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." This 14th verse of this chapter I shall lay down as a starting point, from which to make a few remarks on this occasion. I have first to say to this august assembly that I have no apology to make whatever, having received a dispensation of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and having promised to be faithful, I therefore stand forth in the midst of my beloved brethren and sisters to declare those things which will make for their peace and eternal salvation. And in treating upon this subject it may be well to lay down some rule by which to understand the scriptures of the prophets and apostles, who have spoken to us as they were moved upon by the Holy Ghost.

In the first place I will say that words are signs of ideas. Well, then, we make use of words as signs to communicate our ideas to each other. We will examine the scriptures a little, and endeavor to ascertain if we can how the scripture writers used the signs to communicate their ideas. And in the first place we will say that the scriptures are written in plain positive sayings, and in comparative sayings, and in allegoric sayings, and in figurative sayings, and in parables. For an illustration, an old prophet said anciently, "and the knowledge of God shall cover the earth." Here we have a plain and positive declaration. In order that he might be perfectly understood how the knowledge of God should cover the earth, he follows up the saying with a comparison, "as the waters cover the sea."

Again, a prophet said, "and the lion shall eat straw." How? Answer. "like the ox." Well, how does the ox eat straw? Answer, with his mouth. Again, in Daniel, we have an account of a huge image, whose head was pure gold, his breast and arms of silver, his belly and thighs of brass, his legs of iron, his feet and toes part iron and part clay. Well, here is a symbol. Here we have the Babylonian kingdom in the symbol of the head of gold, and next in order we have the Medo-Persian kingdom, in the symbol of the breast and arms of silver, and the Macedonian of Alexandrian kingdom in the symbol of the belly and thighs of brass, and the Pagan Roman kingdom in the symbol of the legs of iron, and the ten divisions of Europe in the symbol of the ten toes. Well so much for symbolic sayings, and we next come to parables. The Savior said in a parable, that it would not do to put new wine into old bottles, but new wine must be put into new bottles, and both will be preserved. In those days the people put new wine into new bottles, made of green skins of beasts. And as it fermented the bottles stretched, and did not break. But if they had used the old bottles, which had lost their elasticity, of course they would not stretch, and when the wine began to ferment the bottles would break and the wine would be lost as well as the bottles.

Let us apply the parable, and in order to get to it understandingly we must say something about another parable of the Savior's, contained in the 20th chapt. of Matt., concerning the householder hiring laborers into his vineyard. You will observe that in the days of Adam it became necessary to reveal the plan of redemption and salvation, and in order to this a dispensation of the gospel was committed to Adam, and he was ordained a High Priest after the order of an endless life. During the progress of that dispensation Enoch and they that were with him built up the church of God, and prepared the saints of his day to be translated, and they were translated, city and all, and the world was left with a faithless people; for all who had not perfected themselves by obedience to the gospel, but had apostatized and become wicked, or mostly so. That being the case, those old apostates were compared to old wine bottles.

Well, now, Enoch, with the church, are gone from earth, and in order to save some more of the inhabitants of the earth, especially from a flood, God, like the husbandman in the parable, again hired servants to labor in his vineyard, and he called on Noah and placed him at the head of a dispensation, and set him to work to build an ark. Then they had some old bottles on hand, but according to the Savior's maxim it would not do to put the new wine of the dispensation of Noah into the old dried up bottles, but it must be put into new ones. And, again, when Noah's dispensation had accomplished the object for which it had been committed, and a new and clean world was presented to Noah and his family for their inheritance, and they in process of time had apostatized, or the most of them, it became necessary to commit another dispensation.

And in order to this the Lord appeared to Moses in the bush, and committed to him a dispensation of the gospel, and sent him to lead his people out of Egypt. And by this time we have another set of old dried up bottles, not fit for the new wine of the kingdom. Nevertheless the Lord wrought in power, in word and deed to save some of the old bottles, even among the children of Israel that came out of Egypt. But only two, Caleb and Joshua, out of 600,000 who were upwards of twenty years old that came out of Egypt were found capable of holding the new wine of the dispensation. The new bottles were the rising generation, and they went in and possessed the land. But it came to pass in process of time that the children of Israel apostatized, and by the time another dispensation was committed by the Son of God in person, he found many old dried up bottles among the Jews who were not fit for the new wine of his dispensation. Therefore new bottles were found among the Gentiles.

Well, the last 1800 years has furnished us with another lot of old dried up bottles, and when the Lord committed the dispensation of the fulness of times in this age of the world he made choice of a new bottle, even a young man, only in the 17th year of his age, to whom he sent his angel with the everlasting gospel, and whom he ordained by the ministry of holy angels to stand at the head of this dispensation. This is our rule by which to understand the scriptures; and as we have a plain God to deal with, we will deal in plainness with one another. Now I ask this important soul stirring question: What will give us or any others a RIGHT TO THE TREE OF LIFE? Answer. The first thing is to believe in God the eternal Father, and in his son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, which bears record of them. Secondly, to believe that God has committed the dispensation of the fulness of times in this age of the world to his servants, and raised up prophets, apostles, evangelists, pastors and teachers to perfect his church, and for the work of the ministry: and that God called his servants by revelation, and the ministry of holy angels, and the voice of God out of the heavens, and the laying on of the hands of the angels of God, ordained those men to the holy work of the ministry.

Therefore the testimony of those witnesses must be believed by all who desire a right to the tree of life. This was the case in the days of the Apostles. When they were made witnesses it was all important that the people believed the testimony of the Apostles, and when they believed their testimony the next thing was to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins. For as soon as they who inquired what to do on the day of Pentecost were told what they must do, (Acts ii.,) they obeyed; that is, they were baptized for the remission of sins, and received the gift of the Holy Ghost. The Lord requires of all who desire a right to the tree of life that they not only believe the testimony of God's servants in this dispensation, but that they repent and be baptized for the remission of sins, as in days of old, and receive the laying on of the hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and the Holy Ghost will lead them into all truth, and show them things to come, and be a comfort to them in all times of trouble.

Having this spirit, they will understand the signs of the times and of the coming of the son of man. They are then required to keep all the commandments of God which are given in this dispensation. And if they do this they will have a right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gate into the city. The new wine (or spirit) of this dispensation teaches the doctrine of the gathering of the saints to Zion, and of the Jews to Jerusalem. And if we inquire what for? the answer is, to build up Zion as a place of safety and salvation for the poor and down trodden among all people, and where all can be taught the law of God and come to understanding, and be prepared to live in peace and enjoy the blessings of the heavens and of the earth; and having provided themselves with places of safety, and having gathered into them, may be satisfied with the goodness of God, and have peace and rest while God is pouring out his judgments and scourges on Babylon the great, who has made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication. And she shall be destroyed, for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her.

Upon what principle and by what means is Zion to be built up? Answer. By the principle of the everlasting gospel, and the means are as follows: First the servants of God go out and preach the gospel, and many obey it, and are added to the church, and then are instructed in the doctrine of the gathering to Zion and building her up, that they may be prepared to meet the Lord at his coming.

Noah could not build an ark without means, neither can the saints of the last days build up Zion without means. Therefore it is their duty to sell their farms and gather up their riches with one heart and one consent, and take their riches and the poor and flee to the places where the Lord has promised deliverance. And when they get there go to with all they have and with all their might to build places of refuge and safety. Well, says some one, what have we to do to build up Zion? I will tell you. We have to build cities, open farms, rear factories and machine shops of all kinds, and become acquainted with all the arts and sciences, and that in accordance with the law of God; and also we are to remember that God is no respecter of persons. Therefore in our temporal things we are to become one, in order to fulfill the celestial law, and in order to receive the fulness of the spirit. And where such an order exists among the inhabitants of Zion the poor will have no cause of complaint. Why? Because there will be no poor, neither will there be any rich, unless all are rich. And all who observe to do these things and hold out faithful to the end shall have a right to the tree of life, and shall enter in through the gate into the city.—Amen.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 30th, 1849.

Bro. G. J. Adams:—I have just received a letter from you dated Albion, Mich., and you may feel assured I was glad to hear from you and Bro. Strang. May God bless you both. I am glad to hear all is right. Bro. George, in the first place I want you to select me a farm. I intend by the help of God to come on in the spring with my family. Bro. Braidwood has been preaching for us since you left. He has baptized four. Bro. Lehman started this morning down to Wilmington to preach. There is a door open there. Bro. Lehman is all right. He has bore the strongest testimony for Bro. Strang and Beaver Island I have heard from any one, and has left his business, and has gone to preaching. He is all right. May God bless him. I will tell you, Bro. George, Bro. Braidwood is a faithful man. He wants you to give his love to Bro. James, and do not forget. He has left his business and has gone into the field. And, mark what I say, he will do good and bring many souls into the church, if he is faithful.

I am glad to hear that there are a number of the Elders coming on to the east, and I pray that Bro. Strang may come along. We will do all we can for him. Do not fear, God is with us. Bro. George, I feel well. I have just received a letter from Baltimore, from Bro. Hosmer. He preached to a large congregation last Sunday. Bro. Long says that he will start for Beaver again in two weeks. I am going to send one of my boys with him if I can.—I am glad to hear of your success in preaching, and I pray that God may bless your labor, and that you may win many souls, for I know that you are a good hand to "bob for eels." Bro. Swartz and Bro. Long and others will start soon for Beaver. Our meetings are well attended, all things considered. We will have some more to baptize soon. Bro. Braidwood started this morning to preach.—I want you to write to him immediately. He thinks a great deal of you. Tell Bro. Strang to write him. My wife's health is about the same. She wants you and Bro. Strang to pray for her, that God may spare her health, that she may get to Beaver Island. I want you to write to me as soon as you get this letter, and tell me all the good news. Give my love to Bro. James J. Strang, and tell him the saints pray for him here that God may bless and sustain him, that he may stand and lead the flock of Christ into pleasant pastures. I am yours in truth and love, PETER HESS.

Niagara Falls, July 24th, 1849.

Dear James:—Poverty seems ever to be the lot of the saints of the most high, but we do have a glorious hope that "the saints will take the Kingdom and possess the Kingdom forever and ever."—The judgment will be given to the saints of the most high, and then we shall enjoy the fruits of the Kingdom, and reign on the earth. I am endeavoring by the wisdom the mighty God of Jacob has given to eradicate Brighamism, superstition and ignorance from those who have once known the way of truth,& instructing those who have never known the fulness of the everlasting gospel of Jesus Christ. I am well aware, and have been for a long period of time, as you said to me in your letter last fall, that when I gained as much more knowledge of the science of religion as I have, I shall more sensibly feel I have just begun. I know my weakness, Bro. James, as well as any other man, and did I not know there was power in the gospel of Jesus to assist I should not make another attempt to preach. I have been used first rate since I came into these parts. I have preached every Sunday, excepting one, and several evenings.—Thank God, there are instead of H. P. Brown, a Strangite, (as we are called,) about 20 members and Elders who you may say are strong in the Lord and in the order of God's house. And there are now of my former acquaintance four persons,three of whom belonged to the Meth. Episcopal church when I did, and have left them since I came here that will be baptized as soon as circumstances will admit, who have expressed their belief firmly in the work. Sunday evening I ordained Bro. Otis Gibbs an Elder into the church. I also ordained Bro. John Small one of the Seventies. There is another Elder by the name of Henry Hays. So we are somewhat strengthened in the priesthood. We expect soon as harvest is over to go into Canada to preach, but the burthen of preaching will rest on me and Bro. John Small. Give my love to all God's holy people in Voree. Your brother, H. P. BROWN.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

Joseph L. Wait,	$2,00 to Vol. IV	No. 52
Benjamin Dexter,	2,00 " "	52
Caleb Hall,	3,00 " "	52
Abiah Higby	2,00 to Vol. V	No. 26

sins, as in days of old, and receive the laying on of the hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and the Holy Ghost will lead them into all truth, and show them things to come, and be a comfort to them in all times of trouble.

Having this spirit, they will understand the signs of the times and of the coming of the son of man. They are then required to keep all the commandments of God which are given in this dispensation. And if they do this they will have a right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gate into the city. The new wine (or spirit) of this dispensation teaches the doctrine of the gathering of the saints to Zion, and of the Jews to Jerusalem. And if we inquire what for? the answer is, to build up Zion as a place of safety and salvation for the poor and down trodden among all people, and where all can be taught the law of God and come to understanding, and be prepared to live in peace and enjoy the blessings of the heavens and of the earth; and having provided themselves with places of safety, and having gathered into them, may be satisfied with the goodness of God, and have peace and rest while God is pouring out his judgments and scourges on Babylon the great, who has made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication. And she shall be destroyed, for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her.

Upon what principle and by what means is Zion to be built up? Answer. By the principle of the everlasting gospel, and the means are as follows: First the servants of God go out and preach the gospel, and many obey it, and are added to the church, and then are instructed in the doctrine of the gathering to Zion and building her up, that they may be prepared to meet the Lord at his coming.

Noah could not build an ark without means, neither can the saints of the last days build up Zion without means. Therefore it is their duty to sell their farms and gather up their riches with one heart and one consent, and take their riches and the poor and flee to the places where the Lord has promised deliverance. And when they get there go to with all they have and with all their might to build places of refuge and safety. Well, says some one, what have we to do to build up Zion? I will tell you. We have to build cities, open farms, rear factories and machine shops of all kinds, and become acquainted with all the arts and sciences, and that in accordance with the law of God; and also we are to remember that God is no respecter of persons. Therefore in our temporal things we are to become one, in order to fulfill the celestial law, and in order to receive the fulness of the spirit. And where such an order exists among the inhabitants of Zion the poor will have no cause of complaint. Why? Because there will be no poor, neither will there be any rich, unless all are rich. And all who observe to do these things and hold out faithful to the end shall have a right to the tree of life, and shall enter in through the gate into the city.—Amen.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 30th, 1849.

Bro. G. J. Adams:—I have just received a letter from you dated Albion, Mich., and you may feel assured I was glad to hear from you and Bro. Strang. May God bless you both. I am glad to hear all is right. Bro. George, in the first place I want you to select me a farm. I intend by the help of God to come on in the spring with my family. Bro. Braidwood has been preaching for us since you left. He has baptized four. Bro. Lehman started this morning down to Wilmington to preach. There is a door open there. Bro. Lehman is all right. He has bore the strongest testimony for Bro. Strang and Beaver Island I have heard from any one, and has left his business, and has gone to preaching. He is all right. May God bless him. I will tell you, Bro. George, Bro. Braidwood is a faithful man. He wants you to give his love to Bro. James, and do not forget. He has left his business and has gone into the field. And, mark what I say, he will do good and bring many souls into the church, if he is faithful.

I am glad to hear that there are a number of the Elders coming on to the east, and I pray that Bro. Strang may come along. We will do all we can for him. Do not fear, God is with us. Bro. George, I feel well. I have just received a letter from Baltimore, from Bro. Hosmer. He preached to a large congregation last Sunday. Bro. Long says that he will start for Beaver again in two weeks. I am going to send one of my boys with him if I can.—I am glad to hear of your success in preaching, and I pray that God may bless your labor, and that you may win many souls, for I know that you are a good hand to "bob for eels." Bro. Swartz and Bro. Long and others will start soon for Beaver. Our meetings are well attended, all things considered. We will have some more to baptize soon. Bro. Braidwood started this morning to preach.—I want you to write to him immediately. He thinks a great deal of you. Tell Bro. Strang to write him. My wife's health is about the same. She wants you and Bro. Strang to pray for her, that God may spare her health, that she may get to Beaver Island. I want you to write to me as soon as you get this letter, and tell me all the good news. Give my love to Bro. James J. Strang, and tell him the saints pray for him here that God may bless and sustain him, that he may stand and lead the flock of Christ into pleasant pastures. I am yours in truth and love, PETER HESS.

Niagara Falls, July 24th, 1849.

Dear James:—Poverty seems ever to be the lot of the saints of the most high, but we do have a glorious hope that "the saints will take the Kingdom and possess the Kingdom forever and ever."—The judgment will be given to the saints of the most high, and then we shall enjoy the fruits of the Kingdom, and reign on the earth. I am endeavoring by the wisdom the mighty God of Jacob has given to eradicate Brighamism, superstition and ignorance from those who have once known the way of truth,& instructing those who have never known the fulness of the everlasting gospel of Jesus Christ. I am well aware, and have been for a long period of time, as you said to me in your letter last fall, that when I gained as much more knowledge of the science of religion as I have, I shall more sensibly feel I have just begun. I know my weakness, Bro. James, as well as any other man, and did I not know there was power in the gospel of Jesus to assist I should not make another attempt to preach. I have been used first rate since I came into these parts. I have preached every Sunday, excepting one, and several evenings.—Thank God, there are instead of H. P. Brown, a Strangite, (as we are called,) about 20 members and Elders who you may say are strong in the Lord and in the order of God's house. And there are now of my former acquaintance four persons,three of whom belonged to the Meth. Episcopal church when I did, and have left them since I came here that will be baptized as soon as circumstances will admit, who have expressed their belief firmly in the work. Sunday evening I ordained Bro. Otis Gibbs an Elder into the church. I also ordained Bro. John Small one of the Seventies. There is another Elder by the name of Henry Hays. So we are somewhat strengthened in the priesthood. We expect soon as harvest is over to go into Canada to preach, but the burthen of preaching will rest on me and Bro. John Small. Give my love to all God's holy people in Voree. Your brother, H. P. BROWN.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

Joseph L. Wait,	$2,00	to	Vol. IV	No. 52
Benjamin Dexter,	2,00	"	"	52
Caleb Hall,	3,00	"	"	52
Abiah Higby	2,00	to	Vol. V	No. 26

FOREIGN.

ENGLAND AND IRELAND.—Parliament is to be prorogued on the 9th of August. During the week ending July 21st there were 339 deaths of Cholera reported in London, being more than double the number of the preceding week. Along the whole Southern Coast it is raging in a very malignant form, and the mortality is very great. At Liverpool the disease is rapidly increasing. Ireland continues to be exempt from the scourge. On the 12th of July a very serious riot took place between the Orangemen and Catholics in the county Down. The Orange party having celebrated the day at Fullimore, and being on their way home, while passing a defile called Dollit's Brae, found their path waylaid, all the passes and surrounding hills occupied by an immense number of Roman Catholics, provided with forks and firearms, and plainly contemplating a massacre. The Protestants, aided by a small party of police and military, stood upon their defence and succeeded in forcing their way through the pass after a short struggle, in which 40 or 50 persons are said to have been killed or wounded on both sides, much the greater proportion being of the Catholic body. Thirty-eight Ribbonmen had been taken prisoners. On Friday two medical gentlemen drove through the country round about the scene of action with the view of administering relief to those who were found, but they were refused admittance at every house where they called.

THINK.—Thought engenders thought. Place one idea upon paper—another follows it, and still another, until you have written a page. You cannot fathom your mind. There is a well of thought there which has no bottom. The more you draw from it the more clear and fruitful it will be. If you neglect to think yourself and use other people's thoughts—giving them utterance only—you will never know what you are capable of. At first your ideas may come out in lumps—homely and shapeless—but no matter, time and perseverance will arrange and polish them. Learn to think, and you will soon learn to write—the more you think, the better will you express your ideas.

NATIONAL HAPPINESS.

Neither industry nor science, nor machines, nor books can make a people happy. All these things are useful in their way, and the legislator ought to propagate and multiply them; but if contented with having developed the intellectual and terrestrial part of man, he neglects to educate the soul—that divine essence of humanity—instead of a happy people, he will see around him only an uneasy multitude, unbridled in its passions, and harrassed with the double want of reason and of knowing, of which the sublime instinct constitutes its punishment. You have directed it towards the earth, and it remains there in the midst of riches and of pleasures which consume it. Why do you not open for it the gates of heaven?—Everything which calms the heart, everything which aggrandizes humanity, comes from above. You wish for happiness, for power—it has been placed in heaven—and the wisest, if it be not also the most obedient to the commandments of God, can never be the happiest nation.

INTOXICATION.

The laws against intoxication are very severe and enforced with great rigor in Sweden. Whoever is seen drunk is fined, for the first offence, three dollars; for the second, six; for the third and fourth, a still larger sum, and is also deprived of the right of voting at elections, and of being appointed a representative. He is, besides, publicly exposed in the parish church on the following Sunday. If the same individual is found committing the like offence a fifth time, he is shut up in a house of correction, and condemned to six months' hard labor; and if he is again guilty, to a twelve months' punishment of a similar description. If the offence has been committed in public, such as at a fair, at an auction, &c., the fine is doubled; and if the offender has made his appearance in the church, the punishment is still more severe. Whoever is convicted of having induced another to intoxicate himself, is fined three dollars, which sum is doubled if the drunken person is a minor. An ecclesiastic who falls into this offence, loses his benefice; if it is a layman who occupies any considerable post, his functions are suspended, and perhaps he is dismissed. Drunkenness is never admitted as an excuse for any crime; and whoever dies while drunk, is buried ignominously, and deprived of the prayers of the church.

It is forbidden to give, and more explicitly to sell, any spiritous liquor to students, workmen, servants, apprentices, and private soldiers. Whoever is observed drunk in the streets, or making a noise in a tavern, is sure to be taken to prison, and detained until sober, without, however, on that account being exempt from the fines. Half of these fines goes to the informers (who are generally police officers) the other half to the poor. If the delinquent has no money he is kept in prison until some one pays for him, or until he has worked out his enlargement. Twice a year these ordinances are read aloud from the pulpit by the clergy: and every tavern keeper is bound under the penalty of a heavy fine, to have a copy of them hung up in the principal rooms of his house.—Ex. paper.

THE SEVENTIES.

We occasionally get information of the ordination of Seventies in various places upon the simple authority of one of the Presidents, or some other person. This should not be. The quorums are by that means getting filled with persons who do not do the duties of that ministry. This matter was much talked of at the recent Conference, and it is thought none should be ordained into the Seventies except by the concurrence of three of the Apostles and Presidents of the Seventies. And, when thus ordained, they should be immediately reported to the Clerk of the Seventies, that their names may be registered. And we may add that is not advisable or allowable to ordain men to the priesthood in any case, except there is reason to believe they will fill their vocations and callings faithfully. We have known many Elders ordained who have never magnified their calling. In such cases the priesthood becomes not a blessing, but a curse to them that have it, and especially a curse to the church.

☞ Pres. Strang left early on yesterday morning for Beaver Island. He expects to meet Pres. Adams, who left here on Monday on a short mission to Prairieville, at Milwaukee. They will hold a Conference on Beaver on the the 8th and 9th of Sept. One or both of them will probably attend the Conference to be held at Franklin, Mich., the middle of next month. From there they will proceed to the city of New York, for the purpose of attending the October Conference. Before they return they will visit the city of Washington, and all the large cities in the eastern States. We hope the saints wherever they go will be ready to salute them, and minister to their necessities. Four families also left here the same day for the purpose of locating themselves on the God-given possessions of the saints.

DRESS.

An eminent legal judge, and a pre-eminent judge of human nature, observes: "It is an observation I have always made, that dress has a moral effect upon the conduct of mankind. Let any gentleman find himself with a dirty pair of boots, old surtout, soiled neckcloth, and general negligence of dress, he will in all probability find a corresponding disposition to negligence of address. He may, en dishabille

FOREIGN.

ENGLAND AND IRELAND.—Parliament is to be prorogued on the 9th of August. During the week ending July 21st there were 339 deaths of Cholera reported in London, being more than double the number of the preceding week. Along the whole Southern Coast it is raging in a very malignant form, and the mortality is very great. At Liverpool the disease is rapidly increasing. Ireland continues to be exempt from the scourge. On the 12th of July a very serious riot took place between the Orangemen and Catholics in the county Down. The Orange party having celebrated the day at Fullimore, and being on their way home, while passing a defile called Dollit's Brae, found their path waylaid, all the passes and surrounding hills occupied by an immense number of Roman Catholics, provided with forks and firearms, and plainly contemplating a massacre. The Protestants, aided by a small party of police and military, stood upon their defence and succeeded in forcing their way through the pass after a short struggle, in which 40 or 50 persons are said to have been killed or wounded on both sides, much the greater proportion being of the Catholic body. Thirty-eight Ribbonmen had been taken prisoners. On Friday two medical gentlemen drove through the country round about the scene of action with the view of administering relief to those who were found, but they were refused admittance at every house where they called.

THINK.—Thought engenders thought. Place one idea upon paper—another follows it, and still another, until you have written a page. You cannot fathom your mind. There is a well of thought there which has no bottom. The more you draw from it the more clear and fruitful it will be. If you neglect to think yourself and use other people's thoughts—giving them utterance only—you will never know what you are capable of. At first your ideas may come out in lumps—homely and shapeless—but no matter, time and perseverance will arrange and polish them. Learn to think, and you will soon learn to write—the more you think, the better will you express your ideas.

NATIONAL HAPPINESS.

Neither industry nor science, nor machines, nor books can make a people happy. All these things are useful in their way, and the legislator ought to propagate and multiply them; but if contented with having developed the intellectual and terrestrial part of man, he neglects to educate the soul—that divine essence of humanity—instead of a happy people, he will see around him only an uneasy multitude, unbridled in its passions, and harrassed with the double want of reason and of knowing, of which the sublime instinct constitutes its punishment. You have directed it towards the earth, and it remains there in the midst of riches and of pleasures which consume it. Why do you not open for it the gates of heaven?—Everything which calms the heart, everything which aggrandizes humanity, comes from above. You wish for happiness, for power—it has been placed in heaven—and the wisest, if it be not also the most obedient to the commandments of God, can never be the happiest nation.

INTOXICATION.

The laws against intoxication are very severe and enforced with great rigor in Sweden. Whoever is seen drunk is fined, for the first offence, three dollars; for the second, six; for the third and fourth, a still larger sum, and is also deprived of the right of voting at elections, and of being appointed a representative. He is, besides, publicly exposed in the parish church on the following Sunday. If the same individual is found committing the like offence a fifth time, he is shut up in a house of correction, and condemned to six months' hard labor; and if he is again guilty, to a twelve months' punishment of a similar description. If the offence has been committed in public, such as at a fair, at an auction, &c., the fine is doubled; and if the offender has made his appearance in the church, the punishment is still more severe. Whoever is convicted of having induced another to intoxicate himself, is fined three dollars, which sum is doubled if the drunken person is a minor. An ecclesiastic who falls into this offence, loses his benefice; if it is a layman who occupies any considerable post, his functions are suspended, and perhaps he is dismissed. Drunkenness is never admitted as an excuse for any crime; and whoever dies while drunk, is buried ignominously, and deprived of the prayers of the church.

It is forbidden to give, and more explicitly to sell, any spiritous liquor to students, workmen, servants, apprentices, and private soldiers. Whoever is observed drunk in the streets, or making a noise in a tavern, is sure to be taken to prison, and detained until sober, without, however, on that account being exempt from the fines. Half of these fines goes to the informers (who are generally police officers) the other half to the poor. If the delinquent has no money he is kept in prison until some one pays for him, or until he has worked out his enlargement. Twice a year these ordinances are read aloud from the pulpit by the clergy: and every tavern keeper is bound under the penalty of a heavy fine, to have a copy of them hung up in the principal rooms of his house.—Ex. paper.

THE SEVENTIES.

We occasionally get information of the ordination of Seventies in various places upon the simple authority of one of the Presidents, or some other person. This should not be. The quorums are by that means getting filled with persons who do not do the duties of that ministry. This matter was much talked of at the recent Conference, and it is thought none should be ordained into the Seventies except by the concurrence of three of the Apostles and Presidents of the Seventies. And, when thus ordained, they should be immediately reported to the Clerk of the Seventies, that their names may be registered. And we may add that is not advisable or allowable to ordain men to the priesthood in any case, except there is reason to believe they will fill their vocations and callings faithfully. We have known many Elders ordained who have never magnified their calling. In such cases the priesthood becomes not a blessing, but a curse to them that have it, and especially a curse to the church.

☞ Pres. Strang left early on yesterday morning for Beaver Island. He expects to meet Pres. Adams, who left here on Monday on a short mission to Prairieville, at Milwaukee. They will hold a Conference on Beaver on the the 8th and 9th of Sept. One or both of them will probably attend the Conference to be held at Franklin, Mich., the middle of next month. From there they will proceed to the city of New York, for the purpose of attending the October Conference. Before they return they will visit the city of Washington, and all the large cities in the eastern States. We hope the saints wherever they go will be ready to salute them, and minister to their necessities. Four families also left here the same day for the purpose of locating themselves on the God-given possessions of the saints.

DRESS.

An eminent legal judge, and a pre-eminent judge of human nature, observes: "It is an observation I have always made, that dress has a moral effect upon the conduct of mankind. Let any gentleman find himself with a dirty pair of boots, old surtout, soiled neckcloth, and general negligence of dress, he will in all probability find a corresponding disposition to negligence of address. He may, en dishabille curse and swear, speak roughly, and think coarsely; but put the same man in full dress and he will feel himself quite another person. To use the language of a blackguard would then be out of character; he will talk smoothly, affect politeness—pique himself upon good manners, and respect the women; nor will the spell subside, until returning home, the old surtout, the heedless slippers, and other slovenly appendages, make him lose again his brief consciousness of being a gentleman."

EARLY MARRIAGES.

We are most decidedly in favor of early marriages, and we say to our readers, if you form a strong attachment to a virtuous female, marry early; even if in moderate circumstances, still we say marry, for it is better to be poor than wicked. Besides, the early marriage is made by the heart, the seat of all sincerity, and it has been poetically said that both in our life and love there is but one spring-time—violets and forget-me-nots bloom but once! A careful examination of criminal calendars in Europe has shown that the more men there are married, the fewer crimes there will be, for it is a fact, that marriage renders a man more virtuous and more wise. The father of a family is not willing to blush before his children! Then it is also true, that in the community a man gets a degree of respectability, from the fact of having a family. Who has not hushed his passion, when about to retort insolently to another, at the remembrance of his children? All things, in our humble experience and observation, lead us to believe that the best thing a man can do is to marry early.—Flag of the Union.

RIOT.

On the 14th ult., about ten o'clock at night, a disgraceful and serious riot took place, at the corner of tenth and south streets, in which pistols were fired and knives freely used. The streets of the immediate vicinity of the scene to-day, bear the evidence of the liberal use that was made of brickbats and other missiles. We understand that a party of young scoundrels, calling themselves "Stingers," who infest the corner of sixth and Fitzwater streets, marched from their rendezvous with drum and fife, and well armed, to the ground where the battle was fought, with the avowed object of provoking a collision with a fire company. The firemen, it is said, gave them a sound thrashing, although contending with strong odds as to numbers. The doings of this association of "Stingers"—one of the very worst organizations of rioters that have ever been banded together in the county of Philadelphia—are winked at in the most unblushing manner by the police authorities of Moyamensing.—Phil. Bull.

Correspondence of the Boston Atlas.

FROM FRANKFORT, GERMANY.

Frankfort, June 26th, 1849.

"The great drama of German Revolution may now be considered as closed. The assembly elected by the People, to found popular right against princely power, after struggling so long in vain to accomplish its task, has at last been dispersed by force of arms, and it will hardly find another spot in Germany on which to assemble again in safety. On the 17th instant the President of the Assembly received a note from the Wurtemburgh Ministry, forbidding any more sittings at Stuttgard. He called one, nevertheless, the next day, at three o'clock in the usual place. Long before that hour, however, troops were ordered there by the Government, who immediately destroyed the interior arrangement of the building, (which had been fitted up expressly for the Assembly,) and posted themselves around to prevent all entrance. At three o'clock the members of the Assembly, who had learned the measures taken by the Government, approached, notwithstanding, all in a body, three abreast, headed by the President, (Loewe,) on one side of whom walked Uhland, the great German poet, on the other the venerable Schott, father-in-law of Roemer, President of the Wurtemburgh Ministry.

"On being informed that entrance to the place of sitting was forbidden, the President began to protect, declaring as traitors to the country the perpetrators of this outrage on the representatives of the people, when the drums were ordered to beat, drowning his voice. As he still insisted on proceeding, the troops were ordered to advance with fixed bayonets. In the face of this the members stood firm. Uhland is said to have laid bare his breast, and called upon the soldiers to strike if they wished. The infantry refused to obey the order given, but a company of cavalry coming up at the moment, being commanded to charge, obeyed with drawn swords. The people around rushed to rescue the members, who seemed determined to be trampled under the horses' feet rather than retire. Many were in great danger, being thrown down by the horses; but, with the exception of one or two who were brutally struck by the soldiers with the flat of their swords, none were seriously injured.

"They then retired together to a hotel, where the next day they resolved to transfer their place of sitting to Carlsuhe, in Baden, meeting there the 25th, (yesterday,) but the defeat of the Badeners by the Prussians, which has just taken place not far from this town, will make it impossible to carry out this resolution; so that it is very doubtful if the German National Assembly, which has been for the year past the centre of so many hopes, ever comes together again, at least in sufficient number to give the shade of legality to its proceedings."

PHILOSOPHY OF LAW.

Law—is like fire, and those who meddle with it may chance to "burn their fingers."

Law—is like a pocket with a hole in it; and those who therein risk their money, are very like to lose it.

Law—is like a lancet, dangerous in the hands of the ignorant; doubtful, even in the hands of an adept.

Law—is like a sieve; you may see through it, but will be considerably reduced before you can get through it.

Law—is like prussic acid; a dangerous remedy, and the smallest dose of it is generally sufficient.

Law—is like justice, even as a copper gilt is like gold, and the comparative worth of the two is about the same.

Law—is like a razor, which requires a "strong back," keenness, and an excellent temper.

Law—is like a window of stained glass, giving its own peculiar tint and hue to the bright rays of truth, which shine through it.

☞ It does not depend upon one's self to prevent being spoken ill of; it is only in our own power that it is not done deservedly.

☞ It is said there are 2,500 houses for rent in Cincinnati, the tenants having fled from the cholera. It is estimated that the city has lost about 1,300 inhabitants from this cause, and four or five times that number by the ravages of the cholera.

MARRIED,

In Lockport, N. Y., on the 24th of June, by Elder H. P. Brown, of Wisconsin, Mr. W. W. DeLaMater to Miss Melinda Gibbs, of the former place.

Also by the same in Lewiston, on the 21st of July, Mr. Jesse Dennis to Mrs. Ann Miller, both of the above place.

curse and swear, speak roughly, and think coarsely; but put the same man in full dress and he will feel himself quite another person. To use the language of a blackguard would then be out of character; he will talk smoothly, affect politeness—pique himself upon good manners, and respect the women; nor will the spell subside, until returning home, the old surtout, the heedless slippers, and other slovenly appendages, make him lose again his brief consciousness of being a gentleman."

EARLY MARRIAGES.

We are most decidedly in favor of early marriages, and we say to our readers, if you form a strong attachment to a virtuous female, marry early; even if in moderate circumstances, still we say marry, for it is better to be poor than wicked. Besides, the early marriage is made by the heart, the seat of all sincerity, and it has been poetically said that both in our life and love there is but one spring-time—violets and forget-me-nots bloom but once! A careful examination of criminal calendars in Europe has shown that the more men there are married, the fewer crimes there will be, for it is a fact, that marriage renders a man more virtuous and more wise. The father of a family is not willing to blush before his children! Then it is also true, that in the community a man gets a degree of respectability, from the fact of having a family. Who has not hushed his passion, when about to retort insolently to another, at the remembrance of his children? All things, in our humble experience and observation, lead us to believe that the best thing a man can do is to marry early.—Flag of the Union.

RIOT.

On the 14th ult., about ten o'clock at night, a disgraceful and serious riot took place, at the corner of tenth and south streets, in which pistols were fired and knives freely used. The streets of the immediate vicinity of the scene to-day, bear the evidence of the liberal use that was made of brickbats and other missiles. We understand that a party of young scoundrels, calling themselves "Stingers," who infest the corner of sixth and Fitzwater streets, marched from their rendezvous with drum and fife, and well armed, to the ground where the battle was fought, with the avowed object of provoking a collision with a fire company. The firemen, it is said, gave them a sound thrashing, although contending with strong odds as to numbers. The doings of this association of "Stingers"—one of the very worst organizations of rioters that have ever been banded together in the county of Philadelphia—are winked at in the most unblushing manner by the police authorities of Moyamensing.—Phil. Bull.

Correspondence of the Boston Atlas.

FROM FRANKFORT, GERMANY.

Frankfort, June 26th, 1849.

"The great drama of German Revolution may now be considered as closed. The assembly elected by the People, to found popular right against princely power, after struggling so long in vain to accomplish its task, has at last been dispersed by force of arms, and it will hardly find another spot in Germany on which to assemble again in safety. On the 17th instant the President of the Assembly received a note from the Wurtemburgh Ministry, forbidding any more sittings at Stuttgard. He called one, nevertheless, the next day, at three o'clock in the usual place. Long before that hour, however, troops were ordered there by the Government, who immediately destroyed the interior arrangement of the building, (which had been fitted up expressly for the Assembly,) and posted themselves around to prevent all entrance. At three o'clock the members of the Assembly, who had learned the measures taken by the Government, approached, notwithstanding, all in a body, three abreast, headed by the President, (Loewe,) on one side of whom walked Uhland, the great German poet, on the other the venerable Schott, father-in-law of Roemer, President of the Wurtemburgh Ministry.

"On being informed that entrance to the place of sitting was forbidden, the President began to protect, declaring as traitors to the country the perpetrators of this outrage on the representatives of the people, when the drums were ordered to beat, drowning his voice. As he still insisted on proceeding, the troops were ordered to advance with fixed bayonets. In the face of this the members stood firm. Uhland is said to have laid bare his breast, and called upon the soldiers to strike if they wished. The infantry refused to obey the order given, but a company of cavalry coming up at the moment, being commanded to charge, obeyed with drawn swords. The people around rushed to rescue the members, who seemed determined to be trampled under the horses' feet rather than retire. Many were in great danger, being thrown down by the horses; but, with the exception of one or two who were brutally struck by the soldiers with the flat of their swords, none were seriously injured.

"They then retired together to a hotel, where the next day they resolved to transfer their place of sitting to Carlsuhe, in Baden, meeting there the 25th, (yesterday,) but the defeat of the Badeners by the Prussians, which has just taken place not far from this town, will make it impossible to carry out this resolution; so that it is very doubtful if the German National Assembly, which has been for the year past the centre of so many hopes, ever comes together again, at least in sufficient number to give the shade of legality to its proceedings."

PHILOSOPHY OF LAW.

Law—is like fire, and those who meddle with it may chance to "burn their fingers."

Law—is like a pocket with a hole in it; and those who therein risk their money, are very like to lose it.

Law—is like a lancet, dangerous in the hands of the ignorant: doubtful, even in the hands of an adept.

Law—is like a sieve; you may see through it, but will be considerably reduced before you can get through it.

Law—is like prussic acid; a dangerous remedy, and the smallest dose of it is generally sufficient.

Law—is like justice, even as a copper gilt is like gold, and the comparative worth of the two is about the same.

Law—is like a razor, which requires a "strong back," keenness, and an excellent temper.

Law—is like a window of stained glass, giving its own peculiar tint and hue to the bright rays of truth, which shine through it.

☞ It does not depend upon one's self to prevent being spoken ill of; it is only in our own power that it is not done deservedly.

☞ It is said there are 2,500 houses for rent in Cincinnati, the tenants having fled from the cholera. It is estimated that the city has lost about 1,300 inhabitants from this cause, and four or five times that number by the ravages of the cholera.

MARRIED,

In Lockport, N. Y., on the 24th of June, by Elder H. P. Brown, of Wisconsin, Mr. W. W. DeLaMater to Miss Merinda Gibbs, of the former place.

Also by the same in Lewiston, on the 31st of July, Mr. Jesse Dennis to Mrs. Ann Miller, both of the above place.

THE DREAM OF PILATE'S WIFE.

Matt. xxvii. 19.

"It was not sleep that bound my sight,
Upon that well remembered night;
It was not fancy's fitful power,
Beguiled me in that solemn hour:
But o'er the vision of my soul
The mystic Future seemed to roll;
And in the deep prophetic trance,
Revealed its treasures to my glance.

"Before my wandering eyes there stood
A vast, a countless multitude;
The hoary sire, the prattling child,
The mother and the maiden mild,
The gladsome youth, and man of care—
All tribes, all ages mingled there;
And all, where'er I turned to see,
In humble silence bent the knee.

"Still o'er the crowded scene I gazed;
Against the lurid eastern sky
I saw the shameful Cross upraised;
I saw the sufferer doomed to die.
'Twas He whom late, with sorrowing mien,
In Salem's streets I oft had seen;
And now, in blood and agony,
He turned a dying look on me.

"Then softly from that gathering throng
Arose the sound of solemn song;
And while I caught the swelling lay,
And myriad voices seemed to say:
'And we believe in Him that died,
'By Pontius Pilate crucified—
'That He shall come, when time has fled,
'To judge the living and the dead.'

"I awoke;—thou wast not by my side;
I heard a loud exulting cry;
I heard the scornful priests deride,
The elders murmur, 'Crucify!'
O Pilate! hadst thou marked my prayer,
That guiltless blood to shield and spare,
The deed of horror would not be
A stain to thine—a curse to thee!

"Our scenes of early love are past;
Our youthful spring is withered all,
Afar from Rome our lot is cast,*
Beneath the sunny skies of Gaul;
The thoughts that memory treasures yet
Of other days, begin to flee;
But never shall my heart forget
The Crucified of Galilee."

* Pontius Pilate died in exile at Vienna, a small town near Lyons, in France.

Parma, Mich., August 12th, 1849.

Dear James:—I write to you at this time under circumstances most melancholy. The day after you left here I started for Lapeer, found Bro. Hickey and family well, preached and visited the church in that place until Thursday morning, though cold and rainy. I felt moved to go, and went trusting in God that all would be well. Bro. Hickey accompanied me as far as Pontiac. I tarried there all night, and I must here tell you why I could no longer stay at Lapeer. At 3 o'clock on Friday morning I was in the spirit, whether a sleep or awake I cannot tell. I saw my sister, Bro. Perry's wife, stand before the bed very pale and ghastly. She stretched out her hand and laid it upon my forehead. It was cold as the death chill could make it. Her eyes fixed on mine, she said distinctly, Samuel, why don't you come? I was suddenly roused at the voice, and could not think it other than real. I soon got up and started for her place of residence, altho' about 150 miles distant. I reached there before eleven the same night. As I approached the yard where I was to see my only natural sister on earth, I was apprised by what I saw that she was dead. I entered the house, found several persons there, and was informed that Sophronia Perry was dead. I entered the room where she had been locked in the icy arms of death nearly five hours. My feelings I shall not attempt to describe. She died Aug. 10th, strong in the faith of the everlasing gospel. And the feelings of my heart when parting with that dear one are but expressed in these lines:—

"O thanks to the author of life, I may say,
My treasures and joys are above,
And hope to my soul can a promise display
To meet there the friends whom I love.
Then why do I weep? though on earth we must part,
Though death must dissever the chain
That binds us together united in heart,
In glory we'll link them again."

An affectionate husband, two small though promising sons, four brothers, and a large circle of near and dear friends are left to mourn the loss of one of the best of God's creatures—

For she we lost was lovely, and we loved
Her much: fresh in our memory, as fresh
As yesterday will ever be the day she died—
In healthy merriment—when tidings came,
A child was born; and tidings came again
That she who gave it birth was sick to death.
So swift trod sorrow on the heels of joy.
We gathered round her bed, and bent our knees
In fervent suplication to the Throne
Of mercy; and perfumed our prayers with sighs
Sincere, and penitential tears, and looks
Of self-abasement; but we sought to stay
An angel on earth; a spirit ripe
For heaven; and mercy, in her love, refused;
Most merciful, as oft, when seeming least,
Most gracious when she seems the most to frown.

SAMUEL GRAHAM.

CONFERENCES.

Beaver Island.—At Beaver Island the 8th and 9th Sept. next.

Franklin, Mich.—The Conference heretofore appointed to be held at Franklin, Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th August, will be held at that place the 14th, 15th and 16th Sept. next.

New York City.—There will be a Conference held in the city of New York the 5th, 6th and 7th of Oct. next. It is expected that a majority of both the First Presidency and the Twelve will attend these Conferences. The place of holding the Conference in the city of New York will be duly noticed in the New York Herald and New York Sun previous to the time of meeting.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS,
WILLIAM MARKS,
} Presidents.

THE DREAM OF PILATE'S WIFE.

Matt. xxvii. 19.

"It was not sleep that bound my sight,
Upon that well remembered night:
It was not fancy's fitful power,
Beguiled me in that solemn hour:
But o'er the vision of my soul
The mystic Future seemed to roll:
And in the deep prophetic trance,
Revealed its treasures to my glance.

"Before my wandering eyes there stood
A vast, a countless multitude;
The hoary sire, the prattling child,
The mother and the maiden mild,
The gladsome youth, and man of care—
All tribes, all ages mingled there;
And all, where'er I turned to see,
In humble silence bent the knee.

"Still o'er the crowded scene I gazed
Against the lurid eastern sky
I saw the shameful Cross upraised:
I saw the sufferer doomed to die.
'Twas He whom late, with sorrowing mien
In Salem's streets I oft had seen:
And now, in blood and agony,
He turned a dying look on me.

"Then softly from that gathering throng
Arose the sound of solemn song:
And while I caught the swelling lay,
And myriad voices seemed to say:
'And we believe in Him that died,
By Pontius Pilate crucified—
That He shall come, when time has flee
To judge the living and the dead.'

"I awoke;—thou wast not by my side:
I heard a loud exulting cry;
I heard the scornful priests deride,
The elders murmur, 'Crucify!'
O Pilate! hadst thou marked my prayer,
That guiltless blood to shield and spare,
The deed of horror would not be
A stain to thine—a curse to thee!

"Our scenes of early love are past
Our youthful spring is withered all
Afar from Rome our lot is cast,*
Beneath the sunny skies of Gaul:
The thoughts that memory treasures yet
Of other days, begin to flee:
But never shall my heart forget
The Crucified of Galilee."

* Pontius Pilate died in exile at Vienna, a small town near Lyons, in France.

Parma, Mich., August 12th, 1849.

DEAR JAMES:—I write to you at this time under circumstances most melancholy. The day after you left here I started for Lapeer, found Bro. Hickey and family well, preached and visited the church in that place until Thursday morning, though cold and rainy. I felt moved to go, and went trusting in God that all would be well. Bro. Hickey accompanied me as far as Pontiac. I tarried there all night, and I must here tell you why I could no longer stay at Lapeer. At 3 o'clock on Friday morning I was in the spirit, whether a asleep or awake I cannot tell. I saw my sister, Bro. Perry's wife, stand before the bed very pale and ghastly. She stretched out her hand and laid it upon my forehead. It was cold as the death chill could make it. Her eyes fixed on mine, she said distinctly, Samuel, why don't you come! I was suddenly roused at the voice, and could not think it other than real. I soon got up and started for her place of residence, altho' about 150 miles distant. I reached there before eleven the same night. As I approached the yard where I was to see my only natural sister on earth, I was apprised by what I saw that she was dead. I entered the house, found several persons there, and was informed that Sophronia Perry was dead. I entered the room where she had been locked in the icy arms of death nearly five hours. My feelings I shall not attempt to describe. She died Aug. 10th, strong in the faith of the everlasing gospel. And the feelings of my heart when parting with that dear one are but expressed in these lines:—

"O thanks to the author of life, I may say,
My treasures and joys are above.
And hope to my soul can a promise display
To meet there the friends whom I love.
Then why do I weep? though on earth we must part,
Though death must dissever the chain
That binds us together united in heart,
In glory we'll link them again."

An affectionate husband, two small though promising sons, four brothers, and a large circle of near and dear friends are left to mourn the loss of one of the best of God's creatures—

For she we lost was lovely, and we loved
Her much: fresh in our memory, as fresh
As yesterday will ever be the day she died—
In healthy merriment—when tidings came,
A child was born; and tidings came again
That she who gave it birth was sick to death.
So swift trod sorrow on the heels of joy.
We gathered round her bed, and bent our knees
In fervent suplication to the Throne
Of mercy; and perfumed our prayers with sighs
Sincere, and penitential tears, and looks
Of self-abasement; but we sought to stay
An angel on earth; a spirit ripe
For heaven; and mercy, in her love, refused:
Most merciful, as oft, when seeming least,
Most gracious when she seems the most to frown.

SAMUEL GRAHAM.

CONFERENCES.

BEAVER ISLAND.—At Beaver Island the 8th and 9th Sept. next.

FRANKLIN, MICH.—The Conference heretofore appointed to be held at Franklin, Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th August, will be held at that place the 14th, 15th and 16th Sept. next.

NEW YORK CITY.—There will be a Conference held in the city of New York the 5th, 6th and 7th of Oct. next. It is expected that a majority of both the First Presidency and the Twelve will attend these Conferences. The place of holding the Conference in the city of New York will be duly noticed in the New York Herald and New York Sun previous to the time of meeting.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS,
WILLIAM MARKS,
} PRESIDENTS.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 25.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, SEPT. 6, 1849. [WHOLE No. 141.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

Voree, Wis., August 27th, 1849.

TO THE SAINTS SCATTERED ABROAD, GREETING,—DEAR BRETHREN:—You no doubt will expect me to say a few words about Voree, the Temple, the strong Tower of Zion, the Hill of Promise, and the saints who are here, as this is my first visit to this place.—Voree is a beautiful place, and quite healthy for this country. Every thing here is peace, union and truth, so far as the saints are concerned. We have just held one of the best Conferences that I have ever attended since I belonged to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. It lasted three days. Every thing went off in harmony and good order. God poured his spirit out upon us in a most abundant manner, and all left the Conference rejoicing with that joy that is unspeakable and full of glory.

The Temple is going up steadily and constantly, and a most beautiful structure it will be when finished. I worked on it a few days. It covers 2½ acres of ground, has twelve towers, and the great hall two hundred feet square in the centre, the entire walls are eight feet through, the floors and roofs are to be marble, and when finished it will be the grandest building in the world. May God help the saints to send up their means, that the day may soon come that we may receive our endowment and the fulness of the priesthood. The strong Tower of Zion is being erected on the Hill of Promise, the walls of which are three or four feet thick, which, when finished, is for the carrying out of the Order of Enoch in all its beauty and fulness. It may be truly said that in fulfillment of the revelation God has given his people peace and rest at Voree, and they are waxing fat and pleasant in the presence of their enemies. Every saint of God throughout the world can see that the word of the Lord given through his servant Joseph in the letter of the appointment of James has been literally fulfilled, and God has now given them a better place to gather in, even the Islands in the great lakes, where they can have land without money and without price—have them because God has said go there and possess them, and there we can teach the Lamanites or the sons of Joseph the fulness of the everlasting gospel. There we can keep the law of Zion. There we can build up the kingdom of God, and get our first dominion. There we can hold land without the mark of the beast—hold it by virtue of the law of the God of heaven.

We can take possession of it without fighting for it, as the children of Israel had to when they went to inherit the land of Canaan. Therefore I say unto the saints in all the world, be of good cheer, for God is with us to give us peace, dominion and power from this time forth. Let all the saints that can, particularly the Elders in the east and south, attend the sixth of October Conference at New York, as there will be many great and glorious things laid before them at that time. In much haste I remain your friend and brother in the everlasting covenant, GEORGE J. ADAMS.

For the Gospel Herald.

BRIGHAMISM.

I have watched the movements of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in all her wanderings, from her infantile state up to the present time. Her trials and afflictions have been mine, her joys and rejoicings have also been mine. And when she was firmly settled on the plains of Illinois, how did our hearts rejoice in God and in the work of his hands. Then did we look forward with fond anticipation and gladsome hearts to the time when the saints of God could enjoy "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Then did the faithful saints of God plant vineyards, expecting to eat the fruit thereof, and build houses, expecting to enjoy them, but soon the ruthless hand of oppression laid its firm and iron grasp on the prophet of God, and he, like all other faithful prophets of God, sealed his ministry and prophetical office with his own blood, and that too in a so-called christian land, and in a country where their constitution guaranties the privilege of "worshiping God according to the dictates of their own consciences, without molestation" from vile oppressors. The prophet being dead, the honest and faithful saints of God expected to hear a new prophet of God proclaimed as the successor to Joseph. The whole world were continually asking the saints, "who would be their next prophet." For proof of this I refer you to the Times and Seasons, under date of September 2d, 1844, page 632. Brigham Young says: "Great excitement prevails throughout the world to know who shall be the successor of Joseph Smith. In reply we say, be patient, be patient a little, till the proper time comes, and we will tell you all. Great wheels move slow. At present we can say that a special Conference of the church was held in Nauvoo on the 8th ult., and it was carried without a dissenting vote that the Twelve should preside over the whole church, and when any alteration in the Presidency shall be required seasonable notice will be given, and the Elders abroad will best exhibit their wisdom to all men by remaining silent on those things they are ignorant of." Here then is the scheme of Brigham and some of the rest of the Twelve to steal a march on the saints, set up their false pretensions to the Presidency of the church by calling a special Conference of the saints of Nauvoo and having them vote the Twelve to be the Presidents over the whole church, to dictate all the affairs of the same in all the world. Witness their hypocrisy as you trace their career along a little farther.

Brigham knowing that Joseph had appointed J. J. Strang to be his successor according to the law of God, orders the following notice to be given: "TO THE SAINTS,—Whereas Elder James J. Strang and Aaron Smith have been circulating a revelation (falsely called) purporting to have been received by Joseph Smith on the 18th of June, 1844, therefore, the said James J. Strang and Aaron Smith are cut off from the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, this 26th day of August, 1844. By order of the Council of the Twelve. W. Richards, Clerk." Times and Seasons, page 637. Thus prepared to prejudice the minds of the honest saints against Bro. Strang's claim to the Presidency of the church, he comes out in his Apos-

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 25.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, SEPT. 6, 1849. [WHOLE No. 141.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

Voree, Wis., August 27th, 1849.

TO THE SAINTS SCATTERED ABROAD, GREETING,—DEAR BRETHREN:—You no doubt will expect me to say a few words about Voree, the Temple, the strong Tower of Zion, the Hill of Promise, and the saints who are here, as this is my first visit to this place.—Voree is a beautiful place, and quite healthy for this country. Every thing here is peace, union and truth, so far as the saints are concerned. We have just held one of the best Conferences that I have ever attended since I belonged to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. It lasted three days. Every thing went off in harmony and good order. God poured his spirit out upon us in a most abundant manner, and all left the Conference rejoicing with that joy that is unspeakable and full of glory.

The Temple is going up steadily and constantly, and a most beautiful structure it will be when finished. I worked on it a few days. It covers 2½ acres of ground, has twelve towers, and the great hall two hundred feet square in the centre, the entire walls are eight feet through, the floors and roofs are to be marble, and when finished it will be the grandest building in the world. May God help the saints to send up their means, that the day may soon come that we may receive our endowment and the fulness of the priesthood. The strong Tower of Zion is being erected on the Hill of Promise, the walls of which are three or four feet thick, which, when finished, is for the carrying out of the Order of Enoch in all its beauty and fulness. It may be truly said that in fulfillment of the revelation God has given his people peace and rest at Voree, and they are waxing fat and pleasant in the presence of their enemies. Every saint of God throughout the world can see that the word of the Lord given through his servant Joseph in the letter of the appointment of James has been literally fulfilled, and God has now given them a better place to gather in, even the Islands in the great lakes, where they can have land without money and without price—have them because God has said go there and possess them, and there we can teach the Lamanites or the sons of Joseph the fulness of the everlasting gospel. There we can keep the law of Zion. There we can build up the kingdom of God, and get our first dominion. There we can hold land without the mark of the beast—hold it by virtue of the law of the God of heaven.

We can take possession of it without fighting for it, as the children of Israel had to when they went to inherit the land of Canaan. Therefore I say unto the saints in all the world, be of good cheer, for God is with us to give us peace, dominion and power from this time forth. Let all the saints that can, particularly the Elders in the east and south, attend the sixth of October Conference at New York, as there will be many great and glorious things laid before them at that time. In much haste I remain your friend and brother in the everlasting covenant, GEORGE J. ADAMS.

For the Gospel Herald.

BRIGHAMISM.

I have watched the movements of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in all her wanderings, from her infantile state up to the present time. Her trials and afflictions have been mine, her joys and rejoicings have also been mine. And when she was firmly settled on the plains of Illinois, how did our hearts rejoice in God and in the work of his hands. Then did we look forward with fond anticipation and gladsome hearts to the time when the saints of God could enjoy "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Then did the faithful saints of God plant vineyards, expecting to eat the fruit thereof, and build houses, expecting to enjoy them, but soon the ruthless hand of oppression laid its firm and iron grasp on the prophet of God, and he, like all other faithful prophets of God, sealed his ministry and prophetical office with his own blood, and that too in a so-called christian land, and in a country where their constitution guaranties the privilege of "worshiping God according to the dictates of their own consciences, without molestation" from vile oppressors. The prophet being dead, the honest and faithful saints of God expected to hear a new prophet of God proclaimed as the successor to Joseph. The whole world were continually asking the saints, "who would be their next prophet." For proof of this I refer you to the Times and Seasons, under date of September 2d, 1844, page 632. Brigham Young says: "Great excitement prevails throughout the world to know who shall be the successor of Joseph Smith. In reply we say, be patient, be patient a little, till the proper time comes, and we will tell you all. Great wheels move slow. At present we can say that a special Conference of the church was held in Nauvoo on the 8th ult., and it was carried without a dissenting vote that the Twelve should preside over the whole church, and when any alteration in the Presidency shall be required seasonable notice will be given, and the Elders abroad will best exhibit their wisdom to all men by remaining silent on those things they are ignorant of." Here then is the scheme of Brigham and some of the rest of the Twelve to steal a march on the saints, set up their false pretensions to the Presidency of the church by calling a special Conference of the saints of Nauvoo and having them vote the Twelve to be the Presidents over the whole church, to dictate all the affairs of the same in all the world. Witness their hypocrisy as you trace their career along a little farther.

Brigham knowing that Joseph had appointed J. J. Strang to be his successor according to the law of God, orders the following notice to be given: "TO THE SAINTS,—Whereas Elder James J. Strang and Aaron Smith have been circulating a revelation (falsely called) purporting to have been received by Joseph Smith on the 18th of June, 1844, therefore, the said James J. Strang and Aaron Smith are cut off from the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, this 26th day of August, 1844. By order of the Council of the Twelve. W. Richards, Clerk." Times and Seasons, page 637. Thus prepared to prejudice the minds of the honest saints against Bro. Strang's claim to the Presidency of the church, he comes out in his Apostolic Epistle on the 15th of the same month, and says: "BELOVED BRETHEN,—You are now without a prophet present with you in the flesh to guide you, but you are not without Apostles who hold the keys of power to seal on earth that which shall be sealed in heaven, and to preside over all the affairs of the church in all the world; being still under the direction of the same God, and being dictated by the same spirit, having the same manifestations of the Holy Ghost to dictate all the affairs of the church in all the world, (which Doctrine and Covenants says they should do under the direction of the Presidency of the church, agreeably to the institution of heaven, Doc. and Cov. Sec. iii. Par. 12,) to build up the kingdom upon the foundation that the prophet Joseph has laid." And the foundation that he lald was the President of the church, who is also the President of the Council as appointed by revelation, and not by the unanimous vote of an especial Conference, and the President's two Counselors were appointed in the same way that he himself was appointed. Doc. and Cov. sec. v. par. 6.

Again, Brigham says: "Let no man presume for a moment that his (Joseph's) place will be filled by another; for, remember, he stands in his own place, and always will; and the Twelve Apostles of this dispensation stand in their own place, and always will, both in time and in eternity, to minister (under the direction of the Presidency of the church, agreeably to the institution of heaven, D. & C. sec. iii. par. 12) and preside and regulate the affairs of the whole church." And conseqnently the Seventies stand in their own place, and always will. Poor soul, to deceive himself in the way he has, and so many honest saints of God to draw them away from the true fold of God. Now instead of the Twelve's standing in their own place, they have got out of their place, and instead of the President of the church being appointed by revelation according to the law of God, (D. & C. sec. v. par. 6,) they have appointed Brigham by the vote of confidence, and ordained him by the inferior grade of the priesthood, instead of the greatest order. Verily, they are getting as wise as the rest of the sectarian world. The higher order of priesthood is conferred by the smaller or lower order. Yours for truth,

H. P. BROWN.

THE GOSPEL OF CHRIST.

"The gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation." It causes men to receive of that spirit which enlarges the understanding so that they can speak with unknown tongues, heal the sick, raise the dead, and to prophecy. In fact the gospel of Christ always carries with it light, which light is truth, and causes men to advance in the knowledge of God, and also in the knowledge of men; for true religion is a science as perfect as mathematics or any other science. Therefore without working according to the rule laid down in the word of God it is as impossible to understand the gospel of Christ as it is to work mathematics correctly without obeying the laws of that science. If we expect to progress in the science of true religion we must obey the laws of the same as laid down in the scriptures.

Christ said to his disciples, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Mark xvi. 15, 16, 17, 18. There certainly is no promise of these signs or any other blessing, except through obedience to the direction that Christ gave to his disciples. Christ does not tell every one who imagines that he can perform the ordinance of baptism that it will be valid, and that these signs shall follow them, but speaking particularly to his disciples, "go ye," referring to them alone. Therefore any man baptizing in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, without authority from God, is breaking the third commandment, which says, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain, for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain."

I would ask, where do the ministers that pretend to preach the gospel of Christ in this generation get their authority? If from man, then it is not valid. If from God, then they must acknowledge that God gives revelations in these days, as well as in the days of Christ and his Apostle. The next ordinance after baptism is the laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Ghost. For we find that when the Apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John, "who, when they had come down, prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Ghost. Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost." Acts viii. 15, 17. We also find that Paul, while at Ephesus, laid his hands on certain ones that had been baptized, and the Holy Ghost came on them, and they spake with tongues and prophecied. Acts xix. 6. We will now see how others were called to preach besides the twelve Apostles. Paul, while writing to the Hebrews, says: "And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron." Heb. v. 4. From the above quotation it certainly follows that whoever pretends to act in the name of God without being called as was Aaron, is acting upon usurped authority. Let every professed minister of the gospel consider well with what authority he acts.

A. W. P.

Franklin, Mich., Aug. 24th, 1849.

BRO. COOPER:—It having been some time since I saw you last I take this opportunity of writing to you and to your readers, if you see fit to insert it in the Herald. I can tell you in the first place that after I left you last June I returned to the Island and stopped till after the July Conference, and then, according to the direction of the Presidency, I went forth into the vineyard of the Lord. I have been to Cleveland, Kirtland, and Ashtabula Co., and have visited the brethren and held meetings where I could get an opportunity, but have not found but a few who are willing to acknowledge the order under President Strang. You may guess what kind of a church I found in Kirtland. You know that some three years ago there was a song got up in Voree about Aaron's Calf, which made considerable of a stir in that vicinity, and in fact it bleated so much like a sheep that a great many that could not see very well thought it really was a sheep, and they began to rally around, and got quite a herd. You know that there was one Mc. they got for a shepherd. So they thought they had got every thing prepared, and Mc. started off to Kirtland with a few of the biggest, bleating all the time so much like sheep that those in Kirtland after a short time generally thought that the apparition of Joseph had come, so they rallied around, and Mc. got to be the chief shepherd there.

But let me tell you that as the thing grew older and its hair began to stick up, and its hoofs and horns grew out wonderfully, and its bellowing became louder, they began to see that it was not a sheep, at least all but a few. But no more of this. Suffice it to say there are a few who believe that James is the chief shepherd of the flock. But to return to my mission. I am now in Franklin, Oakland Co., Mich., and intend to stay in this State till October, if the Lord will. I find that the people are as willing to hear the gospel now as ever, and I desire the faith and confidence of the saints that I may escape the destroyer, and be instrumental in the hands of God in winning some souls into his kingdom; for I can say that my heart's desire is for the welfare of Zion and the final conquest and tolic Epistle on the 15th of the same month, and says: "BELOVED BRETHEN.—You are now without a prophet present with you in the flesh to guide you, but you are not without Apostles who hold the keys of power to seal on earth that which shall be sealed in heaven, and to preside over all the affairs of the church in all the world; being still under the direction of the same God, and being dictated by the same spirit, having the same manifestations of the Holy Ghost to dictate all the affairs of the church in all the world, (which Doctrine and Covenants says they should do under the direction of the Presidency of the church, agreeably to the institution of heaven. Doc. and Cov. Sec. iii. Par. 12.) to build up the kingdom upon the foundation that the prophet Joseph has laid." And the foundation that he laid was the President of the church, who is also the President of the Council as appointed by revelation, and not by the unanimous vote of an especial Conference, and the President's two Counselors were appointed in the same way that he himself was appointed. Doc. and Cov. sec. v. par. 6.

Again, Brigham says: "Let no man presume for a moment that his (Joseph's) place will be filled by another; for, remember, he stands in his own place, and always will; and the Twelve Apostles of this dispensation stand in their own place, and always will, both in time and in eternity, to minister (under the direction of the Presidency of the church, agreeably to the institution of heaven. D. & C. sec. iii. par. 12) and preside and regulate the affairs of the whole church." And consequently the Seventies stand in their own place, and always will. Poor soul, to deceive himself in the way he has, and so many honest saints of God to draw them away from the true fold of God. Now instead of the Twelve's standing in their own place, they have got out of their place, and instead of the President of the church being appointed by revelation according to the law of God, (D. & C. sec. v. par. 6,) they have appointed Brigham by the vote of confidence, and ordained him by the inferior grade of the priesthood, instead of the greatest order. Verily, they are getting as wise as the rest of the sectarian world. The higher order of priesthood is conferred by the smaller or lower order. Yours for truth.

H. P. BROWN.

THE GOSPEL OF CHRIST.

"The gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation." It causes men to receive of that spirit which enlarges the understanding so that they can speak with unknown tongues, heal the sick, raise the dead, and to prophecy. In fact the gospel of Christ always carries with it light, which light is truth, and causes men to advance in the knowledge of God, and also in the knowledge of men; for true religion is a science as perfect as mathematics or any other science. Therefore without working according to the rule laid down in the word of God it is as impossible to understand the gospel of Christ as it is to work mathematics correctly without obeying the laws of that science. If we expect to progress in the science of true religion we must obey the laws of the same as laid down in the scriptures.

Christ said to his disciples, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Mark xvi. 15, 16, 17, 18. There certainly is no promise of these signs or any other blessing, except through obedience to the direction that Christ gave to his disciples. Christ does not tell every one who imagines that he can perform the ordinance of baptism that it will be valid, and that these signs shall follow them, but speaking particularly to his disciples, "go ye," referring to them alone. Therefore any man baptizing in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, without authority from God, is breaking the third commandment, which says, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain, for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain."

I would ask, where do the ministers that pretend to preach the gospel of Christ in this generation get their authority? If from man, then it is not valid. If from God, then they must acknowledge that God gives revelations in these days, as well as in the days of Christ and his Apostle. The next ordinance after baptism is the laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Ghost. For we find that when the Apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John, "who, when they had come down, prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Ghost. Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost." Acts viii. 15, 17. We also find that Paul, while at Ephesus, laid his hands on certain ones that had been baptized, and the Holy Ghost came on them, and they spake with tongues and prophecied. Acts xix. 6. We will now see how others were called to preach besides the twelve Apostles. Paul, while writing to the Hebrews, says: "And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron." Heb. v. 4. From the above quotation it certainly follows that whoever pretends to act in the name of God without being called as was Aaron, is acting upon usurped authority. Let every professed minister of the gospel consider well with what authority he acts.

A. W. P.

Franklin, Mich., Aug. 24th, 1849.

BRO. COOPER:—It having been some time since I saw you last I take this opportunity of writing to you and to your readers, if you see fit to insert it in the Herald. I can tell you in the first place that after I left you last June I returned to the Island and stopped till after the July Conference, and then, according to the direction of the Presidency, I went forth into the vineyard of the Lord. I have been to Cleveland, Kirtland, and Ashtabula Co., and have visited the brethren and held meetings where I could get an opportunity, but have not found but a few who are willing to acknowledge the order under President Strang. You may guess what kind of a church I found in Kirtland. You know that some three years ago there was a song got up in Voree about Aaron's Calf, which made considerable of a stir in that vicinity, and in fact it bleated so much like a sheep that a great many that could not see very well thought it really was a sheep, and they began to rally around, and got quite a herd. You know that there was one Mc. they got for a shepherd. So they thought they had got every thing prepared, and Mc. started off to Kirtland with a few of the biggest, bleating all the time so much like sheep that those in Kirtland after a short time generally thought that the apparition of Joseph had come, so they rallied around, and Mc. got to be the chief shepherd there.

But let me tell you that as the thing grew older and its hair began to stick up, and its hoofs and horns grew out wonderfully, and its bellowing became louder, they began to see that it was not a sheep, at least all but a few. But no more of this. Suffice it to say there are a few who believe that James is the chief shepherd of the flock. But to return to my mission. I am now in Franklin, Oakland Co., Mich., and intend to stay in this State till October, if the Lord will. I find that the people are as willing to hear the gospel now as ever, and I desire the faith and confidence of the saints that I may escape the destroyer, and be instrumental in the hands of God in winning some souls into his kingdom; for I can say that my heart's desire is for the welfare of Zion and the final conquest and redemption of the same. And I know in order for this to be accomplished her stakes must be strengthened and her borders enlarged, and her municipals receive that endowment even the fulness of the priesthood, in order that the sons of Moses and Aaron may offer an acceptable offering in the house of our God, which is to be reared in this generation. With these few reflections I leave it to the contemplation of your readers, and subscribe myself your brother in the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ,

DANIEL M. ADAMS.

Vernon, Wis., August 29th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I seize a few moments of spare time to let you and the saints at Voree know my success in the great cause of truth for the few hours I had to remain in this place. I arrived here late on Monday evening, and preached to on immensely large congregation in the school house on Tuesday night. I preached until nearly midnight, it being the only night that I could remain with them, as I had to leave for the Beaver Island Conference. At the close of the sermon they were determined that I should preach for them once more before I left, and I accordingly gave out meeting for eight o'clock this morning, at which time hundreds left their business and came out to hear the fulness of the gospel. The meeting lasted four hours. During the meeting I attended to baptism, and one young gentleman that was baptized is now with me on his way to Beaver Island, in company with some other saints who are going there. Thirty or forty will soon go from here. I must close by informing you that there is one universal cry in this whole region of country to know the truth, and when they do know it they desire to obey it. To God be all the glory. Amen. In great haste I remain yours truly,

G. J. ADAMS.

INDUSTRY.

Every young man should remember that the world always has and always will honor industry. The vulgar and useless idler whose energies of mind and body are rusting for want of exercise—the mistaken being who pursues amusement as a relief to his enervated muscles, or engages in exercises that produce no useful end, may look with scorn on the smutty laborer engaged in his toil.—But his scorn is praise. His contempt is an honor. Honest industry will secure the respect of the wise and the good among men, and yield the rich fruit of an easy conscience, and give that hearty self-respect which is above all price. Toil on, then, young men and young women. Be diligent in business. Improve the heart and the mind, and you will find the well-spring of enjoyment in your own souls, and secure the confidence and respect of all those whose respect is worth an effort to obtain.

POWER OF IMAGINATION.

An honest New England farmer started early one cold day in winter, with his sled and oxen into the forest, half a mile from home, for the purpose of chopping a load of wood. Having felled a tree, he drove the team alongside, and commenced chopping it up. By an unlucky hit he brought the whole bit of the ax across his foot with a side-long stroke. The immense gash so alarmed him as to deprive him of all his strength. He felt the warm blood filling his shoe. With great difficulty he succeeded in rolling himself on the sled, and started the oxen for home. As soon as he reached the door he called eagerly for help. His terrified wife and daughter with much effort lifted him into the house, as he was wholly unable to help himself, saying that his foot was nearly severed from his leg. He was laid carefully on the bed, groaning all the while very bitterly. His wife hastily prepared a dressing, and removed the shoe and sock, expecting to see a desperate wound, when lo! the skin was not even broken. Before going out in the morning he had wrapped his feet in red flannel, to protect them from the cold; the gash opened this to his view, and he thought it flesh and blood.—His reason not correcting the mistake, all the pain and loss of power which attends a real wound followed. Man often suffers more from imaginary evil than from real ones.

AN UP-HILL BUSINESS.—It is a popular error that water does not run up hill, and it may be very difficult to persuade some people that a river cannot be turned up a mountain. But the geologists have discovered that the mighty Mississippi, the father of waters, is actually four miles higher at its mouth than at its source—a very curious circumstance to be sure, and accounted for by the centrifugal motion of the earth. The difference between the equatorial and polar radius is found to be thirteen miles, and the river in flowing two thousand miles has to rise one-third of this distance, it being the height of the equator above the poles; and if this centrifugal force were not continued, the rivers would flow back, and the ocean would overflow the land.—Ex. paper.

ADVICE TO PARENTS.

There is nothing so destructive to the morals, and, we may add, to the peace of any community, as the neglect of parents, rich or poor, to teach their sons the importance of being early engaged in some active employment. Nothing is more detestable in our eye than to see a healthy, good looking youth, breaking loose from the restraints of honorable industry, returning to his father's domicil for support, and loafing it about, rather than be pursuing some occupation which will not only support himself, but give gratification to his worthy parents. We would say to every father who has such a son, be he rich or poor, rather drive him to "cut his cord of wood a day" than suffer him to spend his time in idleness. "An idle head is the devil's workshop." That youth, therefore, who has nothing to do, is very apt to become a tattler, a slanderer, and a liar, or something worse, and make himself the pest of the community in which he may reside.

☞ "Dow, Jr.," in alluding to the exclusion of many would-be-church goers from the sanctuary, by reason of the costly apparrel required and high pew rent demanded in our fashionable city churches, pungently remarks:—

"There is in some quarters a heavy duty on the waters of divine grace; you have to pay at least a penny a crumb for a nibble at the bread of life. To attend church in any tolerable style costs a heap a year; and I know very well that the reason why a majority of you go to Beelzebub, is, because you can't afford to go to Heaven at the present exorbitant prices!"

THE PRESS.—The press is a messenger of truth, the herald of science, the interpreter of letters, the amanuensis of history, and the teacher of futurity. Like the sun, it dispels the gloom of night, irradicates the shade of ignorance, and pours a flood of knowledge on the world; it dilates the perceptions of man, extends his intellectual vision, inspires his heart with sensibility, and his mind with thought, and endows him with past and present omniscience, (humanly speaking,) it directs his way to the temple of fame, and discovers to him the path by which man may ascend the highest pinnacle of moral and intellectual elevation.

☞ A parson cornered a farmer whom he seldom saw at his administrations, by asking him directly after a little reproof for his sin of omission, "Shall we see you at church next Sabbath!" "Y-e-s," he replied slowly, "yes, I'll go—or send a hand!"

redemption of the same. And I know in order for this to be accomplished her stakes must be strengthened and her borders enlarged, and her municipals receive that endowment even the fulness of the priesthood, in order that the sons of Moses and Aaron may offer an acceptable offering in the house of our God, which is to be reared in this generation. With these few reflections I leave it to the contemplation of your readers, and subscribe myself your brother in the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ,

DANIEL M. ADAMS.

Vernon, Wis., August 29th, 1849.

Dear Frank:—I seize a few moments of spare time to let you and the saints at Voree know my success in the great cause of truth for the few hours I had to remain in this place. I arrived here late on Monday evening, and preached to an immensely large congregation in the school house on Tuesday night. I preached until nearly midnight, it being the only night that I could remain with them, as I had to leave for the Beaver Island Conference. At the close of the sermon they were determined that I should preach for them once more before I left, and I accordingly gave out meeting for eight o'clock this morning, at which time hundreds left their business and came out to hear the fulness of the gospel. The meeting lasted four hours. During the meeting I attended to baptism, and one young gentleman that was baptized is now with me on his way to Beaver Island, in company with some other saints who are going there. Thirty or forty will soon go from here. I must close by informing you that there is one universal cry in this whole region of country to know the truth, and when they do know it they desire to obey it. To God be all the glory. Amen. In great haste I remain yours truly,

G. J. ADAMS.

INDUSTRY.

Every young man should remember that the world always has and always will honor industry. The vulgar and useless idler whose energies of mind and body are rusting for want of exercise—the mistaken being who pursues amusement as a relief to his enervated muscles, or engages in exercises that produce no useful end, may look with scorn on the smutty laborer engaged in his toil.—But his scorn is praise. His contempt is an honor. Honest industry will secure the respect of the wise and the good among men, and yield the rich fruit of an easy conscience, and give that hearty self-respect which is above all price. Toil on, then, young men and young women. Be diligent in business. Improve the heart and the mind, and you will find the well-spring of enjoyment in your own souls, and secure the confidence and respect of all those whose respect is worth an effort to obtain.

POWER OF IMAGINATION.

An honest New England farmer started early one cold day in winter, with his sled and oxen into the forest, half a mile from home, for the purpose of chopping a load of wood. Having felled a tree, he drove the team alongside, and commenced chopping it up. By an unlucky hit he brought the whole bit of the ax across his foot with a side-long stroke. The immense gash so alarmed him as to deprive him of all his strength. He felt the warm blood filling his shoe. With great difficulty he succeeded in rolling himself on the sled, and started the oxen for home. As soon as he reached the door he called eagerly for help. His terrified wife and daughter with much effort lifted him into the house, as he was wholly unable to help himself, saying that his foot was nearly severed from his leg. He was laid carefully on the bed, groaning all the while very bitterly. His wife hastily prepared a dressing, and removed the shoe and sock, expecting to see a desperate wound, when lo! the skin was not even broken. Before going out in the morning he had wrapped his feet in red flannel, to protect them from the cold; the gash opened this to his view, and he thought it flesh and blood.—His reason not correcting the mistake, all the pain and loss of power which attends a real wound followed. Man often suffers more from imaginary evil than from real ones.

An up-hill Business.—It is a popular error that water does not run up hill, and it may be very difficult to persuade some people that a river cannot be turned up a mountain. But the geologists have discovered that the mighty Mississippi, the father of waters, is actually four miles higher at its mouth than at its source—a very curious circumstance to be sure, and accounted for by the centrifugal motion of the earth. The difference between the equatorial and polar radius is found to be thirteen miles, and the river in flowing two thousand miles has to rise one-third of this distance, it being the height of the equator above the poles; and if this centrifugal force were not continued, the rivers would flow back, and the ocean would overflow the land.—Ex. paper.

ADVICE TO PARENTS.

There is nothing so destructive to the morals, and, we may add, to the peace of any community, as the neglect of parents, rich or poor, to teach their sons the importance of being early engaged in some active employment. Nothing is more detestable in our eye than to see a healthy, good-looking youth, breaking loose from the restraints of honorable industry, returning to his father's domicil for support, and loafing it about, rather than be pursuing some occupation which will not only support himself, but give gratification to his worthy parents. We would say to every father who has such a son, be he rich or poor, rather drive him to "cut his cord of wood a day" than suffer him to spend his time in idleness. "An idle head is the devil's workshop." That youth, therefore, who has nothing to do, is very apt to become a tattler, a slanderer, and a liar, or something worse, and make himself the pest of the community in which he may reside.

☞ "Dow, Jr.," in alluding to the exclusion of many would-be-church goers from the sanctuary, by reason of the costly apparel required and high pew rent demanded in our fashionable city churches, pungently remarks:—

"There is in some quarters a heavy duty on the waters of divine grace; you have to pay at least a penny a crumb for a nibble at the bread of life. To attend church in any tolerable style costs a heap a year; and I know very well that the reason why a majority of you go to Beelzebub, is, because you can't afford to go to Heaven at the present exorbitant prices!"

The Press.—The press is a messenger of truth, the herald of science, the interpreter of letters, the amanuensis of history, and the teacher of futurity. Like the sun, it dispels the gloom of night, irradicates the shade of ignorance, and pours a flood of knowledge on the world; it dilates the perceptions of man, extends his intellectual vision, inspires his heart with sensibility, and his mind with thought, and endows him with past and present omniscience, (humanly speaking,) it directs his way to the temple of fame, and discovers to him the path by which man may ascend the highest pinnacle of moral and intellectual elevation.

☞ A parson cornered a farmer whom he seldom saw at his administrations, by asking him directly after a little reproof for his sin of omission, "Shall we see you at church next Sabbath?" "Y-e-s," he replied slowly, "yes, I'll go—or send a hand!"

"THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S."

PSALM XXIV.

Lord! the earth is thine,
And the fulness of the sea,
Heaps of gold and gems that shine,
Flashing through the flashing brine,
All belong to thee!
Underneath the yeasty waves,
Where the great sea monsters roam,
Thou hast hollowed wonderous caves,
For their ocean home.
Where the huge Leviathan
Revels in his kingly might
Over beds of crysolite,
Thou hast builded temples fairer—
Thou hast fashioned grottoes rarer
Than the proudest works of man.
There uncounted treasures lie
Hidden deep from human eye;
Lustrious gems, whose radiant gleams
Sparkle aye in starry beams.
All the wonders of the sea,
All the gems that flash and shine
Underneath the ocean brine,
God! belong to thee!

Lord! the earth is thine,
And the fulness of the earth!
Thou, in sovereignty of will,
From thine everlasting hill,
Called the light—the voice divine
O'er the formless void went forth,
And the darkness fled!
From the mass chaotic hurled
Rose to life this wondrous world—
Suns and stars, with constant force,
And undeviating course,
In their orbits sped.
Tree, and plant, and opening flower,
In their virgin beauty dressed,
Heard the mandate, and thy power
Instantly confessed.
All by thee were called to birth,
Sole proprietor of earth.

Thine is every living thing—
From the sluggish worm that crawls
O'er the dungeon's slimy walls,
To the forest's tameless king—
And the bird whose rapid wing
Flashes in the glad sunshine,
As it soars aloft, to fling
Out upon the gales of spring
Gifts of song that seem divine—
Insect, beast, and bird are thine!
Formed by thy creating hand,
Heedful all to thy command.

A REMARKABLE TRIAL.

According to the Roman civil code the practice of supernatural arts was a crime. For example, it was a capital offence for any one to increase his rural productions by any art of magical incantation. Pliny relates a remarkable trial which took place under this law. Cresinus, a laborious and skillful husbandman, was charged by his envious neighbors with having crops of such abundance that it was manifest they could be produced by no other means than the power of magic. The sturdy agriculturist met the occasion by bringing into court his impliments of husbandry, oxen, horses, servants, and also his daughter who formed an able assistant, and he assured the judge that these were the only "witchcraft which he had used." This intrepidity had the desired effect; the accusers were covered with shame and confusion, while Cresinus was dismissed with honors from the tribunal. How many similar cases occur in modern times, in which the success that rewards the skillful and industrious is ascribed to "luck," "fortune," or any other cause sooner than the real one. Let the slothful and envious remember the defence of Cresinus, the Roman husbandman.

MARVELOUS COINCIDENCES.

One of those remarkable cases of presentiment, or "second sight," that have occurred at intervals to the confusion of all human speculation in every age of the world, has just been brought to our knowledge in this city. The daughter of a highly respectable family, a child of some twelve years, who has been ill of fever for some days, told her parents in one of her paroxysms of delirium on Monday evening, that her brother, who was on board the packet ship Devonshire, coming from London, was then within twenty miles of home, and had with him sundry presents for them, specifying among other things, five books with red covers, gilt edges, &c. The vessel arrived the next morning, and the return of the brother with the specified presents, verified the truth of her marvelous impression. When the brother entered the chamber, she recognized him at once, and on the instant interrogated him concerning the presents which she said she had dreamed of, when he confirmed her predictions in every particular. She then immediately relapsed into delirium.—Newark Advertiser.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

R. F. Mills,		$4,00 to	Vol. VI	No. 38
Sanford Cooper,		2,00 to	Vol. V	No. 23
Deacon Parkinson,		2,00 to	Vol. IV	No. 52
Joseph Canox,		2,00 "	"	52
Mrs. Johnson,		2,00 "	"	52
William Jones,		2,00 "	"	52
Elder Royce,		2,00 "	"	52
George T. Leech,	by G. J. Adams.	2,00 "	"	52
David Rogers,		2,00 "	"	52
Samuel Bennett,		2,00 "	"	52
L. B. Foster,		2,00 "	"	52
John Woodhead,		2,00 "	"	52
H. C. Connor,		2,00 "	"	52
William Green,		1,00 "	"	52
Mr. Spotchwood,		2,00 to	Vol. V	No. 23

CONFERENCES.

FRANKLIN, MICH.—The Conference heretofore appointed to be held at Franklin, Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th August, will be held at that place the 14th, 15th and 16th Sept. next.

NEW YORK CITY.—There will be a Conference held in the city of New York the 5th, 6th and 7th of Oct. next. It is expected that a majority of both the First Presidency and the Twelve will attend these Conferences. The place of holding the Conference in the city of New York will be duly noticed in the New York Herald and New York Sun previous to the time of meeting.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS,
WILLIAM MARKS,
} PRESIDENTS.

GILBERT WATSON, Recorder.

"THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S."

PSALM XXIV.

Lord! the earth is thine,
And the fulness of the sea,
Heaps of gold and gems that shine,
Flashing through the flashing brine,
All belong to thee!
Underneath the yeasty waves,
Where the great sea monsters roam,
Thou hast hollowed wonderous caves,
For their ocean home.
Where the huge Leviathan
Revels in his kingly might
Over beds of crysolite,
Thou hast builded temples fairer—
Thou hast fashioned grottoes rarer
Than the proudest works of man.
There uncounted treasures lie
Hidden deep from human eye;
Lustrious gems, whose radiant gleams
Sparkle aye in starry beams.
All the wonders of the sea,
All the gems that flash and shine
Underneath the ocean brine,
God! belong to thee!

Lord! the earth is thine,
And the fulness of the earth
Thou, in sovereignty of will,
From thine everlasting hill,
Called the light—the voice divine
O'er the formless void went forth,
And the darkness fled!
From the mass chaotic hurled
Rose to life this wondrous world—
Suns and stars, with constant force,
And undeviating course,
In their orbits sped.
Tree, and plant, and opening flower,
In their virgin beauty dressed,
Heard the mandate, and thy power
Instantly confessed.
All by thee were called to birth,
Sole proprietor of earth.

Thine is every living thing—
From the sluggish worm that crawls
O'er the dungeon's slimy walls,
To the forest's tameless king—
And the bird whose rapid wing
Flashes in the glad sunshine,
As it soars aloft, to fling
Out upon the gales of spring
Gifts of song that seem divine—
Insect, beast, and bird are thine:
Formed by thy creating hand,
Heedful all to thy command.

A REMARKABLE TRIAL.

According to the Roman civil code the practice of supernatural arts was a crime. For example, it was a capital offence for any one to increase his rural productions by any art of magical incantation. Pliny relates a remarkable trial which took place under this law. Cresinus, a laborious and skillful husbandman, was charged by his envious neighbors with having crops of such abundance that it was manifest they could be produced by no other means than the power of magic. The sturdy agriculturist met the occasion by bringing into court his impliments of husbandry, oxen, horses, servants, and also his daughter who formed an able assistant, and he assured the judge that these were the only "witchcraft which he had used." This intrepidity had the desired effect; the accusers were covered with shame and confusion, while Cresinus was dismissed with honors from the tribunal. How many similar cases occur in modern times, in which the success that rewards the skillful and industrious is ascribed to "luck," "fortune," or any other cause sooner than the real one. Let the slothful and envious remember the defence of Cresinus, the Roman husbandman.

MARVELOUS COINCIDENCES.

One of those remarkable cases of presentiment, or "second sight," that have occurred at intervals to the confusion of all human speculation in every age of the world, has just been brought to our knowledge in this city. The daughter of a highly respectable family, a child of some twelve years, who has been ill of fever for some days, told her parents in one of her paroxysms of delirium on Monday evening, that her brother, who was on board the packet ship Devonshire, coming from London, was then within twenty miles of home, and had with him sundry presents for them, specifying among other things, five books with red covers, gilt edges, &c. The vessel arrived the next morning, and the return of the brother with the specified presents, verified the truth of her marvelous impression. When the brother entered the chamber, she recognized him at once, and on the instant interrogated him concerning the presents which she said she had dreamed of, when he confirmed her predictions in every particular. She then immediately relapsed into delirium.—Newark Advertiser.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

R. F. Mills,		$4,00 to	Vol. VI	No. 38
Sanford Cooper,		2,00 to	Vol. V	No. 23
Deacon Parkinson,		2,00 to	Vol. IV	No. 52
Joseph Canox,		2,00 "	"	52
Mrs. Johnson,		2,00 "	"	52
William Jones,		2,00 "	"	52
Elder Royce,		2,00 "	"	52
George T. Leech,	by G. J. Adams.	2,00 "	"	52
David Rogers,		2,00 "	"	52
Samuel Bennett,		2,00 "	"	52
L. B. Foster,		2,00 "	"	52
John Woodhead,		2,00 "	"	52
H. C. Connor,		2,00 "	"	52
William Green,		1,00 "	"	52
Mr. Spotchwood,		2,00 to	Vol. V	No. 23

CONFERENCES.

Franklin, Mich.—The Conference heretofore appointed to be held at Franklin, Mich., on the 24th, 25th and 26th August, will be held at that place the 14th, 15th and 16th Sept. next.

New York City.—There will be a Conference held in the city of New York the 5th, 6th and 7th of Oct. next. It is expected that a majority of both the First Presidency and the Twelve will attend these Conferences. The place of holding the Conference in the city of New York will be duly noticed in the New York Herald and New York Sun previous to the time of meeting.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS,
WILLIAM MARKS,
} Presidents.

Gilbert Watson, Recorder.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 26.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. SEPT. 13, 1849. [WHOLE No. 142.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

THE GOSPEL.

ILLUSTRATED IN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUESTION.—What is the Gospel?

ANSWER.—There is one only and true system of doctrine that can properly be called the Gospel; and that one system is so definite in every point, and so exactly adapted to the situation of sinners, that every person may immediately embrace it wherever it is preached, and by so doing they become saints.

The first principle of action required in the Gospel is belief in the name of Jesus Christ, the once crucified and now risen Redeemer.

The second is repentance; which signifies nothing more nor less than the putting away of sins, with humility and meekness before God, and a determination to forsake them, and do the will of God in all things.

The third is baptism, by immersion in water, in the name of the Lord Jesus, for the remission of sins.

The fourth is the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus, for the baptism of the Holy Ghost. All who do these things in a proper manner, and under proper authority, are saints; and if they endure to the end they will be saved in the kingdom of God.

Q.—Are there any conditions in this system which the sinner cannot immediately fulfill, as soon as he understands them?

A.—The sinner can believe that Jesus is the Christ on good testimony. He can turn from his sins, and put them away. He can go forth, and be immersed in water, in the name of the Lord Jesus.

God will not believe for us; he will not repent for us; he will not be baptized for us: but these things are for us to do; and if we do them, then God has promised to forgive us our sins, and to baptize us with the Holy Ghost; then, certainly, we should be the children of God, in the enjoyment of religion.

Q.—Is it of any use for men to pray to the Lord to convert them and give them religion, while they neglect to obey the Gospel?

A.—No. In vain they call him Lord, Lord, and do not perform the things which he has commanded them. In vain they worship him, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. The Lord is praying us to be converted, and we will not, while at the same time we are praying him to convert us.

Q.—But must not the Lord perform some special work, on his part, more than he has done, in order to convert our souls and make us christians?

A.—No. The Lord has died for us; he has risen again for us; he has sent his word to us, with servants to administer it; and now he requires us to obey it, and then he has promised to forgive our sins, and to grant us the gift of the Holy Ghost.

Q.—But, what! Can every sinner come immediately forward and obey the Gospel when it is preached, and thus become a child of God?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What! all the sinners in Wisconsin?

A.—Yes; and all the sinners in the United States; nay, in all the world, if they will. The very moment they obey the Gospel they are free from sin, and are made partakers of the Holy Ghost. If this is not the case, then the word of God is of none effect, and the Gospel never saved a man since the world began, nor ever will; for if God has sent a message or Gospel into the world which is insufficient to save sinners, and is under the necessity of saving them some other way, independent of that Gospel, then surely he has sent it in vain. But, on the other hand, if he has sent a Gospel which would save one man by obeying its precepts, then surely it would be the power of God unto salvation to all who would believe and obey it.

Q.—If these things are so, what would a minister of the Gospel say if he were to be present at some of the religious excitements which are got up in modern times, and were to see persons bowed down at the penitent forms, trying to "get religion" in that way?

A.—He would say, as Annanias said to Saul of Tarsus, "Why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling upon the name of the Lord."

Q.—But what would he say if they should refuse to comply with the requisition, and should continue praying?

A.—He would say, "Why do you call Lord, Lord, and do not perform the things he has said?" "In vain you worship him, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men."

Q.—But would they not "get religion in that way?"

A.—No. They might pray as long and as loud as the four hundred prophets of Baal did, and with as little effect.

Q.—But did not the Apostles say to the jailor and his household, that they should be saved if they would believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, without obeying the Gospel?

A.—No. He spake unto them the word of the Lord.

Q.—What word of the Lord did he speak unto them?

A.—The word of repentance and baptism for remission of sins; as is evident from the fact of their attending to baptism the same hour.

Q.—What would have been the situation of the jailor and his household if they had believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, and had not obeyed the Gospel?

A.—They would have been under much more condemnation than they were before.

Q.—But was not Saul of Tarsus, while on his way to Damascus, converted and made a christian by a special work of God?

A.—No. He was only convinced or convicted that Jesus was the Christ; but his being a saint (or christian) depended on his going to Damascus, and obeying the Gospel by baptism.

Q.—What would have been his situation if he had continued to believe in Christ, and had not gone to Damascus and obeyed the Gospel?

A.—He would never have "got religion" to this day, but would have been worse than he was before.

Q.—Did not the Apostle say to the people of old, that, if they

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 26.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, SEPT. 13, 1849. [WHOLE No. 142.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

THE GOSPEL.

ILLUSTRATED IN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUESTION.—What is the Gospel?

ANSWER.—There is one only and true system of doctrine that can properly be called the Gospel; and that one system is so definite in every point, and so exactly adapted to the situation of sinners, that every person may immediately embrace it wherever it is preached, and by so doing they become saints.

The first principle of action required in the Gospel is belief in the name of Jesus Christ, the once crucified and now risen Redeemer.

The second is repentance; which signifies nothing more nor less than the putting away of sins, with humility and meekness before God, and a determination to forsake them, and do the will of God in all things.

The third is baptism, by immersion in water, in the name of the Lord Jesus, for the remission of sins.

The fourth is the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus, for the baptism of the Holy Ghost. All who do these things in a proper manner, and under proper authority, are saints; and if they enuure to the end they will be saved in the kingdom of God.

Q.—Are there any conditions in this system which the sinner cannot immediately fulfill, as soon as he understands them?

A.—The sinner can believe that Jesus is the Christ on good testimony. He can turn from his sins, and put them away. He can go forth, and be immersed in water, in the name of the Lord Jesus.

God will not believe for us; he will not repent for us; he will not be baptized for us: but these things are for us to do; and if we do them, then God has promised to forgive us our sins, and to baptize us with the Holy Ghost; then, certainly, we should be the children of God, in the enjoyment of religion.

Q.—Is it of any use for men to pray to the Lord to convert them and give them religion, while they neglect to obey the Gospel?

A.—No. In vain they call him Lord, Lord, and do not perform the things which he has commanded them. In vain they worship him, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. The Lord is praying us to be converted, and we will not, while at the same time we are praying him to convert us.

Q.—But must not the Lord perform some special work, on his part, more than he has done, in order to convert our souls and make us christians?

A.—No. The Lord has died for us; he has risen again for us; he has sent his word to us, with servants to administer it; and now he requires us to obey it, and then he has promised to forgive our sins, and to grant us the gift of the Holy Ghost.

Q.—But, what! Can every sinner come immediately forward and obey the Gospel when it is preached, and thus become a child of God?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What! all the sinners in Wisconsin?

A.—Yes; and all the sinners in the United States; nay, in all the world, if they will. The very moment they obey the Gospel they are free from sin, and are made partakers of the Holy Ghost. If this is not the case, then the word of God is of none effect, and the Gospel never saved a man since the world began, nor ever will; for if God has sent a message or Gospel into the world which is insufficient to save sinners, and is under the necessity of saving them some other way, independent of that Gospel, then surely he has sent it in vain. But, on the other hand, if he has sent a Gospel which would save one man by obeying its precepts, then surely it would be the power of God unto salvation to all who would believe and obey it.

Q.—If these things are so, what would a minister of the Gospel say if he were to be present at some of the religious excitements which are got up in modern times, and were to see persons bowed down at the penitent forms, trying to "get religion" in that way?

A.—He would say, as Ananias said to Saul of Tarsus, "Why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling upon the name of the Lord."

Q.—But what would he say if they should refuse to comply with the requisition, and should continue praying?

A.—He would say, "Why do you call Lord, Lord, and do not perform the things he has said?" "In vain you worship him, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men."

Q.—But would they not "get religion in that way?"

A.—No. They might pray as long and as loud as the four hundred prophets of Baal did, and with as little effect.

Q.—But did not the Apostles say to the jailor and his household, that they should be saved if they would believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, without obeying the Gospel?

A.—No. He spake unto them the word of the Lord.

Q.—What word of the Lord did he speak unto them?

A.—The word of repentance and baptism for remission of sins; as is evident from the fact of their attending to baptism the same hour.

Q.—What would have been the situation of the jailor and his household if they had believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, and had not obeyed the Gospel?

A.—They would have been under much more condemnation than they were before.

Q.—But was not Saul of Tarsus, while on his way to Damascus, converted and made a christian by a special work of God?

A.—No. He was only convinced or convicted that Jesus was the Christ; but his being a saint (or christian) depended on his going to Damascus, and obeying the Gospel by baptism.

Q.—What would have been his situation if he had continued to believe in Christ, and had not gone to Damascus and obeyed the Gospel?

A.—He would never have "got religion" to this day, but would have been worse than he was before.

Q.—Did not the Apostle say to the people of old, that, if they would confess with their mouth the Lord Jesus Christ, and would believe in their hearts that God had raised him from the dead, they should be saved?

A.—Yes. But he was writing to the church of God, whose members had already obeyed the Gospel, and had been planted together in the likeness of his death; being buried with him by baptism, and having risen again to newness of life, he was encouraging them to continue in the belief and confession of his name.

Q.—But did not the Apostle thank God that he had not baptized many of the Corinthians?

A.—Yes. But the reason was, lest they should say he had baptized in his own name.

Q.—But did he not say that he was not sent to baptize, but to preach the Gospel?

A.—Yes. But others were sent to water those whom he planted. He, as a wise master builder, laid the foundation by preaching the word, and others attended to the other part of the work, and thus builded thereon.

Q.—Did not Cornelius and his friends receive the Holy Ghost before they were baptized?

A.—Yes. But it was to convince the Jews that they (the Gentiles) had part in the Gospel as well as the Israelites.

Q.—Would Cornelius and his friends have been saved, after all they had received, if they had refused baptism?

A.—No. For Peter was sent to tell them words whereby they should be saved, and part of these words were, that they should be baptized; and, if they had refused to comply with this message, they would have been worse than those who had never known the way of truth.

Q.—Is there, then, no other Gospel but faith in Jesus Christ, repentance of sins, and immersion in water in the name of the Lord, for remission of sins, with the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus for the baptism of the Holy Ghost?

A.—No. The people who are without this order of things are strangers to the Gospel, notwithstanding all the morality, sincerity, and piety they may possess.

Q.—Are all the ministers and professors of religion, in this age of the world, under obligation to obey that Gospel, in order to be saved in the kingdom of God?

A.—Yes. "Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." How, then, can he be saved in it?

Q.—What has Christ said of those who would come into the sheepfold by climbing up some other way besides the door?

A.—He has pronounced them thieves and robbers.

Q.—At Christ's second coming, what will become of all those ministers and professors, and others who do not obey this Gospel?

A.—"He will come in flaming fire, taking vengeance on all those who know not God and obey not the Gospel."

Q.—How comes it that the christian world (so called) have been so long without the Gospel in its fulness?

A.—In fulfillment of the word of prophecy, spoken by the prophet Daniel and by the revelator John, "They have made war with the saints, and overcome them;" and in fulfillment of Paul to Timothy, "They have heaped to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and these have turned their ears from the truth, and they are turned unto fables, and they will not endure sound doctrine."

Q.—How came the Latter Day Saints to understand this Gospel, and to be instruments in restoring it among mankind?

A.—Not for any worth or wisdom that was in them more than others; but because the time had come for this Gospel of the kingdom to be again restored to the inhabitants of the earth, and to be preached to all nations preparatory to the second coming of Christ. Therefore the Lord sent forth an holy angel to commit the authority of this ministry again unto man, and this in fulfillment of the promises recorded by the ancient prophets and apostles.

Q.—Is it not uncharitable to consider the christian world all wrong, except such as obey the fulness of the Gospel? and still more so to tell them of it?

A.—No. The man who tells his generation the truth, according to the "law and the testimony," is more charitable to them than ten thousand men who cry, Peace and safety, and prophecy smooth things, when sudden destruction is near at hand.

VARIETY OF DISPOSITIONS AND OCCUPATIONS.

It is the great wisdom and providence of the Almighty so to order the dispositions and inclinations of men, that they affect divers and different works and pleasures; some are for manuary trades, others for intellectual employments; one is for the land, another for the sea; one for husbandry, another for merchandise; one is for architecture, another for vestiary services; one is for fishing, another for pasturage; and in the learned trades, one is for the mistress of the sciences, divinity; another for the law, whether civil or municipal; a third is for the secrets of nature, and the skill and practice of physic; and each one of these divides itself into many differing varieties. Neither is it otherwise in matters of pleasures: one places his delight in following his hawk and hound, another in the harmony of music; one makes his garden his paradise, and enjoys the flourishing of his fair tulips, another finds contentment in a choice library; one loves his bowl or his bow, another pleases himself in the patient pastime of his angle. For, surely, if all men affected one and the same trade of life, or pleasure of recreation, it were not possible that they could live one by another; neither could there be any use of commerce, whereby man's life is maintained: neither could it be avoided, but the envy of the inevitable rivality would cut each other's throats. It is good reason we should make a right use of this gracious and provident dispensation of the Almighty; and therefore that we should improve our several dispositions and faculties to the advancing of the common stock; and, withal, that we should neither encroach upon each other's profession, nor to be apt to censure each other's recreation.—Ex. paper.

BE SOMETHING.

It is the duty of every one to take some active part as actors on the stage of life. Some seem to think they can vegetate, as it were, without being anything in particular. Man was not made to rust out his life. It is expected he should "act well his part." He must be something. He has a work to perform, which it is his duty to attend to. We are not placed here to grow up, pass through the various stages of life, and then die, without having done anything for the benefit of the human race. It is a principle in the creed of the Mahometans that every one should have a trade. No Christian doctrine could be better than that. Is a man to be brought up in idleness? Is he to live upon the wealth which his ancestors have acquired by frugal industry? Is he placed here to pass through life like an automaton? Has he nothing to perform as a citizen of the world? Does he owe nothing to his country as an inhabitant?—A man who does nothing is a mere cipher. He does not fulfill the obligations for which he was sent into the world, and when he dies, he has not finished the work that was given him to do. He is a mere blank in creation. Some are born with riches and honors upon their heads. But does it follow that they have nothing to do in their career through life? There are certain duties for every one to perform. Be something. Don't live like a hermit and die unregretted.

See that young man: no matter what are his circumstances, if he has no particular business to pursue, he will never accomplish much.

would confess with their mouth the Lord Jesus Christ, and would believe in their hearts that God had raised him from the dead, they should be saved?

A.—Yes. But he was writing to the church of God, whose members had already obeyed the Gospel, and had been planted together in the likeness of his death; being buried with him by baptism, and having risen again to newness of life, he was encouraging them to continue in the belief and confession of his name.

Q.—But did not the Apostle thank God that he had not baptized many of the Corinthians?

A.—Yes. But the reason was, lest they should say he had baptized in his own name.

Q.—But did he not say that he was not sent to baptize, but to preach the Gospel?

A.—Yes. But others were sent to water those whom he planted. He, as a wise master builder, laid the foundation by preaching the word, and others attended to the other part of the work, and thus builded thereon.

Q.—Did not Cornelius and his friends receive the Holy Ghost before they were baptized?

A.—Yes. But it was to convince the Jews that they (the Gentiles) had part in the Gospel as well as the Israelites.

Q.—Would Cornelius and his friends have been saved, after all they had received, if they had refused baptism?

A.—No. For Peter was sent to tell them words whereby they should be saved, and part of these words were, that they should be baptized; and, if they had refused to comply with this message, they would have been worse than those who had never known the way of truth.

Q.—Is there, then, no other Gospel but faith in Jesus Christ, repentance of sins, and immersion in water in the name of the Lord, for remission of sins, with the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus for the baptism of the Holy Ghost?

A.—No. The people who are without this order of things are strangers to the Gospel, notwithstanding all the morality, sincerity, and piety they may possess.

Q.—Are all the ministers and professors of religion, in this age of the world, under obligation to obey that Gospel, in order to be saved in the kingdom of God?

A.—Yes. "Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." How, then, can he be saved in it?

Q.—What has Christ said of those who would come into the sheepfold by climbing up some other way besides the door?

A.—He has pronounced them thieves and robbers.

Q.—At Christ's second coming, what will become of all those ministers and professors, and others who do not obey this Gospel?

A.—"He will come in flaming fire, taking vengeance on all those who know not God and obey not the Gospel."

Q.—How comes it that the christian world (so called) have been so long without the Gospel in its fulness?

A.—In fulfillment of the word of prophecy, spoken by the prophet Daniel and by the revelator John, "They have made war with the saints, and overcome them:" and in fulfillment of Paul to Timothy, "They have heaped to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and these have turned their ears from the truth, and they are turned unto fables, and they will not endure sound doctrine."

Q.—How came the Latter Day Saints to understand this Gospel, and to be instruments in restoring it among mankind?

A.—Not for any worth or wisdom that was in them more than others; but because the time had come for this Gospel of the kingdom to be again restored to the inhabitants of the earth, and to be preached to all nations preparatory to the second coming of Christ. Therefore the Lord sent forth an holy angel to commit the authority of this ministry again unto man, and this in fulfillment of the promises recorded by the ancient prophets and apostles.

Q.—Is it not uncharitable to consider the christian world all wrong, except such as obey the fulness of the Gospel? and still more so to tell them of it?

A.—No. The man who tells his generation the truth, according to the "law and the testimony," is more charitable to them than ten thousand men who cry, Peace and safety, and prophecy smooth things, when sudden destruction is near at hand.

VARIETY OF DISPOSITIONS AND OCCUPATIONS.

It is the great wisdom and providence of the Almighty so to order the dispositions and inclinations of men, that they affect divers and different works and pleasures; some are for manuary trades, others for intellectual employments; one is for the land, another for the sea; one for husbandry, another for merchandise; one is for architecture, another for vestiary services; one is for fishing, another for pasturage; and in the learned trades, one is for the mistress of the sciences, divinity; another for the law, whether civil or municipal; a third is for the secrets of nature, and the skill and practice of physic; and each one of these divides itself into many differing varieties. Neither is it otherwise in matters of pleasures: one places his delight in following his hawk and hound, another in the harmony of music; one makes his garden his paradise, and enjoys the flourishing of his fair tulips, another finds contentment in a choice library; one loves his bowl or his bow, another pleases himself in the patient pastime of his angle. For, surely, if all men affected one and the same trade of life, or pleasure of recreation, it were not possible that they could live one by another; neither could there be any use of commerce, whereby man's life is maintained: neither could it be avoided, but the envy of the inevitable rivality would cut each other's throats. It is good reason we should make a right use of this gracious and provident dispensation of the Almighty; and therefore that we should improve our several dispositions and faculties to the advancing of the common stock; and, withal, that we should neither encroach upon each other's profession, nor to be apt to censure each other's recreation.—Ex. paper.

BE SOMETHING.

It is the duty of every one to take some active part as actors on the stage of life. Some seem to think they can vegetate, as it were, without being anything in particular. Man was not made to rust out his life. It is expected he should "act well his part." He must be something. He has a work to perform, which it is his duty to attend to. We are not placed here to grow up, pass through the various stages of life, and then die, without having done anything for the benefit of the human race. It is a principle in the creed of the Mahometans that every one should have a trade. No Christian doctrine could be better than that. Is a man to be brought up in idleness? Is he to live upon the wealth which his ancestors have acquired by frugal industry? Is he placed here to pass through life like an automaton? Has he nothing to perform as a citizen of the world? Does he owe nothing to his country as an inhabitant?—A man who does nothing is a mere cipher. He does not fulfill the obligations for which he was sent into the world, and when he dies he has not finished the work that was given him to do. He is a mere blank in creation. Some are born with riches and honors upon their heads. But does it follow that they have nothing to do in their career through life? There are certain duties for every one to perform. Be something. Don't live like a hermit and die unregretted.

See that young man: no matter what are his circumstances, if he has no particular business to pursue, he will never accomplish much

Perhaps he has a father abundantly able to support him. Perhaps that father has labored hard to obtain a competence that is sufficient for his sons to live in idleness. Can they go abroad with any degree of self-complacency, squandering away the money which their fathers have earned by hard labor? No. No one who has the proper feelings of a citizen, who wishes to be ranked among the useful members of society, would live such a life.

Be something. Don't be a drone. You may rely upon your present possessions, or on your future prospects, but those riches may fly away, or other hopes may be blighted, and if you have no place of your own, in such a case, ten to one you find your path beset with thorns. Want may come upon you before you are aware of it, and having no profession you find yourself in anything but an enviable condition. It is therefore important that you should be something.—Don' depend upon Fortune, for she is a fickle support, which often fails when you lean upon her with the greatest confidence. Trust to your own exertions.

Be something. Pursue that vocation for which you are fitted by nature, pursue it faithfully and diligently. You have a part to act, and the honor in performing that part depends upon yourself. It is sickening to us to see a parcel of idle boys hanging around a father, spending the money which he has earned by his industry, without attempting to do any thing for themselves. Be something, should be their motto. Every one is capable of learning some "art, trade, or mystery," and can earn a competence for himself. He should be something, and not bring down the gray hairs of his father with sorrow to the grave. He should learn to depend upon himself.—Idle boys living upon a parent without any profession, or without any employment, are illy qualified for good members of society.—And we regret to say that it is too often the case that it is the parent's fault that they are thus brought up. They should be taught to be something, to know how to provide for themeslves in case of necessity, to act well their part, and they will reap the honor which therein lies.—Bost. Transcript.

PURSUIT OF WEALTH.

The insane and insatiable passion for accumulation, ever ready, when circumstances favor, to seize upon the public mind, is that "love of money which is the root of all evil," that "covetousness which is idolatry." It springs from an undue, an idolatrous estimate of the value of property. Many are feeling that nothing, nothing will do for them, or for their children, but wealth; not a good character, nor well trained and well exerted faculties, nor virtue, nor the hope of heaven—nothing but wealth. It is their god, and the god of their families. Their sons are growing up in the same worship of it, and to an equally baneful reliance upon it for the future; they are rushing into expenses which the divided property of their father's house will not enable them to sustain; and they are preparing to be, in turn and from necessity, slaves to the same idol. How truly is it written, that "they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition!" There is no need that they should be rich, but they will be rich. All the noblest functions of life may be discharged without wealth, all its highest honors obtained, and its purest pleasures enjoyed; yet, I repeat it—nothing—nothing will do but wealth. Disappoint a man of this, and he mourns as if the highest end of his life were defeated. Strip him of this, and I shall point to no unheard of experience when I say he had rather die than live.

GOOD COUNSEL.

No young man can hope to rise in society, or act worthly his part in life, without a moral character. The basis of such character is virtuous fixed principles; or a deep sense of moral obligation, sustained and invigorated by the fear and love of God. The youth who posesses such a character can be trusted. Integrity, truth, benevolence, justice, are not with him words without meaning; he knows and feels their sacred import, and aims in the tenor of his life, to exemplify the virtues they express. Such a man has decision of character; he knows what is right; and is firm in doing it. Such a man has independence of character; he thinks and acts for himself, and is not to be made a tool of to serve the purpose of party. Such a man has true worth of character; and his life is a blessing to himself, to his family, and to society, and to the world.

Aim then, my friends, to attain this character, aim at virtue and moral excellence. This is the first, the indispensable qualification of a good citizen, it imparts life and character to all institutions and interests in society. It is indeed the dew and rain that nourisheth; the vine and the fig tree by which we are shaded and refreshed.

HYPOCRISY.—The murderer who sheaths his knife in the heart of the unconscious sleeper—the incendiary who kindles the flame upon the unguarded dwelling—the thief who prowls at midnight—or the avowed robber, who robs and plunders even in the face of open day—we detest and hunt down as a foul depredator in society. But these are not the only persons who inflict deep and lasting wounds upon their fellow citizens. He who has about him the shining face of hypocrisy and the smooth tongue of deceit—who plunders under the specious pretense of fair dealing, who disregards the bonds of honorable surety, who tramples upon the vows of plighted faith, who, in a thousand ways by an ambiguous word, a well turned suggestion, a meaning look, deludes and injures, and perhaps ruins another—he is a prowling depredator under the garb of peace and honor, a masked robber, who takes advantage of sacred principle to injure and destroy—who, to a greater or less extent, breaths blithting and death upon faith, and hope, and joy, that had sprung up confidingly under the light and warmth of the social compact. We go armed and prepared for the assassin, the eye of our police is upon the incendiary and the robber; but these are unexpected aggressors. They have secured our faith by the disguise of respectability and friendship. Or, perhaps, they were adopted and cherished by our charity, and now, like the thawed viper they have turned and stung us! We have dicovered, too late, that they are possessed of no integrity.

"THE RIBBON COST MORE THAN THE DRESS."

This remark was made in our hearing not long since in reference to a recent purchase of an ornamental ribbon and a comfortable calico dress. This brings to mind the fact that most of the pecuniary evils under which the people labor, have been brought upon them by the system of having "the Ribbon cost more than the Dress." All cases where sacrifices are made for the purpose of keeping up appearances in the community when the necessary income has fallen off, are of this character. And there are more sacrifices made for show, and for unnecessary articles of furniture and dress, than for necessary articles of comfort. Indeed, comfort itself is often sacrificed for show. So, too, with those who skulk from honest labor, under the idea that it is not respectable to toil as other men; they will almost beg for employment which comports with their notions of respectability, and nearly starve rather than engage in any other. Their ribbon cost them more than their dress.

The young man who commences business with high hopes and wishes to assume the responsibility of manhood, and to enjoy the comforts of men of age and capital, instead of closely pursuing the details of business and acquiring the reputation and reaping the

Perhaps he has a father abundantly able to support him. Perhaps that father has labored hard to obtain a competence that is sufficient for his sons to live in idleness. Can they go abroad with any degree of self-complacency, squandering away the money which their fathers have earned by hard labor? No. No one who has the proper feelings of a citizen, who wishes to be ranked among the useful members of society, would live such a life.

Be something. Don't be a drone. You may rely upon your present possessions, or on your future prospects, but those riches may fly away, or other hopes may be blighted, and if you have no place of your own, in such a case, ten to one you find your path beset with thorns. Want may come upon you before you are aware of it, and having no profession you find yourself in anything but an enviable condition. It is therefore important that you should be something.—Don' depend upon Fortune, for she is a fickle support, which often fails when you lean upon her with the greatest confidence. Trust to your own exertions.

Be something. Pursue that vocation for which you are fitted by nature, pursue it faithfully and diligently. You have a part to act, and the honor in performing that part depends upon yourself. It is sickening to us to see a parcel of idle boys hanging around a father, spending the money which he has earned by his industry, without attempting to do any thing for themselves. Be something, should be their motto. Every one is capable of learning some "art, trade, or mystery," and can earn a competence for himself. He should be something, and not bring down the gray hairs of his father with sorrow to the grave. He should learn to depend upon himself.—Idle boys living upon a parent without any profession, or without any employment, are illy qualified for good members of society.—And we regret to say that it is too often the case that it is the parent's fault that they are thus brought up. They should be taught to be something, to know how to provide for themselves in case of necessity, to act well their part, and they will reap the honor which therein lies.—Bost. Transcript.

PURSUIT OF WEALTH.

The insane and insatiable passion for accumulation, ever ready, when circumstances favor, to seize upon the public mind, is that "love of money which is the root of all evil," that "covetousness which is idolatry." It springs from an undue, an idolatrous estimate of the value of property. Many are feeling that nothing, nothing will do for them, or for their children, but wealth; not a good character, nor well trained and well exerted faculties, nor virtue, nor the hope of heaven—nothing but wealth. It is their god, and the god of their families. Their sons are growing up in the same worship of it, and to an equally baneful reliance upon it for the future; they are rushing into expenses which the divided property of their father's house will not enable them to sustain; and they are preparing to be, in turn and from necessity, slaves to the same idol. How truly is it written, that "they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition!" There is no need that they should be rich, but they will be rich. All the noblest functions of life may be discharged without wealth, all its highest honors obtained, and its purest pleasures enjoyed; yet, I repeat it—nothing—nothing will do but wealth. Disappoint a man of this, and he mourns as if the highest end of his life were defeated. Strip him of this, and I shall point to no unheard of experience when I say he had rather die than live.

GOOD COUNSEL.

No young man can hope to rise in society, or act worthly his part in life, without a moral character. The basis of such character is virtuous fixed principles; or a deep sense of moral obligation, sustained and invigorated by the fear and love of God. The youth who possesses such a character can be trusted. Integrity, truth, benevolence, justice, are not with him words without meaning; he knows and feels their sacred import, and aims in the tenor of his life, to exemplify the virtues they express. Such a man has decision of character; he knows what is right; and is firm in doing it. Such a man has independence of character; he thinks and acts for himself, and is not to be made a tool of to serve the purpose of party. Such a man has true worth of character; and his life is a blessing to himself, to his family, and to society, and to the world.

Aim then, my friends, to attain this character, aim at virtue and moral excellence. This is the first, the indispensable qualification of a good citizen, it imparts life and character to all institutions and interests in society. It is indeed the dew and rain that nourisheth; the vine and the fig tree by which we are shaded and refreshed.

HYPOCRISY.—The murderer who sheaths his knife in the heart of the unconscious sleeper—the incendiary who kindles the flame upon the unguarded dwelling—the thief who prowls at midnight—or the avowed robber, who robs and plunders even in the face of open day—we detest and hunt down as a foul depredator in society. But these are not the only persons who inflict deep and lasting wounds upon their fellow citizens. He who has about him the shining face of hypocrisy and the smooth tongue of deceit—who plunders under the specious pretense of fair dealing, who disregards the bonds of honorable surety, who tramples upon the vows of plighted faith, who, in a thousand ways by an ambiguous word, a well turned suggestion, a meaning look, deludes and injures, and perhaps ruins another—he is a prowling depredator under the garb of peace and honor, a masked robber, who takes advantage of sacred principle to injure and destroy—who, to a greater or less extent, breathe blighting and death upon faith, and hope, and joy, that had sprung up confidingly under the light and warmth of the social compact. We go armed and prepared for the assassin, the eye of our police is upon the incendiary and the robber; but these are unexpected aggressors. They have secured our faith by the disguise of respectability and friendship. Or, perhaps, they were adopted and cherished by our charity, and now, like the thawed viper they have turned and stung us! We have dicovered, too late, that they are possessed of no integrity.

"THE RIBBON COST MORE THAN THE DRESS."

This remark was made in our hearing not long since in reference to a recent purchase of an ornamental ribbon and a comfortable calico dress. This brings to mind the fact that most of the pecuniary evils under which the people labor, have been brought upon them by the system of having "the Ribbon cost more than the Dress." All cases where sacrifices are made for the purpose of keeping up appearances in the community when the necessary income has fallen off, are of this character. And there are more sacrifices made for show, and for unnecessary articles of furniture and dress, than for necessary articles of comfort. Indeed, comfort itself is often sacrificed for show. So, too, with those who skulk from honest labor, under the idea that it is not respectable to toil as other men; they will almost beg for employment which comports with their notions of respectability, and nearly starve rather than engage in any other. Their ribbon cost them more than their dress.

The young man who commences business with high hopes and wishes to assume the responsibility of manhood, and to enjoy the comforts of men of age and capital, instead of closely pursuing the details of business and acquiring the reputation and reaping the fruits of being a prudent, persevering and economical business man, finds at length that "the ribbon cost more than the dress."

The young woman who neglects acquiring a good education, in the pursuit after accomplishments—whose head is scarcely put to any other use but that of a milliner's block—who violates the laws of health for the reputation of possessing a small waist by tight lacing, and absorbs consumption from the damp earth and cold snow, in showing a neat thin shoe upon her feet—or who sings and trips about in gay and frivolous amusements or luxurious idleness, instead of seeking acquaintance with domestic affairs, is apt to find at length to her sorrow and shame, that "the ribbon cost more than the dress."

The politician, elevated by the people to posts of honor and trust, and who seeks his own selfish ends rather than the public good—who flatters the people by false promises, rather than serve them with honest purposes, and disposed to appropriate the power placed in his hands for the public good, to advance his own interests, is apt to discover in the end the truth of the remark, that "the ribbon cost more than the dress."

A multitude of other cases might be referred to, illustrating the fact that "the ribbon cost more than the dress," but these will be sufficient to direct the thoughts of our readers to examine for themselves, and ascertain whether in any of their conduct they are paying more for the ribbon than for the dress.—Bangor Courier.

FEMALE DELICACY.

Above every other feature which adorns the female character, delicacy stands foremost within the province of good taste. Not that delicacy which is perpetually in quest of something to be ashamed of, which makes merit of a blush, and simpers at the false construction its own ingenuity has put upon an innocent remark; this spurious kind of delicacy is as far removed from good taste as from good feeling and good sense; but the high minded delicacy which maintains its pure and undeviating walk, alike amongst women as in the society of men, which shrinks from no unnecessary duty, and can speak, when required, with seriousness and kindness, of things at which it would be ashamed to smile or to blush—that delicacy which can give alms without display, and advice without assumption, and which pains not the most humble or susceptible being in creation.

READING.

Of all the amusements that can be imagined for the hard working man, after his daily toil or in its intervals, there is nothing like reading a newspaper or a book. It calls for no bodily exertion, of which he already has enough or perhaps too much. It relieves his home of its dulness and sameness. It transports him into livelier and gayer, and more diversified and interesting scenes; and while he enjoys himself there, he may forget the evils of the present moment fully as much as if he were ever so drunk, with the advantage of himself the next day with the money in his pocket, or at least laid out for real necessaries, and without the miseries of the drunkard's mind and body. Nay it accompanies him to his next day's work; and if what he has been reading be anything above the idlest and lightest, gives him something to think of besides the mere mechanical drudgery of his every day occupation: something he can enjoy while absent and look forward with pleasures to. If I were to pray for a taste which would stand me instead under every variety of circumstance, and be a source of happiness and cheerfulness to me through life, and a shield against its ills, however things might go amiss, and the world frown on me, it would be a taste for reading.—Sir J. Marshall.

ZION.

Behold, the mountain of the Lord
In latter days shall rise;
Shall tow'r above the meaner hills,
And draw the wond'ring eyes.

To this the joyful nations round
And distant tribes shall flow;
"Ascend the hill of God," they cry,
And to the temple go.

The beams that shine on Zion's hill
Shall lighten every land;
The King that reigns in Zions's tow'rs,
Shall all the world command.

Come then, O come from every land
To worship at his shrine;
And walking in the light of God,
In holy beauty shine.

MISERIES OF INDOLENCE.—None so little enjoy life, and are such a burden to themselves, as those who have nothing to do. The active only have the true relish of life. He who knows not what it is to labor, knows not what is to enjoy. The idle know nothing of it. It is exertion that renders rest delightful, and sleep sweet and undisturbed. That the happiness of life depends on the regular prosecution of some laudable purpose or calling, which engages, helps, and enlivens all our powers; let those bear witness who, after spending years in active usefulness, retire to enjoy themselves. They are a burden to themselves.

FRANKLIN.—At one time the rich merchants and professional men of Philadelphia proposed to form themselves into a social circle, from which all mechanics were to be excluded. The paper drawn up for that purpose was presented to Dr Franklin for his signature. On examining its contents, he remarked that he could not consent to unite himself with them, inasmuch as by excluding mechanics from their circle, they had excluded God Almighty, the greatest mechanic in the universe!

LAUGH.—"A laugh is worth a hundred groans in any market," said Charles Lamb—and so say we. There never was any good resulting from despondency; and when we see a man trying to groan himself out of difficulties, we conclude him rather weak in the upper story. When you get into a tight place, first look things into the face, and get out the best way you can—but don't 'groan.'

☞ There is frequently more pleasure in giving a thing than in receiving it. This applies more especially to medicine, advice and kicks.—Ex. paper.

CONFERENCE.

NEW YORK CITY.—There will be a Conference held in the city of New York the 5th, 6th and 7th of Oct. next. It is expected that a majority of both the First Presidency and the Twelve will attend this Conference. The place of holding the Conference in the city of New York will be duly noticed in the New York Herald and New York Sun previous to the time of meeting.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS,
WILLIAM MARKS,
} PRESIDENTS.

GILBERT WATSON, Recorder.

fruits of being a prudent, persevering and economical business man, finds at length that "the ribbon cost more than the dress."

The young woman who neglects acquiring a good education, in the pursuit after accomplishments—whose head is scarcely put to any other use but that of a milliner's block—who violates the laws of health for the reputation of possessing a small waist by tight lacing, and absorbs consumption from the damp earth and cold snow, in showing a neat thin shoe upon her feet—or who sings and trips about in gay and frivolous amusements or luxurious idleness, instead of seeking acquaintance with domestic affairs, is apt to find at length to her sorrow and shame, that "the ribbon cost more than the dress."

The politician, elevated by the people to posts of honor and trust, and who seeks his own selfish ends rather than the public good—who flatters the people by false promises, rather than serve them with honest purposes, and disposed to appropriate the power placed in his hands for the public good, to advance his own interests, is apt to discover in the end the truth of the remark, that "the ribbon cost more than the dress."

A multitude of other cases might be referred to, illustrating the fact that "the ribbon cost more than the dress," but these will be sufficient to direct the thoughts of our readers to examine for themselves, and ascertain whether in any of their conduct they are paying more for the ribbon than for the dress.—Bangor Courier.

FEMALE DELICACY.

Above every other feature which adorns the female character, delicacy stands foremost within the province of good taste. Not that delicacy which is perpetually in quest of something to be ashamed of, which makes merit of a blush, and simpers at the false construction its own ingenuity has put upon an innocent remark; this spurious kind of delicacy is as far removed from good taste as from good feeling and good sense; but the high minded delicacy which maintains its pure and undeviating walk, alike amongst women as in the society of men, which shrinks from no unnecessary duty, and can speak, when required, with seriousness and kindness, of things at which it would be ashamed to smile or to blush—that delicacy which can give alms without display, and advice without assumption, and which pains not the most humble or susceptible being in creation.

READING.

Of all the amusements that can be imagined for the hard working man, after his daily toil or in its intervals, there is nothing like reading a newspaper or a book. It calls for no bodily exertion, of which he already has enough or perhaps too much. It relieves his home of its dulness and sameness. It transports him into livelier and gayer, and more diversified and interesting scenes; and while he enjoys himself there, he may forget the evils of the present moment fully as much as if he were ever so drunk, with the advantage of himself the next day with the money in his pocket, or at least laid out for real necessaries, and without the miseries of the drunkard's mind and body. Nay it accompanies him to his next day's work; and if what he has been reading be anything above the idlest and lightest, gives him something to think of besides the mere mechanical drudgery of his every day occupation: something he can enjoy while absent and look forward with pleasures to. If I were to pray for a taste which would stand me instead under every variety of circumstance, and be a source of happiness and cheerfulness to me through life, and a shield against its ills, however things might go amiss, and the world frown on me, it would be a taste for reading.—Sir J. Marshall.

ZION.

Behold, the mountain of the Lord
In latter days shall rise;
Shall tow'r above the meaner hills,
And draw the wond'ring eyes.

To this the joyful nations round
And distant tribes shall flow;
"Ascend the hill of God," they cry,
And to the temple go.

The beams that shine on Zion's hill
Shall lighten every land;
The King that reigns in Zion's tow'rs,
Shall all the world command.

Come then, O come from every land
To worship at his shrine;
And walking in the light of God,
In holy beauty shine.

MISERIES OF INDOLENCE.—None so little enjoy life, and are such a burden to themselves, as those who have nothing to do. The active only have the true relish of life. He who knows not what it is to labor, knows not what is to enjoy. The idle know nothing of it. It is exertion that renders rest delightful, and sleep sweet and undisturbed. That the happiness of life depends on the regular prosecution of some laudable purpose or calling, which engages, helps, and improves all our powers: let those bear witness who, after spending years in active usefulness, retire to enjoy themselves. They are a burden to themselves.

FRANKLIN.—At one time the rich merchants and professional men of Philadelphia proposed to form themselves into a social circle, from which all mechanics were to be excluded. The paper drawn up for that purpose was presented to Dr. Franklin for his signature. On examining its contents, he remarked that he could not consent to unite himself with them, inasmuch as by excluding mechanics from their circle, they had excluded God Almighty, the greatest mechanic in the universe!

LAUGH.—"A laugh is worth a hundred groans in any market," said Charles Lamb—and so say we. There never was any good resulting from despondency; and when we see a man trying to groan himself out of difficulties, we conclude him rather weak in the upper story. When you get into a tight place, first look things into the face, and get out the best way you can—but don't "groan."

☞ There is frequently more pleasure in giving a thing than in receiving it. This applies most especially to medicine, advice and kicks.—Ex. paper.

CONFERENCE.

NEW YORK CITY.—There will be a Conference held in the city of New York the 5th, 6th and 7th of Oct. next. It is expected that a majority of both the First Presidency and the Twelve will attend this Conference. The place of holding the Conference in the city of New York will be duly noticed in the New York Herald and New York Sun previous to the time of meeting.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS,
WILLIAM MARKS,
} PRESIDENTS.

GILBERT WATSON, Recorder.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 27.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, SEPT. 20, 1849. [WHOLE No. 143.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

CAN I NOT BE SAVED WITHOUT BAPTISM?

QUESTION.—Can you be saved with baptism?

ANSWER.—Yes, I may be saved if I am baptized; for Jesus Christ has said, that "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

Q.—But can you not be saved without believing?

A.—"Without faith it is impossible to please God;" therefore, if I do not please him, how can I expect to be saved by him?

Q.—True; but suppose it were possible for you to exercise faith in Jesus, and yet neglect to do the things which he and his Apostles commanded, would he be pleased with that neglect any more than with a want of faith?

A.—The commandments of Christ are a law to his children; and if I break his commandments I break the law of God, and that would be sin, for "sin is the transgression of the law;" and sin is the thing which God hates.

Q.—And is it reasonable to expect that you can be saved by displeasing God?

A.—I discover the force of your question, but I am determined to have the truth; and I know that Jesus says, "he that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved;" but does the scripture any where say, that he that is not baptized shall be lost?

Q.—Has God more than one method of saving sinners?

A.—I think not, for that would imply that he was changeable, and had respect to persons if he would save one on one condition, and another on another.

Q.—And did not Christ say to Nicodemus, that except a man be born of water he cannot enter into the kingdom of God?

A.—Yes, but did he not mean spirit when he said water?

Q.—Do you believe that the Bible is true?

A.—Most assuredly I do.

Q.—Then how can you suppose he meant spirit, when he said water; for he said, "of water and of the spirit," putting the water first, and the spirit after; for if he meant spirit when he said water, he should have said of water and of water, which would make the Bible to tell a falsehood as it now stands, and you say you believe the Bible is true?

A.—Yes, I do—and I perceive that there would be an inconsistency in the phrase spirit and spirit, although I had always supposed that the water meant spirit in this place.

Q.—Do you not remember that Jesus was baptized of John in Jordan, in a river of water, and that to fulfill all righteousness, as Christ himself said?

A.—Yes.

Q.—And that Peter, who held the keys of the kingdom of heaven, commanded those who inquired on the day of Pentecost what they should do to be saved to be baptized every one of them for the remission of their sins?

A.—O, yes.

Q.—And that Paul, who had a share in the same ministry, required the people to be buried with him (Christ) by baptism, for the answer of a good conscience, as Peter says? and what would be more likely to produce a good or peaceful conscience than obedience to the requirements of the Savior?

A.—True, we read thus, but I had supposed that baptism was done away now, and that sprinkling answered the same purpose.

Q.—If, in the days of the Apostles, God required men to be buried in or born of the water, and now will save them without that inconvenience, or by sprinkling simply, must he not have changed? and is he not a respecter of persons?

A.—To be honest, it does appear so; and I never can believe that God will change the plan of salvation, or respect any man's person; but how is it that Jesus said, "these signs shall follow them that believe: they shall speak with new tongues; cast out devils; heal the sick; take up serpents, &c.," and we see none of these things in these days?

Q.—I hope you do not doubt the declaration of Christ, do you?

A.—Certainly not; I believe those signs did follow the Apostles, just as the scriptures state, but we see none of these things now?

Q.—Can it be possible that Christ designed the promise of these signs for his Apostles, when he said, "them that believe," addressing himself to his disciples, concerning those who should believe on their testimony, and be baptized by them? Or, was the promise to be confined to that people only, or that age, when Peter said concerning this matter, "this promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call?

A.—No, it cannot.

Q.—Then if you do not doubt the testimony of Jesus and his Apostles, must you not conclude that these signs have ceased to follow the children of men, because faith has ceased from among men?

A.—These are new ideas to me, I will think of them more; but am I to believe that if men would exercise faith, and attend unto the ordinances of the gospel as in days of old, these signs would be made visible again on the earth, or would follow the believer as in days of old?

Q.—Will not the same cause produce the same effects in all ages?

A.—Without doubt it will.

Q.—Why then should not these signs follow those who believe, have faith in God, and keep his commandments, just as they did in the days of Christ?

A.—What! and receive the Holy Ghost too, by the laying on of hands?

Q.—If God has not changed, nor the ordinances of his house, nor the plan of salvation, how can you hope to receive the Holy Ghost in any other way than they did in those days, when "on whomsoever they laid their hands they received the Holy Ghost?"

A.—But why have I not seen and believed these things before?

Q.—How shall they believe in him of whom they have not

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 27.] VOREE, WIS., THURSDAY. SEPT. 20, 1849. [WHOLE No. 143.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

CAN I NOT BE SAVED WITHOUT BAPTISM?

QUESTION.—Can you be saved with baptism?

ANSWER.—Yes, I may be saved if I am baptized; for Jesus Christ has said, that "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

Q.—But can you not be saved without believing?

A.—"Without faith it is impossible to please God;" therefore, if I do not please him, how can I expect to be saved by him?

Q.—True; but suppose it were possible for you to exercise faith in Jesus, and yet neglect to do the things which he and his Apostles commanded, would he be pleased with that neglect any more than with a want of faith?

A.—The commandments of Christ are a law to his children; and if I break his commandments I break the law of God, and that would be sin, for "sin is the transgression of the law;" and sin is the thing which God hates.

Q.—And is it reasonable to expect that you can be saved by displeasing God?

A.—I discover the force of your question, but I am determined to have the truth; and I know that Jesus says, "he that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved;" but does the scripture any where say, that he that is not baptized shall be lost?

Q.—Has God more than one method of saving sinners?

A.—I think not, for that would imply that he was changeable, and had respect to persons if he would save one on one condition, and another on another.

Q.—And did not Christ say to Nicodemus, that except a man be born of water he cannot enter into the kingdom of God?

A.—Yes, but did he not mean spirit when he said water?

Q.—Do you believe that the Bible is true?

A.—Most assuredly I do.

Q.—Then how can you suppose he meant spirit, when he said water; for he said, "of water and of the spirit," putting the water first, and the spirit after; for if he meant spirit when he said water, he should have said of water and of water, which would make the Bible to tell a falsehood as it now stands, and you say you believe the Bible is true?

A.—Yes, I do—and I perceive that there would be an inconsistency in the phrase spirit and spirit, although I had always supposed that the water meant spirit in this place.

Q.—Do you not remember that Jesus was baptized of John in Jordan, in a river of water, and that to fulfill all righteousness, as Christ himself said?

A.—Yes.

Q.—And that Peter, who held the keys of the kingdom of heaven, commanded those who inquired on the day of Pentecost what they should do to be saved to be baptized every one of them for the remission of their sins?

A.—O, yes.

Q.—And that Paul, who had a share in the same ministry, required the people to be buried with him (Christ) by baptism, for the answer of a good conscience, as Peter says? and what would be more likely to produce a good or peaceful conscience than obedience to the requirements of the Savior?

A.—True, we read thus, but I had supposed that baptism was done away now, and that sprinkling answered the same purpose.

Q.—If, in the days of the Apostles, God required men to be buried in or born of the water, and now will save them without that inconvenience, or by sprinkling simply, must he not have changed? and is he not a respecter of persons?

A.—To be honest, it does appear so; and I never can believe that God will change the plan of salvation, or respect any man's person; but how is it that Jesus said, "these signs shall follow them that believe: they shall speak with new tongues; cast out devils; heal the sick; take up serpents, &c.," and we see none of these things in these days?

Q.—I hope you do not doubt the declaration of Christ, do you?

A.—Certainly not; I believe those signs did follow the Apostles, just as the scriptures state, but we see none of these things now?

Q.—Can it be possible that Christ designed the promise of these signs for his Apostles, when he said, "them that believe," addressing himself to his disciples, concerning those who should believe on their testimony, and be baptized by them? Or, was the promise to be confined to that people only, or that age, when Peter said concerning this matter, "this promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call?

A.—No, it cannot.

Q.—Then if you do not doubt the testimony of Jesus and his Apostles, must you not conclude that these signs have ceased to follow the children of men, because faith has ceased from among men?

A.—These are new ideas to me, I will think of them more; but am I to believe that if men would exercise faith, and attend unto the ordinances of the gospel as in days of old, these signs would be made visible again on the earth, or would follow the believer as in days of old?

Q.—Will not the same cause produce the same effects in all ages?

A.—Without doubt it will.

Q.—Why then should not these signs follow those who believe, have faith in God, and keep his commandments, just as they did in the days of Christ?

A.—What! and receive the Holy Ghost too, by the laying on of hands?

Q.—If God has not changed, nor the ordinances of his house, nor the plan of salvation, how can you hope to receive the Holy Ghost in any other way than they did in those days, when "on whomsoever they laid their hands they received the Holy Ghost?".

A.—But why have I not seen and believed these things before?

Q.—How shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard, and how shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach except they be sent?

A.—I have heard a great many preachers before, but they never taught me such doctrine.

Q.—Do you not remember that Paul said, that "the day of Christ should not come except there came a falling away first," a falling from the truth, and "men should be given unto fables?"

A.—Yes, and I begin to suspect it has been so; but do you really think that sins are forgiven when men are baptized?

Q.—Does not the scriptures say so? Did not Peter say he baptized every one of you for the remission of your sins? And did not Ananias say to Saul, arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins?

A.—Yes, the Bible says so; but it says also calling upon the name of the Lord: now I have been upon the penitent form, and called upon the name of the Lord, as Ananias commanded, and my sins are forgiven.

Q.—Can there be a transgression where there is no law? and you say you never had this law before, therefore you could not sin against it; but should you now reject it, how could you get clear of that sin? and where can you find any direction from scripture to erect penitent forms, or to make use of them?

A.—I see your propositions appear quite scriptural.

Q.—Inasmuch as you say you see, does not your sin remain?

A.—And may I be baptized for the remission of my sins?

Q.—Do you believe with all your heart, and are you willing to repent of all your sins and forsake them, determined in the strength of the Lord to keep his commandments to the end? Thou mayest.

NEGLECT OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

It is a prevailing doctrine, in this age of the world, that people, since the coming of Christ, have little or nothing to do with the Old Testament.

The reason they render is, that Christ came to fulfill the Old Testament, and, therefore, it is all fulfilled and done away. This is one of the greatest errors of the age; and except mankind can be brought to understanding on this point, and this error done away, it will plunge them into irretrievable ruin, insomuch that they will not understand the day of their visitation, and the things that belong to their peace.

Christ did indeed come to fulfill the law, and a part of the prophets; but the far greater portion of the prophecies of the Old Testament are yet future as to their fulfillment, and many of them never can be fulfilled until Christ comes again to fulfill them. Hence Peter predicted, in the third chapter of Acts, that "He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Christ's first coming fulfilled a few of the prophecies, but his second coming will fulfill a far greater number of predictions than his first.

He will come with dyed garments from Bozrah, staining his raiment with the blood of sinners, while he treads them in his anger, and tramples them in his fury. (See Isaiah.)

He will come with fire, and with his chariots, to plead with all flesh, and the slain of the Lord shall be many. (See Isaiah.)

He will suddenly come to his temple; while the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble, and be burned up. (See Malachi.)

He will come to smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips he will slay the wicked. (See Isaiah.)

He will come to stand on the Mount of Olives, and deliver his people, the Jews, and destroy their enemies; while the mountain rends beneath his feet, and moves north and south, forming a great valley in the place of the mountain. (See Zechariah.)

He will come, and all the saints with him.

He will come to reign as king over all the earth. (See Zechariah.)

He will come with the clouds of heaven. (See Daniel.)

Now, we would inquire of those who think that Christ fulfilled all at his first coming, what all these predictions mean, and hundreds of others equally important which never had a shadow of fulfillment at his first coming?

We are apt to censure the Jews because they were blind in relation to the prophets referring to his first coming; but are we not, many of us, equally blind in relation to the predictions yet future, which the Jews understand far better than most christians? (so called.)

Will not this blindness upon the Gentiles prevent them from understanding the things that now belong to their peace, and plunge them into as great a destruction as came upon the Jews when they failed to understand the prophets?

Jesus Christ and his Apostles often exhorted the people to search the scriptures. Now, we would inquire what scriptures they referred to in these exhortations? We reply, the Old Testament scriptures, as is evident from the fact that there was no New Testament written till after Christ had gone to the Father. Indeed the New Testament writings were not all given till some time after the death of Paul and Peter, and most of the Apostles; and they were not compiled into a book called the New Testament until the second or third century of the christian era. We would not be understood as doing away the necessity of searching the New Testament, for we consider them both of equal importance now they are given. In fact, the New Testament is as much prophetic as the Old, and they both predict the same things in many instances.

It is for us, then, to give heed to the words of the prophets and apostles, "as to a light that shines in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in our hearts."

"Whatsoever was written beforetime was written for our profit and learning, that we, through patience and comfort of the scriptures, might have hope."

DO YOU KEEP A JOURNAL?

There is no believer in revelation but who feels a lively interest in the history of the ancient Apostles and Elders in the church; and as it is through their writings, and the histories of their lives and travels that we become acquainted with the church in the days of Christ; and through the writings of the Prophets that we learn of the things of God, and the movements of his children in times before the Apostles; it has been enjoined on the Elders and officers in the church of Christ in these Last Days, to keep a record of their proceedings, or write a history of their travels and labors, so that all the passing events of moment may be gathered in from time to time, so that the generations to come may learn of our doings, and of the work of God in our day, as we have learned concerning those who have gone before us.

We have lived to see the commencement of the dispensation of the fulness of times; the dispensation in which all things shall be gathered in one; the dispensation in which all things, which have been spoken by the mouths of all the holy Prophets since the world began, will be fulfilled, and the secrets of all hearts shall be made manifest; the Lord Jesus be revealed from heaven, with all the hosts thereof; and the judgments of the Most High desolate the nations, while Zion and Jerusalem shall again flourish upon the mountins; consequently, we have abundant reason to believe that a history of our day, of the dispensation in which we live, will be one of the most interesting that ever was, or ever will be penned. In this,

heard, and how shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach except they be sent?

A.—I have heard a great many preachers before, but they never taught me such doctrine.

Q.—Do you not remember that Paul said, that "the day of Christ should not come except there came a falling away first," a falling from the truth, and "men should be given unto fables?"

A.—Yes, and I begin to suspect it has been so; but do you really think that sins are forgiven when men are baptized?

Q.—Does not the scriptures say so? Did not Peter say he baptized every one of you for the remission of your sins? And did not Ananias say to Saul, arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins?

A.—Yes, the Bible says so; but it says also calling upon the name of the Lord: now I have been upon the penitent form, and called upon the name of the Lord, as Ananias commanded, and my sins are forgiven.

Q.—Can there be a transgression where there is no law? and you say you never had this law before, therefore you could not sin against it; but should you now reject it, how could you get clear of that sin? and where can you find any direction from scripture to erect penitent forms, or to make use of them?

A.—I see your propositions appear quite scriptural.

Q.—Inasmuch as you say you see, does not your sin remain?

A.—And may I be baptized for the remission of my sins?

Q —Do you believe with all your heart, and are you willing to repent of all your sins and forsake them, determined in the strength of the Lord to keep his commandments to the end? Thou mayest.

NEGLECT OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

It is a prevailing doctrine, in this age of the world, that people, since the coming of Christ, have little or nothing to do with the Old Testament.

The reason they render is, that Christ came to fulfill the Old Testament, and, therefore, it is all fulfilled and done away. This is one of the greatest errors of the age; and except mankind can be brought to understanding on this point, and this error done away, it will plunge them into irretrievable ruin, insomuch that they will not understand the day of their visitation, and the things that belong to their peace.

Christ did indeed come to fulfill the law, and a part of the prophets; but the far greater portion of the prophecies of the Old Testament are yet future as to their fulfillment, and many of them never can be fulfilled until Christ comes again to fulfill them. Hence Peter predicted, in the third chapter of Acts, that "He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Christ's first coming fulfilled a few of the prophecies, but his second coming will fulfill a far greater number of predictions than his first.

He will come with dyed garments from Bozrah, staining his raiment with the blood of sinners, while he treads them in his anger, and tramples them in his fury. (See Isaiah.)

He will come with fire, and with his chariots, to plead with all flesh, and the slain of the Lord shall be many. (See Isaiah.)

He will suddenly come to his temple; while the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble, and be burned up. (See Malachi.)

He will come to smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips he will slay the wicked. (See Isaiah.)

He will come to stand on the Mount of Olives, and deliver his people, the Jews, and destroy their enemies; while the mountain rends beneath his feet, and moves north and south, forming a great valley in the place of the mountain. (See Zechariah.)

He will come, and all the saints with him.

He will come to reign as king over all the earth. (See Zechariah.)

He will come with the clouds of heaven. (See Daniel.)

Now, we would inquire of those who think that Christ fulfilled all at his first coming, what all these predictions mean, and hundreds of others equally important which never had a shadow of fulfillment at his first coming?

We are apt to censure the Jews because they were blind in relation to the prophets referring to his first coming; but are we not, many of us, equally blind in relation to the predictions yet future, which the Jews understand far better than most christians? (so called.)

Will not this blindness upon the Gentiles prevent them from understanding the things that now belong to their peace, and plunge them into as great a destruction as came upon the Jews when they failed to understand the prophets?

Jesus Christ and his Apostles often exhorted the people to search the scriptures. Now, we would inquire what scriptures they referred to in these exhortations? We reply, the Old Testament scriptures, as is evident from the fact that there was no New Testament written till after Christ had gone to the Father. Indeed the New Testament writings were not all given till some time after the death of Paul and Peter, and most of the Apostles; and they were not compiled into a book called the New Testament until the second or third century of the christian era. We would not be understood as doing away the necessity of searching the New Testament, for we consider them both of equal importance now they are given. In fact, the New Testament is as much prophetic as the Old, and they both predict the same things in many instances.

It is for us, then, to give heed to the words of the prophets and apostles, "as to a light that shines in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in our hearts."

"Whatsoever was written beforetime was written for our profit and learning, that we, through patience and comfort of the scriptures, might have hope."

DO YOU KEEP A JOURNAL?

There is no believer in revelation but who feels a lively interest in the history of the ancient Apostles and Elders in the church; and as it is through their writings, and the histories of their lives and travels that we become acquainted with the church in the days of Christ; and through the writings of the Prophets that we learn of the things of God, and the movements of his children in times before the Apostles; it has been enjoined on the Elders and officers in the church of Christ in these Last Days, to keep a record of their proceedings, or write a history of their travels and labors, so that all the passing events of moment may be gathered in from time to time, so that the generations to come may learn of our doings, and of the work of God in our day, as we have learned concerning those who have gone before us.

We have lived to see the commencement of the dispensation of the fulness of times; the dispensation in which all things shall be gathered in one; the dispensation in which all things, which have been spoken by the mouths of all the holy Prophets since the world began, will be fulfilled, and the secrets of all hearts shall be made manifest; the Lord Jesus be revealed from heaven, with all the hosts thereof; and the judgments of the Most High desolate the nations, while Zion and Jerusalem shall again flourish upon the mountains: consequently, we have abundant reason to believe that a history of our day, of the dispensation in which we live, will be one of the most interesting that ever was, or ever will be penned. In this the latest generations may learn of the fulfillment of the prophecies of the ancient Prophets, even as we learn of their prophecies by their histories; and if the prophecy itself be glorious, how much more the fulfillment thereof.

No one need suppose that after the work is completed, the dispen sation ended, (if it were possible to have an end,) that God will give a special revelation and history of what has passed, to some particular one of his many servants; so that all may remain idle in this matter, and thus leave all the work to God, for this is not his method of doing business; but God gives special revelations to man, by which he makes known to us those things which we otherwise have not the means of knowing; and he will no more give a special revelation of those things which are daily passing before us, and which we can write at our leisure, than he will cause the corn of that sluggard to grow who is too lazy to plant it. How, then, shall our posterity produce our history?

Let all the Elders remember the preface to Luke's gospel, and inasmuch as they also have "a perfect understanding" of those things which are daily occurring in their midst, let them write them as he did, and then by and by, when the Lord will, there will be very little difficulty in collecting the histories of the different Elders, and of compiling them in one, thus formtng a more full and explicit history of the church in the last days than we have of the days of Christ and the Apostles. The gospels by Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John are the histories of their lives, and of the things which they saw and heard, and of events which they were familiar with in their day; also, the Acts of the Apostles is a history of the Apostles; and this is the kind of history that we desire should be preparing concerning the servants and the work of God, at the present time.

We are aware there are many who find little time to write, and for this reason we enjoin it upon them, as they have opportunity, to keep a journal, or daily write a word or two, by which they may refresh their memories until the Holy Ghost shall bring all things to their remembrance, or they may find leisure to pen their histories in full; and of such we would inquire, Do you keep a Journal? If so, well—and you will have your reward; and if not, we would again enjoin it upon you, and upon all who have not before heard the admonition, to commence forthwith to keep a journal, or write a history; and see to it, that what you write is strictly true and unexaggerated; so that in the end, all may know of all things concerning this last work, and all knowledge may flow together from the four quarters of the earth, when the Lord shall make his appearing, and we all may be ready to give a full account of our mission, our ministry and stewardship, and receive the welcome tidings, "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

THE DIVISIBILITY OF MATTER.

To be convinced of the infinite divisibility of bodies we have only to walk into a garden, and inhale the sweet incense that arises from a thousand flowers. How very small must be the odoriferous particles of a carnation, which diffuse themselves through a whole garden, and every where meet our sense of smell. If this is not sufficient, let us consider some other objects of nature, as for instance one of those silk threads, the work of a poor worm. Suppose this thread is three hundred and sixty feet long, it weighs but a single grain. Again, consider into how many parts a length of three hundred and sixty feet can be divided. A single inch may be divided into six hundred parts, each as thick as a hair, and consequently perfectly visible. Hence a single grain of silk can be divided into at least two millions five hundred and ninety-two thousand parts, each of which may be seen without the help of a microscope. And as every one of these may be again divided into several more millions of parts, till the division is carried beyond the reach of thought, it is evident that this progression may be infinite. The last particles which are no longer divisible by human industry must still have extension, and be consequently susceptible of divisibility, though we are no longer able to effect it.

Again, if we examine the animal kingdom, we shall discover still farther proofs of the infinite divisibility of matter. Pepper has been put into a microscope, and a multitude of animacules were seen in the water a thousand million times less than a grain of sand. How inconceivably minute then must be the feet, muscles, vessels, nerves and organs of sense in these animals. And how small their eggs and their young ones, and the fluids which circulate in them; here the imagination loses itself, our ideas become confused, and we are incapable of giving form to such very small particles.

What still more claims our attention is, that the more we magnify by means of glasses the productions of nature, the more perfect and beautiful they appear, whilst with works of art it is generally quite contrary; for, when these are seen through a microscope, we find them rough, coarse and imperfect, though executed by the most able artists, and with the utmost care.

Thus the Almighty has impressed even upon the smallest atom, the stamp of infinity. The most subtle body is a world, in which millions of parts unite, and are arranged in the most perfect order. What astonishing wisdom is that which operates with as much order and perfection in the minutest as in the largest works! How infinite that power which has created such a multitude of different bodies! And how gracious that goodness which so richly displays itself in the most minute productions, seeing that each of them has its perfections and use.

Considerations like these tend to make us feel the limits of our capacity; the smallest insect, the least grain of dust may convince us that there are thousands of things of which we are ignorant and cannot explain. Let him who boasts of his talents attempt to enumerate the parts of which the body of an animal, a million times less than a grain of sand is composed. Let him try to determine how minute one of those rays of light must be, when several millions of them can pass through an opening not larger than the eye of a needle. His ideas will soon be confused; and he will be obliged to acknowledge his ignorance, and confess the narrow limits of his capacity. How then can we be proud of our knowledge, and have the presumption to blame the decrees of providence or dispute the arrangements he has made in nature? It is our duty, and even our glory to acknowledge our ignorance, and, in all humility, bow before the infinite God.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

City of James, Beaver Island, Sept. 5th, 1849.

Dear Frank:—I arrived here last Monday morning with a company of between twenty-five and thirty persons, this being the fourth company I have brought on this season, and my seventh visit to Beaver Island since April, 1837. There has been some little dissension among the saints here, all chargeable to the crime of hearing the tales of slanderers, but they ended in smoke, and have blown away. A few persons, who supposed that they could live here without work, and have spent their time in loitering instead of labor, got discouraged lest they should suffer for food before spring; but on the whole the saints are in good spirits and union. The steam mill is not yet in a very forward state, and it will be some time before it can do business, the machinery, &c., for it being detained by a break in the canal from Pittsburgh towards Cleveland. We think it will be progressing again soon. Emigration continues to set this way. The work on the Tabernacle has progressed quite well. The little schooner will be ready to take a part in the fall the latest generations may learn of the fulfillment of the prophecies of the ancient Prophets, even as we learn of their prophecies by their histories; and if the prophecy itself be glorious, how much more the fulfillment thereof.

No one need suppose that after the work is completed, the dispensation ended, (if it were possible to have an end,) that God will give a special revelation and history of what has passed, to some particular one of his many servants; so that all may remain idle in this matter, and thus leave all the work to God, for this is not his method of doing business; but God gives special revelations to man, by which he makes known to us those things which we otherwise have not the means of knowing; and he will no more give a special revelation of those things which are daily passing before us, and which we can write at our leisure, than he will cause the corn of that sluggard to grow who is too lazy to plant it. How, then, shall our posterity produce our history?

Let all the Elders remember the preface to Luke's gospel, and inasmuch as they also have "a perfect understanding" of those things which are daily occurring in their midst, let them write them as he did, and then by and by, when the Lord will, there will be very little difficulty in collecting the histories of the different Elders, and of compiling them in one, thus forming a more full and explicit history of the church in the last days than we have of the days of Christ and the Apostles. The gospels by Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John are the histories of their lives, and of the things which they saw and heard, and of events which they were familiar with in their day; also, the Acts of the Apostles is a history of the Apostles; and this is the kind of history that we desire should be preparing concerning the servants and the work of God, at the present time.

We are aware there are many who find little time to write, and for this reason we enjoin it upon them, as they have opportunity, to keep a journal, or daily write a word or two, by which they may refresh their memories until the Holy Ghost shall bring all things to their remembrance, or they may find leisure to pen their histories in full; and of such we would inquire, Do you keep a Journal? If so, well—and you will have your reward; and if not, we would again enjoin it upon you, and upon all who have not before heard the admonition, to commence forthwith to keep a journal, or write a history; and see to it, that what you write is strictly true and unexaggerated; so that in the end, all may know of all things concerning this last work, and all knowledge may flow together from the four quarters of the earth, when the Lord shall make his appearing, and we all may be ready to give a full account of our mission, our ministry and stewardship, and receive the welcome tidings, "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

THE DIVISIBILITY OF MATTER.

To be convinced of the infinite divisibility of bodies we have only to walk into a garden, and inhale the sweet incense that arises from a thousand flowers. How very small must be the odoriferous particles of a carnation, which diffuse themselves through a whole garden, and every where meet our sense of smell. If this is not sufficient, let us consider some other objects of nature, as for instance one of those silk threads, the work of a poor worm. Suppose this thread is three hundred and sixty feet long, it weighs but a single grain. Again, consider into how many parts a length of three hundred and sixty feet can be divided. A single inch may be divided into six hundred parts, each as thick as a hair, and consequently perfectly visible. Hence a single grain of silk can be divided into at least two millions five hundred and ninety-two thousand parts, each of which may be seen without the help of a microscope. And as every one of these may be again divided into several more millions of parts, till the division is carried beyond the reach of thought, it is evident that this progression may be infinite. The last particles which are no longer divisible by human industry must still have extension, and be consequently susceptible of divisibility, though we are no longer able to effect it.

Again, if we examine the animal kingdom, we shall discover still farther proofs of the infinite divisibility of matter. Pepper has been put into a microscope, and a multitude of animacules were seen in the water a thousand million times less than a grain of sand. How inconceivably minute then must be the feet, muscles, vessels, nerves and organs of sense in these animals. And how small their eggs and their young ones, and the fluids which circulate in them; here the imagination loses itself, our ideas become confused, and we are incapable of giving form to such very small particles.

What still more claims our attention is, that the more we magnify by means of glasses the productions of nature, the more perfect and beautiful they appear, whilst with works of art it is generally quite contrary; for, when these are seen through a microscope, we find them rough, coarse and imperfect, though executed by the most able artists, and with the utmost care.

Thus the Almighty has impressed even upon the smallest atom, the stamp of infinity. The most subtle body is a world, in which millions of parts unite, and are arranged in the most perfect order. What astonishing wisdom is that which operates with as much order and perfection in the minutest as in the largest works! How infinite that power which has created such a multitude of different bodies! And how gracious that goodness which so richly displays itself in the most minute productions, seeing that each of them has its perfections and use.

Considerations like these tend to make us feel the limits of our capacity; the smallest insect, the least grain of dust may convince us that there are thousands of things of which we are ignorant and cannot explain. Let him who boasts of his talents attempt to enumerate the parts of which the body of an animal, a million times less than a grain of sand is composed. Let him try to determine how minute one of those rays of light must be, when several millions of them can pass through an opening not larger than the eye of a needle. His ideas will soon be confused; and he will be obliged to acknowledge his ignorance, and confess the narrow limits of his capacity. How then can we be proud of our knowledge, and have the presumption to blame the decrees of providence or dispute the arrangements he has made in nature? It is our duty, and even our glory to acknowledge our ignorance, and, in all humility, bow before the infinite God.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

City of James, Beaver Island, Sept. 5th, 1849.

Dear Frank:—I arrived here last Monday morning with a company of between twenty-five and thirty persons, this being the fourth company I have brought on this season, and my seventh visit to Beaver Island since April, 1837. There has been some little dissension among the saints here, all chargeable to the crime of hearing the tales of slanderers, but they ended in smoke, and have blown away. A few persons, who supposed that they could live here without work, and have spent their time in loitering instead of labor, got discouraged lest they should suffer for food before spring; but on the whole the saints are in good spirits and union. The steam mill is not yet in a very forward state, and it will be some time before it can do business, the machinery, &c., for it being detained by a break in the canal from Pittsburgh towards Cleveland. We think it will be progressing again soon. Emigration continues to set this way. The work on the Tabernacle has progressed quite well. The little schooner will be ready to take a part in the fall business. I shall make efficient preparations for winter, and leave for the east with my family next Monday. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES J. STRANG.

POETRY.

Come, listen to a prophet's voice,
And hear the word of God;
And in the ways of truth rejoice,
And sing for joy aloud.

CHORUS.

We've found the way the prophets went,
Who lived in days before;
Another prophet now is sent
This knowledge to restore.

The gloom of sullen darkness, spread
Through earth's extended space,
Is banished by our living head,
And God has shown his face.

Through erring schemes in days that past
The world has gone astray,
Yet saints of God have found at last
The straight and narrow way.

'Tis not in man they put their trust,
Or on his arm rely;
Full well assured, all are accursed
Whom Jesus Christ deny.

The Savior to his people said,
"Let ALL my words obey,
And signs shall follow you on earth,
Down to the latest day."

The sick, on whom the oil is pour'd,
And hands in meekness laid,
Are, by the power of God, restor'd,
Thro' faith, as Jesus said.

No more in slavish fear we mourn;
No yoke of bondage wear;
No more beneath delusion groan;
Nor superstitious fear.

Of every dispensation past;
Of every promise made;
The first be last, the last be first—
The living and the dead.

Saviors shall to Mount Zion come—
Their thousands bring to rest
Throughout the great Millennium—
They Eternally be bles't.

EARLY RISING.

A talented physician remarks, that "early rising is the stepping stone to all that is great and good. Both the mind and the body are invigorated by the practice, and much valuable time is gained that is lost to the sluggard. It is the basis upon which health and wealth are founded. The early morning is the best period for reflection and study, for it is then, after refreshing sleep, that the mind is most vigorous and calm. The statesman, as well as the merchant, arranges his plans for the coming day, and all passes smoothly; while he who wastes his morning in bed loses much of that most valuable commodity of life—time—which is never regained. Early rising will often make the poor man rich; the contrary will too often beggar the wealthiest. It will do much towards making the weak strong; and the reverse will enfeeble the strongest.—Second sleep very generally produces headache and languor.—There is nothing more true than that 'he who loses an hour in the morning is seeking it the remainder of the day.' All our greatest men have been early risers; for instance—Newton, Franklin, Wellington, Shakespear, Milton, Chantrey, Reynolds, Hunter, Eldon and Erskine."

STOCKBRIDGE INDIANS.—This remnant of one tribe of Massachusetts Indians, who waged a bloody war upon the pilgrims in days of yore, has been transferred by one removal after another to the shores of Lake Winnebago, in Wisconsin. The government now contemplates their removal into Minesota, and has offered them there the privilege of selecting two townships of land.

☞ A distinguished clergyman, twenty years since, remarked in his praise that "President Holley was an excellent preacher—he never puts any religion or politics in his sermons."

DISCOVERY OF LARGE BONES.—A discovery of bones of the defunct Mastodon have recently been made at a lick about two miles from Warsaw, Mo., which exceed in number and size any yet discovered. The bones were found two or three feet below the surface, imbedded in a black gravel. The number of different heads found amounts to seventy or eighty, and the large amount of detached teeth shows that a number of these monsters has found a common grave in this basin. The skeletons of various species of animals are found deposited in this basin, as the buffalo, elk, deer, &c.

DRESSING WOUNDS.

Nine times out of ten a wound will heal quicker if done up in its own blood, than in any other way. As for a burn, whatever will exclude the air the quickest, is the best. Cotton will do this; so will oiled silk, if stuck down at the edges by any kind of sticking salve. Put nothing on a burn to heal it. Nature will soon do that, when the air is excluded, and the pain will almost immediately cease.

NOTICE.

Tithing intended for the Temple, and donations for the Tower, should hereafter be sent to Gilbert Watson, Voree, Wis.

JAMES J. STRANG.

☞ All letters and communications intended for James J. Strang should hereafter be directed to him, at New York City, until further notice is given.

CONFERENCE.

NEW YORK CITY.—There will be a Conference held in the city of New York the 5th, 6th and 7th of Oct. next. It is expected that a majority of both the First Presidency and the Twelve will attend this Conference. The place of holding the Conference in the city of New York will be duly noticed in the New York Herald and New York Sun previous to the time of meeting.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS, } PRESIDENTS.
WILLIAM MARKS,

GILBERT WATSON, Recorder.

business. I shall make efficient preparations for winter, and leave for the east with my family next Monday. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES J. STRANG.

POETRY.

Come, listen to a prophet's voice,
And hear the word of God;
And in the ways of truth rejoice,
And sing for joy aloud.

CHORUS.

We've found the way the prophets went,
Who lived in days before;
Another prophet now is sent
This knowledge to restore.

The gloom of sullen darkness, spread
Through earth's extended space,
Is banished by our living head,
And God has shown his face.

Through erring schemes in days that past
The world has gone astray,
Yet saints of God have found at last
The straight and narrow way.

'Tis not in man they put their trust,
Or on his arm rely;
Full well assured, all are accursed
Whom Jesus Christ deny.

The Savior to his people said,
"Let ALL my words obey,
And signs shall follow you on earth,
Down to the latest day."

The sick, on whom the oil is pour'd,
And hands in meekness laid,
Are, by the power of God, restor'd,
Thro' faith, as Jesus said.

No more in slavish fear we mourn;
No yoke of bondage wear;
No more beneath delusion groan;
Nor superstitious fear.

Of every dispensation past;
Of every promise made;
The first be last, the last be first—
The living and the dead.

Saviors shall to Mount Zion come—
Their thousands bring to rest
Throughout the great Millennium—
They Eternally be bles't.

EARLY RISING.

A talented physician remarks, that "early rising is the stepping stone to all that is great and good. Both the mind and the body are invigorated by the practice, and much valuable time is gained that is lost to the sluggard. It is the basis upon which health and wealth are founded. The early morning is the best period for reflection and study, for it is then, after refreshing sleep, that the mind is most vigorous and calm. The statesman, as well as the merchant, arranges his plans for the coming day, and all passes smoothly; while he who wastes his morning in bed loses much of that most valuable commodity of life—time—which is never regained. Early rising will often make the poor man rich; the contrary will too often beggar the wealthiest. It will do much towards making the weak strong; and the reverse will enfeeble the strongest.—Second sleep very generally produces headache and languor.—There is nothing more true than that 'he who loses an hour in the morning is seeking it the remainder of the day.' All our greatest men have been early risers; for instance—Newton, Franklin, Wellington, Shakespear, Milton, Chantrey, Reynolds, Hunter, Eldon and Erskine."

STOCKBRIDGE INDIANS.—This remnant of one tribe of Massachusetts Indians, who waged a bloody war upon the pilgrims in days of yore, has been transferred by one removal after another to the shores of Lake Winnebago, in Wisconsin. The government now contemplates their removal into Minesota, and has offered them there the privilege of selecting two townships of land.

☞ A distinguished clergyman, twenty years since, remarked in his praise that "President Holley was an excellent preacher—he never puts any religion or politics in his sermons."

DISCOVERY OF LARGE BONES.—A discovery of bones of the defunct Mastodon have recently been made at a lick about two miles from Warsaw, Mo., which exceed in number and size any yet discovered. The bones were found two or three feet below the surface, imbedded in a black gravel. The number of different heads found amounts to seventy or eighty, and the large amount of detached teeth shows that a number of these monsters has found a common grave in this basin. The skeletons of various species of animals are found deposited in this basin, as the buffalo, elk, deer, &c.

DRESSING WOUNDS.

Nine times out of ten a wound will heal quicker if done up in its own blood, than in any other way. As for a burn, whatever will exclude the air the quickest, is the best. Cotton will do this; so will oiled silk, if stuck down at the edges by any kind of sticking salve. Put nothing on a burn to heal it. Nature will soon do that, when the air is excluded, and the pain will almost immediately cease.

NOTICE.

Tithing intended for the Temple, and donations for the Tower, should hereafter be sent to Gilbert Watson, Voree, Wis.

JAMES J. STRANG.

☞ All letters and communications intended for James J. Strang should hereafter be directed to him, at New York City, until further notice is given.

CONFERENCE.

NEW YORK CITY.—There will be a Conference held in the city of New York the 5th, 6th and 7th of Oct. next. It is expected that a majority of both the First Presidency and the Twelve will attend this Conference. The place of holding the Conference in the city of New York will be duly noticed in the New York Herald and New York Sun previous to the time of meeting.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS,
WILLIAM MARKS,
} PRESIDENTS.

GILBERT WATSON, Recorder.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 28.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, SEPT. 27, 1849. [WHOLE No. 144.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

TO THE SAINTS OF GOD SCATTERED ABROAD, GREETING.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—Suffer me in all patience to stir up your minds by way of remembrance concerning the commandments of the Lord relating to the building of a Temple unto his name, and a strong Tower on the Hill of Promise, and also concerning the support of those whom he has called to continually labor in the ministry. In the revelation appointing the prophet James to lead the flock, and Voree the place of gathering, the Lord said: "I will have a house built unto me there of stone, and there will I show myself to my people by many mighty works." And in a revelation given on the 17th day of January, 1845, and published in the eighth number of the Voree Herald, he gave the following commandment concerning the law of tithing that his work might be accomplished:—

"And this tithing do I require now of all my saints to the end that Voree may be establish and may be a holy city unto me. Yea, verily, I the Lord God require of all the saints besides the assembling themselves together and going out to preach and to teach on the first day of the week, that they shall consecrate unto me one-tenth of their time and labor. Yea, let those who will go out and preach the gospel and the gathering unto Voree, according as I have commanded. Yea, let those who will consecrate unto me and pay into the Treasury of the Church, which is at Voree, of their labor. Yea, let those who will labor for the support of my servants who labor continually for me. Yea, let those who will serve me continually while they have wherewith to support their families, and the saints shall minister unto them while they preach the gospel and gathering as they shall severally need. Yea, let the saints give liberally according as they shall possess, but let none excuse himself that he consecrate unto me one-tenth his time and labor, for thus shall my holy city be established. Yea, verily, and the reward of the faithful is with me, and I will repay him many fold on earth and in heaven everlasting life."

Read also, if you please, the following extracts from a revelation given July 1st, 1846, published in the 7th No.:—

"It pleases me that it hath been in the hearts of my servants to build a house for thee to dwell in, for I have required thee to serve me continually, and not to serve thyself. Take heed, therefore, that thou have a room for translations therein, for it is my will that thou translate ancient records, hidden truths, unto my people. It is my will that thou do it in thy house, and not in the field as thou hast, nor in the houses of unbelievers, that they may look upon sacred things. Therefore whoso seeketh my word let him make speed, and let every good work be accomplished speedily.

"And then shall my people build a house unto my name, that I may institute those ordinances which pertain to the dispensation of the fulness of times. For since my people have been sifted, I will try them again whether they will receive the truth and pervert it not. And I will show unto my servant James all things pertaining to this house, and the priesthood of those who shall minister therein. And I will give unto him the preparation for a holy endowment therein, that he may instruct my people in the principles of the mysteries of my kingdom as they are severally able to learn. And if my people will build a house unto me according to my commandments, and will not be slothful therein, but will make speed to build, then will I endow them, even so many as are faithful and obey me and hearken to my words and the words of my servants whom I have appointed to be their leaders. But to the disobedient and rebellious will I not give power, and if they receive the word it shall be dead unto them, and they shall not have power nor understand it. And I will separate between the righteous and the wicked, and between the obedient and the rebellious. And I will try my people with a great trial. And because they have been tried in chastisement, I will now even try them in faith and in obedience to my law. And if they will diligently serve me and give heed unto all my words that I have spoken and shall speak unto them by the mouth of my servant James, behold in the house which they shall build unto me will I reveal unto them things which have been kept in the secrets of heaven from before the world was, things without which the kingdom of God cannot hold dominion, nor men be redeemed from deceit and violence; and these things are exceeding precious, and to be obtained by obedience and patience, and devotion to truth.

"Therefore whosoever will not abide the preparation faithfully shall not be blessed, neither shall ye teach him the mysteries of the kingdom, nor will I give him power. But of all you teach the mysteries shall you take a great covenant. And he that abideth not in his covenant shall receive of the wrath of God according to the measure of his covenant, and the evil he doeth therein; yea, verily, out of his own mouth shall he be judged, and as he hath spoken so shall it be done unto him.

"Therefore let all my saints set their hands diligently to build a house unto my name, that I may come and dwell therein, and that I may restore unto them that which they have lost, and may give unto them those things which I gave unto my church in former days, and may reveal unto them things which have never been revealed among men. And if my people will cease all their contentions, and their backbitings and jealousies, and will present themselves holy before me, then will I appoint unto them in the days of their poverty, a place for their baptisms for their dead, which pertains unto my house. But in their controversies and contentions I will not bless them, nor bestow upon them mine authority in the most holy things, because they do not understand my law nor do they know for whom they shall baptize, and while they contend one with another they will not receive my word, nor receive wisdom from me; they call evil good, and good evil, and they are not wise. Therefore is the blessing withheld till they humble themselves and hearken to the voice of truth, which my servant James, who is faithful, speaketh unto them.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 28.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, SEPT. 27, 1849. [WHOLE No. 144.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

TO THE SAINTS OF GOD SCATTERED ABROAD, GREETING.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—Suffer me in all patience to stir up your minds by way of remembrance concerning the commandments of the Lord relating to the building of a Temple unto his name, and a strong Tower on the Hill of Promise, and also concerning the support of those whom he has called to continually labor in the ministry. In the revelation appointing the prophet James to lead the flock, and Voree the place of gathering, the Lord said: "I will have a house built unto me there of stone, and there will I show myself to my people by many mighty works." And in a revelation given on the 17th day of January, 1845, and published in the eighth number of the Voree Herald, he gave the following commandment concerning the law of tithing that his work might be accomplished:—

"And this tithing do I require now of all my saints to the end that Voree may be establish and may be a holy city unto me. Yea, verily, I the Lord God require of all the saints besides the assembling themselves together and going out to preach and to teach on the first day of the week, that they shall consecrate unto me one-tenth of their time and labor. Yea, let those who will go out and preach the gospel and the gathering unto Voree, according as I have commanded. Yea, let those who will consecrate unto me and pay into the Treasury of the Church, which is at Voree, of their labor. Yea, let those who will labor for the support of my servants who labor continually for me. Yea, let those who will serve me continually while they have wherewith to support their families, and the saints shall minister unto them while they preach the gospel and gathering as they shall severally need. Yea, let the saints give liberally according as they shall possess, but let none excuse himself that he consecrate unto me one-tenth his time and labor, for thus shall my holy city be established. Yea, verily, and the reward of the faithful is with me, and I will repay him many fold on earth and in heaven everlasting life."

Read also, if you please, the following extracts from a revelation given July 1st, 1846, published in the 7th No.:—

"It pleases me that it hath been in the hearts of my servants to build a house for thee to dwell in, for I have required thee to serve me continually, and not to serve thyself. Take heed, therefore, that thou have a room for translations therein, for it is my will that thou translate ancient records, hidden truths, unto my people. It is my will that thou do it in thy house, and not in the field as thou hast, nor in the houses of unbelievers, that they may look upon sacred things. Therefore whoso seeketh my word let him make speed, and let every good work be accomplished speedily.

"And then shall my people build a house unto my name, that I may institute those ordinances which pertain to the dispensation of the fulness of times. For since my people have been sifted, I will try them again whether they will receive the truth and pervert it not. And I will show unto my servant James all things pertaining to this house, and the priesthood of those who shall minister therein. And I will give unto him the preparation for a holy endowment therein, that he may instruct my people in the principles of the mysteries of my kingdom as they are severally able to learn. And if my people will build a house unto me according to my commandments, and will not be slothful therein, but will make speed to build, then will I endow them, even so many as are faithful and obey me and hearken to my words and the words of my servants whom I have appointed to be their leaders. But to the disobedient and rebellious will I not give power, and if they receive the word it shall be dead unto them, and they shall not have power nor understand it. And I will separate between the righteous and the wicked, and between the obedient and the rebellious. And I will try my people with a great trial. And because they have been tried in chastisement, I will now even try them in faith and in obedience to my law. And if they will diligently serve me and give heed unto all my words that I have spoken and shall speak unto them by the mouth of my servant James, behold in the house which they shall build unto me will I reveal unto them things which have been kept in the secrets of heaven from before the world was, things without which the kingdom of God cannot hold dominion, nor men be redeemed from deceit and violence; and these things are exceeding precious, and to be obtained by obedience and patience, and devotion to truth.

"Therefore whosoever will not abide the preparation faithfully shall not be blessed, neither shall ye teach him the mysteries of the kingdom, nor will I give him power. But of all you teach the mysteries shall you take a great covenant. And he that abideth not in his covenant shall receive of the wrath of God according to the measure of his covenant, and the evil he doeth therein; yea, verily, out of his own mouth shall he be judged, and as he hath spoken so shall it be done unto him.

"Therefore let all my saints set their hands diligently to build a house unto my name, that I may come and dwell therein, and that I may restore unto them that which they have lost, and may give unto them those things which I gave unto my church in former days, and may reveal unto them things which have never been revealed among men. And if my people will cease all their contentions, and their backbitings and jealousies, and will present themselves holy before me, then will I appoint unto them in the days of their poverty, a place for their baptisms for their dead, which pertains unto my house. But in their controversies and contentions I will not bless them, nor bestow upon them mine authority in the most holy things, because they do not understand my law nor do they know for whom they shall baptize, and while they contend one with another they will not receive my word, nor receive wisdom from me; they call evil good, and good evil, and they are not wise. Therefore is the blessing withheld till they humble themselves and hearken to the voice of truth, which my servant James, who is faithful, speaketh unto them.

"And I will show unto my servant James the pattern of the house which ye shall build unto my name, and all things pertaining thereto; and it shall be built on the prairie near White River, to the north-westward of the Hill of Promise, and the city of Voree shall be built around it, both on the plain and on the hills. And it shall be a holy city and a strong hold of truth and righteousness unto me, if my servants serve me; and upon the Hill of Promise shall ye build a hall, which shall be a strong tower unto me, and the pattern thereof, and all things pertaining thereto, will I show unto my servant James; for it is the beginning of the preparation whereby the poor may be exalted, and the oppressed lifted up, and all my servants made equal in their temporal things; for unless they be one in their temporal things, the fulness of my spirit shall be withheld from them. Therefore, come all ye my servants, and bring your silver and your gold, and your precious stones, and bring ye timber and stone and labor with your hands and with cattle, and build a house unto me, and see that you do all things according to the pattern which I will show unto my servant James, as he shall deliver it unto you; and make you a freewill offering, and build a tower of strength unto me upon the Hill of Promise, for if ye do all these things dominion shall be given unto you, and Daniel the prophet shall proclaim the kingdom of your God, and shall call forth the saints to possess it."

Notwithstanding these great and precious promises, (for what greater promises could he give us than "dominion, Daniel the prophet to proclaim the kingdom, and to call forth the saints to possess it, and in heaven everlasting life,") in obedience to the commandments of God the saints in general were slack in serving him, slothful in building a house unto his name, and exceedingly dilatory in paying their tithes and offerings, so much so that the Lord said in a revelation given on the 7th of January, 1849:—

"Ye have robbed me in tithes and in offerings, and have been slothful in building a House unto my name, that I may dwell in it, and in building a Tower of Strength for the defence and the dwelling of Zion."

And repeated the foregoing command, saying:—

"Once more I command all my saints to bring in their tithes, according to the law I have given them, and build a house unto me. Whosover will not do it shall not enter into the house of the Lord. Let mine Apostles call on all the saints, both by word and proclamation, to do this thing. And let faithful and chosen ones be sent unto them, to receive of their tithes for this work, and let the work progress from this time forward. And send faithful ones unto the saints, and call on them to make a freewill offering for the Tower which I have commanded you to build on the Hill of Promise, and let the same be built, that it may be a habitation and a defence for the saints that shall gather together and keep the Order of Enoch, which I have revealed unto my servants, and let a subscription be circulated, that those who have not sold their possessions and cannot yet gather up their goods to the places appointed may assist in building the Towers of Zion, and may obtain an inheritance among the faithful."

The Lord finding some who had not denied his name, but had remembered his word and kept his commandments, and who had united with one heart and one mind to do the work he had commanded them, and being ever ready to reward the faithful, he sent the prophet Elijah on the 7th of August unto his servant James, to commit unto him a dispensation to administer baptisms for the dead, with the intelligence, however, that those only who are embraced in the following description should have the inestimable privilege of being baptized for their dead, viz.:—

"And these shall be baptized for the dead: all the faithful saints who keep and abide in the Order of Enoch; all who have paid tithing according to my law, for the building of a house unto my name in Voree, and for the upbuilding of my church; all who from this time forward will and do come up and do these things, striving faithfully to redeem the time, that a house may be speedily built unto my name, wherein I may reveal mysteries and institute among the saints the ordinances for the endowment of Zion and all her municipals; and all who, standing in the priesthood, have labored faithfully in their several ministries from the time the commandment went forth to build a house unto my name in Voree."

But the Lord in his mercy and long suffering not being willing that any should perish, but that all should come unto him and live, said:—

"And now let all who are scattered abroad, and all who have robbed me through covetousness and in tithes and offerings, and all who have neglected to administer in the gospel as I have called them, come and from this time forward assist my servants who are building a house unto my name, and who are proclaiming my word unto the nations, that they may enjoy this blessing with them: for only they that labor shall receive the reward; and those who labor to build my house, and to proclaim my word, and to establish my kingdom, will I make saviors, and upon mount Zion shall they stand with crowns on their heads."

I will not attempt to add unto what the Lord has said, but simply close by exhorting you as a minister of the Lord Jesus to give heed unto the voice of God in these things and in all others, lest destruction come upon you, and there be none to deliver. Your brother in the new covenant, GILBERT WATSON, Bishop.

On board Propeller Oneida, Lake St. Clair, Sept. 12th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I am on my way to attend the Conference at Franklin, accompanied by my family, and six Elders, part of whom go to Franklin and part forward to various places east, expecting that nearly all, with many more, will meet in New York the 6th of October. We have had a somewhat rough passage, and nearly all the company have suffered with sea sickness; but now the weather is very fine, and our company, with the friends we have made on the passage, are together worshiping God and singing parting hymns as we approach Detroit, when those who are bound to Franklin part company.

We have been treated with great kindness on the Oneida, and all agree in commending the boat to the traveling public. I will no longer neglect to write what I ought to have said before, that on our way down from Racine to Beaver we received the greatest kindness from Capt. Tuttle, of the Delaware, with whom we took passage, and I had not a little amusement talking over with him the puff I gave Capt. Wilson, of the Lady, and Mr. Humphrey, of the old north pier, Milwaukee. Well, we hope to go with Tuttle many times hereafter, and have the fullest confidence that he will never get such a puff as Jack Wilson worked for and obtained.

We had no preaching on the Delaware, though invited by the Capt., the weather being so bad that almost every passenger was sea sick. Last evening Bro. Adams preached on the Oneida by invitation of Capt. Pheatt, to a very attentive audience of passengers. I do not believe their is one person on board but thinks better of our church and faith for having traveled with us. Every countenance expresses it. And I feel still more assured of the same thing from the fact that various articles have gone the rounds of the papers throughout the U. S. speaking very favorable of us and of Beaver Island, evidently written by passengers who have traveled with us on our various trips. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES J. STRANG.

"And I will show unto my servant James the pattern of the house which ye shall build unto my name, and all things pertaining thereto; and it shall be built on the prairie near White River, to the north-westward of the Hill of Promise, and the city of Voree shall be built around it, both on the plain and on the hills. And it shall be a holy city and a strong hold of truth and righteousness unto me, if my servants serve me; and upon the Hill of Promise shall ye build a hall, which shall be a strong tower unto me, and the pattern thereof, and all things pertaining thereto, will I show unto my servant James; for it is the beginning of the preparation whereby the poor may be exalted, and the oppressed lifted up, and all my servants made equal in their temporal things; for unless they be one in their temporal things, the fulness of my spirit shall be withheld from them. Therefore, come all ye my servants, and bring your silver and your gold, and your precious stones, and bring ye timber and stone and labor with your hands and with cattle, and build a house unto me, and see that you do all things according to the pattern which I will show unto my servant James, as he shall deliver it unto you; and make you a freewill offering, and build a tower of strength unto me upon the Hill of Promise, for if ye do all these things dominion shall be given unto you, and Daniel the prophet shall proclaim the kingdom of your God, and shall call forth the saints to possess it."

Notwithstanding these great and precious promises, (for what greater promises could he give us than "dominion, Daniel the prophet to proclaim the kingdom, and to call forth the saints to possess it, and in heaven everlasting life,") in obedience to the commandments of God the saints in general were slack in serving him, slothful in building a house unto his name, and exceedingly dilatory in paying their tithes and offerings, so much so that the Lord said in a revelation given on the 7th of January, 1849:—

"Ye have robbed me in tithes and in offerings, and have been slothful in building a House unto my name, that I may dwell in it, and in building a Tower of Strength for the defence and the dwelling of Zion."

And repeated the foregoing command, saying:—

"Once more I command all my saints to bring in their tithes, according to the law I have given them, and build a house unto me. Whosoever will not do it shall not enter into the house of the Lord. Let mine Apostles call on all the saints, both by word and proclamation, to do this thing. And let faithful and chosen ones be sent unto them, to receive of their tithes for this work, and let the work progress from this time forward. And send faithful ones unto the saints, and call on them to make a freewill offering for the Tower which I have commanded you to build on the Hill of Promise, and let the same be built, that it may be a habitation and a defence for the saints that shall gather together and keep the Order of Enoch, which I have revealed unto my servants, and let a subscription be circulated, that those who have not sold their possessions and cannot yet gather up their goods to the places appointed may assist in building the Towers of Zion, and may obtain an inheritance among the faithful."

The Lord finding some who had not denied his name, but had remembered his word and kept his commandments, and who had united with one heart and one mind to do the work he had commanded them, and being ever ready to reward the faithful, he sent the prophet Elijah on the 7th of August unto his servant James, to commit unto him a dispensation to administer baptisms for the dead, with the intelligence, however, that those only who are embraced in the following description should have the inestimable privilege of being baptized for their dead, viz.:—

"And these shall be baptized for the dead: all the faithful saints who keep and abide in the Order of Enoch; all who have paid tithing according to my law, for the building of a house unto my name in Voree, and for the upbuilding of my church; all who from this time forward will and do come up and do these things, striving faithfully to redeem the time, that a house may be speedily built unto my name, wherein I may reveal mysteries and institute among the saints the ordinances for the endowment of Zion and all her municipals; and all who, standing in the priesthood, have labored faithfully in their several ministries from the time the commandment went forth to build a house unto my name in Voree."

But the Lord in his mercy and long suffering not being willing that any should perish, but that all should come unto him and live, said:—

"And now let all who are scattered abroad, and all who have robbed me through covetousness and in tithes and offerings, and all who have neglected to administer in the gospel as I have called them, come and from this time forward assist my servants who are building a house unto my name, and who are proclaiming my word unto the nations, that they may enjoy this blessing with them: for only they that labor shall receive the reward; and those who labor to build my house, and to proclaim my word, and to establish my kingdom, will I make saviors, and upon mount Zion shall they stand with crowns on their heads."

I will not attempt to add unto what the Lord has said, but simply close by exhorting you as a minister of the Lord Jesus to give heed unto the voice of God in these things and in all others, lest destruction come upon you, and there be none to deliver. Your brother in the new covenant, GILBERT WATSON, Bishop.

On board Propeller Oneida, Lake St. Clair, Sept. 12th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I am on my way to attend the Conference at Franklin, accompanied by my family, and six Elders, part of whom go to Franklin and part forward to various places east, expecting that nearly all, with many more, will meet in New York the 6th of October. We have had a somewhat rough passage, and nearly all the company have suffered with sea sickness; but now the weather is very fine, and our company, with the friends we have made on the passage, are together worshiping God and singing parting hymns as we approach Detroit, when those who are bound to Franklin part company.

We have been treated with great kindness on the Oneida, and all agree in commending the boat to the traveling public. I will no longer neglect to write what I ought to have said before, that on our way down from Racine to Beaver we received the greatest kindness from Capt. Tuttle, of the Delaware, with whom we took passage, and I had not a little amusement talking over with him the puff I gave Capt. Wilson, of the Lady, and Mr. Humphrey, of the old north pier, Milwaukee. Well, we hope to go with Tuttle many times hereafter, and have the fullest confidence that he will never get such a puff as Jack Wilson worked for and obtained.

We had no preaching on the Delaware, though invited by the Capt., the weather being so bad that almost every passenger was sea sick. Last evening Bro. Adams preached on the Oneida by invitation of Capt. Pheatt, to a very attentive audience of passengers. I do not believe their is one person on board but thinks better of our church and faith for having traveled with us. Every countenance expresses it. And I feel still more assured of the same thing from the fact that various articles have gone the rounds of the papers throughout the U. S. speaking very favorable of us and of Beaver Island, evidently written by passengers who have traveled with us on our various trips. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES J. STRANG.

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD AT THE CITY OF JAMES, BEAVER ISLAND, ON THE 8TH AND 9TH OF SEPTEMBER, 1849.

President Strang called the Conference to order, and read part of the ninth chapter of Nehemiah. Singing. Prayer by Pres. Strang. Singing. Preaching by L. D. Hickey, one of the Twelve, from these words: "Love the Lord thy God with all thy might, mind and strength, and thy neighbor as thyself," followed by Pres. Strang on the same subject. Adjourned till to-morrow at 9 o'clock. Singing. Benediction by George J. Adams, one of the First Presidents.

SUNDAY MORNING—SEPT. 9TH.—Conference resumed its session. Singing. Prayer by Phineas Wright, one of the Twelve. Singing. Preaching by George J. Adams, from the 30th chapter of Jeremiah, 10th and 11th verses. Adjourned till 3 o'clock, P. M.—Benediction by Ebenezer Page, one of the Twelve.

AFTERNOON SESSION.—Opened by singing. Prayer by James Blakeslee, one of the Twelve. Singing. Preaching by Pres. Strang, on the foundation and standard of truth, followed by G. J. Adams. Bros. Albert B. Corkens and Edward Preston were ordained Elders in the quorum of the Seventies by revelation of God and the laying on of hands. Benediction by G. J. Adams.

The following missions were then given: Bro. Ebenezer Page, one of the Twelve, sent to the Conference at the City of New York, and from there to Georgetown, Mass. L. D. Hickey, one of the Twelve, to the State of New York, and from there to New Jersey, and with him Bro. E. Preston, of the quorum of the Seventies, with full power to establish the gospel in those countries, according to the order of God. Bro. A. B. Corkens to go to Canada, with Jehiel Savage and Phineas Wright, of the Twelve. Samuel Graham, Pres. of the Twelve, to go to the New York Conference, and from there to Salem, Mass. One baptized at this Conference. The congregation dismissed by Samuel Graham.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS, } PRESIDENTS.

HYRUM G. HALL, Secretary.

Beaver Island, Sept. 8th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I am in the receipt of a letter from Bro. Hess, the presiding Elder of the church in Philadelphia, saying that one Uriah C. Nickerson was in Delaware representing himself as a member of the church of thirteen years standing, pretending to be well acquainted with me, and to have letters of my writing advocating certain pernicious doctrines, &c. I do not know any person by that name, & never before heard of such. There is one Uriel C. H. Nickerson living at Lyonsdale, four miles from Voree, decidedly the meanest man I ever did see, but he was at Voree trying to disturb our Conference by rowdyism a few days after Bro. Hess wrote, and has been assisting J. E. Page in getting up opposition meetings for several weeks previous. I presume he has not been fifty miles from Voree in twelve months. This Uriah C. Nickerson is doubtless a mere impostor, who has assumed that name as a convenient incognito. Indeed I am inclined to think he is the veritable T. W. Nixon, who we have twice had occasion to publish as an impostor. He has no such letters from me as he mentions, for the simple reason that I never wrote such.

ANOTHER.

One Isaac Hayden has turned up at North Bay, N. Y., professing to have been recently baptized and ordained by Elder Brownson, and zealously engaged in preaching against the church. He has no license, but says Elder Brownson had not time to write it. Truly unfortunate! I only hope that every body will hear just as much of these people as they wish to. Our cause is truly prosperous when any one can live by crying it down. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES J. STRANG.

Voree, Wis., September 17th, 1849.

BROTHER COOPER:—We visited Waukesha on the 15th inst., and found the brethren there firm in the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, and in the work which he has set his hand to perform in the last days. And on the following day organized a branch of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter day Saints, called the Waukesha branch. Bro. Almon White was chosen presiding Elder, Bro. Henry Moon a Priest, Bros. Edwin Higley and Jesse Lacy were chosen and ordained Teachers, and Nelson Higley Clerk, numbering in all twenty-two members. Two persons embraced the faith, and were baptized on Sunday. Others expressed full confidence in the gospel we preached, but they postponed obedience till a more convenient season, which perhaps will never come. We found also a few known in scripture as "mockers," who will soon take their place with "sorcerers, dogs," &c., "without the city." On the whole, however, we had a good time, only tarrying some thirty-six hours. We held four meetings, which were well attended, and the spirit of God being there, the saints rejoiced. The spirit manifest confessed that God has a living mouth piece in the church, hence we know it was of God. Yours in the faith of the Son of God,

BENJAMIN G. WRIGHT,
JASON W. BRIGGS.

Baltimore, Md., September 7th, 1849.

BRO. JAMES:—Having a few leisure moments I think that I could not spend it better than in writing to you. I have been preaching every Sunday since I left you on Beaver Isle, (the future home of the saints,) but most of the time at Ellicott's mills, about ten miles from here. When I first went there I found two saints, Bro. Thomas Cramlet and his wife. She saw me and Elder Whipple in a vision last winter, and she recognized me as soon as she saw me. I have baptized two since I have been laboring there, and many more are convinced of the truth of this work. There is a call for preaching about sixty miles from here, but we cannot supply the call for the want of Elders; but I think there is a great work to be done in this region this coming winter. I think that we shall hold a Conference as soon as Bro. G. J. Adams returns home. We have several members who will be ordained Elders, good and faithful men of God, who are anxious to go to work for God. I remain yours in the dispensation of the fulness of times,

A. N. HOSMER.

MISTAKES OF THE RICH.

The Egyptian King, who, swollen with grandeur, ordered a collossal staircase built to his new palace, discovered to his chagrin, that it required a ladder to get from one step to the other. He had forgotten that a king's legs, after all, are as short as a beggar's. Aggrandize as you may, the limits of our senses check us miserably every moment. You call yourself proprietor! Houses and pictures outlive you, and after taking your will of them for a short time, you are carried out of your door feet foremost, never again to enter it. "Proprietors," you were perhaps, of farms and castles, estates and mountains; but now you are nothing but a hole in the ground, six feet by two!

The artist who visits your gallery while you live and own it, enjoys it more than you.

You are rich enough to dine twenty-four times a day, but you must eat sparingly even once. Your cellar is full of exquisite wine, but you can only drink one bottle yourself; and to use

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD AT THE CITY OF JAMES, BEAVER ISLAND, ON THE 8TH AND 9TH OF SEPTEMBER, 1849.

President Strang called the Conference to order, and read part of the ninth chapter of Nehemiah. Singing. Prayer by Pres. Strang. Singing. Preaching by L. D. Hickey, one of the Twelve, from these words: "Love the Lord thy God with all thy might, mind and strength, and thy neighbor as thyself," followed by Pres. Strang on the same subject. Adjourned till to-morrow at 9 o'clock. Singing. Benediction by George J. Adams, one of the First Presidents.

SUNDAY MORNING—SEPT. 9TH.—Conference resumed its session. Singing. Prayer by Phineas Wright, one of the Twelve. Singing. Preaching by George J. Adams, from the 30th chapter of Jeremiah, 10th and 11th verses. Adjourned till 3 o'clock, P. M.—Benediction by Ebenezer Page, one of the Twelve.

AFTERNOON SESSION.—Opened by singing. Prayer by James Blakeslee, one of the Twelve. Singing. Preaching by Pres. Strang, on the foundation and standard of truth, followed by G. J. Adams. Bros. Albert B. Corkens and Edward Preston were ordained Elders in the quorum of the Seventies by revelation of God and the laying on of hands. Benediction by G. J. Adams.

The following missions were then given: Bro. Ebenezer Page, one of the Twelve, sent to the Conference at the City of New York, and from there to Georgetown, Mass. L. D. Hickey, one of the Twelve, to the State of New York, and from there to New Jersey, and with him Bro. E. Preston, of the quorum of the Seventies, with full power to establish the gospel in those countries, according to the order of God. Bro. A. B. Corkens to go to Canada, with Jehiel Savage and Phineas Wright, of the Twelve. Samuel Graham, Pres. of the Twelve, to go to the New York Conference, and from there to Salem, Mass. One baptized at this Conference. The congregation dismissed by Samuel Graham.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS, } PRESIDENTS.

HYRUM G. HALL, Secretary.

Beaver Island, Sept. 8th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I am in the receipt of a letter from Bro. Hess, the presiding Elder of the church in Philadelphia, saying that one Uriah C. Nickerson was in Delaware representing himself as a member of the church of thirteen years standing, pretending to be well acquainted with me, and to have letters of my writing advocating certain pernicious doctrines, &c. I do not know any person by that name, & never before heard of such. There is one Uriel C. Nickerson living at Lyonsdale, four miles from Voree, decidedly the meanest man I ever did see, but he was at Voree trying to disturb our Conference by rowdyism a few days after Bro. Hess wrote, and has been assisting J. E. Page in getting up opposition meetings for several weeks previous. I presume he has not been fifty miles from Voree in twelve months. This Uriah C. Nickerson is doubtless a mere impostor, who has assumed that name as a convenient incognito. Indeed I am inclined to think he is the veritable T. W. Nixon, who we have twice had occasion to publish as an impostor. He has no such letters from me as he mentions, for the simple reason that I never wrote such.

ANOTHER.

One Isaac Hayden has turned up at North Bay, N. Y., professing to have been recently baptized and ordained by Elder Brownson, and zealously engaged in preaching against the church. He has no license, but says Elder Brownson had not time to write it. Truly unfortunate! I only hope that every body will hear just as much of these people as they wish to. Our cause is truly prosperous when any one can live by crying it down. Truly and sincerely,

JAMES J. STRANG.

Voree, Wis., September 17th, 1849.

BROTHER COOPER:—We visited Waukesha on the 15th inst., and found the brethren there firm in the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, and in the work which he has set his hand to perform in the last days. And on the following day organized a branch of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter day Saints, called the Waukesha branch. Bro. Almon White was chosen presiding Elder, Bro. Henry Moon a Priest, Bros. Edwin Higley and Jesse Lacy were chosen and ordained Teachers, and Nelson Higley Clerk, numbering in all twenty-two members. Two persons embraced the faith, and were baptized on Sunday. Others expressed full confidence in the gospel we preached, but they postponed obedience till a more convenient season, which perhaps will never come. We found also a few known in scripture as "mockers," who will soon take their place with "sorcerers, dogs," &c., "without the city." On the whole, however, we had a good time, only tarrying some thirty-six hours. We held four meetings, which were well attended, and the spirit of God being there, the saints rejoiced. The spirit manifest confessed that God has a living mouth piece in the church, hence we know it was of God. Yours in the faith of the Son of God,

BENJAMIN G. WRIGHT,
JASON W. BRIGGS.

Baltimore, Md., September 7th, 1849.

BRO. JAMES:—Having a few leisure moments I think that I could not spend it better than in writing to you. I have been preaching every Sunday since I left you on Beaver Isle, (the future home of the saints,) but most of the time at Ellicott's mills, about ten miles from here. When I first went there I found two saints, Bro. Thomas Cramlet and his wife. She saw me and Elder Whipple in a vision last winter, and she recognized me as soon as she saw me. I have baptized two since I have been laboring there, and many more are convinced of the truth of this work. There is a call for preaching about sixty miles from here, but we cannot supply the call for the want of Elders; but I think there is a great work to be done in this region this coming winter. I think that we shall hold a Conference as soon as Bro. G. J. Adams returns home. We have several members who will be ordained Elders, good and faithful men of God, who are anxious to go to work for God. I remain yours in the dispensation of the fulness of times,

A. N. HOSMER.

MISTAKES OF THE RICH.

The Egyptian King, who, swollen with grandeur, ordered a colossal staircase built to his new palace, discovered to his chagrin, that it required a ladder to get from one step to the other. He had forgotten that a king's legs, after all, are as short as a beggar's. Aggrandize as you may, the limits of our senses check us miserably every moment. You call yourself proprietor! Houses and pictures outlive you, and after taking your will of them for a short time, you are carried out of your door feet foremost, never again to enter it. "Proprietors," you were perhaps, of farms and castles, estates and mountains; but now you are nothing but a hole in the ground, six feet by two!

The artist who visits your gallery while you live and own it, enjoys it more than you.

You are rich enough to dine twenty-four times a day, but you must eat sparingly even once. Your cellar is full of exquisite wine, but you can only drink one bottle yourself; and to use your store you are obliged to call around you your friends, relatives, parasites—a little world who live upon your substance, and who, instead of being grateful, are likely to make you a return in envy. You have thirty horses in your stable; you can mount but one of them, or ride after but two or four.

Rothschild is forced to content himself with the sky as the poor newspaper writer, and the great banker cannot order a private sunset, nor add one ray to the magnificence of the night. The same air swells all lungs—the same kind of blood fills all veins. Each one possesses really only his own thoughts and his own senses. Soul and body—these are the only property which a man owns.

All that is valuble in this world is to be had for nothing. Genius, beauty and love, are not bought and sold. You may buy a rich bracelet, but not a well turned arm on which to wear it—a pearl necklace, but not a pearly throat with which it shall vie. The richest merchant on earth will vainly offer his fortune to be able to write a verse like Byron. One comes into the world naked and goes out naked. The difference in the fineness of a bit of fine linen is not much. Man is a handful of clay, which turns rapidly back again to dust, and which is compelled nightly to relapse into nothingness of sleep, to get strength to commence life again on the morrow.

In this life, so partaken by annihilation, what is there real? Is it our sleeping or waking—our dreaming or our thought? Do we arise (to the more valuable life) when we go to bed or when we arise? Man is no proprietor! Or he owns but the breath as it traverses his lips, and the idea flits across his mind. And even the idea belongs to another.

CHOLERA RECORD AT ST. LOUIS.

The St. Louis Republican has compiled a correct table of the mortality of that city, from April 23d, to August 6th, which tells a fearful tale. In a little over one hundred and sixty days six thousand persons have been committed to the grave—and this out of a population of less than sixty thousand. This is an awful mortality—perhaps greater than in any other city in the United States, of the same population.

It should be observed, however, that many hundreds of these persons had just landed there, bringing the seeds of death with them.

Table of Interments in the several Public Cemeteries, attached to St. Louis, from the twenty-third day of April to the sixth of August, 1849.

For the week ending—

	Total.	Cholera.	Under 5 years.
April 30,	131	41	50
May 7,	135	78	28
May 14,	273	185	46
May 21,	192	127	24
May 28,	186	115	44
June 4,	144	75	34
June 11,	288	181	72
June 18,	510	404	106
June 25,	763	589	164
July 2,	903	619	230
July 9,	778	591	162
July 16,	867	639	197
July 23,	442	268	140
July 30,	225	94	94
Aug. 6,	152	34	72
	5,989	4,060	1,493

WHAT IS HOME?

What is home? is it but a sound,
But a light and idle word?
That breathes, for a while a spell around,
And then no more is heard?

Ah no! 'tis a strain that ever plays
O'er the chords of the human heart—
'Tis lisp'd in our earliest, happiest days
And its tones can ne'er depart!—

Go ask the mariner tempest toss'd
O'er the wild and trackless deep,
If all remembrance of home is lost
In his short and troubled sleep?—

And as he brushes the tear away
From his dim and half-clos'd eye
A smile o'er his rugged cheek will play,
While he answers, with a sigh,—

"Ah no! 'tis a beacon, whose bright beams
My aching bosom warms—
It flashes across my feverish dreams
Through the darkest night of storms!"

Go breathe in the dying wanderer's ear,
When his fluttering pulse is low!
And ask, if the friends of his home were near
Would they glad his spirits now?—

And the last faint smile that shall ever play
O'er his lip those friends to bless!
Too plainly tells what the heart would say,
As he faintly breathes, "ah, yes!"

Then say not that "Home" is only a sound—
But a light, and idle word
That breathes for a while a spell around,
And then no more is heard!

The books at the Register's office, Boston, show that the mortalty of August was greater, by nearly one half, than of any month since it was an incorporated city. The number of deaths during the month was over one thousand.

☞ The cholera still continues its ravages in London, and the southern provinces of England.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

Mary Platt,	$1,00 to Vol. IV No. 22
Tobias McNutt,	2,00 to Vol. V No. 33
Elizabeth McNutt,	1,00 to Vol. IV No. 52
John S. Comstock,	2,00 to Vol. V No. 13

CONFERENCE.

New York City.—There will be a Conference held in the city of New York the 5th, 6th and 7th of Oct. next. It is expected that a majority of both the First Presidency and the Twelve will attend this Conference. The place of holding the Conference in the city of New York will be duly noticed in the New York Herald and New York Sun previous to the time of meeting.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS,
WILLIAM MARKS,
} Presidents.

Gilbert Watson, Recorder.

your store you are obliged to call around you your friends, relatives, parasites—a little world who live upon your substance, and who, instead of being grateful, are likely to make you a return in envy. You have thirty horses in your stable; you can mount but one of them, or ride after but two or four.

Rothschild is forced to content himself with the sky as the poor newspaper writer, and the great banker cannot order a private sunset, nor add one ray to the magnificence of the night. The same air swells all lungs—the same kind of blood fills all veins. Each one possesses really only his own thoughts and his own senses. Soul and body—these are the only property which a man owns.

All that is valuble in this world is to be had for nothing. Genius, beauty and love, are not bought and sold. You may buy a rich bracelet, but not a well turned arm on which to wear it—a pearl necklace, but not a pearly throat with which it shall vie. The richest merchant on earth will vainly offer his fortune to be able to write a verse like Byron. One comes into the world naked and goes out naked. The difference in the fineness of a bit of fine linen is not much. Man is a handful of clay, which turns rapidly back again to dust, and which is compelled nightly to relapse into nothingness of sleep, to get strength to commence life again on the morrow.

In this life, so partaken by annihilation, what is there real? Is it our sleeping or waking—our dreaming or our thought? Do we arise (to the more valuable life) when we go to bed or when we arise? Man is no proprietor! Or he owns but the breath as it traverses his lips, and the idea flits across his mind. And even the idea belongs to another.

CHOLERA RECORD AT ST. LOUIS.

The St. Louis Republican has compiled a correct table of the mortality of that city, from April 23d, to August 6th, which tells a fearful tale. In a little over one hundred and sixty days six thousand persons have been committed to the grave—and this out of a population of less than sixty thousand. This is an awful mortality—perhaps greater than in any other city in the United States, of the same population.

It should be observed, however, that many hundreds of these persons had just landed there, bringing the seeds of death with them.

Table of Interments in the several Public Cemeteries, attached to St. Louis, from the twenty-third day of April to the sixth of August, 1849.

For the week ending—

	Total.	Cholera.	Under 5 years.
April 30,	131	41	50
May 7,	135	78	28
May 14,	273	185	46
May 21,	192	127	24
May 28,	186	115	44
June 4,	144	75	34
June 11,	288	181	72
June 18,	510	404	106
June 25,	763	589	164
July 2,	903	619	230
July 9,	778	591	162
July 16,	867	639	197
July 23,	442	268	140
July 30,	225	94	94
Aug. 6,	152	34	72
	5,989	4,060	1,493

WHAT IS HOME?

What is home? is it but a sound,
But a light and idle word?
That breathes, for a while a spell around,
And then no more is heard?

Ah no! 'tis a strain that ever plays
O'er the chords of the human heart—
'Tis lisp'd in our earliest, happiest days
And its tones can ne'er depart!—

Go ask the mariner tempest toss'd
O'er the wild and trackless deep,
If all remembrance of home is lost
In his short and troubled sleep?—

And as he brushes the tear away
From his dim and half-clos'd eye
A smile o'er his rugged cheek will play.
While he answers, with a sigh,—

"Ah no! 'tis a beacon, whose bright beams
My aching bosom warms—
It flashes across my feverish dreams
Through the darkest night of storms!"

Go breathe in the dying wanderer's ear,
When his fluttering pulse is low!
And ask, if the friends of his home were near
Would they glad his spirits now?—

And the last faint smile that shall ever play
O'er his lip those friends to bless!
Too plainly tells what the heart would say.
As he faintly breathes, "ah, yes!"

Then say not that "Home" is only a sound—
But a light, and idle word
That breathes for a while a spell around.
And then no more is heard!

The books at the Register's office, Boston, show that the mortality of August was greater, by nearly one half, than of any month since it was an incorporated city. The number of deaths during the month was over one thousand.

☞ The cholera still continues its ravages in London, and the southern provinces of England.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

Mary Platt,	$1,00 to Vol. IV No. 22
Tobias McNutt,	2,00 to Vol. V No. 33
Elizabeth McNutt,	1,00 to Vol. IV No. 52
John S. Comstock,	2,00 to Vol. V No. 13

CONFERENCE.

NEW YORK CITY.—There will be a Conference held in the city of New York the 5th, 6th and 7th of Oct. next. It is expected that a majority of both the First Presidency and the Twelve will attend this Conference. The place of holding the Conference in the city of New York will be duly noticed in the New York Herald and New York Sun previous to the time of meeting.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS,
WILLIAM MARKS,
} PRESIDENTS.

GILBERT WATSON, Recorder.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 29.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, OCT. 4, 1849. [WHOLE No. 145.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

SALVATION OF THE LIVING AND THE DEAD.

"He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned." Mark xvi. 16. This is a declaration that came from the lips of Jesus, the Messiah. The declaration is so plain that nothing could make it more so—so positive that nothing could make it more positive that those who believed and were baptized were in a state of salvation. While, on the other hand, those who believed not and were not baptized were shut out from God's kingdom, and, therefore, were not in a state of salvation, consequently damned. Christ says: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber. He that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep. And when he putteth forth his own sheep he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him; for they know his voice." John x. 1, 2, 4.

By this figure we understand that all men are out of the sheepfold, or place of safety, or salvation, naturally; and that in order to get in they have to follow the shepherd of the sheep, and he goes in through the door. The same idea is carried out in the assertion of the Apostle, when he says, "The scripture hath concluded all under sin, that it might have mercy upon all." We understand also by this that all men are in a lost or fallen state; that they are not natural heirs of salvation, but are made so by adoption, the principles of which are revealed in the gospel. Then the gospel was given to save men, and not to damn them, as many vainly suppose. But men being in a lost, fallen, or damned state, the gospel was revealed to redeem and save men from that state.—Hence the Savior said: "He that believeth not shall be damned." But how long shall an unbelieving person be damned? The answer is, just so long as he continues to be unbelieving. But can he ever be saved? Yes, just as soon as he believes and is baptized he is an heir of salvation.

But if, as many suppose, the gospel damns men, as well as saves them, I think that every rational being will say that it would have been far better for mankind if their great author had never instituted in this world the law of the gospel. Why? Because not one person in a million of all the great Adamic family have ever heard the gospel preached in the flesh; and of those who have, not one person out of a thousand have ever obeyed it. Consequently the great mass of mankind have gone to hell, simply because of the gospel; and, according to the most popular theories of the age, must forever remain there.

"That when they've been there
Ten thousand times ten thousand years,
Add to them all the leaves upon the trees,
All the sands upon the shore,
Then add to them ten thousand times ten thousand more,
The time is just begun."

But, says one, the millions of which you speak that have never heard the gospel, and dying without law, will be judged without law, and will be saved. Then I would ask, would it not have been better not to have had the gospel preached at all to the thousand, and thereby had not only the one, but also the nine hundred ninety and nine saved?

But I must confess that "I have not so learned Christ," neither so understand the gospel, but have understood that the gospel was given "that all men might come to the knowledge of the truth, and be saved," and not that the heathen should be saved because they did not hear the gospel; neither that thousands should be damned because they did hear it. But I understand that all men are aliens and foreigners to the household of faith; that no man is naturally by birth an heir of salvation, but that all men alike are made heirs of salvation through obedience to the gospel; and that whenever a person yields obedience to the gospel, he becomes an heir of salvation, whether it be to-morrow, next week, next year, or fifty years from now, or whether it is done while he is living here in the flesh, or whether it is done after he leaves the body, and goes into the world of spirits.

But, says one, I always understood that this life was a probation, a place to prepare for the life to come. True it is that this life is a time to prepare for the life to come. Yet I presume that no person will say there is no preparation after this life. For St. Paul tells us that "God will judge all men according to my gospel." Then how can God judge all men by the law of the gospel, and do it in righteousness? For it certainly would be unrighteous to judge men by a law they knew not of. And I have before shown that but a small part of mankind ever hear the gospel in the flesh. Peter says: "For, for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit." 1 Peter iv. 6.

In fact, we find, while looking through the Old Testament, as well as the New, that the great work of preaching the gospel and of salvation is to be carried on among the nations of the dead, as well as the living. Even one portion of the great mission of Jesus Christ was to preach the gospel to the dead, or the spirits of the dead in prison. For the prophet, speaking concerning him, says: "The spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound." Isa. lxi. 1.

And Peter records the fulfillment of the last clause, by saying: "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the spirit: By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometime were disobedient, when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls, were saved." 1 Peter iii. 18, 19, 20.

Here Peter not only tells when Christ done this, but tells who he preached to; that it was when he was put to death in the flesh,

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 29.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, OCT. 4, 1849. [WHOLE No. 145.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

SALVATION OF THE LIVING AND THE DEAD.

"He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned." Mark xvi. 16. This is a declaration that came from the lips of Jesus, the Messiah. The declaration is so plain that nothing could make it more so—so positive that nothing could make it more positive that those who believed and were baptized were in a state of salvation. While, on the other hand, those who believed not and were not baptized were shut out from God's kingdom, and, therefore, were not in a state of salvation, consequently damned. Christ says: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber. He that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep. And when he putteth forth his own sheep he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him; for they know his voice." John x. 1, 2, 4.

By this figure we understand that all men are out of the sheepfold, or place of safety, or salvation, naturally; and that in order to get in they have to follow the shepherd of the sheep, and he goes in through the door. The same idea is carried out in the assertion of the Apostle, when he says, "The scripture hath concluded all under sin, that it might have mercy upon all." We understand also by this that all men are in a lost or fallen state; that they are not natural heirs of salvation, but are made so by adoption, the principles of which are revealed in the gospel. Then the gospel was given to save men, and not to damn them, as many vainly suppose. But men being in a lost, fallen, or damned state, the gospel was revealed to redeem and save men from that state.—Hence the Savior said: "He that believeth not shall be damned." But how long shall an unbelieving person be damned? The answer is, just so long as he continues to be unbelieving. But can he ever be saved? Yes, just as soon as he believes and is baptized he is an heir of salvation.

But if, as many suppose, the gospel damns men, as well as saves them, I think that every rational being will say that it would have been far better for mankind if their great author had never instituted in this world the law of the gospel. Why? Because not one person in a million of all the great Adamic family have ever heard the gospel preached in the flesh; and of those who have, not one person out of a thousand have ever obeyed it. Consequently the great mass of mankind have gone to hell, simply because of the gospel; and, according to the most popular theories of the age, must forever remain there.

"That when they've been there
Ten thousand times ten thousand years,
Add to them all the leaves upon the trees,
All the sands upon the shore,
Then add to them ten thousand times ten thousand more,
The time is just begun."

But, says one, the millions of which you speak that have never heard the gospel, and dying without law, will be judged without law, and will be saved. Then I would ask, would it not have been better not to have had the gospel preached at all to the thousand, and thereby had not only the one, but also the nine hundred ninety and nine saved?

But I must confess that "I have not so learned Christ," neither so understand the gospel, but have understood that the gospel was given "that all men might come to the knowledge of the truth, and be saved," and not that the heathen should be saved because they did not hear the gospel; neither that thousands should be damned because they did hear it. But I understand that all men are aliens and foreigners to the household of faith; that no man is naturally by birth an heir of salvation, but that all men alike are made heirs of salvation through obedience to the gospel; and that whenever a person yields obedience to the gospel, he becomes an heir of salvation, whether it be to-morrow, next week, next year, or fifty years from now, or whether it is done while he is living here in the flesh, or whether it is done after he leaves the body, and goes into the world of spirits.

But, says one, I always understood that this life was a probation, a place to prepare for the life to come. True it is that this life is a time to prepare for the life to come. Yet I presume that no person will say there is no preparation after this life. For St. Paul tells us that "God will judge all men according to my gospel." Then how can God judge all men by the law of the gospel, and do it in righteousness? For it certainly would be unrighteous to judge men by a law they knew not of. And I have before shown that but a small part of mankind ever hear the gospel in the flesh. Peter says: "For, for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit." 1 Peter iv. 6.

In fact, we find, while looking through the Old Testament, as well as the New, that the great work of preaching the gospel and of salvation is to be carried on among the nations of the dead, as well as the living. Even one portion of the great mission of Jesus Christ was to preach the gospel to the dead, or the spirits of the dead in prison. For the prophet, speaking concerning him, says: "The spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound." Isa. lxi. 1.

And Peter records the fulfillment of the last clause, by saying: "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the spirit: By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometime were disobedient, when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls, were saved." 1 Peter iii. 18, 19, 20.

Here Peter not only tells when Christ done this, but tells who he preached to; that it was when he was put to death in the flesh, while his body lay in the tomb; that then he went to the place called prison, where the spirits of those who were swept off by the flood in the days of Noah were preserved, and there preached to them the gospel. But for what purpose? To save them, of course. Not to damn them. For they, like the living, are damned until they obey the gospel. But how shall they obey the gospel? "For they go down to the pit wherein there is no water," as one of the prophets says, for them to be baptized in. The prophet Obadiah says that "saviors shall come upon mount Zion." i. 21. What is a savior? It is one that does for another what the other cannot do for himself. And that is, to be baptized for one that is dead. For the dead can hear and believe, yet they cannot be baptized. But a living friend can stand as proxy, and be baptized for and in behalf of the dead. Thus he becomes his savior.

By this time I think we shall be able to understand what St. Paul meant when, after bringing up one evidence after another in proof of the resurrection of the body, he finally hangs the subject on this one point: "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?" 1 Cor. xv. 29. It had become an institution in the church to be baptized for the dead, that they might come forth in the first resurrection. For Paul, in the same chapter, declares those who were Christ's at his coming should rise first from the grave.—And Paul continues the subject by saying that Christ should continue to reign until all enemies are subdued. And John the Revelator declares that the first resurrection takes place one thousand years before the last. And Paul and John both agree that those who are Christ's come forth in the first resurrection. But when the last resurrection is brought to pass, we find by reading the account of it that many of them that come forth at that time have their names written in the book of life. Hence we come to the conclusion that, although peace is restored to the earth at the first resurrection, and the reconciliation of all the living is accomplished, yet Christ continues his work among the dead, that he may finally reconcile, subdue and put all enemies under his feet, and save all the work of his hands except those whose names are not written in the book of life, who are the sons of perdition, who have once been enlightened and have tasted the good word of life and the powers of the world to come, of whom Paul said, "it was impossible to renew them again, they having crucified the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." Heb. vi. 4, 5, 6.

It is thus that the great work of salvation rolls forth. The gospel is a scheme devised in mercy, for the good of fallen man. It searches after him in his most lonely condition. The gates of hell prevail not against it. And those nations who have gone down to the pit are comforted by the sound thereof. Come, then, O ye saints of the most high God, gather up to the places God has appointed for your safety, pay your tithing according to the requirements of God's law, assist in building a strong Tower and defence of the daughter of Zion, and redeem your dead from the dark prison house, and become saviors on mount Zion, to reign as kings and priests unto God forever.

S. P. BACON.

☞ The following letter was written by a brother to one of his relatives, who has shamefully slandered the church of God:---

Franklin, September 10th, 1849.

Mr. ——— ———, SIR:---I am much annoyed with the lying slanderous reports that are put in circulation in your vicinity against the Church of Latter Day Saints, and I am not without good reasons for believing that many of them originate in your brain. If this is the case, I wish to call your attention to the moral of one of Æsop's fables, the one relating to the boys and frogs: "Though it may be sport for you, it is death to us." It is our fate to have that prophetic saying of our Lord fulfilled upon us: "Because I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world will hate you."

If we were of the world then we should be loved of the world, and we should not want for friends. Here is brought to view the difference between slandering us and them. The world, our enemies, are all looking eagerly for some excuse to crush us to the earth. Not so with the churches of the world. No, they have become like the world, and the world loves them. And you, although you know their corruptions, do not speak against them, simply because they are popular, and the world loves them. You would not be applauded at every turn of the street for slandering them.

You boast that you do not belong to any church. Let me tell you that every lying priest that preaches for hire and divines for money, and the drunkard in the ditch, and every foul spirit this side of the dark mansion of the damned are your comrades, engaged shoulder to shoulder with you in this unholy crusade against the church and kingdom of God. My dear sir, you are not as well aware as I am of the company you are in, or the cause in which you are engaged. I do not think you are in any wise malignant towards us. You simply talk for sport. But, O, sir, remember that this sport of yours costs the servants of God pain. For there are many who love a lie so much better than the truth that they are ever ready to hear and credit falsehoods told on us, but to them the truth of the gospel is like moon light on a frozen fountain, without effect. I hope you may see the folly of your course, and repent of the evils you have done, and be baptized for the remission of sins and be saved in the kingdom of God.

S. G.

while his body lay in the tomb; that then he went to the place called prison, where the spirits of those who were swept off by the flood in the days of Noah were preserved, and there preached to them the gospel. But for what purpose? To save them, of course. Not to damn them. For they, like the living, are damned until they obey the gospel. But how shall they obey the gospel? "For they go down to the pit wherein there is no water," as one of the prophets says, for them to be baptized in. The prophet Obadiah says that "saviors shall come upon mount Zion." i. 21. What is a savior? It is one that does for another what the other cannot do for himself. And that is, to be baptized for one that is dead. For the dead can hear and believe, yet they cannot be baptized. But a living friend can stand as proxy, and be baptized for and in behalf of the dead. Thus he becomes his savior.

By this time I think we shall be able to understand what St. Paul meant when, after bringing up one evidence after another in proof of the resurrection of the body, he finally hangs the subject on this one point: "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?" 1 Cor. xv. 29. It had become an institution in the church to be baptized for the dead, that they might come forth in the first resurrection. For Paul, in the same chapter, declares those who were Christ's at his coming should rise first from the grave.—And Paul continues the subject by saying that Christ should continue to reign until all enemies are subdued. And John the Revelator declares that the first resurrection takes place one thousand years before the last. And Paul and John both agree that those who are Christ's come forth in the first resurrection. But when the last resurrection is brought to pass, we find by reading the account of it that many of them that come forth at that time have their names written in the book of life. Hence we come to the conclusion that, although peace is restored to the earth at the first resurrection, and the reconciliation of all the living is accomplished, yet Christ continues his work among the dead, that he may finally reconcile, subdue and put all enemies under his feet, and save all the work of his hands except those whose names are not written in the book of life, who are the sons of perdition, who have once been enlightened and have tasted the good word of life and the powers of the world to come, of whom Paul said, "it was impossible to renew them again, they having crucified the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." Heb. vi. 4, 5, 6.

It is thus that the great work of salvation rolls forth. The gospel is a scheme devised in mercy, for the good of fallen man. It searches after him in his most lonely condition. The gates of hell prevail not against it. And those nations who have gone down to the pit are comforted by the sound thereof. Come, then, O ye saints of the most high God, gather up to the places God has appointed for your safety, pay your tithing according to the requirements of God's law, assist in building a strong Tower and defence of the daughter of Zion, and redeem your dead from the dark prison house, and become saviors on mount Zion, to reign as kings and priests unto God forever.

S. P. BACON.

☞ The following letter was written by a brother to one of his relatives, who has shamefully slandered the church of God:---

Franklin, September 10th, 1849.

Mr. ——— ———, Sir:---I am much annoyed with the lying slanderous reports that are put in circulation in your vicinity against the Church of Latter Day Saints, and I am not without good reasons for believing that many of them originate in your brain. If this is the case, I wish to call your attention to the moral of one of Æsop's fables, the one relating to the boys and frogs: "Though it may be sport for you, it is death to us." It is our fate to have that prophetic saying of our Lord fulfilled upon us: "Because I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world will hate you."

If we were of the world then we should be loved of the world, and we should not want for friends. Here is brought to view the difference between slandering us and them. The world, our enemies, are all looking eagerly for some excuse to crush us to the earth. Not so with the churches of the world. No, they have become like the world, and the world loves them. And you, although you know their corruptions, do not speak against them, simply because they are popular, and the world loves them. You would not be applauded at every turn of the street for slandering them.

You boast that you do not belong to any church. Let me tell you that every lying priest that preaches for hire and divines for money, and the drunkard in the ditch, and every foul spirit this side of the dark mansion of the damned are your comrades, engaged shoulder to shoulder with you in this unholy crusade against the church and kingdom of God. My dear sir, you are not as well aware as I am of the company you are in, or the cause in which you are engaged. I do not think you are in any wise malignant towards us. You simply talk for sport. But, O, sir, remember that this sport of yours costs the servants of God pain. For there are many who love a lie so much better than the truth that they are ever ready to hear and credit falsehoods told on us, but to them the truth of the gospel is like moon light on a frozen fountain, without effect. I hope you may see the folly of your course, and repent of the evils you have done, and be baptized for the remission of sins and be saved in the kingdom of God.

S. G.

A STRIKING ILLUSTRATION.

A company of individuals united themselves together in a mutual benefit association. The Blacksmith comes and says: "Gentlemen, I wish to become a member of your association." "Well, what can you do?" "Oh, I can shoe your horses, iron your carriages, and make all kinds of iron impliments." "Very well, come in, Mr. Blacksmith." The Mason applies for admission into the society. "And what can you do, Mr. Mason?" "Oh I can build your barns and houses, and stables and bridges." Very well, come in, we can't do without you."---Along comes a Shoemaker, and says: "I wish to become a member of your society." "Well, what can you do?" "I can make shoes and boots for you." "Come in Mr. Shoemaker, we must have you."

So, in turn, apply all the different trades and professions, till lastly an individual comes and wants to become a member. "And what are you?" "I am a Rum seller." "A Rum seller! and what can you do?"—"I can build jails, and prisons, and poor houses." "And is that all?" "No, I can fill them. I can fill your jails with criminals, your prison with convicts, and your poor houses with paupers." "And what else can you do?" "I can bring the gray hairs of the aged to the grave with sorrow; I can break the heart of the wife, and blast the prospects of the friends of talent, and fill your land with more than the plagues of Egypt." "Is that all you can do?" "Good heavens!" cried the Rum seller, "is not that enough?"—Poughkeepsie Democrat.

☞ The following is an extract from an editorial in the Primitive Expounder, a Universalist paper:—

"To what but zeal can be traced the rapid growth of those denominations which have sprung up around us like Jonah's gourd, and while we have been only increasing by units, they have gained their converts by thousands? What but zeal on the part of the clergy raised up the Mormon delusion, and established it in nearly every town and hamlet throughout the length and breadth of our country, and in Europe? Their zeal has done all this—it has reached the heart of the careless scoffer, and brought him humbled into their church---it has snatched the key from the hand of the miser, unlocked his coffers and borne away his golden treasures, and with them erected stately temples for public worship---it has penetrated the wilderness, and founded cities where lately the cunning panther prowled or herds of furious animals held their gambols---it is turning the desolation of our western islands into civilization, and compassing sea and land to gain proselytes. From the clergy it spreads from heart to heart among the people, increases their love for each other and their cause, their faith in their system, and stimulates them to work together for the good of the church."

☞ Yes, Mr. Sanford, our "clergy"---unlearned men, who were taken from the plough and the work-bench---went forth with a zeal like the fishermen of old---a zeal according to knowledge---they knew that the work was of God; that a dispensation of the gospel was committed for the last times, and they declared it fearlessly to the astonishment of the wise and learned of this generation. God blessed their labors, and still continues to bless the labor of his faithful servants, who go forth in like manner, and will by them accomplish the redemption of the earth from priestcraft and oppression.

CONOCOCHEAGUE HERALD.

This is the title of an interesting paper published at Greencastle, Franklin Co., Pa., by E. Robinson, and edited by J. Kilbourn, the first number of which is on our table. If it continues as it has commenced, it cannot fail of obtaining a liberal patronage.

☞ It is not what we earn, but what we save that makes us rich. It is not what we read, but what we remember, that makes us learned. All this is very simple, but it is worth remembering.

A STRIKING ILLUSTRATION.

A company of individuals united themselves together in a mutual benefit association. The Blacksmith comes and says: "Gentlemen, I wish to become a member of your association." "Well, what can you do?" "Oh, I can shoe your horses, iron your carriages, and make all kinds of iron impliments." "Very well, come in, Mr. Blacksmith." The Mason applies for admission into the society. "And what can you do, Mr. Mason?" "Oh I can build your barns and houses, and stables and bridges." Very well, come in, we can't do without you."---Along comes a Shoemaker, and says: "I wish to become a member of your society." "Well, what can you do?" "I can make shoes and boots for you." "Come in Mr. Shoemaker, we must have you."

So, in turn, apply all the different trades and professions, till lastly an individual comes and wants to become a member. "And what are you?" "I am a Rum seller." "A Rum seller! and what can you do?"—"I can build jails, and prisons, and poor houses." "And is that all?" "No, I can fill them. I can fill your jails with criminals, your prison with convicts, and your poor houses with paupers." "And what else can you do?" "I can bring the gray hairs of the aged to the grave with sorrow; I can break the heart of the wife, and blast the prospects of the friends of talent, and fill your land with more than the plagues of Egypt." "Is that all you can do?" "Good heavens!" cried the Rum seller, "is not that enough?"—Poughkeepsie Democrat.

☞ The following is an extract from an editorial in the Primitive Expounder, a Universalist paper:—

"To what but zeal can be traced the rapid growth of those denominations which have sprung up around us like Jonah's gourd, and while we have been only increasing by units, they have gained their converts by thousands? What but zeal on the part of the clergy raised up the Mormon delusion, and established it in nearly every town and hamlet throughout the length and breadth of our country, and in Europe? Their zeal has done all this—it has reached the heart of the careless scoffer, and brought him humbled into their church---it has snatched the key from the hand of the miser, unlocked his coffers and borne away his golden treasures, and with them erected stately temples for public worship---it has penetrated the wilderness, and founded cities where lately the cunning panther prowled or herds of furious animals held their gambols---it is turning the desolation of our western islands into civilization, and compassing sea and land to gain proselytes. From the clergy it spreads from heart to heart among the people, increases their love for each other and their cause, their faith in their system, and stimulates them to work together for the good of the church."

☞ Yes, Mr. Sanford, our "clergy"---unlearned men, who were taken from the plough and the work-bench---went forth with a zeal like the fishermen of old---a zeal according to knowledge---they knew that the work was of God; that a dispensation of the gospel was committed for the last times, and they declared it fearlessly to the astonishment of the wise and learned of this generation. God blessed their labors, and still continues to bless the labor of his faithful servants, who go forth in like manner, and will by them accomplish the redemption of the earth from priestcraft and oppression.

CONOCOCHEAGUE HERALD.

This is the title of an interesting paper published at Greencastle, Franklin Co., Pa., by E. Robinson, and edited by J. Kilbourn, the first number of which is on our table. If it continues as it has commenced, it cannot fail of obtaining a liberal patronage.

☞ It is not what we earn, but what we save that makes us rich. It is not what we read, but what we remember, that makes us learned. All this is very simple, but it is worth remembering.

FEAR—A TALE OF THE CHOLERA.

A correspondent of Ainsworth's Magazine relates the following incident as having fallen under his own observation. It possesses particular interest at this time, as showing the importance of a quiet mind, and absence of all excitement, during the prevalence of a disease which is even now in our midst:—

At the time of a former visitation of cholera on these shores, our regiment (the——th) was quartered at M——, one of the places visited with the utmost severity by the formidable disease. We had lost very few men, and not an officer had been attacked, when one evening after mess, the conversation turned upon the nature and danger of the pestilence, at that time believed by many to be contagious. Our surgeon had just returned from a harrassing course of duties, which had detained him from mess until long after the hour of dinner, and he was recountiug to us, during the interval of his hurried repast, various anecdotes of the cases he had just quitted.

He had been with one of the resident physicians into the quarter chiefly inhabited by the poor weavers connected with the manufactories of M——, and his account of the sufferings of these poor creatures, of the misery they endured—misery always keen and doubly aggravated under present circumstances, was truly heart-rending.

"Ah," said he, "what is most unfortunate is that these poor people are so terrified. I believe half of them die of fright. In many instances they flee from the house containing their dying friend or relative. They refuse to assist in bearing the body to the grave, and literally kill themselves by the nervous state of agitation to which they excite themselves and each other."

"How foolish that is," exclaimed Percy, a young officer who had but lately joined—a fine young fellow, handsome and gallant; "how foolish that is! I cannot see what there is to fear in the neighborhood of the disease. Depend upon it, we are as safe with the cholera raging around, as though it were still shut up in the marshes of Asia. We may die of the cholera, it is true, but that will be because such is our fate, not because we happen to be near some half dozen others who die of cholera."

"It is astonishing, Percy," answered the surgeon, "how great is the influence of mind over the body. I believe I could talk any man into a conviction that he had the cholera, and probably talk him to death if I persisted in agitating him."

Percy laughed aloud.

"My dear fellow," he said, "you may talk yourself dumb to me; you will never persuade me into any complaint whatever."

"You are too rash, Percy," interposed the Major, a stern old veteran of some fifty years—Barton by name—"you are too rash Percy; you little know the power of nervous impression, or rather you affect to despise what you really feel. I can see you now shrink from close contact with Dr. M., because you know he has been all day with cholera patients."

Percy reddened at this accusation, and springing to his feet, placed himself close to Dr. M.

"Indeed, you mistake," he said, "I have no fear of the kind."

"Oh! don't think it necessary to conceal it," continued Barton, laughing as he spoke; "older and wiser men than you, older and wiser men and as brave—have shaken in their shoes at the approach of cholera."

"But I am not shaking in mine," retorted Percy, reddening still more; "what can make you think so? I tell you I have no fear of contagion, none whatever. I do not believe the disease is contagious. I should not mind," he continued, striking the table as he spoke—"I should not mind sleeping in a bed wherein a cholera patient had died within a few hours."

"Well," laughed Barton with his low peculiar laugh, "it is easy to talk in this way, but you would be sorry if we offered to put you to the proof."

"Indeed I should not be sorry. Put me to the proof, and I will sit up all night in the cholera ward in the hospital. Come, doctor, you are going there now; I will accompany you, and I will remain there too. I will act as nurse to the worst patient. No one shall say I shrank from the proof."

"You need not do so much, Percy," answered Barton, again, "do only what you yourself offered to do, sleep in the bed of a cholera victim. Quatermaster Smith died four hours ago, and the bed in which he died is vacant. Come, I can ean easily procure you a night's lodging therein."

Poor Percy. I saw him turn pale, and he raised a glass of wine to his lips, drained it at a draught; but in a moment his courage returned, and he rose with a smile of animation.

"I am ready, Barton, come along. Good night—good night," and he waved his hand hurriedly to the doctor and myself.

I confess I was little pleased at this arrangement, but a look of intelligence which I perceived pass between Barton and the doctor somewhot reassured me, and I rose to accompany Percy to his unenviable resting place. Barton preceded us, and we waited some moments at the quarters of poor Smith, while he parleyed with some one inside. This concluded, we entered, and Percy took possession of his bed room.

We had remained until he had denuded himself of some of his garments, and had actually retired between the sheets of the formidable couch; when we left him, repeating a good night, while Barton sneeringly informed him that he might consider his penance ended at an hour after two in the morning, it being then eleven o'clock.

"It's no penance to me," persisted poor Percy, speaking from a mass of bed clothes; but Barton drowned the continuation of the sentence in a loud laugh, and closing the door we finally retreated.

At four in the morning we were awakened by Percy's servant, who had sat up in the same building, although in another room, with his master. He came to inform us that Percy was dangerously ill with the cholera.

One by one we rushed from our beds, and hurried to the apartment of our comrade. The doctor was already there, applying all the remedies at his command, but Percy was evidently ill.

For hours every effort was used. We all loved Percy---men as well as officers did their best; but what are human means against the will of heaven? The paroxysms became less, but he sunk into the awful state of collapse from which, it seems, as though scarce a miracle could recover the sufferer.

Perfectly conscious to the last, he took Barton's hand. "It was foolish of me," he gasped, "dear Barton---I forgive you."

"Oh, Percy, Percy," sobbed Barton. "I never shall forgive myself, but believe me when I assure you no one has died in this bed.

FEAR—A TALE OF THE CHOLERA.

A correspondent of Ainsworth's Magazine relates the following incident as having fallen under his own observation. It possesses particular interest at this time, as showing the importance of a quiet mind, and absence of all excitement, during the prevalence of a disease which is even now in our midst:—

At the time of a former visitation of cholera on these shores, our regiment (the——th) was quartered at M——, one of the places visited with the utmost severity by the formidable disease. We had lost very few men, and not an officer had been attacked, when one evening after mess, the conversation turned upon the nature and danger of the pestilence, at that time believed by many to be contagious. Our surgeon had just returned from a harrassing course of duties, which had detained him from mess until long after the hour of dinner, and he was recounting to us, during the interval of his hurried repast, various anecdotes of the cases he had just quitted.

He had been with one of the resident physicians into the quarter chiefly inhabited by the poor weavers connected with the manufactories of M——, and his account of the sufferings of these poor creatures, of the misery they endured—misery always keen and doubly aggravated under present circumstances, was truly heart-rending.

"Ah," said he, "what is most unfortunate is that these poor people are so terrified. I believe half of them die of fright. In many instances they flee from the house containing their dying friend or relative. They refuse to assist in bearing the body to the grave, and literally kill themselves by the nervous state of agitation to which they excite themselves and each other."

"How foolish that is," exclaimed Percy, a young officer who had but lately joined—a fine young fellow, handsome and gallant; "how foolish that is! I cannot see what there is to fear in the neighborhood of the disease. Depend upon it, we are as safe with the cholera raging around, as though it were still shut up in the marshes of Asia. We may die of the cholera, it is true, but that will be because such is our fate, not because we happen to be near some half dozen others who die of cholera."

"It is astonishing, Percy," answered the surgeon, "how great is the influence of mind over the body. I believe I could talk any man into a conviction that he had the cholera, and probably talk him to death if I persisted in agitating him."

Percy laughed aloud.

"My dear fellow," he said, "you may talk yourself dumb to me; you will never persuade me into any complaint whatever."

"You are too rash, Percy," interposed the Major, a stern old veteran of some fifty years—Barton by name—"you are too rash Percy; you little know the power of nervous impression, or rather you affect to despise what you really feel. I can see you now shrink from close contact with Dr. M., because you know he has been all day with cholera patients."

Percy reddened at this accusation, and springing to his feet, placed himself close to Dr. M.

"Indeed, you mistake," he said, "I have no fear of the kind."

"Oh! don't think it necessary to conceal it," continued Barton, laughing as he spoke; "older and wiser men than you, older and wiser men and as brave—have shaken in their shoes at the approach of cholera."

"But I am not shaking in mine," retorted Percy, reddening still more; "what can make you think so? I tell you I have no fear of contagion, none whatever. I do not believe the disease is contagious. I should not mind," he continued, striking the table as he spoke—"I should not mind sleeping in a bed wherein a cholera patient had died within a few hours."

"Well," laughed Barton with his low peculiar laugh, "it is easy to talk in this way, but you would be sorry if we offered to put you to the proof."

"Indeed I should not be sorry. Put me to the proof, and I will sit up all night in the cholera ward in the hospital. Come, doctor, you are going there now; I will accompany you, and I will remain there too. I will act as nurse to the worst patient. No one shall say I shrank from the proof."

"You need not do so much, Percy," answered Barton, again, "do only what you yourself [illegible] on the bed of a cholera victim. Quartermaster [illegible] is no longer, and the bed in which he died is vacant. [illegible] can easily procure you a night's lodging therein."

Poor Percy. I saw him turn pale, and he raised a glass of wine to his lips, drained it at a draught; [illegible] courage returned, and he rose with a smile [illegible]

"I am ready, Barton, come [illegible] night," and he waved his hand [illegible] himself.

I confess I was little pleased [illegible] a look of intelligence which I perceived [illegible] and the doctor somewhat reassured me, and I [illegible] Percy to his unenviable resting place. [illegible] and we waited some moments at the quarters of [illegible] with some one inside. This concluded, [illegible] Percy took possession of his bed room.

We had remained until he had [illegible] some of his garments, and had actually [illegible] the formidable couch; when we left [illegible] while Barton sneeringly informed him that his penance ended at an hour after two in the morning, it being then eleven o'clock.

"It's no penance to me," persisted poor Percy, [illegible] from a mass of bed clothes; but Barton [illegible] confirmation of the sentence in a loud laugh, and closing the door we finally retreated.

At four in the morning we were awakened by Percy's servant, who had sat up in the same building, although in another room, with his master. He came to inform us that Percy was dangerously ill with the cholera.

One by one we rushed from our beds, and hurried to the apartment of our comrade. The doctor was already there, applying all the remedies at his command, but Percy was evidently ill.

For hours every effort was used. We all loved Percy---men as well as officers did their best; but what are human means against the will of heaven? The paroxysms became less, but he sunk into the awful state of collapse from which, it seems, as though scarce a miracle could recover the sufferer.

Perfectly conscious to the last, he took Barton's hand. "It was foolish of me," he gasped, "dear Barton---I forgive you."

"Oh, Percy, Percy," sobbed Barton. "I never shall forgive myself, but believe me when I assure you no one has died in this bed.

No one has slept in it lately, except Smith, who is not dead nor has not been ill. It was all a hoax!" and Barton wept aloud.

A gleam came over the dying face. "All a hoax?" he murmured, "ah!---how weak!" But he could say no more. Already the pulse was quite gone---already the gallant heart had ceased to beat---Percy was dead!

Dr. M—— persists that poor Percy died from fright, and from no other cause---producing cholera. Certainly from that moment we lost not one man---a fact which favors this supposition.

It was also a fact that no one had died in that bed, nor in that quarter of the barracks. Even were cholera contagious, no contagion could possibly have existed in that instance.---Barton felt the matter deeply; but he is now at peace. He died a death that might atone for a thousand errors---a glorious death upon the noble field of Sabraon.

Beaver Island, September 14th, 1849.

DEAR BRO. COOPER:—It is with a hearty degree of satisfaction that I address you at this time. We, as a people, are blessed with health and prosperity, and the blessings of God seem to smile upon us, and reconciliation, peace and brotherly kindness pretty generally prevails in our midst at this time. Our Conference of the 8th and 9th inst. was attended with a spirit of peace, unity and of interest. The ordinance of baptism was administered to two, one a young man of promising talents, by the name of Calkins, from Michigan, the other was a lady by the name of Moon, from Prairieville, Wisconsin, who was on her way to the State of New York. On Monday, the 10th inst., the boat lay at the dock which was to take Bros. Strang, Adams, Graham and others to the eastern land. But before the boat left there was another arrival, which brought the brother of the Apostle Graham, and another gentleman by the name of Avery, from eastern Michigan. Bro. Graham, however, concluded to tarry a few days to visit with his brother and friend.

Suffice it to say, Mr. Avery became convinced of the truth of the everlasting gospel, and obeyed the same under the administration of the Apostle Graham, and was confirmed and ordained an Elder in the quorum of the Seventies. Bro. Avery is a candid, bright, intelligent man. I must, before I close, relate rather an unpleasant affair. There is a Bro. here by the name of Thomas Horton, who had become quite disaffected, and was on the point of pseudoing. And in a fit of wrath, and with indignant and shameful language, slandered the Apostle L. D. Hickey, for which Bro. S. Graham preferred a complaint against said Horton for slander.

M. M. ALDRICH.

EXCOMMUNICATION.

Samuel Graham, on the 13th inst., preferred a complaint against Thomas Horton for slandering Bro. L. D. Hickey, one of the Twelve. Said complaint was fully sustained by four witnesses, and his own confession. And, after being admonished, refusing to make satisfaction, the Presidency decided that he, the said Horton, be excommunicated from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until he repent.

M. M. ALDRICH, PRES.
G. B. COLE, } COUNSELORS.
R. F. MILLS, }

ARISTOCRACY.

There are men (we blush to call them men) who turn up their noses at the mechanic and humble laborer. Being liberally educated, as it is called, they look down with a sort of contempt on those, who in some cases have contributed to their support. "You need not despise a spinning wheel," said an old lady to her pompous son, one day, "for many a night have I worked at it to get money to send you to school." There are women, too, who will not touch a needle with their delicate hands, who laugh at the poor and industrious, who learn trades, or work in factories, for a living. "La me, how unrefined they are," she says, with a scornful smile, as she lounges on the sofa, reading the last pink novel. We once knew a lady—shall we call her a lady?—of this complexion. She was loudly belaboring a poor hard working girl, calling her low and unrefined. "Why" said she, "her father was nothing but a low mechanic." "Yes," remarked a woman present, "her father was a mechanic. I knew him well, for he lived in the same neighborhood with your mother, when she went out a washing." There, reader, if you had been present, you would have seen a strange confusion of face, and heard a vain attempt to utter something too prickly to come out. It stuck in her throat. When we hear men or women speaking lightly of the industrious part of the community, we feel just like tracing back their genealogy. We have done so in several instances, and you would be surprised at what we learned. The most aristocratic man of our acquaintance is the grandson of a fiddler; the proudest woman, the daughter of a wash woman. It betrays a lack of good sense to condemn or look with contempt on any virtuous person, however poor he or she may be. The wise and good respect and love goodness wherever it is found.

No one has slept in it lately, except Smith, who is not dead nor has not been ill. It was all a hoax!" and Barton wept aloud.

A gleam came over the dying face. "All a hoax?" he murmured, "ah!---how weak!" But he could say no more. Already the pulse was quite gone---already the gallant heart had ceased to beat---Percy was dead!

Dr. M—— persists that poor Percy died from fright, and from no other cause---producing cholera. Certainly from that moment we lost not one man---a fact which favors this supposition.

It was also a fact that no one had died in that hospital in that quarter of the barracks. Even were cholera contagious, no contagion could possibly have existed in that instance.---Barton felt the matter deeply: but he is now at peace. He died a death that might atone for a thousand errors---a glorious death upon the noble field of Sabraon.

Beaver Island, September 14th, 1849.

Dear Bro. Cooper:—It is with a hearty degree of satisfaction that I address you at this time. We, as a people, are blessed with health and prosperity, and the blessings of God seem to smile upon us, and peace, union, peace and apostolic kindness pretty generally prevails in our midst at this time. Our Conference of the 8th and 9th inst. was attended with a spirit of peace, unity and of interest. The ordinance of baptism was administered to two, one a young man of promising talents, by the name of Calkins, from Michigan, the other was a lady by the name of Moon, from Prairieville, Wisconsin, who was on her way to the State of New York. On Monday, the 10th inst., the boat lay at the dock which was to take Bros. Strang, Adams, Graham and others to the eastern land. But before the boat left there was another arrival, which brought the brother of the Apostle Graham, and another gentleman by the name of Avery, from eastern Michigan. Bro. Graham, however, concluded to tarry a few days to visit with his brother and friend.

Suffice it to say, Mr. Avery became convinced of the truth of the everlasting gospel, and obeyed the same under the administration of the Apostle Graham, and was confirmed and ordained an Elder in the quorum of the Seventies. Bro. Avery is a candid, bright, intelligent man. I must, before I close, relate rather an unpleasant affair. There is a Bro. here by the name of Thomas Horton, who had become quite disaffected, and was on the point of pseudoing. And in a fit of wrath, and with indignant and shameful language, slandered the Apostle L. D. Hickey, for which Bro. S. Graham preferred a complaint against said Horton for slander.

M. M. ALDRICH.

EXCOMMUNICATION.

Samuel Graham, on the 13th inst., preferred a complaint against Thomas Horton for slandering Bro. L. D. Hickey, one of the Twelve. Said complaint was fully sustained by four witnesses, and his own confession. And, after being admonished, refusing to make satisfaction, the Presidency decided that he, the said Horton, be excommunicated from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until he repent.

M. M. ALDRICH, Pres.
G. B. COLE, } Counsellors.
R. F. MILLS, }

ARISTOCRACY.

There are men (we blush to call them men) who turn up their noses at the mechanic and humble laborer. Being liberally educated, as it is called, they look down with a sort of contempt on those, who in some cases have contributed to their support. "You need not despise a spinning wheel," said an old lady to her pompous son, one day, "for many a night have I worked at it to get money to send you to school." There are women, too, who will not touch a needle with their delicate hands, who laugh at the poor and industrious, who learn trades, or work in factories, for a living. "La me, how unrefined they are," she says, with a scornful smile, as she lounges on the sofa, reading the last pink novel. We once knew a lady—shall we call her a lady!—of this complexion. She was loudly belaboring a poor hard working girl, calling her low and unrefined. "Why" said she, "her father was nothing but a low mechanic." "Yes," remarked a woman present, "her father was a mechanic. I knew him well, for he lived in the same neighborhood with your mother, when she went out a washing." There, reader, if you had been present, you would have seen a strange confusion of face, and heard a vain attempt to utter something too prickly to come out. It stuck in her throat. When we hear men or women speaking lightly of the industrious part of the community, we feel just like tracing back their genealogy. We have done so in several instances, and you would be surprised at what we learned. The most aristocratic man of our acquaintance is the grandson of a fiddler; the proudest woman, the daughter of a wash woman. It betrays a lack of good sense to condemn or look with contempt on any virtuous person, however poor he or she may be. The wise and good respect and love goodness wherever it is found.

HUNGARY.

This fatal year, '49—will it never be done with its desolations? Pestilence has stalked, and still stalks, with desolating tread over the broad earth, defacing its green sod to make room for innumerable graves—graves not alone of the weak and the wretched, but also of the mighty, the glorious, the gentle, the lovely, the widely and keenly deplored. And that darker scourge, Despotism, the dominion of brute force and blind selfishness—the lordship of the few for their own luxury and aggrandizement over the many whom they scorn, and sweat, and starve—when before has a year been so fruitful as now of triumphs to the realm of night? Sicily betrayed and ruined —Lombardy's chains riveted—Sardinia crushed—Rome, generous, brave, ill-fated Rome, too! she lies beneath the feet of her perfidious, perjured foes, and in her fall has dragged down the Republicans of France, adjudged guilty of the crime of daring to resist the assassination of a sister Republic. But this is not all, nor half.—Germany, through her vast extent, has passed over to the camp of Absolutism—her people still think, but dare not speak, for the bayonet is at their throats, and Demoeracy is once more treason, since its regal enemies have recovered from their terror, and found their military tools as brainless and as heartless as ever. At last Hungary mounts the funeral pyre of Freedom, and the sacrifice is complete, for Venice must trail her flag directly on the tidings of Gorgey's surrender. She has stood out nobly for a noble, a priceless cause—so has Hungary struggled nobly, and nobly fallen.

This is no time for reproaches and recriminations, nor is there certain cause for any. An insurgent race of five or six millions, without credit, finances, or military stores, having to combat its late subjects, though in defence of their common rights, is no match for two great empires, with seventy or eighty millions of blindly obedient subjects, with vast reserves of ordnance and munitions, immense standing armies, and inexhaustible resources of all kinds. There is a sort of truth, not to be set aside, in the bitter French maxim, that "God is on the side of those who have the heaviest artillery."—True, the deeper truth is adverse to this, and in the long run crime and outrage are certain of punishment; but to assume that a nation or party must triumph this year, or in any particular conflict, merely because it has right on its side, is to speculate blindly, and in defiance of the lessons of history.

All this is very plain now; it was not so clear to us last week. The cause of Hungarian independence was so every way righteous and holy, that we could not realize that it was to be overthrown—that God's inscrutably beneficent ends might be subserved through its temporary prostration as surely as by its immediate and signal triumph. Now that all is lost, it seems a marvel that we should have hoped for an opposite result; yet we did hope, and could not relinquish that hope while its maintenance was possible.

For the present, all is over, save that a few desperate, heroic patriots will yet sell their lives in fruitless casual conflicts with the minions of Despotism. Hungary is ruined; has become a mere province of the Austrian empire—another Ireland—a Bohemia.—Her people must henceforth toil and stint themselves to pay the heavy taxes needed to defray the cost of holding them in chains, and no longer he counted the strength and the reliance, but the cancer and reproach of the tyranny which crushes them.

Nothing now remains but that the wolves should divide and devour their prey. How will they prosper in this? Is it probable that Russia has incurred the immense cost and waste of this campaign, with no hope of advantage save to her ally, Austria, and the general cause of Despotism? We do not believe it. Either Gallicia, or Transylvania, or Turkey in Europe, is her stipulated reward for these sacrifices; which of them, time must discover. And if no discord should ensue between the conquerors, it does not follow that there is no retribution for their crimes. How long was it after the final partition of Poland before the capitals of each of the partitioning parties were occupied by a haughty conqueror, after their armies had been defeated and their provinces sliced away? Let us be patient, and see this gigantic crime also work out its righteous retribution.

France has played in this contest the ignoble part of Prussia in the wars of France and Austria, for the ten years preceding 1806.—Her punishment may be decreed to come first. Who cares how soon the Cossacks advance on Paris?—N. Y. Tribune.

SHAKER EXHIBITION.

We had the pleasure of witnessing, on last evening, in common with others of our citizens, an exhibition by the "Shaker Family," illustrating the doctrines and practices of the people called Shakers. These exhibitions are stated to be---and we believe it---true delineations of Shaker life, as practiced at home in their villages. And they reveal the astonishing fact, that there are in the United States a body of people, said to number from six to ten thousand, who have, or ought to have, human souls, and who are surrounded by the glare of an intelligence which is said to be brighter than exists anywhere else on the globe, yet who by the force of education and habit, (and we believe something worse,) are led to commit daily such absurd and ridiculous mummeries, as would make even a Hottentot blush!

Those who are conversant with Mormon tomfooleries will readily perceive that many of their ideas have been borrowed from the Shakers---and we see but little difference between them, except that while the latter are innocent and practiced with innocent intentions, the former have an admixture of genuine and ill-dissembled rascality.

The exhibition is very interesting and instructive; and as the Family will appear again this evening, we advise all those who have a desire to 'see folly as it flies,' to attend.---Signal.

☞ Will the editor of the Signal inform us what ideas the Mormons have borrowed from the Shakers?

LIFE.—In any adversity that happens to us in the world we ought to consider that misery and affliction are not less natural than snow and hail, storm and tempest; and that it were as reasonable to hope for a year without winter as a life without trouble. Do well while thou livest, but regard not what is said of it. Be content with deserving praise, and your posterity shall rejoice at hearing it. The humble current of little kindness which, though but a creeping streamlet, incessantly flows, although it glides in silent secrecy within the domestic walls, and along the walks of private life, and makes neither noise nor appearance in the world, pours in at the end a more beautiful tribute into the store of human comfort and felicity than any sudden and transient flood of detached bounty, however ample, that may rush in with a mighty sound.

STRANGE COINCIDENCE.—The Courier Francais states, that some days since a statesman and academician, in the course of a conversation which took place in the library of the National Institute, observed that, in the middle of each century for the last five hundred years, some great social crisis had occurred in Europe. "In 1450," said he, "it was the art of printing which created a revolution. In 1550, it was Luther who shook the foundation of Catholicity. In 1650, it was Bacon and Descartes who demolished the infallibility of Aristotle. In 1750, it was philosophy which triumphed, and prepared the way for the revolution of 1789. We approach the year 1850, and it is evident society is preparing to undergo a fundamental revolution."

REAL AND IDEAL.—Dow, Jr., in one of his discourses, in which he describes the contrast between a semblance and reality, hits off a ball seene :---

"A woman," says he, "may not be an angel, though she glides through the mazes of the dance, like a spirit clothed with a rainbow, and studded with stars. The young man may behold his admired object on the morrow in the true light of reality, perchance emptying a wash-tub in the gutter, with frock pinned up behind —her cheeks pale for want of paint---her hair mussed and mossy, except what lies in the bureau: and her whole contour wearing the appearance of an angel rammed through a brush fence, into a world of wretchedness and wo!"

THE HERALD.

By the generosity of a brother in Baltimore we are enabled to send out the Herald this week with a new dress in part. If we had the means we should be happy to send it in an entire new suit. It deserves it. In the midst of poverty it carried the glad tidings of salvation to the saints when destruction was desolating them like a dreadful tornado. By its valiant testimony many honest souls were saved from having their bones bleached on the western prairies. When dark clouds were hanging over the church like the darkness of Egypt, it was like a pillar of light in the wilderness leading her to pleasant pastures. When the saints were in the midst of trials and afflictions more fatal than the persecutions of Missouri, it was amongst them to counsel and to strengthen.—When the saints mourned it mourned, and now when the time of rejoicing has come let it rejoice with you. We hope some more of our brethren will exhibit a spirit of liberality like this brother, by sending enough to finish the dress.

☞ The darkest hour of night is just before the break of day. Though prosperity is a desirable state, adversity is often beneficial. A man brought to the ground is awakened to a just preception of his duties, and takes courage to try again. Milton was blind when he found Paradise Lost, and Cowper, in great distress, when he translated Homer. Ye that are down bent, take fresh courage and try again.

☞ The drouth in Essex Co., N. Y., has been so great as to render the crops not worth harvesting, and the farmers have gone into Vermont to purchase hay.

BEAUTIFUL EXTRACT.

Few think of the lofty and divine hopes that the belief in immortality opens to us. One of the purest of these is an expectation of a more entire intelligence—of the great gift of conversation with all who have lived before us—of questioning the past ages and unraveling their dark wisdom. How much in every man's heart dies away unuttered? How little of what the sage knows does the sage promulgate? How many chords of the lyre within the poet's heart have been dumb in the ear of the world? All this untold, uncommunicated, dreamed of hoards of wisdom and harmony, it may be the privilege of our immortality to learn. The best part of genius the world often knows not—the Plato buries much of his love within his cave—and this, the high unknown, is our heritage. With these thoughts, how easy it is for the parting soul to beautify and adorn death? With how many garlands we can hang the tomb! Nay; if we begin betimes, we can learn to make the prospect of the grave the most seductive of human vision—by little and little we wean from its contemplation all that is gloomy and abhorrent—little by little we have therein all the most pleasing of our dreams. As the neglected genius whispers to his muse, "Posterity shall know thee, and thou shalt live when I am no more," we find in this hallowed and all promising future a recompense for every disappointment in the present.

It is the belief of the Arabs, that to the earliest places of human worship there clings a guardian sanctity—there the wild birds rest not, there the wild beasts may not wander; it is the blessed spot on which the eye of God dwells and which man's best memories preserve. As with the earliest place of worship so it is with the latest haven of repose—as with the spot where our first imperfect adoration was offered up, our first glimpse of divinity indulged, so should it be with that where our full knowledge of the arch cause begins and we can pour forth a gratitude no longer clouded by the troubles and cares of earth.—Surely if any spot in the world be sacred it is that which grief causes, and from which, if the harmonies of creation, if the voice within our hearts, if the impulse which made man so easy a believer in the revelation, if these mock and fool us not with an everlasting lie, we spring upon the untiring wings of pangless and seraphic life—those whom we loved around us; the aspiring that we nursed, filled our nature, universal intelligence; our atmosphere, eternal love.—Ex. Paper.

POETRY.

BY S. P. B.

Ye saints of God, both far and near,
Obey God's word, which you now hear;
In fair Voree, in regions west,
There God will give his people rest.

Then gather up, ye honest few—
Say to the world, farewell to you:
In fair Voree seek ye a home,
And gathered be, no more to roam.

Go—go, ye Elders, far and near,
In all the world, to all 't'will hear:
In fair Voree, 'tis by and by,
An ensign shall be raised high.

Cease, then, all doubts, and also strife—
A quiet and devoted life
In fair Voree, "Garden of Peace,"
'T'will surely bring a swift release.

Great works God said he there would show;
And thus he'll make his people know,
In fair Voree, sweet, sweet repose,
Where saints may dwell secure from foes.

O, God! how long shall Zion be
Inhabited by thy enemy?
In fair Voree, by thy command,
Give power by which thy church shall stand:

That Zion soon may bud and bloom;
Become for saints a holy home:
Though in Voree there now is rest
For all the saints, from east to west.

Great God, what can thy promise hold,
By prophet James so long foretold?
In fair Voree, if equal we,
Shall gathered dwell in unity.

BEAUTIFUL EXTRACT.

Few think of the lofty and divine hopes that the belief in immortality opens to us. One of the purest of these is an expectation of a more entire intelligence—of the great gift of conversation with all who have lived before us—of questioning the past ages and unraveling their dark wisdom. How much in every man's heart dies away unuttered? How little of what the sage knows does the sage promulgate! How many chords of the lyre within the poet's heart have been dumb in the ear of the world? All this untold, uncommunicated, dreamed of hoards of wisdom and harmony, it may be the privilege of our immortality to learn. The best part of genius the world often knows not—the Plato buries much of his love within his cave—and this, the high unknown, is our heritage. With these thoughts, how easy it is for the parting soul to beautify and adorn death! With how many garlands we can hang the tomb! Nay; if we begin betimes, we can learn to make the prospect of the grave the most seductive of human vision—by little and little we wean from its contemplation all that is gloomy and abhorrent—little by little we have therein all the most pleasing of our dreams. As the neglected genius whispers to his muse, "Posterity shall know thee, and thou shalt live when I am no more," we find in this hallowed and all promising future a recompense for every disappointment in the present.

It is the belief of the Arabs, that to the earliest places of human worship there clings a guardian sanctity—there the wild birds rest not, there the wild beasts may not wander; it is the blessed spot on which the eye of God dwells and which man's best memories preserve. As with the earliest place of worship so it is with the latest haven of repose—as with the spot where our first imperfect adoration was offered up, our first glimpse of divinity indulged, so should it be with that where our full knowledge of the arch cause begins and we can pour forth a gratitude no longer clouded by the troubles and cares of earth.—Surely if any spot in the world be sacred it is that which grief causes, and from which, if the harmonies of creation, if the voice within our hearts, if the impulse which made man so easy a believer in the revelation, if these mock and fool us not with an everlasting lie, we spring upon the untiring wings of painless and seraphic life—those whom we loved around us: the aspiring that we nursed, filled our nature, universal intelligence: our atmosphere, eternal love.—Ex. Paper.

POETRY.

BY S. P. B.

Ye saints of God, both far and near.
Obey God's word, which you now hear:
In fair Voree, in regions west,
There God will give his people rest.

Then gather up, ye honest few—
Say to the world, farewell to you:
In fair Voree seek ye a home,
And gathered be, no more to roam.

Go—go, ye Elders, far and near,
In all the world, to all 't'will hear:
In fair Voree, 'tis by and by,
An ensign shall be raised high.

Cease, then, all doubts, and also strife—
A quiet and devoted life
In fair Voree, "Garden of Peace,"
'T'will surely bring a swift release.

Great works God said he there would show
And thus he'll make his people know.
In fair Voree, sweet, sweet repose,
Where saints may dwell secure from foes.

O, God! how long shall Zion be
Inhabited by thy enemy?
In fair Voree, by thy command,
Give power by which thy church shall stand

That Zion soon may bud and bloom:
Become for saints a holy home:
Though in Voree there now is rest
For all the saints, from east to west.

Great God, what can thy promise hold,
By prophet James so long foretold?
In fair Voree, if equal we,
Shall gathered dwell in unity.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 30.] VOREE, WIS., THURSDAY, OCT. 11, 1849. [WHOLE No. 146.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

GRAPES FROM THORNS,

AND FIGS FROM THISTLES.

"Either make the tree good, and its fruit good, or else make the tree corrupt, and its fruit corrupt. A tree is known by its fruit." [JESUS CHRIST]

This rule has often been applied to the moral conduct of individual professors, but we now propose to apply it to religious systems, and churches; for if a tree is known by its fruit, churches and systems may also be known by their fruits.

On all sides we turn our eyes we behold the christian world (so called) divided into sects and parties—all differing from each other, and all professing to be the church of Christ. Hence the inquiring mind often meets with extreme difficulty in endeavoring to ascertain the right from the wrong.

All the Protestant world agree that the Roman Catholic, or mother church, is so corrupt, and so far apotatized from the truth, that a reformation was not only needed, but absolutely necessary. Many of them even go so far as to say that she is the "mother of harlots"—the woman upon the "scarlet colored beast"—"Anti-Christ"—"The man of sin," &c. Indeed, her principles are so abominably wicked, and so manifestly corrupt, that the thinking mind is almost forced to the above conclusions.

But still the Roman Catholic religion was the national religion of England for many hundred years. She built the ancient chapels where the Protestants now worship. Under her authority the country was divided into parishes, bishoprics, &c. All the officers and ordinances were administered by her. She ordained the bishops and clergy, and she christened the entire population, from generation to generation. At length in the reign of Henry the 8th, the authorities of England and most of her population became Protestants, they were excommunicated from the communion of the mother church and withdrew from her fellowship.

At length after many bloody struggles the church of England was established in her present form. But still she professed to retain the priesthood and ordinances which she had received from the Catholic or mother church—that is, her bishops and clergy claim no new commission from heaven, and her members were not christened anew.

Now comes the application of our text. If the mother church was a good tree, why should Protestant England leave her communion? If, on the other hand, she was a bad tree, how could her priesthood and ordinances be good?

Question.---From whence did the Protestant church derive her authority as to offices, ordinances, and christenings?

Answer.---From the Catholics.

Q.---Was the Catholic church a good tree or a bad one?

A.---She was a bad one---so says Protestantism.

Q.---"Do men gather grapes from thorns, or figs from thistles"---can a bad tree produce a good stock or branch?

A.---"Either make the tree good and its fruit good, or else make the tree corrupt and its fruit corrupt: a tree is known by its fruit."

Now, according to the plainest rules of logic, if the Catholic church was anti-christian, then her christening, or baptism, and her priesthood was not of heaven, but of men. God neither recognized the Catholic church as his church

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 30.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, OCT. 11, 1849. [WHOLE No. 146.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

GRAPES FROM THORNS,

AND FIGS FROM THISTLES.

"Either make the tree good, and its fruit good, or else make the tree corrupt, and its fruit corrupt. A tree is known by its fruit." [JESUS CHRIST]

This rule has often been applied to the moral conduct of individual professors, but we now propose to apply it to religious systems, and churches; for if a tree is known by its fruit, churches and systems may also be known by their fruits.

On all sides we turn our eyes we behold the christian world (so called) divided into sects and parties—all differing from each other, and all professing to be the church of Christ. Hence the inquiring mind often meets with extreme difficulty in endeavoring to ascertain the right from the wrong.

All the Protestant world agree that the Roman Catholic, or mother church, is so corrupt, and so far apotatized from the truth, that a reformation was not only needed, but absolutely necessary. Many of them even go so far as to say that she is the "mother of harlots"—the woman upon the "scarlet colored beast"—"Anti-Christ"—"The man of sin," &c. Indeed, her principles are so abominably wicked, and so manifestly corrupt, that the thinking mind is almost forced to the above conclusions.

But still the Roman Catholic religion was the national religion of England for many hundred years. She built the ancient chapels where the Protestants now worship. Under her authority the country was divided into parishes, bishoprics, &c. All the officers and ordinances were administered by her. She ordained the bishops and clergy, and she christened the entire population, from generation to generation. At length in the reign of Henry the 8th, the authorities of England and most of her population became Protestants, they were excommunicated from the communion of the mother church and withdrew from her fellowship.

At length after many bloody struggles the church of England was established in her present form. But still she professed to retain the priesthood and ordinances which she had received from the Catholic or mother church—that is, her bishops and clergy claim no new commission from heaven, and her members were not christened anew.

Now comes the application of our text. If the mother church was a good tree, why should Protestant England leave her communion? If, on the other hand, she was a bad tree, how could her priesthood and ordinances be good?

Question.---From whence did the Protestant church derive her authority as to offices, ordinances, and christenings?

Answer.---From the Catholics.

Q.---Was the Catholic church a good tree or a bad one?

A.---She was a bad one---so says Protestantism.

Q.---"Do men gather grapes from thorns, or figs from thistles"---can a bad tree produce a good stock or branch?

A.---"Either make the tree good and its fruit good, or else make the tree corrupt and its fruit corrupt: a tree is known by its fruit."

Now, according to the plainest rules of logic, if the Catholic church was anti-christian, then her christening, or baptism, and her priesthood was not of heaven, but of men. God neither recognized the Catholic church as his church

---her ministers as his ministers, or her ordinances as his ordinances. Then, as a matter of course, the Protestants were without a christian ministry, and without a christian baptism, when they first dissented from the Catholics. Therefore their only alternative would have been to have received a new commission by revelation from heaven; and consequently a new baptism. That is, all the Protestant people, both clergy and laymen, should have been considered as unbaptized, until they were administered to by Protestants, who had been commissioned by new revelation.

The fact of her having retained her baptism and her priesthood, which she received, while Catholic establishes the point beyond controversy, that she is a stock or branch of the old tree. And by so doing she virtually acknowledges the tree from which she grew to be a good tree, or herself a bad one.

If then, the Catholic church is considered a "thorn" or "thistle," the Protestant church cannot be considered a fig or grape.

These same remarks will in all their force apply to Methodism, in all its branches, and to other systems which have derived their priesthood and ordinances from the mother church. If the Catholics are false, then Protestantism has no foundatiou. Luther derived his authority from the Catholics. Wesley derived his authority and baptism from the established church, and so did his followers.

We might trace this matter from one branch of reformers or dissenters to another, in all their various sects, from the early dawn of the pretended reformation down to the smallest sprig or branch, of which the great tree of corrupt christianity, or anti-christianity is composed; but we forbear. Suffice it to say, that the same rule will apply to all, except such as can absolutely claim authority by revelation from God.

But churchmen, Methodists, and Protestants in general deny in the plainest terms, the possibility of any revelation later than the Bible.

Hence if you inquire of them what they have against the principles of the Latter Day Saints, the answer is, "they are deluded because they admit of new revelation."

Now the very moment they (the Protestants) take this stand, they deprive themselves of every claim to authority from God, in ministring holy things, unless it is derived from the mother of abominations.

"No man taketh this ministry upon himself (says Paul) but him who is called of God, as was Aaron." It is plain, that Aaron was called by revelation. One of the prophets in reproving the corruptions of the priesthood says as follows:---"The priest's lips should keep knowledge, and receive the law at his (God's) mouth." Revelation is inseperably connected with the priesthood, as an unchanging principle from all eternity to all eternity. Where there is no gift of revelation there can be no priesthood, and where there is no prieshood there can be no ordinances of God, and where there are no ordinances of God there can be no church of God. All doctrine, ordinances, gifts, and blessings pertaining to the church of God, spring from an inspired priesthood as directly as a stream flows from a fountain, or as fruit is produced from a tree. As well might man attempt to produce apples or figs independent of a tree, as to expect a church of Christ to be in existence without apostles, prophets, &c., to administer the ordinances and blessings thereof.

Since the great apostacy from primitive christianity, all the reformers of which we have any knowledge have fallen into this one inconsistency, viz., of patching new cloth on to old garments; and thus the rent has been made worse. For instance, the Protestants have sought a reformation in doctrine without a recommission and new administration of ordinances. The Wesleyans sought a reformation in practice without a reformation of doctrine.---The Irvingites sought to graft the gifts of the spirit on to a corrupt church, without a change of ordinances, or priesthood. The Rev. Alexander Campbell has attempted to restore the ordinances without the priesthood, or gifts of the spirit. The Friends or Quakers have considered both priesthood and ordinances as of

---her ministers as his ministers, or her ordinances as his ordinances. Then, as a matter of course, the Protestants were without a christian ministry, and without a christian baptism, when they first dissented from the Catholics. Therefore their only alternative would have been to have received a new commission by revelation from heaven; and consequently a new baptism. That is, all the Protestant people, both clergy and laymen, should have been considered as unbaptized, until they were administered to by Protestants, who had been commissioned by new revelation.

The fact of her having retained her baptism and her priesthood, which she received, while Catholic establishes the point beyond controversy, that she is a stock or branch of the old tree. And by so doing she virtually acknowledges the tree from which she grew to be a good tree, or herself a bad one.

If then, the Catholic church is considered a "thorn" or "thistle," the Protestant church cannot be considered a fig or grape.

These same remarks will in all their force apply to Methodism, in all its branches, and to other systems which have derived their priesthood and ordinances from the mother church. If the Catholics are false, then Protestantism has no foundation. Luther derived his authority from the Catholics. Wesley derived his authority and baptism from the established church, and so did his followers.

We might trace this matter from one branch of reformers or dissenters to another, in all their various sects, from the early dawn of the pretended reformation down to the smallest sprig or branch, of which the great tree of corrupt christianity, or anti-christianity is composed; but we forbear. Suffice it to say, that the same rule will apply to all, except such as can absolutely claim authority by revelation from God.

But churchmen, Methodists, and Protestants in general deny in the plainest terms, the possibility of any revelation later than the Bible.

Hence if you inquire of them what they have against the principles of the Latter Day Saints, the answer is, "they are deluded because they admit of new revelation."

Now the very moment they (the Protestants) take this stand, they deprive themselves of every claim to authority from God, in ministring holy things, unless it is derived from the mother of abominations.

"No man taketh this ministry upon himself (says Paul) but him who is called of God, as was Aaron." It is plain, that Aaron was called by revelation. One of the prophets in reproving the corruptions of the priesthood says as follows:---"The priest's lips should keep knowledge, and receive the law at his (God's) mouth." Revelation is inseperably connected with the priesthood, as an unchanging principle from all eternity to all eternity. Where there is no gift of revelation there can be no priesthood, and where there is no prieshood there can be no ordinances of God, and where there are no ordinances of God there can be no church of God. All doctrine, ordinances, gifts, and blessings pertaining to the church of God, spring from an inspired priesthood as directly as a stream flows from a fountain, or as fruit is produced from a tree. As well might man attempt to produce apples or figs independent of a tree, as to expect a church of Christ to be in existence without apostles, prophets, &c., to administer the ordinances and blessings thereof.

Since the great apostacy from primitive christianity, all the reformers of which we have any knowledge have fallen into this one inconsistency, viz., of patching new cloth on to old garments; and thus the rent has been made worse. For instance, the Protestants have sought a reformation in doctrine without a recommission and new administration of ordinances. The Wesleyans sought a reformation in practice without a reformation of doctrine.---The Irvingites sought to graft the gifts of the spirit on to a corrupt church, without a change of ordinances, or priesthood. The Rev. Alexander Campbell has attempted to restore the ordinances without the priesthood, or gifts of the spirit. The Friends or Quakers have considered both priesthood and ordinances as of no use, and that the spirit itself is sufficient, &c., &c. Thus all the attempts at reformation have failed to produce the desired effect; ages have rolled away, and the rent is still made worse, or the new wine has burst the old bottles; and thus bottles and wine have been lost or destroyed.

At length the full time had arrived for the great restoration of all things to commence, for the great and last dispensation to be ushered into the world. The Lord uttered his voice from the heavens, an holy angel came forth and restored the priesthood and apostleship, and hence has arisen the church of the saints; new (new to this generation) in priesthood, new in ordinances, new in spirit, gifts and blessings. It claims no affinity with the "mother of harlots or any of her daughters." It denies the ordinances and priesthood which have grown out of her roots. In short it is a new "tree"---new "fruits,"---"new cloth," and "new garments,"—"new wine," and "new bottles"—"new leaven" and a "new lump," "a new covenant" and spirit; and may it roll on till we have a new heaven and a new earth, that we may dwell forever in the new Jerusalem, while old things pass away, and all things are made new, even so. Amen.

BORROWING TROUBLES.—Thou hast seen many troubles, travel-stained pilgrim of the world. But that which hath vexed thee most, hath been looking for evil. Although calamities have crossed thee, and misery been heaped upon thy head, yet ills that never happened have chiefly made thee wretched.—Taper's Philosophy.

Eighteen miles west from Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 27th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I attended the Franklin Conference, assisted by Bro. Adams, Bro. Savage, and several other Elders. We had an interesting meeting, but as the Conference business had been principally attended to at the July and August Conferences, and a large one would occur so soon, we did not take up any general business matters. The hurry of our journey prevented sending up the minutes. One of the brethren near Saginaw let me have a horse and buggy, and I am passing down as far as Chautauque Co., N. Y., by land, whence I shall hurry by steam to New York to attend the October Conference. My family will probably stop some time in Chautauque Co. Graham, Hickey, Blakeslee and Wright, with several Elders, are ahead of me, all well I presume. Savage is coming on a little behind. Page is expected along, but I do not know whether he is ahead or behind. Bro. Adams has gone to Baltimore. We expect a general turn out there, and finding an excelleut spirit among the brethren where we go, look for better times in the future. We left things prospering at Beaver, and emigrants are arriving by nearly every boat. A family landed from Virginia a few minutes before I left.

Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

LYING IN BED.

No piece of indolence hurts the health more than the modern custom of lying in bed too late in the morning. The inhabitants of cities never rise before 8 or 9 o'clock, but the morning is undoubtedly the best time for exercise, while the stomach is empty, and the body refreshed with sleep. Besides, the morning air braces and strengthens the nerves, and in some measure answers the purpose of a cold bath. Let any one who has been accustomed to lie in bed til! 8 or 9 o'clock, rise by 6 or 7, spend a couple of hours in walking, riding, or any other active diversion without doors, he will find his spirits cheerful and serene through the day, his appetite keen and his body braced and strengthend. Custom soon renders early rising agreeable, and nothing contributes more to the preservation of the health. The inactive are constantly complaining of pain in the stomach, flatulence, indigestion, &c. Those complaints which pave the way to many others, are not to be removed by medicines; they can only be cured by a rigorous course of exercise, to which indeed they seldom fail to yield. It consists with observation, that all old men have been early risers. This is the only circumstance attending the longevity, to which I never knew an exception.—Ex.

CURSE OF ILL-GOTTEN WEALTH.

There is such a curse goes with an ill-gotten estate, that he that leaves such a one to his child doth but cheat and deceive him, makes him believe that he has left him wealth, but has withal put such a canker in the bowels of it that is sure to eat it out. Would to God it was as generally laid to heart as it seems to be generally taken notice of! Then surely parents would not account it a reasonable motive for unjust dealing, that they may thereby provide for their children, for this is not a way of providing for them, nay 'tis the way to spoil them of whatever they have lawfully gathered for them; the least mite of unlawful gain being of the nature of leaven, which sours a whole lump, bringing down curses upon all a man possesseth.—Whole Duty of Man.

SUBLIME TRUTH.

Let a man have all the world can give him, he is still miserable, if he has a groveling, fettered, undevout mind. Let him have his gardens, his fields, his woods, his lawns, for grandeur, plenty, ornament and gratification; while at the same time God is not in all his thoughts. And let another have neither field nor garden; let him only look at nature with an enlightened mind—a mind which can see and adore the Creator in his works, can consider them as demonstrations of his power, his wisdom, and his goodness, and he is far happier than the other in his riches. The one is little higher than a beast, the other but little lower than an angel.—Ex.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

Elisha Persons,	$2,00	to Vol. V	No. 26
Lyman H. Burk,	4,00	to Vol. V	No. 1
Sarah Griffis,	1,00	to Vol. IV	No. 52
Abel Farrington,	2,00	"	" 26
Sally Campbell,	0,13	"	" 29
Betsey Cusick,	1,00	"	" 52
Moses Johnson,	1,00	to Vol. V	No. 6

no use, and that the spirit itself is sufficient, &c., &c. Thus all the attempts at reformation have failed to produce the desired effect; ages have rolled away, and the rent is still made worse, or the new wine has burst the old bottles; and thus bottles and wine have been lost or destroyed.

At length the full time had arrived for the great restoration of all things to commence, for the great and last dispensation to be ushered into the world. The Lord uttered his voice from the heavens, an holy angel came forth and restored the priesthood and apostleship, and hence has arisen the church of the saints; new (new to this generation) in priesthood, new in ordinances, new in spirit, gifts and blessings. It claims no affinity with the "mother of harlots or any of her daughters." It denies the ordinances and priesthood which have grown out of her roots. In short it is a new "tree"---new "fruits,"---"new cloth," and "new garments,"—"new wine," and "new bottles"—"new leaven" and a "new lump," "a new covenant" and spirit; and may it roll on till we have a new heaven and a new earth, that we may dwell forever in the new Jerusalem, while old things pass away, and all things are made new, even so. Amen.

BORROWING TROUBLES.—Thou hast seen many troubles, travel-stained pilgrim of the world. But that which hath vexed thee most, hath been looking for evil. Although calamities have crossed thee, and misery been heaped upon thy head, yet ills that never happened have chiefly made thee wretched.—Taper's Philosophy.

Eighteen miles west from Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 27th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I attended the Franklin Conference, assisted by Bro. Adams, Bro. Savage, and several other Elders. We had an interesting meeting, but as the Conference business had been principally attended to at the July and August Conferences, and a large one would occur so soon, we did not take up any general business matters. The hurry of our journey prevented sending up the minutes. One of the brethren near Saginaw let me have a horse and buggy, and I am passing down as far as Chautauque Co., N. Y., by land, whence I shall hurry by steam to New York to attend the October Conference. My family will probably stop some time in Chautauque Co.

Graham, Hickey, Blakeslee and Wright, with several Elders, are ahead of me, all well I presume. Savage is coming on a little behind. Page is expected along, but I do not know whether he is ahead or behind. Bro. Adams has gone to Baltimore. We expect a general turn out there, and finding an excellent spirit among the brethren where we go, look for better times in the future. We left things prospering at Beaver, and emigrants are arriving by nearly every boat. A family landed from Virginia a few minutes before I left.

Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

LYING IN BED.

No piece of indolence hurts the health more than the modern custom of lying in bed too late in the morning. The inhabitants of cities never rise before 8 or 9 o'clock, but the morning is undoubtedly the best time for exercise, while the stomach is empty, and the body refreshed with sleep. Besides, the morning air braces and strengthens the nerves, and in some measure answers the purpose of a cold bath. Let any one who has been accustomed to lie in bed till 8 or 9 o'clock, rise by 6 or 7, spend a couple of hours in walking, riding, or any other active diversion without doors, he will find his spirits cheerful and serene through the day, his appetite keen and his body braced and strengthend. Custom soon renders early rising agreeable, and nothing contributes more to the preservation of the health. The inactive are constantly complaining of pain in the stomach, flatulence, indigestion, &c. Those complaints which pave the way to many others, are not to be removed by medicines; they can only be cured by a rigorous course of exercise, to which indeed they seldom fail to yield. It consists with observation, that all old men have been early risers. This is the only circumstance attending the longevity, to which I never knew an exception.—Ex.

CURSE OF ILL-GOTTEN WEALTH.

There is such a curse goes with an ill-gotten estate, that he that leaves such a one to his child doth but cheat and deceive him, makes him believe that he has left him wealth, but has withal put such a canker in the bowels of it that is sure to eat it out. Would to God it was as generally laid to heart as it seems to be generally taken notice of! Then surely parents would not account it a reasonable motive for unjust dealing, that they may thereby provide for their children, for this is not a way of providing for them, nay 'tis the way to spoil them of whatever they have lawfully gathered for them; the least mite of unlawful gain being of the nature of leaven, which sours a whole lump, bringing down curses upon all a man possesseth.—Whole Duty of Man.

SUBLIME TRUTH.

Let a man have all the world can give him, he is still miserable, if he has a groveling, fettered, undevout mind. Let him have his gardens, his fields, his woods, his lawns, for grandeur, plenty, ornament and gratification; while at the same time God is not in all his thoughts. And let another have neither field nor garden; let him only look at nature with an enlightened mind—a mind which can see and adore the Creator in his works, can consider them as demonstrations of his power, his wisdom, and his goodness, and he is far happier than the other in his riches. The one is little higher than a beast, the other but little lower than an angel.—Ex.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

Elisha Persons,	$2,00 to	Vol. V	No. 26
Lyman H. Burk,	4,00 to	Vol. V	No. 1
Sarah Griffis,	1,00 to	Vol. IV	No. 52
Abel Farrington,	2,00 "	"	26
Sally Campbell,	0,13 "	"	29
Betsey Cusick,	1,00 "	"	52
Moses Johnson,	1,00 to	Vol. V	No. 6

THE RELIGION OF THE ANCIENTS.

It has been supposed by many of our modern theologians that the ancients knew very little about religion; that if they possessed any information of a God, it was only in dark similitudes; in forms and ceremonies, in uncertainties and shadows; that the antediluvians lived in a day of darkness, or, rather, in the gloom of night; that the patriarchs lived in the dawn of day, before the sun had made its appearance above the horizon; that the Mosaic dispensation might be compared to the sun's first rising on the world; that the time when our Savior made his appearance among men, and the gospel was preached by the Apostles, was like the sun rising in majesty, dispelling the mist that brooded over the earth, and causing creation to rejoice; but that we are living in a day when sol has reached the meridian of his glory; in "the blaze of gospel day."

These views are by no means uncommon, and yet it always has appeared singular to us that men in this day and age of the world, when sectarianism has torn to pieces the religious world, and men's views on this subject are split up into ten thousand pieces, that they should arrogate more to themselves than what our Savior and his Apostles enjoyed, when the church was in its primitive glory; whilst they were under the teaching of our Lord, and inspired Apostles; before corruption or false doctrine had obtained power in the christian church: and we can only account for it upon the principle that "ignorance is the mother of superstition;" and that in them the words of the Apostle are fulfilled: "Professing to be wise, they become fools."

True religion is of divine origin; it emanates from God. It teaches us what is his will; what our privileges are, and what our duty is towards him, and to each other. It teaches us to "love God with all our heart, might, mind and strength; and our neighbor as ourselves." If we possess any knowledge of God, we must have received it from God; for, according to the words of the Savior, "no man knoweth the Father but the Son, and he to whom the Son does reveal him." Since religion is of divine origin, we can only obtain from God a true knowledge of his mind, his purposes, and designs, and what mode of worship will be acceptable to him. And if we have no means of coming to God ourselves, we can receive no knowledge of God, but what is conveyed either by tradition or writing. And since priestcraft has prevailed in different ages, and errors in translation and transposition are likely to ensue, it must follow as a natural consequence that those who are nearest the fountain will be the most likely to partake of the purest streams.

And it must be obvious to every understanding mind that all correct intelligence proceeds from God, and that the more frequent intercourse a man has with the Lord the more communications he has from the Almighty, and the more frequent God's revelations are to him the more he will know of the purposes and designs of his heavenly Father, and, consequently, of true religion. This being the case, it will not be necessary for us to inquire whether a man lived in the Adamic dispensation, the dispensation of Noah, of the Patriarchs, of Moses, of our Savior, or in the present dispensation, to know who had the most light, possessed the greatest privileges, or had the most religion, but to inquire who drew the nearest to God, who received the most frequent communications from him, and to whom did he most abundantly reveal his will, whether in this generation or any other. If these questions can be satisfactorily answered, we shall not find much difficulty in ascertaining who possesses the most knowledge of God and godliness, and who has the most religion.

If we turn our attention to the present religious world, what do we see? Men holding communion with God, and receiving revelations from God? Verily nay! The heavens to them have become brass, and God's mouth is closed. Nay, worse; the idea of revelation is scouted by them, and those who would believe in it are branded as impostors; and they virtually cut themselves off from all communication with, or from God, and can know nothing of or

THE RELIGION OF THE ANCIENTS.

It has been supposed by many of our modern theologians that the ancients knew very little about religion; that if they possessed any information of a God, it was only in dark similitudes; in forms and ceremonies, in uncertainties and shadows; that the antediluvians lived in a day of darkness, or, rather, in the gloom of night; that the patriarchs lived in the dawn of day, before the sun had made its appearance above the horizon; that the Mosaic dispensation might be compared to the sun's first rising on the world; that the time when our Savior made his appearance among men, and the gospel was preached by the Apostles, was like the sun rising in majesty, dispelling the mist that brooded over the earth, and causing creation to rejoice; but that we are living in a day when sol has reached the meridian of his glory; in "the blaze of gospel day."

These views are by no means uncommon, and yet it always has appeared singular to us that men in this day and age of the world, when sectarianism has torn to pieces the religious world, and men's views on this subject are split up into ten thousand pieces, that they should arrogate more to themselves than what our Savior and his Apostles enjoyed, when the church was in its primitive glory; whilst they were under the teaching of our Lord, and inspired Apostles; before corruption or false doctrine had obtained power in the christian church: and we can only account for it upon the principle that "ignorance is the mother of superstition;" and that in them the words of the Apostle are fulfilled: "Professing to be wise, they become fools."

True religion is of divine origin; it emanates from God. It teaches us what is his will; what our privileges are, and what our duty is towards him, and to each other. It teaches us to "love God with all our heart, might, mind and strength; and our neighbor as ourselves." If we possess any knowledge of God, we must have received it from God; for, according to the words of the Savior, "no man knoweth the Father but the Son, and he to whom the Son does reveal him." Since religion is of divine origin, we can only obtain from God a true knowledge of his mind, his purposes, and designs, and what mode of worship will be acceptable to him. And if we have no means of coming to God ourselves, we can receive no knowledge of God, but what is conveyed either by tradition or writing. And since priestcraft has prevailed in different ages, and errors in translation and transposition are likely to ensue, it must follow as a natural consequence that those who are nearest the fountain will be the most likely to partake of the purest streams.

And it must be obvious to every understanding mind that all correct intelligence proceeds from God, and that the more frequent intercourse a man has with the Lord the more communications he has from the Almighty, and the more frequent God's revelations are to him the more he will know of the purposes and designs of his heavenly Father, and, consequently, of true religion. This being the case, it will not be necessary for us to inquire whether a man lived in the Adamic dispensation, the dispensation of Noah, of the Patriarchs, of Moses, of our Savior, or in the present dispensation, to know who had the most light, possessed the greatest privileges, or had the most religion, but to inquire who drew the nearest to God, who received the most frequent communications from him, and to whom did he most abundantly reveal his will, whether in this generation or any other. If these questions can be satisfactorily answered, we shall not find much difficulty in ascertaining who possesses the most knowledge of God and godliness, and who has the most religion.

If we turn our attention to the present religious world, what do we see? Men holding communion with God, and receiving revelations from God? Verily nay! The heavens to them have become brass, and God's mouth is closed. Nay, worse; the idea of revelation is scouted by them, and those who would believe in it are branded as impostors; and they virtually cut themselves off from all communication with, or from God, and can know nothing of or about God, "but what they know naturally, as brute beasts," as saith the Apostle. What sort of a spectacle does the christian church present at the present? Torn, and split up, divided, and disjointed by the fiery zeal of religious bigots, and hypocritical partizans, it presents a picture of ruin and desolation, like a forest torn by a mighty tempest, or uprooted by a furious whirlwind, that once stood in grandeur and majesty, and its beautiful foliage was admired by every observer; but now its withered leaves, its broken boughs, and shattered limbs, are the sad memorials of its overthrow and destruction.

Or like some ancient palace that stood proudly aloof from other inferior buildings, magnificently adorned with all the beauty of ancient architecture; its towers, and columns, and statuary, and beauty, was the pride of princes, and its strength and fortresses bid defiance to the hand of the desolater; but the revolutions of ages have despoiled the noble edifice: the corroding hand of time has destroyed its beauty, and all that is left of its former magnificence is here and there a few broken fragments, that very imperfectly show to the inquiring traveler the ruins of its former splendor and ancient glory.

So stood the church, once indeed beautiful, pure and intelligent; clothed with the power and spirit of God; endowed with the gift of the Holy Ghost; possessed of prophets, Apostles, pastors, teachers, helps, governments, tongues, interpretations, gifts, visions, and the ministring of angels; having the heavens opened, the purposes of God unfolded, the future destiny of man made known, and "life and immortality brought to light."

Basking in the beams of eternal truth, and holding communications with God and angels, it stood proudly erect, in the strength of Israel's God; it was sustained by the mighty hand of Jehovah, and was indeed "fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners;" but ah! alas! a change has come over the dream; the flower has been nipt in the bud; its glory has departed; the deadly influence of heresy has penetrated to its very vitals.

The withering power of priestcraft has disrobed it of its beauty; and disjointed by sectarian strife and schismatic influence, it lays in broken fragments, scattered, rent and disjointed, with nothing to point out its original but the shattered remnants of its ancient glory, on which are scarcely traceable any of the marks of its former magnificence, or original grandeur. And how can it be otherwise? when men are destitute of revelations from God, and absolutely deny the principle?

Perhaps some may think that the above is an overstrained picture, but we think not; and let those who think differently examine the subject, and they will find that none of the above mentioned things, which constituted the beauty and glory of the christian church, are now to be found: no apostles, no prophets, no pastors, teachers, or evangelists, that even profess to be inspired; no gifts of healing, no tongues, or interpretations; no visions, no revelations, or ministring of angels; but all they now possess, as a substitute, is, the dogmas of men, the wild theories of theologians, and the opinion of divines; all doubt and uncertainty, without the least particle of a knowledge of God, the order of his church, or his will concerning them.

If we turn our attention from the religious world to that of the infidel, we shall find a body of men vainly striving to find happiness in created good, in morality and in social society, but without a knowledge of God. Turn we our attention for a moment to Fourierism, which however laudable in its attempts to ameliorate the condition of man, and out of the broken, chaotic, disordered mass of society that now exists, bring about a social order which shall promote universal peace and happiness; it must fail in its attempts; it has no other religion than that which is above described; it has not the materials to construct such an edifice as it contemplates; and science without God will never make men permanently happy.

What a deplorable aspect the world of mankind presents at the present time, especially on about God, " but what they know naturally, as brute beasts," as saith the Apostle. What sort of a spectacle does the christian church present at the present? Torn, and split up, divided, and disjointed by the fiery zeal of religious bigots, and hypocritical partizans, it presents a picture of ruin and desolation, like a forest torn by a mighty tempest, or uprooted by a furious whirlwind, that once stood in grandeur and majesty, and its beautiful foliage was admired by every observer; but now its withered leaves, its broken boughs, and shattered limbs, are the sad memorials of its overthrow and destruction.

Or like some ancient palace that stood proudly aloof from other inferior buildings, magnificently adorned with all the beauty of ancient architecture; its towers, and columns, and statuary, and beauty, was the pride of princes, and its strength and fortresses bid defiance to the hand of the desolater; but the revolutions of ages have despoiled the noble edifice: the corroding hand of time has destroyed its beauty, and all that is left of its former magnificence is here and there a few broken fragments, that very imperfectly show to the inquiring traveler the ruins of its former splendor and ancient glory.

So stood the church, once indeed beautiful, pure and intelligent; clothed with the power and spirit of God; endowed with the gift of the Holy Ghost; possessed of prophets, Apostles, pastors, teachers, helps, governments, tongues, interpretations, gifts, visions, and the ministring of angels; having the heavens opened, the purposes of God unfolded, the future destiny of man made known, and " life and immortality brought to light."

Basking in the beams of eternal truth, and holding communications with God and angels, it stood proudly erect, in the strength of Israel's God; it was sustained by the mighty hand of Jehovah, and was indeed " fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners;" but ah! alas! a change has come over the dream; the flower has been nipt in the bud; its glory has departed; the deadly influence of heresy has penetrated to its very vitals.

The withering power of priestcraft has disrobed it of its beauty; and disjointed by sectarian strife and schismatic influence, it lays in broken fragments, scattered, rent and disjointed, with nothing to point out its original but the shattered remnants of its ancient glory, on which are scarcely traceable any of the marks of its former magnificence, or original grandeur. And how can it be otherwise? when men are destitute of revelations from God, and absolutely deny the principle?

Perhaps some may think that the above is an overstrained picture, but we think not; and let those who think differently examine the subject, and they will find that none of the above mentioned things, which constituted the beauty and glory of the christian church, are now to be found: no apostles, no prophets, no pastors, teachers, or evangelists, that even profess to be inspired; no gifts of healing, no tongues, or interpretations; no visions, no revelations, or ministring of angels; but all they now possess, as a substitute, is, the dogmas of men, the wild theories of theologians, and the opinion of divines; all doubt and uncertainty, without the least particle of a knowledge of God, the order of his church, or his will concerning them.

If we turn our attention from the religious world to that of the infidel, we shall find a body of men vainly striving to find happiness in created good, in morality and in social society, but without a knowledge of God. Turn we our attention for a moment to Fourierism, which however laudable in its attempts to ameliorate the condition of man, and out of the broken, chaotic, disordered mass of society that now exists, bring about a social order which shall promote universal peace and happiness; it must fail in its attempts; it has no other religion than that which is above described; it has not the materials to construct such an edifice as it contemplates; and science without God will never make men permanently happy.

What a deplorable aspect the world of mankind presents at the present time, especially on our continent, torn to pieces with dissensions about religion and politics, tossed on the billows of uncertainty, both religiously and politically, men scarcely know which way to steer to shun the various rocks that threaten destruction on every hand.

With several hundred different religions, all clashing and in commotion, the speculative theories of Miller, with his wild enthusiasm; the deceptive pretensions of Mesmerism; the poison of Infidelity; the plans of Fourier, and the ten thousand other notions that are deluging the earth, and cracking the human brain, render it indeed necessary that God should again speak and point out the way of salvation and happiness with certainty to the human family, and bid the "dire commotion cease."

With this state of things, shall we glory in our religion, and say that we are living in the "blaze of gospel day?" Vain pretension! Idle boast! Let us rather hide our heads in shame, and "stand in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein;" then should we indeed find rest to our souls. Jer. vi. 16.

If we turn our attention to the ancients, we shall find that their religion was founded upon a very different basis. If they worshiped God, it was because they were instructed by him to do so. If they kept any law, or observed any ordinances, it was because the Lord commanded them to do it. Their religion was taught them by the Lord. And if they possessed any knowledge of God, any wisdom or intelligence, if they were made acquainted with his purposes and designs, it was through revelation. And if God had not unveiled himself to them, they must have remained eternally in the dark, and ignorant of the principles of truth. Under the tuition of Jehovah they were taught the truths of heaven, unadulterated by the foolish dogmas of men, or the corrupting influences of priestcraft. Thus being taught of God, and amenable to him for their conduct, and their teaching being the teaching of heaven and proceeding from God, their adherence to his precepts was their eternal salvation. They knew no other guide, and, following his directions, they were safe.

What a contrast there is between ancient and modern religion. Men boast of their religion, of their intelligence, of their knowledge of God, and of his will and purposes, and he has never spoken to them, nor given a revelation for eighteen hundred years, and they believe he never will do so again. While Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Moses and the prophets walked with God, had the ministring of angels, the visions of heaven unfolded, and the purposes of God developed; saw and conversed with Jehovah; gazed on the glories of the eternal world, and wrote and prophecied of events that should transpire through all succeeding ages. If this generation possess any knowledge of God, they obtained it through what the ancients have written and spoken; and yet our modern religionists profess to be wise, enlightened and intelligent, and think that the ancients were in the dark. O consistency, whither hast thou fled!

We must necessarily conclude from the above that "every good and perfect gift proceeds from the Father of Lights," through the medium of revelation, and if we cannot obtain revelations from him we must remain eternally in the dark in regard to true religion, God, angels, heaven, hell, the purposes of Jehovah, or anything connected with salvation; and instead of obtaining true intelligence from God, shall be obliged to wander in the uncertain mazes of sectarianism, and of false religion and philosophy; ignorant of God, and of the plan of salvation, groping in midnight gloom, and when we leave this world be obliged to "take a leap in the dark."

For the Gospel Herald.

Voree, September 29th, 1849.

Bro. Cooper:—An original characteristic of the saints is, that they obey God rather than man. The law of God is given to them, and they receive it, unlike the great body of mankind, who, though they profess faith in God, in his law and his providence, always reject and our continent, torn to pieces with dissensions about religion and politics, tossed on the billows of uncertainty, both religiously and politically, men scarcely know which way to steer to shun the various rocks that threaten destruction on every hand.

With several hundred different religions, all clashing and in commotion, the speculative theories of Miller, with his wild enthusiasm; the deceptive pretensions of Mesmerism; the poison of Infidelity; the plans of Fourier, and the ten thousand other notions that are deluging the earth, and cracking the human brain, render it indeed necessary that God should again speak and point out the way of salvation and happiness with certainty to the human family, and bid the "dire commotion cease."

With this state of things, shall we glory in our religion, and say that we are living in the "blaze of gospel day?" Vain pretension! Idle boast! Let us rather hide our heads in shame, and "stand in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein;" then should we indeed find rest to our souls. Jer. vi. 16.

If we turn our attention to the ancients, we shall find that their religion was founded upon a very different basis. If they worshiped God, it was because they were instructed by him to do so. If they kept any law, or observed any ordinances, it was because the Lord commanded them to do it. Their religion was taught them by the Lord. And if they possessed any knowledge of God, any wisdom or intelligence, if they were made acquainted with his purposes and designs, it was through revelation. And if God had not unveiled himself to them, they must have remained eternally in the dark, and ignorant of the principles of truth. Under the tuition of Jehovah they were taught the truths of heaven, unadulterated by the foolish dogmas of men, or the corrupting influences of priestcraft. Thus being taught of God, and amenable to him for their conduct, and their teaching being the teaching of heaven and proceeding from God, their adherence to his precepts was their eternal salvation. They knew no other guide, and, following his directions, they were safe.

What a contrast there is between ancient and modern religion. Men boast of their religion, of their intelligence, of their knowledge of God, and of his will and purposes, and he has never spoken to them, nor given a revelation for eighteen hundred years, and they believe he never will do so again. While Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Moses and the prophets walked with God, had the ministring of angels, the visions of heaven unfolded, and the purposes of God developed; saw and conversed with Jehovah, gazed on the glories of the eternal world, and wrote and prophecied of events that should transpire through all succeeding ages. If this generation possess any knowledge of God, they obtained it through what the ancients have written and spoken; and yet our modern religionists profess to be wise, enlightened and intelligent, and think that the ancients were in the dark. O consistency, whither hast thou fled!

We must necessarily conclude from the above that "every good and perfect gift proceeds from the Father of Lights," through the medium of revelation, and if we cannot obtain revelations from him we must remain eternally in the dark in regard to true religion, God, angels, heaven, hell, the purposes of Jehovah, or anything connected with salvation; and instead of obtaining true intelligence from God, shall be obliged to wander in the uncertain mazes of sectarianism, and of false religion and philosophy; ignorant of God, and of the plan of salvation, groping in midnight gloom, and when we leave this world be obliged to "take a leap in the dark."

For the Gospel Herald.

Voree, September 29th, 1849.

Bro. Cooper:—An original characteristic of the saints is, that they obey God rather than man. The law of God is given to them, and they receive it, unlike the great body of mankind, who, though they profess faith in God, in his law and his providence, always reject and ridicule his word when given. The antediluvians were, no doubt, believers in God, perfectly orthodox in their faith relative to God, and they preserved a formal worship according to the custom of the country; had their canon of scripture, whether oral or written, to which they appealed.

They were to the true saints of that day what apostate christendom is to the true saints in this day. Both have corrupted their ways. That is, corrupted the true way. Both teach faith in God, and at the same time ridicule his word. Both fill the earth with violence. Both reject the means provided of God for their deliverance. The antediluvians by disregarding the warning of Noah and the building of the ark. And apostate christendom by a like disregard of the word of God spoken by "his servant, sent forth at supper time," and the places wherein shall be deliverance, namely, Zion and Jerusalem. Consequently the same fate which terminated the folly and wickedness of that people is but a sample of what awaits the corruptors of the earth in the generation in which the dispensation of the fulness of times has been committed. "For as it was in the days of Noah so it will be in the day of the coming of the Son of man."

Ques.—How was it in the days of Noah?—Ans.—They "knew not until the flood came and took them all away." What was it that they did not know? Why they did not know that God had rejected them. They did not know that the flood was coming, and did not know that the ark would save them. In short, they did not know that Noah was a prophet, and, of course, did not know anything about the work of God among them "till the flood came and took them all away." Here was a baptism without repentance. And though the destruction of all wickedness, it purified the earth for a residence for the saved of the ark.

A true figure of what is coming upon this generation. "So shall it be in the day of the coming of the son of man." "Mystery Babylon," comprising every sectary in christendom, do not know that they are rejected of God, but say as the prophet said they would—"no doubt the Lord is with us," though he has not spoken to them "since the fathers fell asleep," some 1700 years ago. They know not that a deluge of fire is coming. 2 Peter iii. 7. They do not know that there is deliverance in Zion and Jerusalem, because their prophets, rulers and seers are covered with the "spirit of deep sleep."

They do not know that there is a prophet in their midst that speaketh the word of God, who forewarns the dwellers on the earth that a consumption is determined upon the whole earth. Isa. xxiv. The consequence will be as it was in the days of Noah, they will eat and drink, marry and "give in marriage." That is, pursue their ordinary business until the day to which the heaven and earth that now is, is "reserved unto fire." Hence there will be another baptism (of fire) without repentance, to the destruction of the ungodly, and for the purifying of the earth, and those who are delivered (in Zion and Jerusalem) shall receive it for an everlasting inheritance; "for blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."

A peculiar characteristic of the saints is, they gather together. So striking is this doctrine that every prophet and apostle, every man of God from before "Abraham was," have talked of it, sung of it and prayed for it. And Jesus Christ, when portraying the utter desolations of a rejected people, says: "How oft would I have gathered thy children," &c. Modern christians say they can worship God as well in one place as another. Then, I ask, why did God tell Abraham to get up and go out of his own country to a strange land?

Again, could Israel, after Moses came among them, worship God and make brick for Pharaoh at the same time? I think not. "All souls are mine," saith God, and the spirit and body is the soul of man. If their souls served Pharaoh, how could they serve God? It is evident that they could not serve God and Pharaoh any more than God and mammon. Hence the voice from heaven proclaimed, "come out of her my people." While Israel remained in Egypt they obeyed man, when they came out they could obey God. And while the saints are scattered among the Gentiles they must serve them, be subject to their sins and their plagues. Would it not be better to come out from among them and obey God rather than man? that his kingdom may come and the dominion thereof unto the saints of the most high. May God speed the gathering and the preparation. Yours in the faith of the Son of God, J. W. BRIGGS.

ridicule his word when given. The antediluvians were, no doubt, believers in God, perfectly orthodox in their faith relative to God, and they preserved a formal worship according to the custom of the country; had their canon of scripture, whether oral or written, to which they appealed.

They were to the true saints of that day what apostate christendom is to the true saints in this day. Both have corrupted their ways. That is, corrupted the true way. Both teach faith in God, and at the same time ridicule his word. Both fill the earth with violence. Both reject the means provided of God for their deliverance. The antediluvians by disregarding the warning of Noah and the building of the ark. And apostate christendom by a like disregard of the word of God spoken by "his servant, sent forth at supper time," and the places wherein shall be deliverance, namely, Zion and Jerusalem. Consequently the same fate which terminated the folly and wickedness of that people is but a sample of what awaits the corruptors of the earth in the generation in which the dispensation of the fulness of times has been committed. "For as it was in the days of Noah so it will be in the day of the coming of the Son of man."

Ques.—How was it in the days of Noah?—Ans.—They "knew not until the flood came and took them all away." What was it that they did not know? Why they did not know that God had rejected them. They did not know that the flood was coming, and did not know that the ark would save them. In short, they did not know that Noah was a prophet, and, of course, did not know anything about the work of God among them "till the flood came and took them all away." Here was a baptism without repentance. And though the destruction of all wickedness, it purified the earth for a residence for the saved of the ark.

A true figure of what is coming upon this generation. "So shall it be in the day of the coming of the son of man." "Mystery Babylon," comprising every sectary in christendom, do not know that they are rejected of God, but say as the prophet said they would—"no doubt the Lord is with us," though he has not spoken to them "since the fathers fell asleep," some 1700 years ago. They know not that a deluge of fire is coming. 2 Peter iii. 7. They do not know that there is deliverance in Zion and Jerusalem, because their prophets, rulers and seers are covered with the "spirit of deep sleep."

They do not know that there is a prophet in their midst that speaketh the word of God, who forewarns the dwellers on the earth that a consumption is determined upon the whole earth. Isa. xxiv. The consequence will be as it was in the days of Noah, they will eat and drink, marry and "give in marriage." That is, pursue their ordinary business until the day to which the heaven and earth that now is, is "reserved unto fire." Hence there will be another baptism (of fire) without repentance, to the destruction of the ungodly, and for the purifying of the earth, and those who are delivered (in Zion and Jerusalem) shall receive it for an everlasting inheritance; "for blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."

A peculiar characteristic of the saints is, they gather together. So striking is this doctrine that every prophet and apostle, every man of God from before "Abraham was," have talked of it, sung of it and prayed for it. And Jesus Christ, when portraying the utter desolations of a rejected people, says: "How oft would I have gathered thy children," &c. Modern christians say they can worship God as well in one place as another. Then, I ask, why did God tell Abraham to get up and go out of his own country to a strange land?

Again, could Israel, after Moses came among them, worship God and make brick for Pharaoh at the same time? I think not. "All souls are mine," saith God, and the spirit and body is the soul of man. If their souls served Pharaoh, how could they serve God? It is evident that they could not serve God and Pharaoh any more than God and mammon. Hence the voice from heaven proclaimed, "come out of her my people." While Israel remained in Egypt they obeyed man, when they came out they could obey God. And while the saints are scattered among the Gentiles they must serve them, be subject to their sins and their plagues. Would it not be better to come out from among them and obey God rather than man? that his kingdom may come and the dominion thereof unto the saints of the most high. May God speed the gathering and the preparation. Yours in the faith of the Son of God, J. W. BRIGGS.

SONG IN CAPTIVITY.

PSALM CXXXVII.

We sat down by Babylon's waters,
And, thinking of Zion alone,
We hung our sad harps on the willows,
In the midst of them making our moan:
For they who had carried us captive
Asked for Zion's sweet song at our hands,
As if we could sing, in our sorrow,
The song of our God in strange lands.

Yes, when I forget thee, my country,
Let my right had its cunning forget:
When I fail to prefer thee to pleasure,
Still the tongue that can honor thee yet:
Jerusalem still be the treasure
Most precious that earth can bestow;
And thy vengeance, O God! upon Edom,
That cried "Lay her low, lay her low!"

Remember, O Lord! in the season
When Zion shall come to her own,
The children of merciless Edom,
And teach them the griefs we have known:
Thrice happy be he who, pursuing
The daughter of Babylon still,
Shall devote her young babes to the ruin,
And, reckless of pity, shall kill.

SONNET.—AUTUMN.

Hail! Autumn! thou, on rainbow-colored throne,
Dost sway thy sceptre over dying things;
And wildwoods' music is thy mournful tone,
As now her dying dirge sad Nature sings.
The Oak, with crimson glories on his brow,
Moans that his empty honors cannot last;
His forest brethren at thy feet must bow,
Bewailing their magnificence, soon past.
Yet Autumn! I thy pensiveness should love;
'Tis sadness in sweet sympathy with mine,
As, lonely, stray I through the mournful grove,
Musing on sorrows, sent by hand divine:
Joy, Youth, and Happiness, like pale leaves, fall,
Fade, wither, pass away from us, poor mortals, all.

SINGULAR PHENOMENA.

The Baton Rouge (La.) Advocate of the 13th ult., says that a most singular sight was witnessed a few days since, upon the premises of a Mr. Bosey, in the lower part of the town. The earth for twenty or thirty feet square, appeared to be in a state of natural "spontaneous combustion." Flames were seen to issue to a height sufficient to attract the attention of persons a hundred yards off, and many of them repairing to the spot, found the earth on fire, sending forth somewhat of a sulphurous smell. An attempt was made to quench the mysterious fire by copious drenchings of water, but it was like adding fuel to the flames, causing the fire to burn with more vehemence, and producing the same crackling noise as that of grease and water when commingled and brought in contact with fire. Eventually, however, an experiment was tried, which proved successful. A heap of ashes were obtained, and profusely scattered over the burning district; water then being poured over them, an alkaline composition was produced which proved an effectual extinguisher of the aqua-oleaginous. The Advocate says we visited it on Monday afternoon; we could distinguish no appearance of fire or heat, save that which poured down upon us from old Sol above, and which was of a nature severe enough for all comfortable purposes.

THE MANIAC AND THE INFANT.

The following anecdote was related to us by the keeper of the prison where the maniac was confined. He had been brought there in a most desperate state. He had long before been confined in a cell where for months no one dared to enter. Several stout men at last brought him to Hartford county prison. In a few days the keeper endeavored to subdue him. He adopted the following expedient:—

"He told his little child, who was scarcely strong enough to walk, to go to the cell and offer the insane man an apple. Day after day the child went to the cell, and calling the man by name, said, "Sir, take an apple, sir," The maniac turned away in rage. She continued the practice, and with her mild, soft voice, again urged the distracted man to accept her little gift. He seemed inexorable. His eye could not be caught; for little can be accomplished with any man until he is secured. One day the little child stood at the iron grating with the apple in her hand, saying, "Come Mr. B——, now accept my apple. Do take it from my hand." Her mild, soft, persuasive tones at last touched a tender chord in that distracted soul. It vibrated to the gentle sound of the infant voice. Light broke in upon the darkest mind. Gradually, as the flower yields to the beams of the rising sun, and throws open its petals to its refreshing influence, so did the soul of this maniac open to the sweet influences of this infant. He looked upon her; she on him; and reaching out his hand, quietly took the little token of affection, and ate the apple in her presence. Gradually she subdued him. The keeper, delighted with the experiment, at last took him out one day, letting the child lead him to one of the officers of the city, and he was introduced as Mr. B——. Said the man, "is this any relation to that Mr. B——, whom you have confined as a maniac?" "O, yes," said the keeper, "he is a very near relative," delighted with the innocent deception he was practicing; "he is very near related, he is the man himself!" Had it thundered that moment, the men would not have been more surprised, and they were about rushing into the street—the keeper assured them that there was not the least danger. After a short conversation the restored man, with the keeper and the child, returned back to the prison. Here was a most wonderful instance of the power of love. The man was subsequently restored to society."—Prisoner's Friend.

☞ Nothing is more easy, says Mr. Paulding, than to grow rich. It is only to trust nobody; to befriend none; to get everything, and save all we get; to stint ourselves and everybody belonging to us; to be the friend of no man, and to have no man for your friend; to heap interest upon interest, cent upon cent; to be mean, miserable and despised, for some twenty or thirty years, and riches will come as sure as disease and disappointment.

IN A NUT SHELL.—Some decendant of Solomon has wisely remarked, that those who go to law for damages, are sure to get them.

SONG IN CAPTIVITY.

PSALM CXXXVII.

We sat down by Babylon's waters,
And, thinking of Zion alone,
We hung our sad harps on the willows,
In the midst of them making our moan:
For they who had carried us captive
Asked for Zion's sweet song at our hands,
As if we could sing, in our sorrow,
The song of our God in strange lands.

Yes, when I forget thee, my country,
Let my right had its cunning forget:
When I fail to prefer thee to pleasure,
Still the tongue that can honor thee yet:
Jerusalem still be the treasure
Most precious that earth can bestow;
And thy vengeance, O God! upon Edom,
That cried "Lay her low, lay her low!"

Remember, O Lord! in the season
When Zion shall come to her own,
The children of merciless Edom,
And teach them the griefs we have known:
Thrice happy be he who, pursuing
The daughter of Babylon still,
Shall devote her young babes to the ruin,
And, reckless of pity, shall kill.

SONNET.—AUTUMN.

Hail! Autumn! thou, on rainbow-colored throne,
Dost sway thy sceptre over dying things;
And wildwoods' music is thy mournful tone,
As now her dying dirge sad Nature sings.
The Oak, with crimson glories on his brow,
Moans that his empty honors cannot last;
His forest brethren at thy feet must bow,
Bewailing their magnificence, soon past.
Yet Autumn! I thy pensiveness should love;
'Tis sadness in sweet sympathy with mine,
As, lonely, stray I through the mournful grove,
Musing on sorrows, sent by hand divine:
Joy, Youth, and Happiness, like pale leaves, fall,
Fade, wither, pass away from us, poor mortals, all.

SINGULAR PHENOMENA.

The Baton Rouge (La.) Advocate of the 13th ult., says that a most singular sight was witnessed a few days since, upon the premises of a Mr. Bosey, in the lower part of the town. The earth for twenty or thirty feet square, appeared to be in a state of natural "spontaneous combustion." Flames were seen to issue to a height sufficient to attract the attention of persons a hundred yards off, and many of them repairing to the spot, found the earth on fire, sending forth somewhat of a sulphurous smell. An attempt was made to quench the mysterious fire by copious drenchings of water, but it was like adding fuel to the flames, causing the fire to burn with more vehemence, and producing the same crackling noise as that of grease and water when commingled and brought in contact with fire. Eventually, however, an experiment was tried, which proved successful. A heap of ashes were obtained, and profusely scattered over the burning district; water then being poured over them, an alkaline composition was produced which proved an effectual extinguisher of the aqua-oleaginous. The Advocate says we visited it on Monday afternoon; we could distinguish no appearance of fire or heat, save that which poured down upon us from old Sol above, and which was of a nature severe enough for all comfortable purposes.

THE MANIAC AND THE INFANT.

The following anecdote was related to us by the keeper of the prison where the maniac was confined. He had been brought there in a most desperate state. He had long before been confined in a cell where for months no one dared to enter. Several stout men at last brought him to Hartford county prison. In a few days the keeper endeavored to subdue him. He adopted the following expedient:—

"He told his little child, who was scarcely strong enough to walk, to go to the cell and offer the insane man an apple. Day after day the child went to the cell, and calling the man by name, said, "Sir, take an apple, sir," The maniac turned away in rage. She continued the practice, and with her mild, soft voice, again urged the distracted man to accept her little gift. He seemed inexorable. His eye could not be caught; for little can be accomplished with any man until he is secured. One day the little child stood at the iron grating with the apple in her hand, saying, "Come Mr. B——, now accept my apple. Do take it from my hand." Her mild, soft, persuasive tones at last touched a tender chord in that distracted soul. It vibrated to the gentle sound of the infant voice. Light broke in upon the darkest mind. Gradually, as the flower yields to the beams of the rising sun, and throws open its petals to its refreshing influence, so did the soul of this maniac open to the sweet influences of this infant. He looked upon her; she on him; and reaching out his hand, quietly took the little token of affection, and ate the apple in her presence. Gradually she subdued him. The keeper, delighted with the experiment, at last took him out one day, letting the child lead him to one of the officers of the city, and he was introduced as Mr. B——. Said the man, "is this any relation to that Mr. B——, whom you have confined as a maniac?" "O, yes," said the keeper, "he is a very near relative," delighted with the innocent deception he was practicing; "he is very near related, he is the man himself!" Had it thundered that moment, the men would not have been more surprised, and they were about rushing into the street—the keeper assured them that there was not the least danger. After a short conversation the restored man, with the keeper and the child, returned back to the prison. Here was a most wonderful instance of the power of love. The man was subsequently restored to society."—Prisoner's Friend.

☞ Nothing is more easy, says Mr. Paulding, than to grow rich. It is only to trust nobody: to befriend none; to get everything, and save all we get; to stint ourselves and everybody belonging to us; to be the friend of no man, and to have no man for your friend; to heap interest upon interest, cent upon cent; to be mean, miserable and despised, for some twenty or thirty years, and riches will come as sure as disease and disappointment.

IN A NUT SHELL.—Some decendant of Solomon has wisely remarked, that those who go to law for damages, are sure to get them.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 31.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. OCT. 18, 1849. [WHOLE No. 147.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

The stated observance of the first day of the week, as a day for religious instruction, is necessary to the proper knowledge and correct understanding of divine truths, the right cultivation of christian principles, and due obedience to the laws of our Creator, among and by a christian community. But in order that the day may answer the end for which it is set apart, it is also necessary that the instruction given from the pulpit on that day should be of the right kind, and in perfect agreement with the teachings of the word of God—given to man as his rule of life, and his guide to heaven. Instructions in false doctrines, which are contrary to divine truth, can be of no benefit to mankind, but rather do injury, by deceiving and thus leading them astray, while they, confiding in the wisdom and integrity of their teachers, believe that they are progressing in the right way to enjoy the reward of the righteous.

The design of christian instruction is to fit men for the christian life, and to assimilate them in their character to the great law-giver himself, that they may act in the world towards their fellow men according to the requirements of his law, after his own example. Consequently, the instruction from the pulpit on Sunday should be such, and such only, teaching men the necessity of unconformity in life---in every act of life, and at all times, habitually, and with heart felt sincerity, to the divine law of justice, mercy and universal benevolence revealed in the word of God. The Savior, speaking of this law, which in every respect was so thoroughly violated by the bigoted zealots of the Jewish religion, notwithstanding their punctual observance of external rituals, and of the Sabbath in particular, says, "think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets. I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven; but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven. For I say unto you, that except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matt. v. 17, 20.

Are men taught, by the preaching heard in nearly all pulpits at the present day, to obey the law and keep the commandments in order to enter the kingdom of heaven? Is it taught that he who loves his neighbor as himself, in so doing fulfills the law of God, and thereby actually secures to himself the kingdom of heaven? Such were the teachings of Jesus Christ and his Apostles, but such are not the teachings of orthodox divines of the nineteenth century. Religion is now made to consist in going to church on Sunday, because the day is holy, in believing certain senseless and contradictory dogmas, falsely denominated the christian faith, and which are not understood even by the preacher himself; faith being substituted for good works, and in praying, or petitioning the Almighty for blessings, of the nature of which the petitioners actually know nothing. Such in general is the religion taught in the pulpits of the present day; integrity of heart and life, and obedience to the divine commandments, being regarded as worse

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 31.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY. OCT. 18, 1849. [WHOLE No. 147.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

The stated observance of the first day of the week, as a day for religious instruction, is necessary to the proper knowledge and correct understanding of divine truths, the right cultivation of christian principles, and due obedience to the laws of our Creator, among and by a christian community. But in order that the day may answer the end for which it is set apart, it is also necessary that the instruction given from the pulpit on that day should be of the right kind, and in perfect agreement with the teachings of the word of God—given to man as his rule of life, and his guide to heaven. Instructions in false doctrines, which are contrary to divine truth, can be of no benefit to mankind, but rather do injury, by deceiving and thus leading them astray, while they, confiding in the wisdom and integrity of their teachers, believe that they are progressing in the right way to enjoy the reward of the righteous.

The design of christian instruction is to fit men for the christian life, and to assimilate them in their character to the great law-giver himself, that they may act in the world towards their fellow men according to the requirements of his law, after his own example. Consequently, the instruction from the pulpit on Sunday should be such, and such only, teaching men the necessity of unconformity in life---in every act of life, and at all times, habitually, and with heart felt sincerity, to the divine law of justice, mercy and universal benevolence revealed in the word of God. The Savior, speaking of this law, which in every respect was so thoroughly violated by the bigoted zealots of the Jewish religion, notwithstanding their punctual observance of external rituals, and of the Sabbath in particular, says, "think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets. I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven; but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven. For I say unto you, that except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matt. v. 17, 20.

Are men taught, by the preaching heard in nearly all pulpits at the present day, to obey the law and keep the commandments in order to enter the kingdom of heaven? Is it taught that he who loves his neighbor as himself, in so doing fulfills the law of God, and thereby actually secures to himself the kingdom of heaven? Such were the teachings of Jesus Christ and his Apostles, but such are not the teachings of orthodox divines of the nineteenth century. Religion is now made to consist in going to church on Sunday, because the day is holy, in believing certain senseless and contradictory dogmas, falsely denominated the christian faith, and which are not understood even by the preacher himself; faith being substituted for good works, and in praying, or petitioning the Almighty for blessings, of the nature of which the petitioners actually know nothing. Such in general is the religion taught in the pulpits of the present day; integrity of heart and life, and obedience to the divine commandments, being regarded as worse than useless for man's acceptance with the Deity. Indeed, it may be easily and incontrovertibly proved, that what are now termed orthodox doctrines, are so far from being in agreement with the doctrines of the Bible, that they are the very opposite of them; and that the religion now prevalent, is, under a different external form, and under another name, the very counterpart of the religion prevalent among the Jews in the days of Christ.

The Scribes and Pharisees, who sat in Moses' seat, or who taught the people their religious duties, made void the law of God by their traditions; in like manner, divines now make void the law of their doctrine of justification by faith alone, founded upon a mistaken view, and the false interpretation of the Bible. Preachers do not indeed, in their sermons, plainly and without somewhat qualifying their words, condemn as an evil in the sight of God a man's efforts to live a moral life; but they most emphatically denounce it as being contrary to the divine will, and therefore sin against God for man to obey the commandments in order to gain the divine approbation and secure to himself eternal life. But what are the teachings of the great master, whose ministers these preachers profess to be?

"He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me, shall be loved of my Father. He that loveth me not, keepeth not my sayings: and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's who sent me." John xiv. 21, 24. The Apostle, taught of the Lord, says, "circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, but the keeping of the commandments of God." 1 Cor. vii. 19. Again we read, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city,"—the New Jerusalem. Rev. xxii. 14. And again, "Whosoever shall do and teach them, (that is, the commandments,) the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven." Again, "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets." Matt. vii. 12. Now are we not most explicitly taught in these passages, that men are to please God, and fit themselves for heaven by keeping the commandments? and that the substance of what is required by the commandments, is, to act justly, sincerely and charitably in our dealings with our fellow men; or to do unto them as we would that they would do unto us? The religious teaching, therefore, that condemns man in his efforts to keep the commandments, in order that thereby he may be fitted for heaven, and substitutes for obedience to the divine law an incomprehensible and irrational faith in the merits of the Savior for acceptance with God, is altogether different from, and is opposed to the teachings of the Savior himself; and consequently is totally false, if the Bible is true. The men who are governed by it therefore, are not governed by the truth which is from heaven, and which leads to heaven, but are necessarily misled by the false which appears to them as truth.

Jesus, speaking of the Scribes and Pharisees, who taught the Jews, says, "They be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." And speaking of those who, in after days, would profess themselves to be his ministers, he says, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father. Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name and in thy name have cast out Devils? and in thy name have done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Now it is obvious from the teachings of Jesus Christ, that it can be no advantage to a man to spend his Sundays in hearing the preaching of false doctrines, which are misconstrued from the word, and which give him wrong views of God and divine government, and fill his mind with fantastic dreams, which have no reason in them, and are conductive to no

than useless for man's acceptance with the Deity. Indeed, it may be easily and incontrovertibly proved, that what are now termed orthodox doctrines, are so far from being in agreement with the doctrines of the Bible, that they are the very opposite of them: and that the religion now prevalent, is, under a different external form, and under another name, the very counterpart of the religion prevalent among the Jews in the days of Christ.

The Scribes and Pharisees, who sat in Moses' seat, or who taught the people their religious duties, made void the law of God by their traditions: in like manner, divines now make void the law of their doctrine of justification by faith alone, founded upon a mistaken view, and the false interpretation of the Bible. Preachers do not indeed, in their sermons, plainly and without somewhat qualifying their words, condemn as an evil in the sight of God a man's efforts to live a moral life; but they most emphatically denounce it as being contrary to the divine will, and therefore sin against God for man to obey the commandments in order to gain the divine approbation and secure to himself eternal life. But what are the teachings of the great master, whose ministers these preachers profess to be?

"He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me, shall be loved of my Father. He that loveth me not, keepeth not my sayings: and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's who sent me." John xiv. 21, 24. The Apostle, taught of the Lord, says, "circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, but the keeping of the commandments of God." 1 Cor. vii. 19. Again we read, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city,"—the New Jerusalem. Rev. xxii. 14. And again, "Whosoever shall do and teach them, (that is, the commandments,) the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven." Again, "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets." Matt. vii. 12. Now are we not most explicitly taught in these passages, that men are to please God, and fit themselves for heaven by keeping the commandments? and that the substance of what is required by the commandments, is, to act justly, sincerely and charitably in our dealings with our fellow men; or to do unto them as we would that they would do unto us? The religious teaching, therefore, that condemns man in his efforts to keep the commandments, in order that thereby he may be fitted for heaven, and substitutes for obedience to the divine law an incomprehensible and irrational faith in the merits of the Savior for acceptance with God, is altogether different from, and is opposed to the teachings of the Savior himself; and consequently is totally false, if the Bible is true. The men who are governed by it therefore, are not governed by the truth which is from heaven, and which leads to heaven, but are necessarily misled by the false which appears to them as truth.

Jesus, speaking of the Scribes and Pharisees, who taught the Jews, says, "They be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." And speaking of those who, in after days, would profess themselves to be his ministers, he says, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father. Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name and in thy name have cast out Devils? and in thy name have done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Now it is obvious from the teachings of Jesus Christ, that it can be no advantage to a man to spend his Sundays in hearing the preaching of false doctrines, which are misconstrued from the word, and which give him wrong views of God and divine government, and fill his mind with fantastic dreams, which have no reason in them, and are conductive to no good. The teachers of such doctrines are necessarily blind leaders, deceiving themselves and the people whom they lead; and consequently both leaders and their followers must fall into the ditch, which lies before them in the way by which they aim to reach heaven, but which, in consequence of their blindness, they do not see. Such ministers of the gospel stand as much in need of being warned against the danger to which they are exposed in the path they are pursuing, as the unbelievers whom they in vain strive to convert to their faith, and whom they so unmercifully condemn—such ministers, according to the testimony of the master whom they profess to serve, in consequence of their perversion of truth, being emphatically those who work iniquity.

In order that men may be spiritually benefited by the religious exercises of the Sunday, it is indispensable that the truth be taught to them from the pulpit, and not doctrines of human invention, which make void the law of God; and that the day be observed, not for the sake of keeping it as a holy day, but to receive instruction by which man is to be better fitted for the performance of his use in obedience to the divine law ordained of heaven, and according to which man should govern himself in all his transactions with his fellow men, and also for the sake of enjoying rest from labor on that day necessary to the well being of man with respect to both body and mind. If the truth be not taught, man may as well spend the day any where as in the sanctuary, and in any employment or amusement, as in listening to false and corrupt doctrines, which tend to deceive, and lead men astray from the course of life they should pursue in order to be acceptable to the Deity, and truly profitable to their fellow men. No other service can be acceptable to the Deity, than that which is according to divine truth, and the law which he in his infinite wisdom has established for man's government, nor can any good be accomplished by us otherwise than by our obedience to his word unperverted by human doctrines, originating in man's own selfish feelings.—Universe.

CONSULTING A LAWYER.

It happened that a farmer, named Bernard, having come to market into Rennes, took it into his head when his business was accomplished, and there were a few hours of leisure, that it would be a capital use of that spare time to consult a lawyer. He had often heard people speak of M. Potier de la Germandale, whose reputation was so great that the people thought a suit already gained if he undertook it. Bernard asked for his address, and went immediately to his office in St. George's street.

The clients were numerous, and Bernard had to wait for a long time. At length his turn came, and he was introduced. M. Potier de la Germandale pointed him a chair, laid his spectacles on the table, and asked what brought him there.

"'Pon my word squire," said the farmer, whirling his hat round, "I heard so much talk about you that, finding myself at leisure in Rennes, I thought I would take advantage of the circumstance, and come and get an opinion of you."

"I thank you for your confidence, my friend," said M. de la Germandale, "but you of course, have a lawsuit?"

"A lawsuit! a lawsuit, indeed! I hold them in utter abomination; and more than that, Peter Bernard never had a dispute with any man living."

"Then you wish to settle some estate, or divide the property among the family?"

"Beg pardon, squire; my family and I never had any property to divide; we all eat from the same dish, as the saying is."

"It's about some contract for the purchase or sale of something?"

"Not at all; I'm not rich enongh to purchase anything, nor so poor as to sell what I have."

"What then do you want of me?" asked the astonished lawyer.

"What do I want? Why I told you at first, squire, I came for an opinion, for which I will pay, of course, as I am in Rennes now, at leisure, and it is necessary to profit by the circumstance."

M. de la Germandale took pen and paper, and asked the countryman his name.

"Peter Bernard," answered he, happy indeed that he had succeeded in making himself understood.

"Your age?"

"Thirty years, or thereabouts."

"Your profession?"

"My profession!—Oh, ah, yes—that is what I do? Oh, I am a farmer."

The lawyer wrote two lines, folded up the paper, and gave it to his client.

"Is it done already?" cried Bernard. "Very well, that's right. There is no time to get rusty here, as they say. How much do you charge for this opinion, squire?"

"Three francs."

Bernard paid without disputing, then made a grand scrape with his foot and went out delighted with having profited by the occasion.

When he arrived at home it was already four o'clock. The jaunt had fatigued him, and he went into the house for some repose.

Meantime, his grass had been out four days, and was completely dried, and one of his lads came to ask whether he should not get it in.

"Not this evening," said Mrs. Bernard, who had but just joined her husband; "it would be too bad to see the people at work so late an hour."

The lad urged that there might be a change in the weather, that everything was in order, and that the people were doing nothing.

(Concluded on page 151.)

good. The teachers of such doctrines are necessarily blind leaders, deceiving themselves and the people whom they lead; and consequently both leaders and their followers must fall into the ditch, which lies before them in the way by which they aim to reach heaven, but which, in consequence of their blindness, they do not see. Such ministers of the gospel stand as much in need of being warned against the danger to which they are exposed in the path they are pursuing, as the unbelievers whom they in vain strive to convert to their faith, and whom they so unmercifully condemn—such ministers, according to the testimony of the master whom they profess to serve, in consequence of their perversion of truth, being emphatically those who work iniquity.

In order that men may be spiritually benefited by the religious exercises of the Sunday, it is indispensable that the truth be taught to them from the pulpit, and not doctrines of human invention, which make void the law of God; and that the day be observed, not for the sake of keeping it as a holy day, but to receive instruction by which man is to be better fitted for the performance of his use in obedience to the divine law ordained of heaven, and according to which man should govern himself in all his transactions with his fellow men, and also for the sake of enjoying rest from labor on that day necessary to the well being of man with respect to both body and mind. If the truth be not taught, man may as well spend the day any where as in the sanctuary, and in any employment or amusement, as in listening to false and corrupt doctrines, which tend to deceive, and lead men astray from the course of life they should pursue in order to be acceptable to the Deity, and truly profitable to their fellow men. No other service can be acceptable to the Deity, than that which is according to divine truth, and the law which he in his infinite wisdom has established for man's government, nor can any good be accomplished by us otherwise than by our obedience to his word unperverted by human doctrines, originating in man's own selfish feelings.—Universe.

CONSULTING A LAWYER.

It happened that a farmer, named Bernard, having come to market into Rennes, took it into his head when his business was accomplished, and there were a few hours of leisure, that it would be a capital use of that spare time to consult a lawyer. He had often heard people speak of M. Potier de la Germandale, whose reputation was so great that the people thought a suit already gained if he undertook it. Bernard asked for his address, and went immediately to his office in St. George's street.

The clients were numerous, and Bernard had to wait for a long time. At length his turn came, and he was introduced. M. Potier de la Germandale pointed him a chair, laid his spectacles on the table, and asked what brought him there.

"'Pon my word squire," said the farmer, whirling his hat round, "I heard so much talk about you that, finding myself at leisure in Rennes, I thought I would take advantage of the circumstance, and come and get an opinion of you."

"I thank you for your confidence, my friend," said M. de la Germandale, "but you of course, have a lawsuit?"

"A lawsuit! a lawsuit, indeed! I hold them in utter abomination; and more than that, Peter Bernard never had a dispute with any man living."

"Then you wish to settle some estate, or divide the property among the family?"

"Beg pardon, squire; my family and I never had any property to divide; we all eat from the same dish, as the saying is."

"It's about some contract for the purchase or sale of something?"

"Not at all; I'm not rich enough to purchase anything, nor so poor as to sell what I have."

"What then do you want of me?" asked the astonished lawyer.

"What do I want? Why I told you at first, squire, I came for an opinion, for which I will pay, of course, as I am in Rennes now, at leisure, and it is necessary to profit by the circumstance."

M. de la Germandale took pen and paper, and asked the countryman his name.

"Peter Bernard," answered he, happy indeed that he had succeeded in making himself understood.

"Your age?"

"Thirty years, or thereabouts."

"Your profession?"

"My profession!—Oh, ah, yes—that is what I do? Oh, I am a farmer."

The lawyer wrote two lines, folded up the paper, and gave it to his client.

"Is it done already?" cried Bernard. "Very well, that's right. There is no time to get rusty here, as they say. How much do you charge for this opinion, squire?"

"Three francs."

Bernard paid without disputing, then made a grand scrape with his foot and went out delighted with having profited by the occasion.

When he arrived at home it was already four o'clock. The jaunt had fatigued him, and he went into the house for some repose.

Meantime, his grass had been out four days, and was completely dried, and one of his lads came to ask whether he should not get it in.

"Not this evening," said Mrs. Bernard, who had but just joined her husband; "it would be too bad to see the people at work so late an hour."

The lad urged that there might be a change in the weather, that everything was in order, and that the people were doing nothing.

(Concluded on page 151.)

☞ The following letter was written by a brother in the church to his sister, belonging to the sect called Baptists, and not having an opportunity of sending it to her he handed it to us for publication, which we insert for the benefit of both believers and unbelievers :—

Voree, Wis., October, 1849.

Sister Sarah :—By this time I suppose you may think strange that I have not so much as written. But, let me tell you, I wrote soon after yours in reply, but forgetting to send by R. it slipped along until so near the time I had planned upon visiting you that I concluded not to send it. I did not give up the visit until after I moved my goods to Gidley's Station, and then reluctantly, and only because of fearing a rough time on the lake—we were so near the equinoctial.

The principal reason of deferring to send you my exposition of that text was, because I hate to preach to others what I do not practice myself. I suppose you will say, that is right. I shall not say much about it now, because, 1st, other duties press ; 2d, for want of room ; and, 3d, what I have written on that subject is too imperfect. Some other time perhaps will do, if I shall feel competent. I will say now that no providence preventing I shall be at your place before next spring. I purpose going to Connecticut next summer.

We are well, and well satisfied in the bosom of the church at the place appointed of God for the gathering of his saints. I approve of the Lord's choice. Of the land, it is delightful. Of the associated Order of Enoch, who can mend it ? Should not the saints be a body by themselves, of one common interest, and separate from the world ? Was not the voice of God always to his people, come out from the world and be separate ? Where upon the face of the earth are the Methodists, the Baptists, the Presbyterians, &c., separate from the world ?

I know it says, "let there be no divisions among you," God's people. But have they obeyed this, either ? What man or woman can consistently claim salvation from sin while holding fellowship with such gross absurdities and willful or careless neglect of obeying the gospel ? Shall we obey God or man ?

If we allow the true gospel was preached by Christ and his Apostles as found recorded in the New Testament, how can we allow or believe that which flatly contradicts it ? It matters not what we pretend to believe, if the gospel condemns our practice we must be adjudged as at enmity with God, and condemned.—Well. then, what shall we say ? God says, "come, let us reason together." Will reason say God can save men or will save them in disobedience, when he has made obedience to the gospel the only condition of life and salvation ? Surely God will not lie. The truth was dearer to him than the life of his only Son.

The honest, conscientious, zealous Saul could not be saved without obeying the gospel as preached by the Apostles. His pious zeal, his devotedness, his many prayers, his verily thinking himself to be engaged above many of his equals in matters of what he afterwards called our religion, could not obtain for him salvation. Not until his attention was directed to God for a revelation of his will in reference to his particular duty, did he get rightly set to work, notwithstanding all he had learned at the feet of Gamaliel. Notwithstanding his supposed competency to dictate to others, it was not until humbled to the ground by the light of revelation, direct from God, that he understood his own duty, or knew what to do to be saved. And are the people of this generation more sufficient of themselves to understand without revelation ? I do not mean past revelation, for Saul had free access to that, though it did not remove the scales from his eyes.

And Christ said, "no man knoweth the Father but the Son, and he to whom the Son shall reveal him." How then can this generation know God, except it be by a revelation through Jesus Christ ? And it does appear that with all the revelations contained in the holy Bible the religious sectarian world are lost to God, and condemned of the gospel, and

☞ The following letter was written by a brother in the church to his sister, belonging to the sect called Baptists, and not having an opportunity of sending it to her he handed it to us for publication, which we insert for the benefit of both believers and unbelievers :—

Voree, Wis., October, 1849.

SISTER SARAH :—By this time I suppose you may think strange that I have not so much as written. But, let me tell you, I wrote soon after yours in reply, but forgetting to send by R. it slipped along until so near the time I had planned upon visiting you that I concluded not to send it. I did not give up the visit until after I moved my goods to Gidley's Station, and then reluctantly, and only because of fearing a rough time on the lake—we were so near the equinoctial.

The principal reason of deferring to send you my exposition of that text was, because I hate to preach to others what I do not practice myself. I suppose you will say, that is right. I shall not say much about it now, because, 1st, other duties press ; 2d, for want of room ; and, 3d, what I have written on that subject is too imperfect. Some other time perhaps will do, if I shall feel competent. I will say now that no providence preventing I shall be at your place before next spring. I purpose going to Connecticut next summer.

We are well, and well satisfied in the bosom of the church at the place appointed of God for the gathering of his saints. I approve of the Lord's choice. Of the land, it is delightful. Of the associated Order of Enoch, who can mend it ? Should not the saints be a body by themselves, of one common interest, and separate from the world ? Was not the voice of God always to his people, come out from the world and be separate ? Where upon the face of the earth are the Methodists, the Baptists, the Presbyterians, &c., separate from the world ?

I know it says, "let there be no divisions among you," God's people. But have they obeyed this, either ? What man or woman can consistently claim salvation from sin while holding fellowship with such gross absurdities and willful or careless neglect of obeying the gospel ? Shall we obey God or man ?

If we allow the true gospel was preached by Christ and his Apostles as found recorded in the New Testament, how can we allow or believe that which flatly contradicts it ? It matters not what we pretend to believe, if the gospel condemns our practice we must be adjudged as at enmity with God, and condemned.—Well. then, what shall we say ? God says, "come, let us reason together." Will reason say God can save men or will save them in disobedience, when he has made obedience to the gospel the only condition of life and salvation ? Surely God will not lie. The truth was dearer to him than the life of his only Son.

The honest, conscientious, zealous Saul could not be saved without obeying the gospel as preached by the Apostles. His pious zeal, his devotedness, his many prayers, his verily thinking himself to be engaged above many of his equals in matters of what he afterwards called our religion, could not obtain for him salvation. Not until his attention was directed to God for a revelation of his will in reference to his particular duty, did he get rightly set to work, notwithstanding all he had learned at the feet of Gamaliel. Notwithstanding his supposed competency to dictate to others, it was not until humbled to the ground by the light of revelation, direct from God, that he understood his own duty, or knew what to do to be saved. And are the people of this generation more sufficient of themselves to understand without revelation ? I do not mean past revelation, for Saul had free access to that, though it did not remove the scales from his eyes.

And Christ said, "no man knoweth the Father but the Son, and he to whom the Son shall reveal him." How then can this generation know God, except it be by a revelation through Jesus Christ ? And it does appear that with all the revelations contained in the holy Bible the religious sectarian world are lost to God, and condemned of the gospel, and their case is more hopeless in the mass than the rest of the heathen or savage world. You may think these hard sayings, but shall we forbear to tell the truth for fear of offence?—Should we not rather repent and believe God, obey the gospel, and be reconciled and saved?

Who in the name of all that is merciful can look at this world in its past, present or future history by the light of sectarian preaching, or their systems, but must be filled with horror? If the gospel can have no influence upon the spirits of the departed, how very few will be saved from eternal burnings. Allowing Christ's own words true, "that except a man be born of water and of the spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God," is there not to be a resurrection of the unjust as well as the just? And must not all stand at the judgment seat, and be judged? Who knows but there may be a state of trial beyond that for the guilty to learn obedience? Who can set bounds for the Almighty? It is enough for us to fear God and keep his commandments. Truly and sincerely,

J. S. COMSTOCK.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 2d, 1849.

FRANCIS COOPER,—MY MUCH ESTEEMED BRO. IN THE NEW AND EVERLASTING COVENANT:—It is with great pleasure that I inform you that our great and good cause is still onward and upward. The news we hear concerning the onward march of truth from every quarter is cheering. We had a good time at the city of James, on Beaver Isle, and a still better time at Franklin, Mich. Everything I heard on my journey was cheering.

When I arrived at New York I found many warm hearts, firm in the truth and the true order. We expect to have a great time at our Conference there. In Philadelphia I found things much better than I expected. For at present Philadelphia is the seat of apostacy.—And every foul and corrupt spirit seems to be located there. It is a perfect "cage of unclean birds and filthy croakers," and God has, or will, spew the most of them out of his mouth. There are a few there that have not departed from the faith. Elder Thomas Braidwood has faithfully discharged his duty as a man of God, and his skirts are clear. Bro. Hess, Bro. Lower and a few others have not departed from the truth. But let them arrange to leave that filthy city, which is growing ripe for destruction.

When I arrived in Baltimore, thank God, I found things all right. They had kept the faith, been true to their trust, and they are rooted and grounded and built up in the most holy faith, once delivered to the saints, and restored in these last days. I preached on Sunday to overflowing congregations, who listened with most profound attention. Hundreds came to hear at night who could not obtain seats.—The Elders here are spreading the truth in the surrounding country, and every indication is that God will give us the kingdom. With sentiments of high esteem, I remain yours truly and sincerely,

G. J. ADAMS.

Jefferson, N. Y., Sept. 22d, 1849.

DEAR BRO. COOPER:—I sit down to write to you. I am well and doing well, preaching and baptizing some, and some more will be shortly. I rejoice greatly in the prosperity of the church, and for the baptisms for the dead. It awakens the sectarian churches, and enkindles great desires in the hearts of the brethren in this place to gather up. For Elijah was to come, then what? The great and dreadful day of the Lord. I think there will be nearly one hundred gather up from this place in the spring. God is with me, and I am trying to serve him. I leave here for Vermont next week. God bless and prosper the church.—From yours in love,

GEO. BROWNSON.

☞ The following is an extract from the history of the prophet Joseph. It will doubtless be new to many of our readers:—

About the first of March, 1832, in connection with the translation of the Scriptures, I received the following explanation of the Revelations of St. John:—

What is the sea of glass spoken of by John, 4th chapter and 6th verse of the Revelations?

their case is more hopeless in the mass than the rest of the heathen or savage world. You may think these hard sayings, but shall we forbear to tell the truth for fear of offence?—Should we not rather repent and believe God, obey the gospel, and be reconciled and saved?

Who in the name of all that is merciful can look at this world in its past, present or future history by the light of sectarian preaching, or their systems, but must be filled with horror? If the gospel can have no influence upon the spirits of the departed, how very few will be saved from eternal burnings. Allowing Christ's own words true, "that except a man be born of water and of the spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God," is there not to be a resurrection of the unjust as well as the just? And must not all stand at the judgment seat, and be judged? Who knows but there may be a state of trial beyond that for the guilty to learn obedience? Who can set bounds for the Almighty? It is enough for us to fear God and keep his commandments. Truly and sincerely,

J. S. COMSTOCK.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 2d, 1849.

FRANCIS COOPER,—MY MUCH ESTEEMED BRO. IN THE NEW AND EVERLASTING COVENANT:—It is with great pleasure that I inform you that our great and good cause is still onward and upward. The news we hear concerning the onward march of truth from every quarter is cheering. We had a good time at the city of Ames, on Beaver Isle, and a still better time at Franklin, Mich. Everything I heard on my journey was cheering.

When I arrived at New York I found many warm hearts, firm in the truth and the true order. We expect to have a great time at our Conference there. In Philadelphia I found things much better than I expected. For at present Philadelphia is the seat of apostacy.—And every foul and corrupt spirit seems to be located there. It is a perfect "cage of unclean birds and filthy croakers," and God has, or will, spew the most of them out of his mouth. There are a few there that have not departed from the faith. Elder Thomas Braidwood has faithfully discharged his duty as a man of God, and his skirts are clear. Bro. Hess, Bro. Lower and a few others have not departed from the truth. But let them arrange to leave that filthy city, which is growing ripe for destruction.

When I arrived in Baltimore, thank God, I found things all right. They had kept the faith, been true to their trust, and they are rooted and grounded and built up in the most holy faith, once delivered to the saints, and restored in these last days. I preached on Sunday to overflowing congregations, who listened with most profound attention. Hundreds came to hear at night who could not obtain seats.—The Elders here are spreading the truth in the surrounding country, and every indication is that God will give us the kingdom. With sentiments of high esteem, I remain yours truly and sincerely,

G. J. ADAMS.

Jefferson, N. Y., Sept. 22d, 1849.

DEAR BRO. COOPER:—I sit down to write to you. I am well and doing well, preaching and baptizing some, and some more will be shortly. I rejoice greatly in the prosperity of the church, and for the baptisms for the dead. It awakens the sectarian churches, and enkindles great desires in the hearts of the brethren in this place to gather up. For Elijah was to come, then what? The great and dreadful day of the Lord. I think there will be nearly one hundred gather up from this place in the spring. God is with me, and I am trying to serve him. I leave here for Vermont next week. God bless and prosper the church.—From yours in love,

GEO. BROWNSON.

☞ The following is an extract from the history of the prophet Joseph. It will doubtless be new to many of our readers:—

About the first of March, 1832, in connection with the translation of the Scriptures, I received the following explanation of the Revelations of St. John:—

What is the sea of glass spoken of by John, 4th chapter and 6th verse of the Revelations?

It is the earth in its sanctified, immortal and eternal state.

What are we to understand by the four beasts spoken of by John in the 4th chapter and 6th verse of Revelations?

They are figurative expressions, used by the Revelator John, in describing heaven, the paradise of God, the happiness of men, and of beasts, and of creeping things, and of the fowls of the air, that which is spiritual being in the likeness of that which is temporal, and that which is temporal is in the likeness of that which is spiritual; the spirit of man in the likeness of his person; as also the spirit of the beast, and every other creature which God has created.

Are the four beasts limited to individual beasts, or do they represent classes or orders?

They are limited to four individual beasts, which were shown to John, to represent the glory of the classes of beings in their destined order, or sphere of creation, in the enjoyment of their eternal felicity.

What are we to understand by the eyes and wings which the beasts had?

Their eyes are a representation of light and knowledge; that is, they are full of knowledge —and their wings are a representation of power, to move, to act, &c.

What are we to understand by the four and twenty elders spoken of by John?

We are to understand that these elders whom John saw were elders who had been faithful in the work of the ministry, and were dead, who belonged to the seven churches, and were then in the paradise of God.

What are we to understand by the book which John saw, which was sealed on the back with seven seals?

We are to understand that it contains the revealed will, mysteries and works of God; the hidden things of his economy concerning this earth during the seven thousand years of its continuance, or its temporal existence.

What are we to understand by the seven seals with which it was sealed?

We are to understand that the first seal contains the things of the first thousand years, and the second also of the second thousand years, and so on until the seventh.

What are we to understand by the four angels spoken of by John, 7th chapter and 1st verse of Revelations?

We are to understand that they are four angels sent forth from God, to whom is given power over the four parts of the earth, to save life and to destroy; these are they who have the everlasting gospel to commit to every nation, kindred, tongue and people, having power to shut up the heavens, to seal up unto life, or to cast down to the regions of darkness.

What are we to understand by the angel ascending from the east, Revelations, 7th chapter and 2d verse?

We are to understand that the angel ascended from the east is he to whom is given the seal of the living God over the twelve tribes of Israel, wherefore he crieth unto the four angels having the everlasting gospel, saying: Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads; and if you will receive it, this is Elias which was to come, to gather together the tribes of Israel, and restore all things.

What time are the things spoken of in this chapter to be accomplished?

They are to be accomplished in the sixth thousand year, or the opening of the sixth seal.

What are we to understand by sealing the one hundred and forty-four thousand out of all the tribes of Israel, twelve thousand out of every tribe?

We are to understand that those who are sealed are high priests, ordained unto the holy order of God, to administer the everlasting gospel; for they are they who are ordained out of every nation, kindred, tongue and people, by the angels to whom is given power over the nations of the earth, to bring as many as will come to the church of the first born.

What are we to understand by the sounding of the trumpet, mentioned in the 8th chapter of Revelations?

It is the earth in its sanctified, immortal and eternal state.

What are we to understand by the four beasts spoken of by John in the 4th chapter and 6th verse of Revelations?

They are figurative expressions, used by the Revelator John, in describing heaven, the paradise of God, the happiness of men, and of beasts, and of creeping things, and of the fowls of the air, that which is spiritual being in the likeness of that which is temporal, and that which is temporal is in the likeness of that which is spiritual; the spirit of man in the likeness of his person; as also the spirit of the beast, and every other creature which God has created.

Are the four beasts limited to individual beasts, or do they represent classes or orders?

They are limited to four individual beasts, which were shown to John, to represent the glory of the classes of beings in their destined order, or sphere of creation, in the enjoyment of their eternal felicity.

What are we to understand by the eyes and wings which the beasts had?

Their eyes are a representation of light and knowledge; that is, they are full of knowledge—and their wings are a representation of power, to move, to act, &c.

What are we to understand by the four and twenty elders spoken of by John?

We are to understand that these elders whom John saw were elders who had been faithful in the work of the ministry, and were dead, who belonged to the seven churches, and were then in the paradise of God.

What are we to understand by the book which John saw, which was sealed on the back with seven seals?

We are to understand that it contains the revealed will, mysteries and works of God; the hidden things of his economy concerning this earth during the seven thousand years of its continuance, or its temporal existence.

What are we to understand by the seven seals with which it was sealed?

We are to understand that the first seal contains the things of the first thousand years, and the second also of the second thousand years, and so on until the seventh.

What are we to understand by the four angels spoken of by John, 7th chapter and 1st verse of Revelations?

We are to understand that they are four angels sent forth from God, to whom is given power over the four parts of the earth, to save life and to destroy; these are they who have the everlasting gospel to commit to every nation, kindred, tongue and people, having power to shut up the heavens, to seal up unto life, or to cast down to the regions of darkness.

What are we to understand by the angel ascending from the east, Revelations, 7th chapter and 2d verse?

We are to understand that the angel ascended from the east is he to whom is given the seal of the living God over the twelve tribes of Israel, wherefore he crieth unto the four angels having the everlasting gospel, saying: Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads; and if you will receive it, this is Elias which was to come, to gather together the tribes of Israel, and restore all things.

What time are the things spoken of in this chapter to be accomplished?

They are to be accomplished in the sixth thousand year, or the opening of the sixth seal.

What are we to understand by sealing the one hundred and forty-four thousand out of all the tribes of Israel, twelve thousand out of every tribe?

We are to understand that those who are sealed are high priests, ordained unto the holy order of God, to administer the everlasting gospel; for they are they who are ordained out of every nation, kindred, tongue and people, by the angels to whom is given power over the nations of the earth, to bring as many as will come to the church of the first born.

What are we to understand by the sounding of the trumpet, mentioned in the 8th chapter of Revelations?

We are to understand that as God made the world in six days, and on the seventh day he finished his work and sanctified it, and also formed man out of the dust of the earth; even so in the beginning of the seventh thousand year will the Lord God sanctify the earth, and complete the salvation of man, and judge all things, and shall redeem all things, except that which he hath not put into his power, when he shall have sealed all things unto the end of all things; and the sounding of the trumpets of the seven angels are the preparing and finishing of his work, in the beginning of the seven thousadth year, the preparing of the way before the time of his coming.

When are the things to be accomplished which are written in the 9th chapter of Revelations?

They are to be accomplished after the opening of the seventh seal, before the coming of Christ.

What are we to understand by the little book which was eaten by John, as mentioned in the 10th chapter of Revelations?

We are to understand that it was a mission and an ordinance for him to gather the tribes of Israel; behold this is Elias, who, as it is written, must come and restore all things.

What is to be understood by the two witnesses in the 11th chapter of Revelations?

They are two prophets that are to be raised up to the Jewish nation in the last days, at the time of the restoration, and to prophecy to the Jews after they are gathered and build the city of Jerusalem, in the land of their fathers.

HOW ILLNESS IS TO BE BORNE.

If the spirit can so far prevail as to remove the sickness wholly from itself, and banish it into the body only, an immense step is gained; and we may then bear bodily ailments, not only with apparent, but with real, firmness and tranquility, and not only bear but draw from them much that softens and purifies the soul. I myself, indeed, though I have been often ill, and occasionally dangerously so, have never had to endure lasting sickness, or even what may be deemed a weak constitution. But I have known many, both men and women, with whom this was the ordinary state, and had no hope of escaping from it but by death. To this belonged Schiller especially. He suffered much—he suffered continually; and knew—as indeed happened afterwards—that this continual suffering would lead him step by step to the grave. Yet one might truly say of him that he held his illness confined to the body; for at whatever time you visited him, or under whatever circumstances you might meet him, his mind was always calm and cheerful—ready to adapt itself to friendly intercourse, or to interesting and even philosophic conversation. He was, indeed, wont to say that a man worked better under the influence of illness, if it were not too severe; and I have seen him, under circumstances which certainly afforded nothing cheering, compose both poems and prose pieces which betrayed no traces in their composition of the illness of the writer.—Humboldt's Letter.

(Continued from page 147.)

Mrs. Bernard said the wind seemed to be in the right quarter for fair weather, and they would not get the work done before dark that night.

Bernard listened gravely to these advocates, not knowing how to decide between them, when suddenly recollecting the paper he had received from the lawyer—

"Stop a minute," cried he, "I have got an opinion. It is from a famous lawyer, and cost three francs. This will doubtless settle the matter. Here, Theresa, come and tell us what it says; you can read all kinds of writing—even a lawyer's."

Mrs. Bernard took the paper, and with some little difficulty read these lines:—

"Never put off till to-morrow what can be done to-day."

"That's it," said Bernard, as if he had received a sudden light on the subject, "Make haste with you, all the girls and the boys, and let us get the teams ready."

His wife offered some more objections, but Bernard declared that he was not going to pay a lawyer for an opinion, and then not follow it. He therefore got ready and led all hands to the field; nor did he stop till ten o'clock that night, when the whole of his hay was snugly stowed away in the barn.

This event proved very fortunate; for, during the night, there occurred one of the most terrific storms ever experienced in that part of the country. The river overflowed its banks and swept the flats of every spear of grass that remained out; so that Bernard was almost the only farmer in the neighborhood who got any hay from their meadow lands that year. The "opinion" was ever after choicely kept and acted on, and he became in due time one of the richest farmers in the department of Rennes.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

Belinda Chapman, B. P. Burgess,	by J. S. Comstock	$1,00 1,00	to Vol. V "	No. 26 " 26
Normond Leonard, (by G. J. Adams,)		1,00	to Vol. IV	No. 38
Lydia Fulton,		3,00	"	" 38
Wesley Horton,		2,25	"	" 39
William Hartshorn,		2,00	to Vol. V	No. 19

We are to understand that as God made the world in six days, and on the seventh day he finished his work and sanctified it, and also formed man out of the dust of the earth; even so in the beginning of the seventh thousand year will the Lord God sanctify the earth, and complete the salvation of man, and judge all things, and shall redeem all things, except that which he hath not put into his power, when he shall have sealed all things unto the end of all things; and the sounding of the trumpets of the seven angels are the preparing and finishing of his work, in the beginning of the seven thousadth year, the preparing of the way before the time of his coming.

When are the things to be accomplished which are written in the 9th chapter of Revelations?

They are to be accomplished after the opening of the seventh seal, before the coming of Christ.

What are we to understand by the little book which was eaten by John, as mentioned in the 10th chapter of Revelations?

We are to understand that it was a mission and an ordinance for him to gather the tribes of Israel; behold this is Elias, who, as it is written, must come and restore all things.

What is to be understood by the two witnesses in the 11th chapter of Revelations?

They are two prophets that are to be raised up to the Jewish nation in the last days, at the time of the restoration, and to prophecy to the Jews after they are gathered and build the city of Jerusalem, in the land of their fathers.

HOW ILLNESS IS TO BE BORNE.

If the spirit can so far prevail as to remove the sickness wholly from itself, and banish it into the body only, an immense step is gained; and we may then bear bodily ailments, not only with apparent, but with real, firmness and tranquility, and not only bear but draw from them much that softens and purifies the soul. I myself, indeed, though I have been often ill, and occasionally dangerously so, have never had to endure lasting sickness, or even what may be deemed a weak constitution. But I have known many, both men and women, with whom this was the ordinary state, and had no hope of escaping from it but by death. To this belonged Schiller especially. He suffered much—he suffered continually; and knew—as indeed happened afterwards—that this continual suffering would lead him step by step to the grave. Yet one might truly say of him that he held his illness confined to the body; for at whatever time you visited him, or under whatever circumstances you might meet him, his mind was always calm and cheerful—ready to adapt itself to friendly intercourse, or to interesting and even philosophic conversation. He was, indeed, wont to say that a man worked better under the influence of illness, if it were not too severe; and I have seen him, under circumstances which certainly afforded nothing cheering, compose both poems and prose pieces which betrayed no traces in their composition of the illness of the writer.—Humboldt's Letter.

(Continued from page 147.)

Mrs. Bernard said the wind seemed to be in the right quarter for fair weather, and they would not get the work done before dark that night.

Bernard listened gravely to these advocates, not knowing how to decide between them, when suddenly recollecting the paper he had received from the lawyer—

"Stop a minute," cried he, "I have got an opinion. It is from a famous lawyer, and cost three francs. This will doubtless settle the matter. Here, Theresa, come and tell us what it says; you can read all kinds of writing—even a lawyer's."

Mrs. Bernard took the paper, and with some little difficulty read these lines:—

"Never put off till to-morrow what can be done to-day."

"That's it," said Bernard, as if he had received a sudden light on the subject. "Make haste with you, all the girls and the boys, and let us get the teams ready."

His wife offered some more objections, but Bernard declared that he was not going to pay a lawyer for an opinion, and then not follow it. He therefore got ready and led all hands to the field; nor did he stop till ten o'clock that night, when the whole of his hay was snugly stowed away in the barn.

This event proved very fortunate, for, during the night, there occurred one of the most terrific storms ever experienced in that part of the country. The river overflowed its bank and swept the flats of every spear of grass that remained out; so that Bernard was almost the only farmer in the neighborhood who got any hay from their meadow lands that year. The "opinion" was ever after choicely kept and acted on, and he became in due time one of the richest farmers in the department of Rennes.

RECSIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

Belinda Chapman,	by J. S. Comstock	$1.00 to Vol. V	No. 26
B. P. Burgess,		1.00 " "	26
Normond Leonard, (by G. J. Adams,)		1,00 to Vol. IV	No. 38
Lydia Fulton,		3,00 " "	38
Wesley Horton,		2,25 " "	39
William Hartshorn,		2,00 to Vol. V	No. 19

"LIFE!—WHAT IS LIFE?—TO BREATHE LIGHTLY AND JOYFULLY?"

BY CAROLINE C——.

No! but to long, to suffer, to endure!
To weep, look back, and struggle, and lament!
To sicken with disease that has no cure!
To live! to die! an endless punishment!

To look, with longing, from our childish years,
Into the future; to shrink with amaze
And terror, that find refuge but in tears,
When we at last have reached those longed-for days!

To love—and find our idol but of clay!
To dream of bliss—and wake to sigh and mourn;
To joy one hour of a long, sunless day;
To never reach imagination's bourn!

Ah! think not life is to "breathe joyfully,"
Thou who wouldst join the pageant of the stage!
Thou too shalt learn to check the bitter cry,
As thou readst o'er the dark, sad drama's page!

Thou, too, must learn the longing and the hope
That never yet for man have been fulfilled;
Though shadows dark as death thy feet must grope,
When every sound of joy for e'er is stilled!

All human aids will fail—then will mistrust—
And thou wilt falter—faith and love shall fly—
Thy hopes will droop, droop to the very dust,
Then is thy perilous time—thou'lt pray to die!

Then look up, though the storm-drops wet thy face!
Lift up thy heart, though thunders echo round!
The lightning's rapid feet may not keep pace
With thy soul's prayer, ascending without sound!

And if the dreadful cup pass not away—
If life is weariness, how it speeds on!
The dark, dread night shall not endure for aye—
We must awake ere long, and find it gone!

OCTOBER.

BY MRS. ANNA PEYRE DINNIES.

October, with her varied hues,
Has touched the earth and sky,
Whose changing charms the pleased eye views,
As each floats slowly by;
For if we scan her lessons right,
Kind teaching we may find,
To soothe the heart, and yield a light
To guide the darkened mind.

Each gorgeous cloud, in rich array,
Like Hope's fond dream, is given,
To lift from earth our thoughts away,
And fix them upon heaven.
And in the flowers, that now remain
To decorate the earth,
We read how futile, cold, and vain,
Is Beauty without Worth!

THE WAY TO BE HAPPY.

In all that is said about natural depravity and sinfulness, faith may be strong in human truth and goodness. They who are so unfortunate as to begin life in ignorance—the slaves of passion and impulse—are to be pitied, not scorned or hated. Unhappy they must be, for sin and suffering are inseparable. In all things, as we sow we reap. Not that it is to be inferred that we always reap the things for which we strive. We may greatly desire to succeed in what we think most important, and strive too eagerly, risk too much, or miscarry through want of judgment, skill, or perseverance; and yet gain in the struggle and disapointment that which will be of more benefit to us than success. Disapointment is often a useful but severe taskmaster, under whom we grow less selfish and more charitable, learn patience and self-command, acquire sympathy for what is noble, intellectual, and pure; seek happiness in ourselves, and become more independent of circumstances. How many can say truly, "While young we experienced few of the favorable influences which tend to raise character, but much of those which tend to lower it." Let us strive then to the uttermost to excite the desire to become intelligent and virtuous. We can neither change our own characrers nor that of others hastily. In nature all great changes are wrought by degrees, and apparently by small means.—Let us follow Nature's teachings, for she errs not, and begin by calling to mind our conduct during the past day. Have our hands and minds been active or indolent? Have we governed our tempers, or have our tempers governed us? Have we treated each other respectfully, kindly and justly? If in any of these things we have come short, let us resolve that to-morrow shall witness some improvement. And if on the morrow our resolution becomes a reality, satisfaction will result from the better preformance of our duties.—Only let us repeat this process, and habit will soon aid resolution, and while we improve ourselves, our conduct will benefit others.

VIRTUE.

We copy the following brief but beautiful passage from the Albany Citizen: "The creations of the sculptor may mould into dust; the wealth of the bard may wither—thrones of conquerors may be shivered by an opposition power into atoms; the fame of the warrior may no longer be hymned by the recording minstrel; the hope may be disappointed, but that which hallows the cottage and sheds a glory around the palace—virtue shall never decay. It is celebrated by the angels of God—it is written on the pillars of heaven, and reflected down to earth."

THE NINTH COMMANDMENT.

The Liverpool Mercury says that at an infant school examination a little boy was asked to explain his idea of "bearing false witness against your neighbor." After hesitating, he said it was "telling lies." The examiner thought a better answer might be given, and asked a little girl who stood next. She said "it was when nobody did nothing, and somebody went and told of it."

"Why do you not hold up your head as I do?" inquired an aristocratic lawyer of a laboring farmer. "Squire," replied the farmer, "look at the field of grain; all the valuable heads hang down like mine, while those which have nothing in them stand upright like yours."

☞ Whoever looks for a friend without imperfections will never find what he wants. We love ourselves with all our faults, and we ought to love our friends in like manner.

☞ Prejudice is opinion without judgment.

"LIFE!—WHAT IS LIFE?—TO BREATHE LIGHTLY AND JOYFULLY?"

BY CAROLINE C——.

No! but to long, to suffer, to endure!
To weep, look back, and struggle, and lament!
To sicken with disease that has no cure!
To live! to die! an endless punishment!

To look, with longing, from our childish years,
Into the future; to shrink with amaze
And terror, that find refuge but in tears,
When we at last have reached those longed-for days!

To love—and find our idol but of clay!
To dream of bliss—and wake to sigh and mourn;
To joy one hour of a long, sunless day;
To never reach imagination's bourn!

Ah! think not life is to "breathe joyfully,"
Thou who wouldst join the pageant of the stage!
Thou too shalt learn to check the bitter cry,
As thou readst o'er the dark, sad drama's page!

Thou, too, must learn the longing and the hope
That never yet for man have been fulfilled;
Though shadows dark as death thy feet must grope,
When every sound of joy for e'er is stilled!

All human aids will fail—then will mistrust—
And thou wilt falter—faith and love shall fly—
Thy hopes will droop, droop to the very dust,
Then is thy perilous time—thou'lt pray to die!

Then look up, though the storm-drops wet thy face!
Lift up thy heart, though thunders echo round!
The lightning's rapid feet may not keep pace
With thy soul's prayer, ascending without sound!

And if the dreadful cup pass not away—
If life is weariness, how it speeds on!
The dark, dread night shall not endure for aye—
We must awake ere long, and find it gone!

OCTOBER.

BY MRS. ANNA PEYRE DINNIES.

October, with her varied hues,
Has touched the earth and sky,
Whose changing charms the pleased eye views,
As each floats slowly by;
For if we scan her lessons right,
Kind teaching we may find,
To soothe the heart, and yield a ligh:
To guide the darkened mind.

Each gorgeous cloud, in rich array,
Like Hope's fond dream, is given,
To lift from earth our thoughts away,
And fix them upon heaven.
And in the flowers, that now remain
To decorate the earth,
We read how futile, cold, and vain,
Is Beauty without Worth!

THE WAY TO BE HAPPY.

In all that is said about natural depravity and sinfulness, faith may be strong in human truth and goodness. They who are so unfortunate as to begin life in ignorance—the slaves of passion and impulse—are to be pitied, not scorned or hated. Unhappy they must be, for sin and suffering are inseparable. In all things, as we sow we reap. Not that it is to be inferred that we always reap the things for which we strive. We may greatly desire to succeed in what we think most important, and strive too eagerly, risk too much, or miscarry through want of judgment, skill, or perseverance; and yet gain in the struggle and disapointment that which will be of more benefit to us than success. Disapointment is often a useful but severe taskmaster, under whom we grow less selfish and more charitable, learn patience and self-command, acquire sympathy for what is noble, intellectual, and pure; seek happiness in ourselves, and become more independent of circumstances. How many can say truly, "While young we experienced few of the favorable influences which tend to raise character, but much of those which tend to lower it." Let us strive then to the uttermost to excite the desire to become intelligent and virtuous. We can neither change our own characrers nor that of others hastily. In nature all great changes are wrought by degrees, and apparently by small means.—Let us follow Nature's teachings, for she errs not, and begin by calling to mind our conduct during the past day. Have our hands and minds been active or indolent? Have we governed our tempers, or have our tempers governed us? Have we treated each other respectfully, kindly and justly? If in any of these things we have come short, let us resolve that to-morrow shall witness some improvement. And if on the morrow our resolution becomes a reality, satisfaction will result from the better preformance of our duties.—Only let us repeat this process, and habit will soon aid resolution, and while we improve ourselves, our conduct will benefit others.

VIRTUE.

We copy the following brief but beautiful passage from the Albany Citizen: "The creations of the sculptor may mould into dust; the wealth of the bard may wither—thrones of conquerors may be shivered by an opposition power into atoms; the fame of the warrior may no longer be hymned by the recording minstrel; the hope may be disappointed, but that which hallows the cottage and sheds a glory around the palace—virtue shall never decay. It is celebrated by the angels of God—it is written on the pillars of heaven, and reflected down to earth."

THE NINTH COMMANDMENT.

The Liverpool Mercury says that at an infant school examination a little boy was asked to explain his idea of "bearing false witness against your neighbor." After hesitating, he said it was "telling lies." The examiner thought a better answer might be given, and asked a little girl who stood next. She said "it was when nobody did nothing, and somebody went and told of it."

"Why do you not hold up your head as I do?" inquired an aristocratic lawyer of a laboring farmer. "Squire," replied the farmer "look at the field of grain; all the valuable heads hang down like mine, while those which have nothing in them stand upright like yours."

☞ Whoever looks for a friend without imperfections will never find what he wants. We love ourselves with all our faults, and we ought to love our friends in like manner.

☞ Prejudice is opinion without judgment.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 32.] VOREE, WIS., THURSDAY, OCT. 25, 1849. [WHOLE No. 148.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

POWER OF THE PRIESTHOOD.

"And I will give unto thee (Peter) the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Matt. xvi. 19.

Jesus Christ was born to be a king, supreme ruler of the universe, and king of kings, and lord of lords; consequently had a right to delegate power and authority to whomsoever he would. What less can be understood by this language than that Christ gave kingly power and authority unto Peter? And if his power was not unlimited, what were its limits?—Surely the keys were of the kingdom, and the territory the whole earth. And whatsoever he bound or whatsoever he loosed on earth was to be bound or loosed in heaven.

Now does not this commission plainly express unlimited power over the territory of the earth, so far as Peter should will to exercise it, unless it were either expressed or understood that Peter should not will beyond or contrary to the will of his Lord? It appears to me unreasonable that a mere man should have that power given him which would leave him irresponsible or not accountable to a power above him. And if his power is restricted by this rule, it must, of course, be limited. And if limited by a just God, it must, of course, be by a principle of strict justice.

Peter, then, held jurisdiction as presiding officer in and over the affairs of the church or kingdom of God on the earth. He being the presiding officer or head of a perfect body, which was fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplyeth growth into a holy temple in the Lord. And being of God's own ordination and organization, is destined to be nothing less than the bride, the Lamb's wife. Hence the power of the queen in whatsoever she shall ask, in accordance with known and established laws, made unalterable by the decree of the Almighty ruler of the universe.

But such is the mystery, that until this body is perfected by close adherence to the rule or rules adopted by the great head of the church, that should any member offend against the law it might be removed and another placed in its stead. For it cannot be that Christ meant to give the kingdom to Peter, but only the keys for a term of time, during which time his official acts were valid, so long as he observed the rock, (revelation,) by which he obtained correct knowledge of the person and will of Jesus Christ. Whatsoever Peter should bind was to be done, not so much by power invested in the man as in the means obtained through the keys granted, by which he was to understand the laws of just and correct administration.

Hence his accountability. And herein is discernable the accountability of every individual member to God. From the head to the foot each member has its office work, and each to attend to the duties of their calling. As it is said in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants: "Now let every man learn his duty." Not every man exert his official power, without a correct knowledge of the will of the supreme.—"Let every man learn his duty; he that is not faithful shall not be accounted worthy to stand." Much less shall he be able to redeem an un-

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 32.] VOREE, Wis., THURSDAY, OCT. 25, 1849. [WHOLE No. 148.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

POWER OF THE PRIESTHOOD.

"And I will give unto thee (Peter) the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Matt. xvi. 19.

Jesus Christ was born to be a king, supreme ruler of the universe, and king of kings, and lord of lords; consequently had a right to delegate power and authority to whomsoever he would. What less can be understood by this language than that Christ gave kingly power and authority unto Peter? And if his power was not unlimited, what were its limits?—Surely the keys were of the kingdom, and the territory the whole earth. And whatsoever he bound or whatsoever he loosed on earth was to be bound or loosed in heaven.

Now does not this commission plainly express unlimited power over the territory of the earth, so far as Peter should will to exercise it, unless it were either expressed or understood that Peter should not will beyond or contrary to the will of his Lord? It appears to me unreasonable that a mere man should have that power given him which would leave him irresponsible or not accountable to a power above him. And if his power is restricted by this rule, it must, of course, be limited. And if limited by a just God, it must, of course, be by a principle of strict justice.

Peter, then, held jurisdiction as presiding officer in and over the affairs of the church or kingdom of God on the earth. He being the presiding officer or head of a perfect body, which was fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplyeth growth into a holy temple in the Lord. And being of God's own ordination and organization, is destined to be nothing less than the bride, the Lamb's wife. Hence the power of the queen in whatsoever she shall ask, in accordance with known and established laws, made unalterable by the decree of the Almighty ruler of the universe.

But such is the mystery, that until this body is perfected by close adherence to the rule or rules adopted by the great head of the church, that should any member offend against the law it might be removed and another placed in its stead. For it cannot be that Christ meant to give the kingdom to Peter, but only the keys for a term of time, during which time his official acts were valid, so long as he observed the rock, revelation, by which he obtained correct knowledge of the person and will of Jesus Christ. Whatsoever Peter should bind was to be done, not so much by power invested in the man as in the means obtained through the keys granted, by which he was to understand the laws of just and correct administration.

Hence his accountability. And herein is discernable the accountability of every individual member to God. From the head to the foot each member has its office work, and each to attend to the duties of their calling. As it is said in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants: "Now let every man learn his duty." Not every man exert his official power, without a correct knowledge of the will of the supreme.—"Let every man learn his duty; he that is not faithful shall not be accounted worthy to stand." Much less shall he be able to redeem an unfaithful brother. Some have seemed to suppose that the power given to the Apostles to bind and seal was left discretionary with them to use without any prescribed rule. So that should any act of binding or sealing be performed by them in unrighteousness God is bound to sanction it, from the fact that they had a right to use the power.

But such an argument pleads excuse for injustice, and militates against the holiness and perfections of God's law, and, to my mind, is a manifest absurdity. Had this matter been well understood by the Twelve under Joseph their usurpations could not have been the sin of ignorance. For it is and has long since been revealed that there is no power but of God, and hence, God being just, could never empower any one to do wrong, and lay himself under obligations to sanction that wrong. That a prophet may do wrong is evident, but not by any license or sanction from God. "The soul that sinneth shall die." And sin is a transgression of the law, whether committed by a prophet or an Apostle, or any other man, or even a woman.

"There is no power but of God; the powers that be are ordained of God." Of course, where there is no ordination by or of God there is no power delegated. And should any manifestation or pretension be made to authority without ordination it would of necessity be rebellion, or opposing of power, that bringeth condemnation, and the result not perhaps less injurious in the church of God than the sin of witchcraft.

Thus I think it is clearly manifest that God's law is perfect, and harmonizes through all its parts. No door is open for injustice to be practiced upon any one. Perfect harmony and peace, love and union are attained by strict obedience unto it. We understand by law a rule of duty, either by commandment or prohibition. And where there is no such rule of duty we are under no obligation to act at all, and should be more likely to transgress, or, rather, to transcend, than fall short of accomplishing duty.

Should an Apostle, by virtue of his priesthood authority, attemp to bind and seal an unrepenting soul to everlasting life, to come forth in the first resurrection, would it prevent the justice of God from having its demand upon the guilty? Could a sinner then be saved without repentance and faith? Or, is there any other name or power under heaven beside Christ to save sinners? Is not the government upon his shoulders? Will any desire a means of salvation which he has not wrought out? If so the glory will not all belong to him.

But methinks no spirit but that of rebellion will ever lead any man to assume power which has not been granted him by a specific law.—Had Lucifer never tried to manifest power beyond specified enactments made by God, had he been content to believe revelations already given, without contradicting them, he might never have seduced our mother Eve. It was disobedience that brought death into our world, and by disobedience is death entailed. Even Jesus Christ himself, to whom was given all power in heaven as well as on earth, came not to do his own will, but the will of him who sent him. And should a prophet or an Apostle be so blind as to attempt to use the power of their priesthood by doing their own will, they could not be following Christ, but anti-Christ.

We have one example on record of a prophet of God who after obtaining a revelation of the will of God was not willing to obey it, because he loved the wages proffered to him for accomplishing another purpose. He desired and finally acquired permission to go with the men who hired him to curse Israel. And although the Lord did not allow him to curse, yet it was not the prophet's fault, for he could not. But, says one, if he had cursed Israel with the power of the priesthood upon him, they must inevitably have been accursed. In answer to all such like arguments I would just say, once for all, either he could not or would not, which ever will prevent the curse of God from resting on the innocent without their free consent. I mean the curse cannot come from God in this way.

Man may curse his fellow man for a time, un-

faithful brother. Some have seemed to suppose that the power given to the Apostles to bind and seal was left discretionary with them to use without any prescribed rule. So that should any act of binding or sealing be performed by them in unrighteousness God is bound to sanction it, from the fact that they had a right to use the power.

But such an argument pleads excuse for injustice, and militates against the holiness and perfections of God's law, and, to my mind, is a manifest absurdity. Had this matter been well understood by the Twelve under Joseph their usurpations could no more have been the sin of ignorance. For it is and has long since been revealed that there is no power but of God, and hence, God being just, could never empower any one to do wrong, and by this make us obligations to sanction that wrong. That a prophet may do wrong is evident, but not by any license or sanction from God. "The soul that sinneth shall die." And sin is a transgression of the law, whether committed by a prophet or an Apostle, or any other man, or even woman.

"There is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God." Of course, where there is no ordination by or of God there is no power delegated. And should any manifestation or pretension be made to authority without ordination it would of necessity be rebellion, or opposing of power, that brings condemnation, and the result not perhaps less injurious in the church of God than the sin of witchcraft.

Thus I think it is clearly manifest that God's law is perfect, and harmonizes through all its parts. No door is open for injustice to be practiced upon any one. Perfect harmony and peace, love and union are attained by strict obedience unto it. We understand by law a rule of duty, either by commandment or prohibition. And where there is no such rule of duty we are under no obligation to act at all, and should be more likely to transgress, or, rather, to transcend, than fall short of accomplishing duty.

Should an Apostle, by virtue of his priesthood authority, attemp to bind and seal an unrepenting soul to everlasting life, to come forth in the first resurrection, would it prevent the justice of God from having to be learned upon the guilty? Could a sinner then be saved without repentance and faith? Or, is there any other name or power under heaven beside Christ to save sinners? Is not the government upon his shoulders? Will any deface a means of salvation which he has not wrought out? If so the glory will not all belong to him.

But methinks no spirit but that of rebellion will ever lead any man to assume power which has not been granted him by a specific law.—Had Lucifer never tried to manifest power beyond specified enactments made by God, had he been content to believe revelations already given, without contradicting them, he might never have seduced our mother Eve. It was disobedience that brought death into our world, and by disobedience is death entailed. Even Jesus Christ himself, to whom was given all power in heaven as well as on earth, came not to do his own will, but the will of him who sent him. And should a prophet or an Apostle be so blind as to attempt to use the power of their priesthood by doing their own will, they could not be following Christ, but anti-Christ.

We have one example on record of a prophet of God who after obtaining a revelation of the will of God was not willing to obey it, because he loved the wages proffered to him for accomplishing another purpose. He desired and finally acquired permission to go with the men who hired him to curse Israel. And although the Lord did not allow him to curse, yet it was not the prophet's fault, for he could not. But, says one, if he had cursed Israel with the power of the priesthood upon him, they must inevitably have been accursed. In answer to all such like arguments I would just say, once for all, either he could not or would not, which ever will prevent the curse of God from resting on the innocent without their free consent. I mean the curse cannot come from God in this way.

Man may curse his fellow man for a time, until a just retribution is made. As for instance, Alexander the coppersmith did much injury to Paul, who deserved it not. And so might Satan introduce a curse into the world of mankind for a long time endured, but not without its rebounding upon his own pate eventually, while eternal justice with boundless mercy combined seeks out a remedy for the deceived. Power, whenever it exists, is to be feared, but innocence cannot long be made to suffer.

J. S. COMSTOCK.

New York, Oct. 12th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—We have had an interesting Conference. It commenced Friday last, and terminated its labors Monday evening. The principal business done was the sending out of Elders, of whom a large number were sent to various places from Boston to Norfolk. Your readers will recollect a notice published not long since of an impostor, who had appeared in Delaware, calling himself U. C. Nickerson. It is as we conjectured, T. W. Nixon. He appeared in Baltimore, offering himself as a saint. The presiding Elder called for his credentials, and having none he was instantly rejected. He then came to meeting, but they refused to hear him. You had better commend him to the great apostate in Voree. He will console him when all the old psuedoes fail him. I find that J. E. Page and J. M. Adams are joined in close league in correspondence with whomsoever they hope to exert an influence over. As far as I learn their works fall like moonlight on a frozen fountain. Strange it is that such men cannot learn that the only influence they ever can have is founded on the confidence of the church. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

For the Gospel Herald.

Boston, October 13th, 1849.

We have cause to rejoice once more in this great city. After the night of darkness has passed the dawn of a better day is arising, though our numbers are small and our means are limited, yet we have courage. Since the arrival of Bro. Graham our hopes are reviving, and the small spark that was in us is increasing, and we are determind by the help of God to blow it yet into a flame. Bro. Graham and myself called on Elder Wilford Woodruff this afternoon, and it was a satisfaction to see the wolf crouch before the lion. Bro. Graham warned him faithfully in the presence of his followers, and called on him for investigation, but he dare not enter the engagement, neither could he look Bro. Graham in the face when he was laying before him the truths of the gospel, which his own lips had proclaimed, but has since departed from.

What is a great man when shorn of his honor by departing from the living God? He is as the dew before the rising sun, and passes away. His former strength was of God. But when left to himself he is as chaff before the wind. We are of one mind and one heart in this thing, that if the gospel is preached in the true spirit of Christ, a people yet known of God will be found in this place, and hope is large, and our faith is strong that God will yet in power visit this city for good. In the faith of the gospel I subscribe myself your Bro. in Christ, WM. SKIMMINGS.

☞ A curious phenomenon is stated to have occurred in Rosshire, Scotland, during a thunder storm. Immediately after one of the loudest peals of thunder ever heard there, a large and irregular shaped mass of ice, reckoned to be nearly twenty feet in circumference, and of a proportionate thickness, fell near a farm house. It had a beautiful chrystaline appearance, being nearly all quite transparent, excepting a small portion of it, which consisted of hailstones of uncommon size fixed together. It was principally composed of small squares, diamond-shaped, of from one to three inches in size, all firmly congealed together. The weight of this large piece of ice could not be ascertained. No appearance whatever of hail or snow was discernible in the surrounding district at the time.

New York City, October 15th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—Our meetings in this city are well attended, and a good interest is getting up. I shall hold meetings every evening this week. Great numbers are coming in who have been in the faith in years gone by, but who had dropped all intercourse with the church, besides numbers who are unacquainted with it. Yesterday one came who was for some years an active and successful preacher in Liverpool, two cousins I had not seen in many years, merchants in Ontario Co., and several intelligent young gentlemen who had never heard the gospel before. Increase Van Dusen was there also, very anxious to get the privilege of declaring a revelation that he has had. The substance of it was that Bro. Hickey had died since he left here a day or two before, and that I would die soon. There are several who will rejoice to hear the last part, and will respond amen. As I would not let him declare it, he will of course have another in a short time that I am not to be heard as a prophet. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

Hannah Baldwin,	$1,00 to Vol. IV	No. 52
G. T. Leech,	1.00 "	" 52
Ichabod B. Gifford,	1,00 to Vol. V	No. 4
Asa Wade,	2,00 "	" 26

OBITUARY.

Died, on the 5th inst., at French Creek, Chautauque Co., N. Y., in full faith of the everlasting covenant, JOHN W. WADE, after a protracted illness, which he bore with christian patience and resignation, leaving a wife, three children and a large circle of friends and acquaintances to mourn the loss of his society.

Though he's gone away to heaven,
He'll come again to earth,
Where he'll reign with Christ in glory
Till creations' second birth.

A priest of God and of his Christ,
From Satan's power he's free;
No second death will hurt his soul;
He's free eternally. [Com.

til a just retribution is made. As for instance, Alexander the coppersmith did much injury to Paul, who deserved it not. And so might Satan introduce a curse into the world of mankind for a long time endured, but not without its rebounding upon his own pate eventually, while eternal justice with boundless mercy combined seeks out a remedy for the deceived. Power, whenever it exists, is to be feared, but innocence cannot long be made to suffer.

J. S. COMSTOCK.

New York, Oct. 12th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—We have had an interesting Conference. It commenced Friday last, and terminated its labors Monday evening. The principal business done was the sending out of Elders, of whom a large number were sent to various places from Boston to Norfolk. Your readers will recollect a notice published not long since of an impostor, who had appeared in Delaware, calling himself U. C. Nickerson. It is as we conjectured, T. W. Nixon. He appeared in Baltimore, offering himself as a saint. The presiding Elder called for his credentials, and having none he was instantly rejected. He then came to meeting, but they refused to hear him. You had better commend him to the great apostate in Voree. He will console him when all the old psuedoes fail him. I find that J. E. Page and J. M. Adams are joined in close league in correspondence with whomsoever they hope to exert an influence over. As far as I learn their works fall like moonlight on a frozen fountain. Strange it is that such men cannot learn that the only influence they ever can have is founded on the confidence of the church. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

For the Gospel Herald.

Boston, October 13th, 1849.

We have cause to rejoice once more in this great city. After the night of darkness has passed the dawn of a better day is arising, though our numbers are small and our means are limited, yet we have courage. Since the arrival of Bro. Graham our hopes are reviving, and the small spark that was in us is increasing, and we are determind by the help of God to blow it yet into a flame. Bro. Graham and myself called on Elder Wilford Woodruff this afternoon, and it was a satisfaction to see the wolf crouch before the lion. Bro. Graham warned him faithfully in the presence of his followers, and called on him for investigation, but he dare not enter the engagement, neither could he look Bro. Graham in the face when he was laying before him the truths of the gospel, which his own lips had proclaimed, but has since departed from.

What is a great man when stripped of his honor by departing from the living God! He is as the dew before the rising sun, and passes away. His former strength was of God. But when left to himself he is as chaff before the wind. We are of one mind and one heart in this thing, that if the gospel is preached in the true spirit of Christ, a people yet shall be found in this place, and hope is large, and our faith is strong that God will yet in power visit this city for good. In the faith of the gospel I subscribe myself your Bro. in Christ, WM. SKIMMINGS.

☞ A curious phenomenon is stated to have occurred in Rosshire, Scotland, during a thunder storm. Immediately after one of the loudest peals of thunder ever heard there, a large and irregular shaped mass of ice, reckoned by a measure twenty feet in circumference, and of a proportionate thickness, fell near a farm house. It had a beautiful chrystaline appearance, being nearly all quite transparent, excepting a small portion of it which consisted of hailstones of uncommon size fixed together. It was principally composed of small squares, diamond-shaped, from one to three inches in size, all firmly connected together. The weight of this large piece of ice could not be ascertained. No appearance whatever of hail or snow was discernible in the surrounding district at the time.

New York City, October 15th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—Our meetings in this city are well attended, and a good interest is getting up. I shall hold meetings every evening this week. Great numbers are coming in who have been in the faith in years gone by, but who had dropped all intercourse with the church, but the numbers who are unacquainted with it. Yesterday one came who was for some years an active and successful preacher in Liverpool, two cousins I have not seen in many years, merchants in Ontario Co., and several inquiring young gentlemen who had never heard the gospel before. Increase Van Dusen was there also, very anxious to get the privilege of declaring a revelation that he has had. The substance of it was that Bro. Hickey had died since he left here a day or two before, and that I would die soon. There are several who will rejoice to hear the last part, and will respond amen. As I would not let him declare it, he will of course have another in a short time that I am not to be heard as a prophet. Truly and sincerely, JAMES J. STRANG.

RECEIPTS FOR THE HERALD.

Hannah Baldwin,	$1,00 to Vol	IV	No. 52
G. T. Leech,	1.00 "	"	52
Ichabod B. Gifford,	1,00 to Vol.	V	No. 4
Asa Wade,	2,00 "	"	26

OBITUARY.

Died, on the 5th inst., at French Creek, Chautauque Co., N. Y., in full faith of the everlasting covenant, JOHN W. WADE, after a protracted illness, which he bore with christian patience and resignation, leaving a wife, three children and a large circle of friends and acquaintances to mourn the loss of his society.

Though he's gone away to heaven,
He'll come again to earth,
Where he'll reign with Christ in glory
Till creations' second birth.

A priest of God and of his Christ,
From Satan's power he's free;
No second death will hurt his soul;
He's free eternally. [Com.

SONS OF GOD.

When the gospel of Jesus Christ was ushered forth into the world, there was something beautiful and glorious connected with it;—something which when rightly understood, had a tendency to enamor, and captivate the soul of man. There was a dignity, a glory, and a freedom associated with its principles, which the generality of men, and even the teachers of Israel knew little or nothing about. The Jews indeed had been taught "that to them belonged the promises, the giving of the law, and the service of God;" that "theirs were the Fathers," and that from them (according to the flesh) Christ was to come: but of the nature and office of the Messiah, of the kind of glory that should be revealed when he came, and of the dingnity, glory, and fulness of those blessings that should accrue to the human family, when he made his appearance among the children of men, they seem to be entirely ignorant as well as of the union, and relationship to God which it would be placed within the reach of the children of men to obtain through the medium of his atonement, and the redemption wrought out by him. Long accustomed to types and shadows, to sprinklings, washings, sacrifices,and the observance of a law, that could never make the comers thereunto perfect, they understood not, and could not appreciate that more "excellent sacrifice," and the "better covenant," when it was revealed. They had long been "under a schoolmaster," and he had not taught them the glories of a celestial law: the riches, glory, fulness and blessings of the gospel of peace, nor the freedom of the "sons of God;" consequently when the "true light, that lighteth every man that cometh into the world," made his appearance. "He was in the world, and the world knew him not. He came to his own, and his own recieved him not; but to as many as did receive him to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to as many as believed on his name, which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of man, but of God."

Not only were the Jews ignorant of these things, but the Gentiles also, (who profess to believe the gospel,) seem to be ignorant of the great principles that regulate the kingdom of God, and of the unspeakable privileges of the "sons of God." As the peculiar privileges of the gospel have long been banished from the church; as the light of revelation has long since ceased to dawn upon the professors of christianity, and as the followers of Jesus have had no other landmark but that of the written word of God, perverted by the enthusiastic zeal of uninspired partizans and religious bigots, who, however well meaning and sincere they might be, and however learned and intelligent in other respects, had no means of obtaining correct religious intelligence, nor a knowledge of the things of God, the world therefore must necessarily be ignorant, for "faith comes by hearing, (not by reading only,) and hearing by the word of God; and how can they hear without a preacher? and how can he preach except he be sent?"

"To as many as believed to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to as many as believed on his name," is the declaration of John. This declaration being made, it becomes us to inquire what peculiar blessings are connected with this sonship, and what is the nature of this heavenly boon referred to by John. "For," says he, "to as many as believed to them gave he power," &c., evidently showing that if they did not believe they could not become the sons of God, neither could they without the "true light" referred to by John: he might be in the world, and the world know him not; he might come to his own, and his own receive him not; but, nevertheless, he was the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world, as it is written by the prophet of the Lord, "the light of truth; which truth shineth. This is the light of Christ. As also he is the sun, and the power thereof by which it was made. As also he is in the moon, and is the light of the moon, and the power thereof by which it was made. As also the light of the stars, and the power thereof by which they were made. And the earth also, and the power thereof, even the earth upon

SONS OF GOD.

When the gospel of Jesus Christ was ushered forth into the world, there was something beautiful and glorious connected with it;—something which when rightly understood, had a tendency to enamor, and captivate the soul of man. There was a dignity, a glory, and a freedom associated with its principles, which the generality of men, and even the teachers of Israel knew little or nothing about. The Jews indeed had been taught "that to them belonged the promises, the giving of the law, and the service of God;" that "theirs were the Fathers," and that from them (according to the flesh) Christ was to come: but of the nature and office of the Messiah, of the kind of glory that should be revealed when he came, and of the dingnity, glory, and fulness of those blessings that should accrue to the human family, when he made his appearance among the children of men, they seem to be entirely ignorant as well as of the union, and relationship to God which it would be placed within the reach of the children of men to obtain through the medium of his atonement, and the redemption wrought out by him. Long accustomed to types and shadows, to sprinklings, washings, sacrifices,and the observance of a law, that could never make the comers thereunto perfect, they understood not, and could not appreciate that more "excellent sacrifice," and the "better covenant," when it was revealed. They had long been "under a schoolmaster," and he had not taught them the glories of a celestial law: the riches, glory, fulness and blessings of the gospel of peace, nor the freedom of the "sons of God;" consequently when the "true light, that lighteth every man that cometh into the world," made his appearance. "He was in the world, and the world knew him not. He came to his own, and his own recieved him not; but to as many as did receive him to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to as many as believed on his name, which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of man, but of God."

Not only were the Jews ignorant of these things, but the Gentiles also, (who profess to believe the gospel,) seem to be ignorant of the great principles that regulate the kingdom of God, and of the unspeakable privileges of the "sons of God." As the peculiar privileges of the gospel have long been banished from the church; as the light of revelation has long since ceased to dawn upon the professors of christianity, and as the followers of Jesus have had no other landmark but that of the written word of God, perverted by the enthusiastic zeal of uninspired partizans and religious bigots, who, however well meaning and sincere they might be, and however learned and intelligent in other respects, had no means of obtaining correct religious intelligence, nor a knowledge of the things of God, the world therefore must necessarily be ignorant, for "faith comes by hearing, (not by reading only,) and hearing by the word of God; and how can they hear without a preacher? and how can he preach except he be sent?"

"To as many as believed to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to as many as believed on his name," is the declaration of John. This declaration being made, it becomes us to inquire what peculiar blessings are connected with this sonship, and what is the nature of this heavenly boon referred to by John. "For," says he, "to as many as believed to them gave he power," &c., evidently showing that if they did not believe they could not become the sons of God, neither could they without the "true light" referred to by John: he might be in the world, and the world know him not; he might come to his own, and his own receive him not; but, nevertheless, he was the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world, as it is written by the prophet of the Lord, "the light of truth; which truth shineth. This is the light of Christ. As also he is the sun, and the power thereof by which it was made. As also he is in the moon, and is the light of the moon, and the power thereof by which it was made. As also the light of the stars, and the power thereof by which they were made. And the earth also, and the power thereof, even the earth upon which you stand.

"And the light which now shineth, which giveth you light, is through him who enlighteneth your eyes, which is the same light that quickeneth your understandings; which light proceedeth forth from the presence of God, to fill the immensity of space. The light which is in all things; which giveth life to all things; which is the law by which all things are governed: even the power of God, who sitteth upon his throne, who is in the bosom of eternity, who is in the midst of all things." D. & C. sec. vii. Consequently, if in the world, there is not any wisdom, any intelligence, any true principle, but what it all proceeds from the "Father of Lights, in whom there is no variableness nor shadow of turning."

All virtue, goodness, purity, righteousness that there may be in the world emanates from him, the great fountain of blessings, and the dispenser of every good; his blessings are scattered promiscously over the universe; all the human family participate in his benevolence; "he sends his rain on the evil and on the good, and causes his sun to shine on the just and on the unjust;" yet he does not bestow this sonship upon all, nor introduce the whole of the human family to the nearness of that relationship.

To be a son of God is to be born of God, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, but of God; to be related to, and be the son of God. Paul says in writing to the Galatians, "now ye are all the children of God, by faith in Christ Jesus; for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ," . . . . "and if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

We may here pause, and ask, what we inherit? Says Paul, "ye are heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord." Consequently we inherit great blessings; we are conjointly with Christ the sons of God, and with him inherit like blessings from the Father; he is our brother—God is our Father; and hence in Gal. iv. 4 to 7, it is written, "but when the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his son made of a woman; made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons. And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the spirit of his son into your hearts, crying, abba, Father. Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ." Through the atonement, and redemption wrought out by him, and obedience to the law of the gospel.

There is a depth, a dignity and glory connected with this subject that very few have had any idea of; but when rightly understood it has a tendency to enlarge the heart, expand the capacity, to give us just and comprehensive views of the plans of Jehovah, and it justifies the ways of God to man. Narrow prejudice and bigotry flees at its approach, and haggard superstition hides its head in shame. It was a subject upon which the Apostle loved to dwell; and Paul in writing to the Galatians concerning their departure from the simplicity of the gospel, portrays the dignity, the freedom, the blessings, and the glory of the sonship in striking and vivid colors; and when contrasted with the folly, the weakness, and the absurdity of the Gentile superstitions, and the beggarly elements of the world presents a thrilling discord.

It is an opinion that generally prevails in the religious world that all people who have united themselves to a religious body, if it is presumed that they have "got religion," are sons of God; an opinion than which nothing could be more absurd or preposterous. That many individuals have been serving God in different parts of the earth, and among different sects of professing christians, with all sincerity, diligence, and faithfulness, we are free to admit; but to say that all those individuals, or all those churches were sons of God, would be saying that which could not be supported by the scriptures of truth: we doubt not their zeal;—we do not question their diligence, nor their desire to do good: but there are certain principles, which do not exist among them, which must necessarily be connected with the sons of God. If a man is a son of God he can which you stand.

"And the light which now shineth, which giveth you light, is through him who enlighteneth your eyes, which is the same light that quickeneth your understandings; which light proceedeth forth from the presence of God, to fill the immensity of space. The light which is in all things; which giveth life to all things; which is the law by which all things are governed: even the power of God, who sitteth upon his throne, who is in the bosom of eternity, who is in the midst of all things." D. & C. sec. vii. Consequently, if in the world, there is not any wisdom, any intelligence, any true principle, but what it all proceeds from the "Father of Lights, in whom there is no variableness nor shadow of turning."

All virtue, goodness, purity, righteousness that there may be in the world emanates from him, the great fountain of blessings, and the dispenser of every good; his blessings are scattered promiscously over the universe; all the human family participate in his benevolence; "he sends his rain on the evil and on the good, and causes his sun to shine on the just and on the unjust;" yet he does not bestow this sonship upon all, nor introduce the whole of the human family to the nearness of that relationship.

To be a son of God is to be born of God, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, but of God; to be related to, and be the son of God. Paul says in writing to the Galatians, "now ye are all the children of God, by faith in Christ Jesus; for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ," . . . . "and if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

We may here pause, and ask, what we inherit? Says Paul, "ye are heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord." Consequently we inherit great blessings; we are conjointly with Christ the sons of God, and with him inherit like blessings from the Father; he is our brother—God is our Father; and hence in Gal. iv. 4 to 7, it is written, "but when the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his son made of a woman; made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons. And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the spirit of his son into your hearts, crying, abba, Father. Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ." Through the atonement, and redemption wrought out by him, and obedience to the law of the gospel.

There is a depth, a dignity and glory connected with this subject that very few have had any idea of; but when rightly understood it has a tendency to enlarge the heart, expand the capacity, to give us just and comprehensive views of the plans of Jehovah, and it justifies the ways of God to man. Narrow prejudice and bigotry flees at its approach, and haggard superstition hides its head in shame. It was a subject upon which the Apostle loved to dwell; and Paul in writing to the Galatians concerning their departure from the simplicity of the gospel, portrays the dignity, the freedom, the blessings, and the glory of the sonship in striking and vivid colors; and when contrasted with the folly, the weakness, and the absurdity of the Gentile superstitions, and the beggarly elements of the world presents a thrilling discord.

It is an opinion that generally prevails in the religious world that all people who have united themselves to a religious body, if it is presumed that they have "got religion," are sons of God; an opinion than which nothing could be more absurd or preposterous. That many individuals have been serving God in different parts of the earth, and among different sects of professing christians, with all sincerity, diligence, and faithfulness, we are free to admit; but to say that all those individuals, or all those churches were sons of God, would be saying that which could not be supported by the scriptures of truth: we doubt not their zeal;—we do not question their diligence, nor their desire to do good: but there are certain principles, which do not exist among them, which must necessarily be connected with the sons of God. If a man is a son of God he can comprehend the things of God, enter into the designs of Jehovah, unravel the mysteries of the kingdom of God and contemplate the future designs of the great I Am, as they shall roll forth in all their dignity, and majesty, and glory, and this they do not profess to enjoy.

Did this principle universally exist sectarianism would fall and all the different systems of theology would crumble into ruin, idolatry would not have an existence, and Mahommedanism would be annihilated; Catholicism would be no more, the names of Presbyterian and Methodist would be blotted out, and all the different parties whether found among the Mahommedans, the heathens, or christians all being taught of God, would possess the same principles of intelligence, and whether in Europe, Asia, Africa, or America they would have the same system of theology; being taught by the same God, instructed by the same spirit, and led into the same truths; and there would be but the one church, which would be the universal church of the universal world. For if God teaches one man he will teach him the truth; if two churches were to receive his tuition they would no longer be two but one; and if he teaches the world the world will be one.

There is a principle of intelligence connected with it that burns like a lamp in the bosom of its posessor; chases away the "gross darkness" with which the human mind has been enveloped, and spreads a halo of glory around. Hence, says the Apostle, "because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the spirit of his son into your hearts." Persons thus situated are "therefore no more strangers, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God;" posessing a union and relationship to him which nothing but the fulness of the gospel can impart; being no longer neither strangers nor servants, but sons.

There is a very material difference between a servant and a son; the ties that bind a father and son together are much more sacred and binding than those which unite a master and servant. A father feels bound to his child by paternal ties, to his servant he does not: a father expects from his child a filial and an affectionate regard; but he expects a servant merely to do his work, and pays him for his services. A father reveals unto his son his purposes and designs, he does not acquaint a servant with them; a son inherits his father's property, a servant does not—having received his wages he has no further demand. Hence the reason of Paul's remark, "Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son, and if a son then an heir of God through Christ;" and hence also the reason of our Savior's remark, John xv, "Henceforth I call you not servants, but friends," (they were his brethren, and God their Father,) "for the servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth; but I have called you friends for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you. I have revealed it. I have obtained revelations from the Father because I am his son; I have revealed them unto you because ye are his sons also, and my brethren and friends; no longer strangers, nor aliens, but fellow citizens." Christ had revelation, and they had revelation also; because he revealed his Father's will unto them, and they were placed in a situation to know the mind, the will, and purposes of God through the sonship. The great distinction was that a servant did not know what his Lord did, and a son did know; thus we see that a son of God has revelation, a servant has not, and this is the grand difference between the sectarians and the Latter Day Saints.

Take away the principle of revelation from the gospel, and it is stripped of its beauty, robbed of its glory, and like Sampson when his locks were shorn, it is weak, feeble, destitute and powerless. Enoch understood something of the principles and nature of this sonship, for he walked with God and was not, for God took him. Noah having revelations from God, understood this principle. Abraham also being a son of God, was made acquainted with the designs of his master. He had revelations from God, and knew what his master did.

Isaac, Jacob and Moses possessed the same principle, and claimed the same relationship. There were also numbers of them in Job's day. And we read that when the sons of God presented themselves before God Satan also presented himself, and the Lord asked him, "from whence comest thou?" &c.; evidently showing that the sons of God in those days came into the comprehend the things of God, enter into the designs of Jehovah, unravel the mysteries of the kingdom of God and contemplate the future designs of the great I Am, as they shall roll forth in all their dignity, and majesty, and glory, and this they do not profess to enjoy.

Did this principle universally exist sectarianism would fall and all the different systems of theology would crumble into ruin, idolatry would not have an existence,and Mahommedanism would be annihilated; Catholicism would be no more, the names of Presbyterian and Methodist would be blotted out, and all the different parties whether found among the Mahommedans, the heathens, or christians all being taught of God, would possess the same principles of intelligence, and whether in Europe, Asia, Africa, or America they would have the same system of theology; being taught by the same God, instructed by the same spirit, and led into the same truths; and there would be but the one church, which would be the universal church of the universal world. For if God teaches one man he will teach him the truth; if two churches were to receive his tuition they would no longer be two but one; and if he teaches the world the world will be one.

There is a principle of intelligence connected with it that burns like a lamp in the bosom of its posessor; chases away the "gross darkness" with which the human mind has been enveloped, and spreads a halo of glory around. Hence, says the Apostle, "because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the spirit of his son into your hearts." Persons thus situated are "therefore no more strangers, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God;" posessing a union and relationship to him which nothing but the fulness of the gospel can impart; being no longer neither strangers nor servants, but sons.

There is a very material difference between a servant and a son; the ties that bind a father and son together are much more sacred and binding than those which unite a master and servant. A father feels bound to his child by paternal ties, to his servant he does not: a father expects from his child a filial and an affectionate regard; but he expects a servant merely to do his work, and pays him for his services. A father reveals unto his son his purposes and designs, he does not acquaint a servant with them: a son inherits his father's property, a servant does not—having received his wages he has no further demand. Hence the reason of Paul's remark, "Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son, and if a son then an heir of God through Christ;" and hence also the reason of our Savior's remark, John xv, "Henceforth I call you not servants, but friends." (they were his brethren, and God their Father.) "for the servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth; but I have called you friends for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you. I have revealed it. I have obtained revelations from the Father because I am his son; I have revealed them unto you because ye are his sons also, and my brethren and friends; no longer strangers, nor aliens, but fellow citizens." Christ had revelation, and they had revelation also: because he revealed his Father's will unto them, and they were placed in a situation to know the mind, the will, and purposes of God through the sonship. The great distinction was that a servant did not know what his Lord did, and a son did know: thus we see that a son of God has revelation, a servant has not, and this is the grand difference between the sectarians and the Latter Day Saints.

Take away the principle of revelation from the gospel, and it is stripped of its beauty, robbed of its glory, and like Sampson when his locks were shorn, it is weak, feeble, destitute and powerless. Enoch understood something of the principles and nature of this sonship, for he walked with God and was not, for God took him. Noah having revelations from God, understood this principle. Abraham also being a son of God, was made acquainted with the designs of his master. He had revelations from God, and knew what his master did.

Isaac, Jacob and Moses possessed the same principle, and claimed the same relationship. There were also numbers of them in Job's day. And we read that when the sons of God presented themselves before God Satan also presented himself, and the Lord asked him, "from whence comest thou?" &c.; evidently showing that the sons of God in those days came into the presence of God, and had communion with and revelation from him. The Lord spake also unto Job, and he answered and said, "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth thee." In fact we read of the sons of God before the flood, and of their transgression with the daughters of men. Gen. vi.

In fact it is through the medium of this relationship that men in different ages have had communicated unto them the will, purposes and designs of the great Jehovah, or that they know anything of futurity; of God, heaven or hell. It is this principle that introduces men into the presence of God, draws aside the curtains of futurity, unveils the beauties of the eternal world, and enables man to gaze on the beatific sight, to behold the dignity and glory of God, and to contemplate the future purposes of Jehovah as they shall roll forth in all their majesty, their dignity and glory.

The Jews were, for a season, placed under a schoolmaster until Christ; but when he came he took all that would obey the gospel from under his tuition; took away the veil that had long been on their hearts, and came "to redeem those that were under the law, that they might receive the adoption of sons."

When the gospel was restored, and this sonship again imparted, the heavens were again opened, and the visions of God unfolded; light burst forth upon the human mind, "and life and immortality were (again) brought to light by the gospel." Peter, James and John saw Jesus transfigured on the mount, and Elijah and Moses talking with him; the sick were healed, the blind received their sight, the lame leaped as an hart, and the poor had the gospel preached to them; sectarianism trembled, and bigotry stood ashamed, hypocrisy was unscathed, and narrow prejudice stood forth in all its native deformity, while truth stalked triumphantly, and intelligence spread like the rays of the sun.

The spirit of God rested upon the people, on the day of Pentecost, "like cloven tongues as of fire;" men began to prophecy, to dream dreams, and to see visions. Paul was caught up unto the third heavens, and heard things that were not lawful to utter. John on the isle of Patmos had the heavens opened to him; while prophecies and revelations were poured forth upon the church, which led John to exclaim, "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: there the world knoweth us not because it knew him not. Beloved now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." How did they get in possession of this intelligence, but through the medium of this sonship, and the revelation and intelligence communicated thereby? What have we had from that time to this, but forms and theories—the systems and dogmas of men, without certainty, prophecy, or revelation? It is true that many have been sincerely desiring to do the will of God, but they could only become his servants; because as the gospel has long since become corrupt and departed, it has not been in their power to become the "sons of God," however desirous they might be to avail themselves of that privilege. It was not until our Savior made his appearance among men that the Jews had "power to become the sons of God," and it was not till the Lord revealed himself from the heavens, restored the priesthood and the gospel in these last days, that men had power to become his sons; but as the kingdom of heaven is now preached all men may rush into it, and avail themselves of those glorious privileges which have long been forfeited in consequence of transgression and apostacy of the church.

Cornelius was a servant of God; he feared God, together with all his house: he fasted, and prayed, and gave alms, and his prayers, and his offerings were accepted before God, and an angel was sent to him to tell him of it; he was as good, as virtuous, as moral, as sincere and devout as any man could be at the present day, but he was not a son of God; he was only a servant: and it was necessary, after all his piety and virtue and religion, that he should send for Peter to tell him "words whereby he and his house could be saved." And so at the present day it will be found that however devout and sincere the children of men may have been, that it is necessary that they should come to the standard that God has set up for the salvation of the human family in these last days; repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and have hands laid on them for the gift of the Holy Ghost, by those whom God has ordained, before they can receive the adoption of sons, participate in the glories of the gospel, and receive an inheritance in the celestial kingdom of God.—Times and Seasons.

presence of God, and had communion with and revelation from him. The Lord spake also unto Job, and he answered and said; "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth thee." In fact we read of the sons of God before the flood, and of their transgression with the daughters of men. Gen. vi.

In fact it is through the medium of this relationship that men in different ages have had communicated unto them the will, purposes and designs of the great Jehovah, or that they know anything of futurity, of God, heaven or hell. It is this principle that introduces men into the presence of God, draws aside the curtains of futurity, unveils the beauties of the eternal world, and enables man to gaze on the beatific sight, to behold the dignity and glory of God, and to contemplate the future purposes of Jehovah as they shall roll forth in all their majesty, their dignity and glory.

The Jews were, for a season, placed under a schoolmaster until Christ; but when he came he took all that would obey the gospel from under his tuition; took away the veil that had long been on their hearts, and came "to redeem those that were under the law, that they might receive the adoption of sons."

When the gospel was restored, and this sonship again imparted, the heavens were again opened, and the visions of God unfolded; light burst forth upon the human mind, "and life and immortality were (again) brought to light by the gospel." Peter, James and John saw Jesus transfigured on the mount, and Elijah and Moses talking with him; the sick were healed, the blind received their sight, the lame leaped as an hart, and the poor had the gospel preached to them; sectarianism trembled, and bigotry stood ashamed, hypocrisy was unsheathed, and narrow prejudice stood forth in all its native deformity, while truth stalked triumphantly, and intelligence spread like the rays of the sun.

The spirit of God rested upon the people, on the day of Pentecost, "like cloven tongues as of fire;" men began to prophecy, to dream dreams, and to see visions. Paul was caught up unto the third heavens, and heard things that were not lawful to utter. John on the isle of Patmos had the heavens opened to him; while prophecies and revelations were poured forth upon the church, which led John to exclaim, "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: there the world knoweth us not because it knew him not. Beloved now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." How did they get in possession of this intelligence, but through the medium of this sonship, and the revelation and intelligence communicated thereby? What have we had from that time to this, but forms and theories—the systems and dogmas of men, without certainty, prophecy, or revelation? It is true that many have been sincerely desiring to do the will of God, but they could only become his servants; because as the gospel has long since become corrupt and departed, it has not been in their power to become the "sons of God," however desirous they might be to avail themselves of that privilege. It was not until our Savior made his appearance among men that the Jews had "power to become the sons of God," and it was not till the Lord revealed himself from the heavens, restored the priesthood and the gospel in these last days that men had power to become his sons: but as the kingdom of heaven is now preached all men may rush into it, and avail themselves of those glorious privileges which have long been forfeited in consequence of transgression and apostacy of the church.

Cornelius was a servant of God; he feared God, together with all his house: he fasted, and prayed, and gave alms, and his prayers, and his offerings were accepted before God, and an angel was sent to him to tell him of it; he was as good, as virtuous, as moral, as sincere and devout as any man could be at the present day, but he was not a son of God; he was only a servant: and it was necessary, after all his piety and virtue and religion, that he should send for Peter to tell him "words whereby he and his house could be saved." And so at the present day it will be found that however devout and sincere the children of men may have been, that it is necessary that they should come to the standard that God has set up for the salvation of the human family in these last days; repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and have hands laid on them for the gift of the Holy Ghost, by those whom God has ordained, before they can receive the adoption of sons, participate in the glories of the gospel, and receive an inheritance in the celestial kingdom of God.—Times and Seasons.

A SONG FOR ZION.

How sweet is the communion
Of saints that fear the Lord,
And strive, in perfect union,
To gain the great reward.
'Tis like the oil on Aaron
Anointing him a priest,
Perfumed with rose from Sharon,
And Cassia from the east.

'Tis like the dew of Hermon,
Where God began to bless,
And promised in his sermon,
Eternal happiness.
'Tis like the precious ointment
That God Almighty had
At Jesus Christ's appointment,
Which made his heart so glad.

'Tis like a little leaven
The woman hid for good,
When she, as queen of heaven,
In gold of Ophir stood.
'Tis like the court of Zion,
Where garments all are white;
Who'll reign like Judah's Lion,
In everlasting light.

Their robes alike in beauty,
Their hearts and faith agree,
They'll ever be on duty
Till all their race is free,
They'll eat the hidden manna,
Receive the precious stone,
And sing the great hosanna
Where God and Christ are one.

DOCTORS.

Hear what the great editor of the London Medico-Chirurgical Review, Dr. James Johnson, says of them:—

"I declare my conscientious opinion, founded on long observation and reflection, that if there were not a single physician, surgeon, apothecary, man-midwife, chemist, druggist, or drug on the face of the earth, there would be less sickness and less mortality than now. When we reflect that physic is a 'conjectural art,' that the best physicians make mistakes, that medicine is administered by hosts of quacks, that it is swallowed by multitudes of people without any professional advice at all, and that the world would be infinitely more careful of themselves if they were conscious that they had no remedy from drugs—these, and many other facts, will show that the proposition I have made is more startling than untrue. But as it is, drugs will be swallowed by all classes, rich and poor, with the hope of regaining health and prolonging life, and also with the expectation of being able to countenance the culpable indulgence of the appetite and passions."

There, think of that, ye pill-eaters! ye who are continually abusing your systems in various ways and then run to doctors and quacks for relief, think of this testimony from one of their own craft, and learn to let them alone. I have observed during many years, that those who have the least to do with doctors and medicines, outlive those that are forever nursing and doing. Good, wholesome food, and temperance instead of overeating, in the use of it, with pure cold water for drink, and to bathe in, with fresh air and plenty of exercise, and a clear conscience will do more to restore or preserve health, and prolong life, than all the doctors and medicines in the universe.—Portland Pleasure Boat.

Leeds, Upper Canada, Oct. 31, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—At this time I address you a few lines to inform you of my labor in this part of the vineyard. It was after quite a lengthy and pleasant voyage that I arrived at this place on the 17th Sept., with brother Calkins, a young Elder, who has lately been ordained. I then commenced preaching on the Sunday following my arrival, and preached six times in the same week to a large congregation, and on the first day of October baptized three, and as it has pleased God there are many more believing in the work, and hope that by the help of God I shall baptize many more. I will write to you from time to time, and let you know how the work prospers. It is through many considerations I have concluded to send Bro. Calkins to York State, Alleghaney Co., town of Allen. I mention this that his friends who see this may know where to address their letters to him. Yours, &c., with due respect,

PHINEAS WRIGHT.

CHOICE OF A PROFESSION.

Some young persons entertain curious notions as to the choice of a profession. Carried away by the glitter of uniforms and the splendid pageantry of the soldier's life, nothing will please them short of entering the army; or, perhaps, carried away by the narration of maritime adventures, they resolve upon following the hazardous profession of a sailor. But a very little experience of the realities of life generally banishes these idle dreams. Others pitch upon the clerical profession as most suitable to their ideas of living an easy and dignified existence, and enjoying the reverence of those around them, without reckoning whether their parents or guardians are able, in the first place to procure them the necessary course of education, or if they would subsequently have the good fortune to find a benefice. Many more equally delude themselves with regard to what are called professions. As a matter of course, they must be something better, though only in appearance, than their father; and so they frequentely turn their attention to occupations which to them looks remarkably genteel, but which all the world besides know to be superficial and unprofitable. The young in the middle and lower ranks of society should, by all means, be governed in these matters by their seniors, for they are certainly the best judges with respect to what particular department of industry they should attach themselves.

☞ The more we embody ourselves and our happiness with the interest of others, the more in reality we consult our own happiness. Who would think it worth his while to prepare a meal, where that meal is to be taken by himself only? Emulation, mental inducement, love of art, ambition, enthusiasm, are all sacrificed, and these are the passions which, brought into being, constitute the pleasure of the acts of life. Thus, when the barriers which selfishness has put between man and man are broken down, and the current of fellowship and benevolence is suffered to flow generously abroad, and circulate around, then shall we be in the capacity for the greatest and best enjoyments.

BAROMETER.

Take a pair of scales, in one put a brass pound weight, in the other a pound of dry salt; let there be a sheaf or board under the scales to prevent their sinking too low, and when it is inclined to rain, the scale with the salt will sink the lowest. When inclined to dry, the scale with the brass weight will weigh up the salt.

A SONG FOR ZION.

How sweet is the communion
Of saints that fear the Lord,
And strive, in perfect union,
To gain the great reward.
'Tis like the oil on Aaron
Anointing him a priest,
Perfumed with rose from Sharon,
And Cassia from the east.

'Tis like the dew of Hermon,
Where God began to bless,
And promised in his sermon,
Eternal happiness.
'Tis like the precious ointment
That God Almighty had
At Jesus Christ's appointment,
Which made his heart so glad.

'Tis like a little heaven
The woman hid for good,
When she, as queen of heaven,
In gold of Ophir stood.
'Tis like the court of Zion,
Where garments all are white;
Who'll reign like Judah's Lion,
In everlasting light.

Their robes alike in beauty,
Their hearts and faith agree,
They'll ever be on duty
Till all their race is free,
They'll eat the hidden manna,
Receive the precious stone,
And sing the great hosanna
Where God and Christ are one.

DOCTORS.

Hear what the great editor of the London Medico-Chirurgical Review, Dr. James Johnson, says of them:—

"I declare my conscientious opinion, founded on long observation and reflection, that if there were not a single physician, surgeon, apothecary, man-midwife, chemist, druggist, or drug on the face of the earth, there would be less sickness and less mortality than now. When we reflect that physic is a 'conjectural art,' that the best physicians make mistakes, that medicine is administered by hosts of quacks, that it is swallowed by multitudes of people without any professional advice at all, and that the world would be infinitely more careful of themselves if they were conscious that they had no remedy from drugs—these, and many other facts, will show that the proposition I have made is more startling than untrue. But as it is, drugs will be swallowed by all classes, rich and poor, with the hope of regaining health and prolonging life, and also with the expectation of being able to countenance the culpable indulgence of the appetite and passions."

There, think of that, ye pill-eaters! ye who are continually abusing your systems in various ways and then run to doctors and quacks for relief, think of this testimony from one of their own craft, and learn to let them alone. I have observed during many years, that those who have the least to do with doctors and medicines, outlive those that are forever nursing and doing. Good, wholesome food, and temperance instead of overeating, in the use of it, with pure cold water for drink, and to bathe in, with fresh air and plenty of exercise, and a clear conscience will do more to restore or preserve health, and prolong life, than all the doctors and medicines in the universe.—Portland Pleasure Boat.

Leeds, Upper Canada, Oct. 31, 1849.

Dear Frank:—At this time I address you a few lines to inform you of my labor in this part of the vineyard. It was after quite a lengthy and pleasant voyage that I arrived at this place on the 17th Sept., with brother Calkins, a young Elder, who has lately been ordained. I then commenced preaching on the Sunday following my arrival, and preached six times in the same week to a large congregation, and on the first day of October baptized three, and as it has pleased God there are many more believing in the work, and hope that by the help of God I shall baptize many more. I will write to you from time to time, and let you know how the work prospers. It is through many considerations I have concluded to send Br. Calkins to York State, Alleghaney Co., town of Allen. I mention this that his friends who see this may know where to address their letters to him. Yours, &c., with due respect,

PHINEAS WRIGHT.

CHOICE OF A PROFESSION.

Some young persons entertain curious notions as to the choice of a profession. Carried away by the glitter of uniforms and the splendid pageantry of the soldier's life, nothing will please them short of entering the army; or, perhaps, carried away by the narration of maritime adventures, they resolve upon following the hazardous profession of a sailor. But a very little experience of the realities of life generally banishes these idle dreams. Others pitch upon the clerical profession as most suitable to their ideas of living an easy and dignified existence, and enjoying the reverence of those around them, without reckoning whether their parents or guardians are able, in the first place to procure them the necessary course of education, or if they would subsequently have the good fortune to find a benefice. Many more equally delude themselves with regard to what are called professions. As a matter of course, they must be something better, though only in appearance, than their father; and so they frequentely turn their attention to occupations which to them looks remarkably genteel, but which all the world besides know to be superficial and unprofitable. The young in the middle and lower ranks of society should, by all means, be governed in these matters by their seniors, for they are certainly the best judges with respect to what particular department of industry they should attach themselves.

☞ The more we embody ourselves and our happiness with the interest of others, the more in reality we consult our own happiness. Who would think it worth his while to prepare a meal, when that meal is to be taken by himself only? Emulation, mental inducement, love of art, ambition, enthusiasm, are all sacrificed, and these are the passions which, brought into being, constitute the pleasure of the acts of life. Thus, when the barriers which selfishness has put between man and man are broken down, and the current of fellowship and benevolence is suffered to flow generously abroad, and circulate around, then shall we be in the capacity for the greatest and best enjoyments.

BAROMETER.

Take a pair of scales, in one put a brass pound weight, in the other a pound of dry salt; let there be a sheaf or board under the scales to prevent their sinking too low, and when it is inclined to rain, the scale with the salt will sink the lowest. When inclined to dry, the scale with the brass weight will weigh up the salt.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 33.] VOREE, WIS., THURSDAY, NOV. 1, 1849. [WHOLE No. 149.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

WHAT MUST A MAN DO TO BE SAVED?

"He that believeth and is baptized, shall be be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned." Mark xvi. 16. Now this is plain to any intelligent, honest mind. The first thing essential to salvation is faith on the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Some may inquire, what is faith? Paul gives rather a good answer Heb. xi. The whole chapter treats on faith. "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." A person has not got faith by merely believing that God is, or believing the Bible. One may believe and yet not have the least particle of faith towards God aright. Devils believe and tremble. Some infidels even believe the Bible according as they understand it.

Protestants all believe the Bible too according to their several private interpretations. Now why is this division and difference of opinions in the minds of different men? It is because they have not faith towards God, and will not allow the spirit of God to teach them to understand anything as it really is. One must read the scriptures, believe what it says, have faith in God by believing that what he says is truth, whether it be an ancient or a modern saying, and that when he makes a promise he will fulfill it, also when he threatens he will execute. The second point is repentance. What is repentence? Some say it is sorrow for sins. Is that answer right? Well, let us see. A man goes to church on the Sabbath, and reflects on his past crimes. He gets down upon his knees, he mourns and cries over them. He is fearfully sorry that he ever committed them, because he sees that the judgments of God are hanging over him with dreadful threatnings. He asks forgiveness of the past, and promises to do better. He feels relieved of his burden, and goes home renewed with confidence, and goes to his labor again day after day until he forgets his sorrow, does the same things again, and perhaps some more than before. Sabbath comes again, and he returns to church with the same train of feelings he did the week before, cries and mourns in the same manner that he did the week before, and thinks he gets forgiveness. This he repeats week after week.

Can there be any repentance in this way? No, indeed. It is merely a sorrow, which must be repented of. Now repentance is a turning from sins, a forsaking of wickedness, and a cleaving unto that which is honest and just, not from fearfulness, but because it is right. When a person loves God with all his might, mind and strength he will not commit crimes. It is only when he forgets the love of God that his heart is set on evil. After a person has repented of all his sins he is then a fit candidate for baptism, the third essential to salvation. Baptism is a very clear and plain doctrine; easy to be believed, with no trouble to know how it is to be administered. Indeed there is but one way to administer it, yet many of the learned teachers of this age have heaped to themselves to impose upon good language, and that there is more than one way to administer baptism. To baptize is to plunge or immerse, and is represented in the New Testament as a planting; that is, a covering up, and as a birth; that is, a bringing forth from that

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. IV. No. 33.] VOREE, WIS., THURSDAY, NOV. 1, 1849. [WHOLE No. 149.

GOSPEL HERALD,
PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.
TERMS:
TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.
All letters and communications must be directed to FRANCIS COOPER, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

WHAT MUST A MAN DO TO BE SAVED?

"He that believeth and is baptized, shall be be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned." Mark xvi. 16. Now this is plain to any intelligent, honest mind. The first thing essential to salvation is faith on the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Some may inquire, what is faith? Paul gives rather a good answer Heb. xi. The whole chapter treats on faith. "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." A person has not got faith by merely believing that God is, or believing the Bible. One may believe and yet not have the least particle of faith towards God aright. Devils believe and tremble. Some infidels even believe the Bible according as they understand it.

Protestants all believe the Bible too according to their several private interpretations. Now why is this division and difference of opinions in the minds of different men? It is because they have not faith towards God, and will not allow the spirit of God to teach them to understand anything as it really is. One must read the scriptures, believe what it says, have faith in God by believing that what he says is truth, whether it be an ancient or a modern saying, and that when he makes a promise he will fulfill it, also when he threatens he will execute. The second point is repentance. What is repentence? Some say it is sorrow for sins. Is that answer right? Well, let us see. A man goes to church on the Sabbath, and reflects on his past crimes. He gets down upon his knees, he mourns and cries over them. He is fearfully sorry that he ever committed them, because he sees that the judgments of God are hanging over him with dreadful threatnings. He asks forgiveness of the past, and promises to do better. He feels relieved of his burden, and goes home renewed with confidence, and goes to his labor again day after day until he forgets his sorrow, does the same things again, and perhaps some more than before. Sabbath comes again, and he returns to church with the same train of feelings he did the week before, cries and mourns in the same manner that he did the week before, and thinks he gets forgiveness. This he repeats week after week.

Can there be any repentance in this way? No, indeed. It is merely a sorrow, which must be repented of. Now repentance is a turning from sins, a forsaking of wickedness, and a cleaving unto that which is honest and just, not from fearfulness, but because it is right. When a person loves God with all his might, mind and strength he will not commit crimes. It is only when he forgets the love of God that his heart is set on evil. After a person has repented of all his sins he is then a fit candidate for baptism, the third essential to salvation. Baptism is a very clear and plain doctrine; easy to be believed, with no trouble to know how it is to be administered. Indeed there is but one way to administer it, yet many of the learned teachers of this age have heaped to themselves to impose upon good language, and that there is more than one way to administer baptism. To baptize is to plunge or immerse, and is represented in the New Testament as a planting; that is, a covering up, and as a birth; that is, a bringing forth from that which covers or envelops. Now we all know when we plant anything we cover it out of sight, and after a short time it comes forth. Being buried with christian baptism represents the likeness of Christ's burial; and also the coming forth out of the water represents the resurrection of the body.

Now there is another thing to be taken into consideration. A man must have authortiy from God before he can baptize. A man must be called either by God himself, or by his angels, sent for the purpose, or be called as was Aaron. Moses called Aaron, and Moses was a prophet called of God, ordained under the hand of an angel. Acts vii. 35. Therefore Aaron had authority to administer ordinances, and act in all things that pertained to his priesthood. A man might be baptized as often as he chose by one not having authority, and it would profit him nothing.

Therefore find a man having been called of God by revelation, set apart by the laying on of the hands of his servants, be baptized for the remissions of sins, and then you have a promise of the Holy Ghost, the second comforter spoken of by Christ, John xvi, which is received by the laying on of the hands of God's servants sent for the pupose. After doing all these things, then go on unto perfection.—Live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God, by whomsoever he has appointed your shepherd. If you are persecuted on account of your religion forsake it not, for "blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake," saith Christ. "Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you." Matt. v. 11, 12. C. J. D.

THE STRUGGLE OF LIBERTY.

1849 is proving an infelicitous successor to '48. Tyranny is resuming its sceptre. From all quarters of Europe accounts are confirmatory of that fact.

A few months back, the assault of the German princes on German liberty, simultaneous with the glorious successes of the Hungarians, afforded an opportunity to whelm back this tide of reaction. But everything, as we then noticed, rested on the conduct of the Frankfort Assembly.

We did not anticipate very much zeal or decision from that body, for we remembered their apathy when the Prussian King resumed the constitution, yielded to his German subjects; and their worse than apathy, when Robert Blum, one of their number, was executed on a groundless charge by the Austrian Emperor.

We did not, therefore, anticipate much zeal or decision from this National Assembly, though it was almost the only visible monument of the German revolution of the preceding year.

Unfortunately, our apprehensions were verified. With the great resources at their command to defend their own assailed rights, and the progress of liberty—with the unanimous support of the people, and the proffered help of a vast portion of the German armies, the Frankfort Assembly was unequal, or unfaithful to its trust--to the opportunity afforded--was noisy, timid, and undecided--did simply nothing. The troops, hopeless of the national cause, with the exception of the Baden forces, remained faithful to their royal paymasters. Dresden and a score of other cities, which rose in the good cause, were put down without an effort being made to sustain them. At this worthy Parliament, instead of branding the assailing princes as perjured rebels to the German Constitution, permitted its own gallant defenders to be called and crushed as such.

The war at last is over. The isolated resistance of Baden and Rhenish Bavaria has sunk overpowered. The fortress of Rastadt has surrendered, and the national Assembly, hunted from place to place, has at last ignominously expired, without one solitary redeeming act of capacity or resolution---accursed be its memory! The next time, assuredly, Germany will require something more for her blood, than a humbug house of representatives.

which covers or envelops. Now we all know when we plant anything we cover it out of sight, and after a short time it comes forth. Being buried with christian baptism represents the likeness of Christ's burial; and also the coming forth out of the water represents the resurrection of the body.

Now there is another thing to be taken into consideration. A man must have authortiy from God before he can baptize. A man must be called either by God himself, or by his angels, sent for the purpose, or be called as was Aaron. Moses called Aaron, and Moses was a prophet called of God, ordained under the hand of an angel. Acts vii. 35. Therefore Aaron had authority to administer ordinances, and act in all things that pertained to his priesthood. A man might be baptized as often as he chose by one not having authority, and it would profit him nothing.

Therefore find a man having been called of God by revelation, set apart by the laying on of the hands of his servants, be baptized for the remissions of sins, and then you have a promise of the Holy Ghost, the second comforter spoken of by Christ, John xvi. which is received by the laying on of the hands of God's servants sent for the pupose. After doing all these things, then go on unto perfection.—Live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God, by whomsoever he has appointed your shepherd. If you are persecuted on account of your religion forsake it not, for "blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake," saith Christ. "Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you." Matt. v. 11, 12. C. J. D.

THE STRUGGLE OF LIBERTY.

1849 is proving an infelicitous successor to '48. Tyranny is resuming its sceptre. From all quarters of Europe accounts are confirmatory of that fact.

A few months back, the assault of the German princes on German liberty, simultaneous with the glorious successes of the Hungarians, afforded an opportunity to whelm back this tide of reaction. But everything, as we then noticed, rested on the conduct of the Frankfort Assembly.

We did not anticipate very much zeal or decision from that body, for we remembered their apathy when the Prussian King resumed the constitution, yielded to his German subjects; and their worse than apathy, when Robert Blum, one of their number, was executed on a groundless charge by the Austrian Emperor.

We did not, therefore, anticipate much zeal or decision from this National Assembly, though it was almost the only visible monument of the German revolution of the preceding year.

Unfortunately, our apprehensions were verified. With the great resources at their command to defend their own assailed rights, and the progress of liberty—with the unanimous support of the people, and the proffered help of a vast portion of the German armies, the Frankfort Assembly was unequal, or unfaithful to its trust—to the opportunity afforded—was noisy, timid, and undecided—did simply nothing. The troops, hopeless of the national cause, with the exception of the Baden forces, remained faithful to their royal paymasters. Dresden and a score of other cities, which rose in the good cause, were put down without an effort being made to sustain them. At this worthy Parliament, instead of branding the assailing princes as perjured rebels to the German Constitution, permitted its own gallant defenders to be called and crushed as such.

The war at last is over. The isolated resistance of Baden and Rhenish Bavaria has sunk overpowered. The fortress of Rastadt has surrendered, and the national Assembly, hunted from place to place, has at last ignominously expired, without one solitary redeeming act of capacity or resolution—accursed be its memory! The next time, assuredly, Germany will require something more for her blood, than a humbug house of representatives.

Italy is likewise prostrated--overrun by the hirelings of the Austrians, and of the would-be French Emperor. Venice, closely beleaguered, was the last of her heroic cities to resist. She, alas, has fallen.

Hungary, cut off from external hope--surrounded by the combined forces of Austria and Russia, fell more by the unparalleled treachery of Gorgey than by force of hostile arms.

So stand matters abroad, and how are things at home? Our martyrs in chains, and the convict ship---our people starved and stupified--at last decorously quiescent--at last fit for a Queen's visit.

Such is the condition of Europe. The sun of liberty is just now obscured, and are we to conclude, because tyranny is every where, for a time, regaining its grasp, that 1848 has gone for nothing--that the blood and lessons of last year have been thrown away?

Not so, waverer!--doubter of God's providence--driveler at human infirmity--not so.--The world is steadily advancing, notwithstanding those defeats and delays. Ours is a rough path. We should have prepared for as much when we commenced the journey. We, the brotherhood of universal right and human freedom, have many an obstacle to grapple with on our way--the gold, the disciplined intrigue, the marshaled armaments of despots--much disunion, treachery and cowardice in our own ranks. Ours is no path of roses truly, but a long and thorny road. Let each carpet philanthropist and dilettante patriot turn aside, and no longer weary his dainty feet on such a highway.---Dublin Irishman.

☞ The new Mormon Temple at Salt Lake, California, is to be six hundred feet high, so as to be visible at a distance of eighty miles. The Mormon cities, four in number, are inclosed by a wall, and their extent is seventeen miles in length by twelve in breadth. There has been a mountain of pure rock salt found near the settlement, and a rich gold mine has been discovered one hundred and fifty miles south-west of Salt Lake.—N. Y. Sun.

☞ The Temple may be 600 feet, or only 6, depends on the future. As they have not commenced to build it, it is just as easy to state the intended height at one thing as another.—But the story about the four cities is supremely ridiculous. Twelve miles by seventeen requires fifty-eight miles of wall to inclose it, more than all the fence they have on their farms. It would contain 130,560 acres of land, which, allowing their settlement to contain 13,000 inhabitants, would leave above ten acres of land within the walls of the city to every person, man, woman and child in the settlement, or upwards of fifty acres to a family of five persons. But stating their population at a probable estimate of 400 families, and it makes a fraction over 326 acres to a family. And if this population was evenly distributed over the cities it would make a family once in three quarters of a mile every way. As the rest of the story is disputed by Dr. Bumlysel and other leading Mormons from there, we have nothing to say about it. How strange that the papers cannot once mention Mormon affairs without dealing in obvious falsehood.

WHAT NEXT?—The Cincinnati Commercial of the 17th inst. informs us that in one of the churches of that city, the subject has been broached whether it is proper for men and women to sit together in the chuch or not, during divine service! The next question we expect to hear agitated is the propriety of running separate lines of omnibuses, steamboats and railway trains for the two sexes, with drivers, captains, conductors aud engineers of each sex. Who can tell what wonders are yet in the womb of this enlightened nineteeth century? Ex. Paper.

CONFERENCE NOTICE.

There will be a Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Baltimore, Md., November 10th and 11th.

JAMES J. STRANG, } Presidents.
GEORGE J. ADAMS, }

Italy is likewise prostrated--overrun by the hirelings of the Austrians, and of the would-be French Emperor. Venice, closely beleaguered, was the last of her heroic cities to resist. She, alas, has fallen.

Hungary, cut off from external hope--surrounded by the combined forces of Austria and Russia, fell more by the unparalleled treachery of Gorgey than by force of hostile arms.

So stand matters abroad, and how are things at home? Our martyrs in chains, and the convict ship---our people starved and stupified--at last decorously quiescent--at last fit for a Queen's visit.

Such is the condition of Europe. The sun of liberty is just now obscured, and are we to conclude, because tyranny is every where, for a time, regaining its grasp, that 1848 has gone for nothing--that the blood and lessons of last year have been thrown away?

Not so, waverer!--doubter of God's providence--driveler at human infirmity--not so.--The world is steadily advancing, notwithstanding those defeats and delays. Ours is a rough path. We should have prepared for as much when we commenced the journey. We, the brotherhood of universal right and human freedom, have many an obstacle to grapple with on our way--the gold, the disciplined intrigue, the marshaled armaments of despots--much disunion, treachery and cowardice in our own ranks. Ours is no path of roses truly, but a long and thorny road. Let each carpet philanthropist and dilettante patriot turn aside, and no longer weary his dainty feet on such a highway.---Dublin Irishman.

☞ The new Mormon Temple at Salt Lake, California, is to be six hundred feet high, so as to be visible at a distance of eighty miles. The Mormon cities, four in number, are inclosed by a wall, and their extent is seventeen miles in length by twelve in breadth. There has been a mountain of pure rock salt found near the settlement, and a rich gold mine has been discovered one hundred and fifty miles south-west of Salt Lake.—N. Y. Sun.

☞ The Temple may be 600 feet, or only 6, depends on the future. As they have not commenced to build it, it is just as easy to state the intended height at one thing as another.—But the story about the four cities is supremely ridiculous. Twelve miles by seventeen requires fifty-eight miles of wall to inclose it. more than all the fence they have on their farms. It would contain 130,560 acres of land. which, allowing their settlement to contain 13,000 inhabitants, would leave above ten acres of land within the walls of the city to every person, man, woman and child in the settlement. or upwards of fifty acres to a family of five persons. But stating their population at a probable estimate of 400 families, and it makes a fraction over 326 acres to a family. And if this population was evenly distributed over the cities it would make a family once in three quarters of a mile every way. As the rest of the story is disputed by Dr. Bumlysel and other leading Mormons from there, we have nothing to say about it. How strange that the papers cannot once mention Mormon affairs without dealing in obvious falsehood.

What next?—The Cincinnati Commercial of the 17th inst. informs us that in one of the churches of that city, the subject has been broached whether it is proper for men and women to sit together in the church or not, during divine service! The next question we expect to hear agitated is the propriety of running separate lines of omnibuses, steamboats and railway trains for the two sexes, with drivers, captains, conductors and engineers of each sex Who can tell what wonders are yet in the womb of this enlightened nineteeth century! Ex. Paper.

CONFERENCE NOTICE.

There will be a Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Baltimore, Md., November 10th and 11th.

JAMES J. STRANG,
GEORGE J. ADAMS, } Presidents.

New York City, Oct. 13th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I am yet in New York, and shall remain here two Sabbaths, when I shall go south. I find here a few copies of Brewster's "Olive Branch," by which I learn that its publication is renewed at Springfield, Ill. It is a very harmless publication, utterly unlikely to exert any considerable influence, but no more objectionable than most sectarian publications. So far as talent is concerned, it has gained nothing in exchanging A. Cowles for J. C. Brewster as editor. I have also found a stray No. of the Millenial Star, containing an epistle of the Brighamite Twelve in Salt Valley to their President in England, dated last March, from which I make the following extracts:—

"DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN:—The seasons have rolled around, and the wheels of time have brought the people of this clime to hail with joy the first tokens of another spring. The warm breezes of the south and the smiles of the returning sun will soon open a passage through the mountains of eternal snow, which for six months has shut us up, and prevented communication with the great world, that our mail may pass eastward and westward and tell the nations that the church in the wilderness yet lives, and that the mustard seed is growing.

"Our crops, the past season, were light, but we raised considerable quantities of wheat, maize, oats, rye and vegetables. There is, however, at this time a scarcity of breadstuffs, and there will be a scarcity till harvest, which we hope for early in July. Several hundred houses are built and in progress here, and the valley is settled for sixty miles north and south. Mills for flouring grain and sawing timber are becoming numerous. A council house, forty-five feet square, two stories high, is in progress, also several public works, such as bridges, opening roads, &c. One bridge over the Jordan is being built for seven hundred dollars.—Great preparations are being made for farming the coming season, and more than ten thousand acres will be inclosed and cultivated this summer.

"Money is very abundant, owing principally to the gold dust accumulating here from the coast, upon the deposit of which bills have been issued by the Presidency. We have petitioned the Congress of the United States for the organization of a territorial government here, embracing a territory of about seven hundred miles square, bounded north by Oregon, latitude 42 degrees, east by the Rio Grand Del Norte, south by the late line between the United States and Mexico, near the latitude 32 degrees, and west by the sea coast and California mountains. Until this petition is granted we are under the necessity of organizing a local government for the time being, to consist of a governor, chief justice, secretary, marshal, magistrate, &c., elected by the people. The election to take place next Monday.

"We shall also organize the militia in due military order, under the old and honorable name of 'The Nauvoo Legion;' a name which has long been a terror to evil doers, and which for several years withstood a sovereign State of mobbers and lawless banditti, and finally effected a safe retreat into the strong holds of the mountains with little loss. We have had a general hunt here, one hundred men on each side, under Captains Pack and Lee; Captain Lee is triumphant, and a public dinner comes off soon at the expense of the other side. About seven hundred wolves and foxes, twenty minks, two wolverines, five hundred hawks, owls, &c., and one thousand ravens were killed in the sum total of the hunt.

"Corn is very scarce here, at two dollars a bushel, or fifty-six pounds; wheat is from four to five dollars per sixty pounds, and difficult to be had at that. Some alarm existed here concerning provisions, on account of which a census was taken a few weeks since of the amount of breadstuffs on hand, when it was ascertained there were upwards of three-fourths of a pound per head per day from then till harvest, besides fifteen hundred bushels of seed wheat, and several hundred bushels of seed corn.

"We are about to establish a colony of about thirty families in the Utah valley, about fifty miles south. We hope soon to explore the vallies three hundred miles south, and also the country as far as the Gulf of California, with a view of settlement and a sea port.

"On the 12th of February the Presidency and those of the Twelve who were here met in council, and proceeded to fill the vacancies of that quorum. Elders P. P. Pratt, John Taylor and A. Lyman were present, and Charles C. Rich, Lorenzo Snow, Erastus Snow and Franklin D. Richards were ordained to the Apostleship, and numbered among the Twelve, instead

New York City, Oct. 13th, 1849.

DEAR FRANK:—I am yet in New York, and shall remain here two Sabbaths, when I shall go south. I find here a few copies of Brewster's "Olive Branch," by which I learn that its publication is renewed at Springfield, Ill. It is a very harmless publication, utterly unlikely to exert any considerable influence, but no more objectionable than most sectarian publications. So far as talent is concerned, it has gained nothing in exchanging A. Cowles for J. C. Brewster as editor. I have also found a stray No. of the Millenial Star, containing an epistle of the Brighamite Twelve in Salt Valley to their President in England, dated last March, from which I make the following extracts:—

"DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN:—The seasons have rolled around, and the wheels of time have brought the people of this clime to hail with joy the first tokens of another spring. The warm breezes of the south and the smiles of the returning sun will soon open a passage through the mountains of eternal snow, which for six months has shut us up, and prevented communication with the great world, that our mail may pass eastward and westward and tell the nations that the church in the wilderness yet lives, and that the mustard seed is growing.

"Our crops, the past season, were light, but we raised considerable quantities of wheat, maize, oats, rye and vegetables. There is, however, at this time a scarcity of breadstuffs, and there will be a scarcity till harvest, which we hope for early in July. Several hundred houses are built and in progress here, and the valley is settled for sixty miles north and south. Mills for flouring grain and sawing timber are becoming numerous. A council house, forty-five feet square, two stories high, is in progress, also several public works, such as bridges, opening roads, &c. One bridge over the Jordan is being built for seven hundred dollars.—Great preparations are being made for farming the coming season, and more than ten thousand acres will be inclosed and cultivated this summer.

"Money is very abundant, owing principally to the gold dust accumulating here from the coast, upon the deposit of which bills have been issued by the Presidency. We have petitioned the Congress of the United States for the organization of a territorial government here, embracing a territory of about seven hundred miles square, bounded north by Oregon, latitude 42 degrees, east by the Rio Grand Del Norte, south by the late line between the United States and Mexico, near the latitude 32 degrees, and west by the sea coast and California mountains. Until this petition is granted we are under the necessity of organizing a local government for the time being, to consist of a governor, chief justice, secretary, marshal, magistrate, &c., elected by the people. The election to take place next Monday.

"We shall also organize the militia in due military order, under the old and honorable name of 'The Nauvoo Legion;' a name which has long been a terror to evil doers, and which for several years withstood a sovereign State of mobbers and lawless banditti, and finally effected a safe retreat into the strong holds of the mountains with little loss. We have had a general hunt here, one hundred men on each side, under Captains Pack and Lee; Captain Lee is triumphant, and a public dinner comes off soon at the expense of the other side. About seven hundred wolves and foxes, twenty minks, two wolverines, five hundred hawks, owls, &c., and one thousand ravens were killed in the sum total of the hunt.

"Corn is very scarce here, at two dollars a bushel, or fifty-six pounds: wheat is from four to five dollars per sixty pounds, and difficult to be had at that. Some alarm existed here concerning provisions, on account of which a census was taken a few weeks since of the amount of breadstuffs on hand, when it was ascertained there were upwards of three-fourths of a pound per head per day from then till harvest, besides fifteen hundred bushels of seed wheat, and several hundred bushels of seed corn.

"We are about to establish a colony of about thirty families in the Utah valley, about fifty miles south. We hope soon to explore the valies three hundred miles south, and also the country as far as the Gulf of California, with a view of settlement and a sea port.

"On the 12th of February the Presidency and those of the Twelve who were here met in council, and proceeded to fill the vacancies of that quorum. Elders P. P. Pratt, John Taylor and A. Lyman were present, and Charles C. Rich, Lorenzo Snow, Erastus Snow and Franklin D. Richards were ordained to the Apostleship, and numbered among the Twelve, instead of the three who were called to the First Presidency, and Lyman Wight, of Texas, who was disfellowshipped. This accession increased the members here to a majority, and enabled them to act as a quorum. They were then instructed to assist in reorganizing the different quorums here, and in establishing righteousness. They met with the Presidency and others almost daily, and proceeded to organize and ordain the Presidency of the High Priest's quorum, viz.: John Young and his counselors, also Daniel Spencer as President of this stake, and his two counselors, David Fulmer and Willard Snow. They also ordained and set apart a High Council. After this the city was divided into nineteen wards, consisting generally of nine blocks, or seventy-two lots, over each ward a bishop was ordained.

"The settlements in the country are also organized into wards, and a bishop appointed over each. Large meetings are held on Sundays when the weather will permit, and there is much good preaching, and the spirit of truth and reformation is abroad in the church. There are some rebellious and disorderly spirits here, who are generally now for the gold mines instead of Warsaw, Quincy and St. Louis; but those who are on the Lord's side will stay at home and raise grain, &c., till sent abroad on heaven's errand.

"We hope, ere long, to see the Twelve at liberty, and many of the Seventies in the discharge of their duties abroad, in a capacity and with a power far exceeding the limits of their former labors, but at present stern necessity binds them here to the saw, the hammer, the anvil and the plough, and this because none step forward to do these things for them. How long, O Lord, shall these things be? How long shall the priesthood be neglected, and its chosen vessels left to grovel with the petty trifles of this world, while its inhabitants sit in darkness and their light is withdrawn? Necessity flings her chains about us, and the veriest poverty fetters us, and limits our proceedings, when otherwise our minds would expand, our spirits start forth, and wing their way to the nations on their errands of mercy.

"It is according to that which is written for the saints to organize in companies according to their trades, and to come out in bodies prepared with machinery, tools and materials for operating in all useful branches of industry, according to that which they are accustomed to do; and when they come otherwise they are often in want of employment, exposed to bad company, to the influence of apostates, liars, swindlers, drunkenness, dissipation, &c., and but few of them reach the body of the church in as good spirits as they start; some turn back, some are destroyed, many are led away, and few are gathered and saved. These things ought not to be.

"If on a more thorough knowledge of the country we can find a practical wagon route up the Arkansas, or up the Rio Grand, it will avoid the winter and a contact with the corrupt apostates and Gentiles that swarm at New Orleans, St. Louis, and Upper Missouri.

"Monday, March 12th.—The election came off to-day in peace, and resulted in the unanimous choice of Brigham Young, as Governor; Willard Richards, Secretary; N. K. Whitney, Treasurer; H. C. Kimball, Chief Justice; John Taylor and N. K. Whitney, Associate Judges; Daniel H. Wells, Attorney General; Horace Eldridge, Marshal; Albert Carrington, Assessor and Collector of taxes; Joseph L. Heywood, Surveyor of Highways; and the Bishops of the several wards as magistrates.

"Signed on behalf of the members of the quorum who are in the valley.

PARLEY P. PRATT, Pres. pro tem.
FRANKLIN D. RICHARDS, Clerk."

This ought to cap the climax of Brighamite follies. Aug. 8th, 1844, they determined by vote to have no prophet. One week after they issued a proclamation declaring that the government of the church was in the quorum of the Twelve. Now they have taken them and made them their First Presidency, putting their Twelve back to the old authority. In 1845 they were going out of the United States to a country where they would no longer be subject to Gentile laws. In 1846 they furnished some four hundred soldiers to help the United States conquer that land and subject it to their laws, telling their followers all the time that they were deceiving the government, and should conquer the country at the expense of the United States, but for themselves.

Now that the country is conquered the U. S. hold it, and they have established government according to Gentile forms, and are asking the U. S. to extend its government over them.—

of the three who were called to the First Presidency, and Lyman Wight, of Texas, who was disfellowshipped. This accession increased the members here to a majority, and enabled them to act as a quorum. They were then instructed to assist in reorganizing the different quorums here, and in establishing righteousness. They met with the Presidency and others almost daily, and proceeded to organize and ordain the Presidency of the High Priest's quorum, viz.: John Young and his counselors, also Daniel Spencer as President of this stake, and his two counselors, David Fulmer and Willard Snow. They also ordained and set apart a High Council. After this the city was divided into nineteen wards, consisting generally of nine blocks, or seventy-two lots, over each ward a bishop was ordained.

"The settlements in the country are also organized into wards, and a bishop appointed over each. Large meetings are held on Sundays when the weather will permit, and there is much good preaching, and the spirit of truth and reformation is abroad in the church. There are some rebellious and disorderly spirits here, who are generally now for the gold mines instead of Warsaw, Quincy and St. Louis; but those who are on the Lord's side will stay at home and raise grain, &c., till sent abroad on heaven's errand.

"We hope, ere long, to see the Twelve at liberty, and many of the Seventies in the discharge of their duties abroad, in a capacity and with a power far exceeding the limits of their former labors, but at present stern necessity binds them here to the saw, the hammer, the anvil and the plough, and this because none step forward to do these things for them. How long, O Lord, shall these things be? How long shall the priesthood be neglected, and its chosen vessels left to grovel with the petty trifles of this world, while its inhabitants sit in darkness and their light is withdrawn? Necessity flings her chains about us, and the veriest poverty fetters us, and limits our proceedings, when otherwise our minds would expand, our spirits start forth, and wing their way to the nations on their errands of mercy.

"It is according to that which is written for the saints to organize in companies according to their trades, and to come out in bodies prepared with machinery, tools and materials for operating in all useful branches of industry, according to that which they are accustomed to do; and when they come otherwise they are often in want of employment, exposed to bad company, to the influence of apostates, liars, swindlers, drunkenness, dissipation, &c., and but few of them reach the body of the church in as good spirits as they start; some turn back, some are destroyed, many are led away, and few are gathered and saved. These things ought not to be.

"If on a more thorough knowledge of the country we can find a practical wagon route up the Arkansas, or up the Rio Grand, it will avoid the winter and a contact with the corrupt apostates and Gentiles that swarm at New Orleans, St. Louis, and Upper Missouri.

"Monday, March 12th.—The election came off to-day in peace, and resulted in the unanimous choice of Brigham Young, as Governor; Willard Richards, Secretary; N. K. Whitney, Treasurer; H. C. Kimball, Chief Justice; John Taylor and N. K. Whitney, Associate Judges; Daniel H. Wells, Attorney General; Horace Eldridge, Marshal; Albert Carrington, Assessor and Collector of taxes; Joseph L. Heywood, Surveyor of Highways; and the Bishops of the several wards as magistrates.

"Signed on behalf of the members of the quorum who are in the valley.

PARLEY P. PRATT, Pres. pro tem.
FRANKLIN D. RICHARDS, Clerk."

This ought to cap the climax of Brighamite follies. Aug. 8th, 1844, they determined by vote to have no prophet. One week after they issued a proclamation declaring that the government of the church was in the quorum of the Twelve. Now they have taken them and made them their First Presidency, putting their Twelve back to the old authority. In 1845 they were going out of the United States to a country where they would no longer be subject to Gentile laws. In 1846 they furnished some four hundred soldiers to help the United States conquer that land and subject it to their laws, telling their followers all the time that they were deceiving the government, and should conquer the country at the expense of the United States, but for themselves.

Now that the country is conquered the U. S. hold it, and they have established government according to Gentile forms, and are asking the U. S. to extend its government over them.—

They even have established the odious offices and forms of proceeding under which all the Gentile oppressions are accomplished. But the papers have turned over another leaf in this strange history. They have called together a kind of mass meeting, and appointed a committee as a substitute for a convention, adopted a constitution as one of the States of the Union, and are intending to apply to Congress for admission. Would not two thousand inhabitants, with Brigham Young for Governor, make a pretty State? It would be a pretty joke if they could gull Congress into receiving them, and, desperate as the undertaking would seem, I know men cunning enough to carry it through.

